RENEW LIQUOR LICENSES

Regular Applications to be Filed With Common Council on Monday Night.

TWELVE AT PRESENT

Not Likely That Any New Ones Will Be Granted—No Repealer of Saloon Zone Ordinance.

A question of absorbing interest will engage the attention of the Common Council on Monday night, when the various applications for liquor licenses will be presented. Action is taken between the regular February and March meetings, so that those who are to receive their licenses may have them by March 1.

There is every reason to believe that there will be at least twelve applicants, omitting that of Charles Schanz, who retired from the business under peculiar circumstances. For a time it was thought that John J. Goff would apply again for a license for his hotel on West Front street, but recently it was announced that he had been instructed that it would be useless for him to make another attempt, in the light of previous events.

Those who will undoubtedly apply are Jerome Leary, J. A. Staats, A. D. Findlay, Henry Windham, Messrs. Clark, Michael Watson, Henry Haurand, John Rafferty, Jacob Blimm, Charles Gloeckler, Frank Linke and the Eastern Bottling Association. These are all regular applicants and now hold licenses. Whether there will be any new applications is not known at present. The license committee has no intimation that there will be.

There has been some speculation as to whether there would be an attempt to repeal the "saloon district" ordinance adopted by last year's Common Council. A representative for The Daily Press, in speaking with one of the members of the Common Council on this subject, was informed that he had no knowledge of such a move and he doubted whether the ordinance would be repealed.

If there are no new applicants for license from persons wishing to do business outside of the "quarantine district," there would be not necessity for repealing the ordinance. As far as can be learned there is no disposition on the part of the present members of the Common Council to agitate the question of repealing the ordinance or to stir up the license question in any way.

The $1,000 license fee adopted last year is also likely to remain as it is. A majority of the members, it is said, favor this fee, and if the question is raised, would vote to have it continued another year.

As to the place now conducted by John Goff on West Front street, it has been intimated that the property may change hands and that another party will apply for a license. This is probable, if the owner, George Seeber, of the Rising Sun Brewing Company, learns that it is impossible for party will apply for a license.

FLORISTS' CHANGE.

Miss Lincoln to Transfer Business to Mrs. Denton.

Owing to poor health, Miss Lincoln, the Park avenue florist, has decided to retire from business for a year or so, and she has made arrangements whereby Mrs. L. J. Denton, the West Front street florist, will take possession of her greenhouse and combine the two businesses. Mrs. Denton leases Miss Lincoln's business and will be the sole proprietor. The change will take effect soon. Miss Lincoln is now planning to spend some time in travel in the hope that the change may prove beneficial.

Mrs. Denton's store on West Front street has been leased to a Mr. Morris, of Lakewood, who will conduct a clothing business there.

His Eighty-first Birthday.

Dan S. Roberts, the former liveryman, is quietly celebrating his eighty-first birthday at his home on Prospect place today. Since retiring from business a short time ago, Mr. Roberts has been living quietly but still takes a keen interest in the affairs of the city and borough. He has been kept busy during the day responding to congratulations.

Lincoln's Birthday Entertainment.

A Lincoln entertainment will be given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. on Lincoln's birthday, Monday night, February 12, at 8:15. There will be orchestral and vocal selections. The Musical Stewart will be a special feature. A silver offering will be received at the box office.

Bride-to-Be Entertained Choir.

Following the rehearsal for the Reinhart-Corbin wedding at Grace church, last night, the choir of the church was entertained by Miss Reinhart, who provided a pleasant repast in the parish house.

CHECKS WORTHLESS, ELLIOTT IS ACCUSED

MANY COMPLAINANTS AGAINST MAN WHO ISSUED CHECKS FOR SMALL SUMS.

Upon the complaint of Alexander Kane, Justice Mosher issued a warrant today for the arrest of William Elliott on a charge of passing worthless checks. Mrs. Elliott called on Mr. Kane yesterday, purchased a glass which cost him twenty cents and, it is alleged, gave a check for $1 in payment, receiving eighty cents in change. This morning, Mr. Kane asked H. E. Gayle to cash the check and was informed that it was no good, that he had received a similar one recently.

That aroused Mr. Kane's suspicion and he called at the First National Bank, upon which the check was drawn, and was told that it was no good. He was given to understand, it is alleged, that Mr. Elliott had frequently given checks for various amounts not exceeding one dollar, but that he had no account at the bank at present.

Further investigation by Mr. Kane, it is said, brought him the information that W. B. Heidloff and A. M. Griffen had also received these checks.

J. G. GASTON MAY BE SOMERVILLE'S P. M.

Postmaster George W. Cooper Said to Be Slated to Go.

There is a strong possibility that a new postmaster will be appointed for Somerville within a short time and among those prominently mentioned for the place is John G. Gaston, a well-known business man and first vice president of the First National Bank at Somerville.

It is understood that since the investigation of the affairs of Postmaster George W. Cooper, other things have come to light which show them to be in an unsatisfactory condition and as a result a change will be made.

Former Senator Charles A. Reed left this morning for Washington, where he will have an interview with President Roosevelt regarding the postoffice affairs at Somerville. It is understood that he will seek the appointment for Mr. Gaston.

Mrs. Odell's Engagements.

Mrs. Fred Odell, formerly organist and choirmaster at the Church of the Holy Cross, has been engaged to preside at the organ for the rendition of several oratorios to be given at St. Mark's Episcopal church, Tarrytown, N. Y. In March Shemer's "The Daughters of Jairus" will be given, and on Maund-Thursday, April 12, "The Crucifixion." These oratorios are to be given by the large church choir. Mrs. Odell is still residing here for the present.

Girls Extradited.

Lizzie Bednarik and Louise Rehak, the servant girls who stole, it is alleged, $300 worth of clothes from Samuel Huntington's house and decamped to New York, were turned over to Chief Kiely by the authorities there yesterday. The transfer followed the completion of extradition proceedings at Albany. Chief Kiely went to Albany personally, to make sure that no hitch occurred.

Cast Included Local Women.

Miss Florence Racey, who took the part of "Mrs. Kennedy" in the performances of "Wedded and Parted" at the New Plainfield theatre yesterday afternoon and night, is a former Plainfield young woman. She resided on East Fifth street and is well known by residents in that section. She has been on the stage for several years and has been meeting with favorable criticism.

His First Bill.

Senator Ackerman's bill, intended to relieve a situation where an elective tax assessor has failed to qualify, was passed in the Senate on Monday night.

AUTO BILL A FOOL THING

That's What William Jeffery Wrote Governor Who Wants to See Him.

GIVES HIS OBJECTION

Plainfielder Voices Mayor Smalley's Proposition for Wider Roads as a Solution of the Automobile Question.

Upon the invitation of Governor E. C. Stokes, William Jeffery, of North Plainfield, an exponent of equal taxation and limited franchises, will soon visit the home of the State Executive to discuss Senator Frelinghuysen's proposed auto measure. When Mr. Jeffery considered the bill it stirred him to such an extent that he immediately decided to write the Governor. In this letter he freely expressed his ideas in the plain and straightforward manner for which he is noted.

Governor Stokes was evidently impressed with the argument put forth by Mr. Jeffery and courteously invited him to call and talk with him in person about the matter.

Mr. Jeffery's letter to the Governor, and the reply, follow:

"January 26, 1906.

"Governor Stokes,
"Trenton, N. J.

"My Dear Sir:

"First, I am a voter of the county of Somerset, residing at 95 Dier street, North Plainfield. I am a Republican.

"Senator Frelinghuysen's proposed bill affecting automobiles is a fool thing, and I cannot persuade myself to believe that our State will countenance such discriminate legislation. It is well enough to regulate the speed of automobiles and tax automobiles at a moderate rate, if the taxes are spent in improving our roads. We have a lot of sixteen-foot roads here about and, as Newton Smalley remark at the Plainfield Board of Trade dinner last evening, sixteen feet is not enough. It makes very little difference whether an auto travels at eight miles an hour or twenty, except that by traveling quickly the driver of a horse and carriage might feel that the quicker he can pass was over the better. It is fair to assume that the owners of automobiles exercise the same care with their machines as you do or any other person with their property. Climbing telegraph poles and destroying property with automobiles is very expensive.

"Owners of automobiles will exercise more care in selecting chauffeurs for fear of having their necks broken than upon your legislators are trying to legislate brains into chauffeurs' heads.

"The fine and imprisonment of this proposed law is similar to the law unenfroced in New York, where they provide a fine of $100 for spitting on the sidewalk, and nobody gets fined.

"Yours very truly,
"WILLIAM JEFFREY."

"State of New Jersey,
"Executive Department.
"Trenton, January 29, 1906.

"My Dear Mr. Jeffery:

"I have your very bright and readable favor of the twenty-sixth. I shall be very glad to talk with you in person about this matter.

"Very truly yours,
"(Signed) E. C. STOKES.

"Mr. William Jeffery,
"Plainfield, N. J.

NABS A FLEEING AUTOIST

Officer Checks F. L. Bulkley's Attempt to Get Away After the Accident.

VERY NARROW ESCAPE

A big covered touring automobile, driven by the owner, F. L. Buckley, of Westfield, ran into and wrecked a buggy driven by Morris A. Keizer, of New York, on West Front street, in front of the Babcock building, late yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Nathan Sachs, of 23 Somerset street, and her small child, who were in the carriage with Keizer, were thrown out. Buckley was arrested, after an attempt to get away.

Buckley is charged with fast driving. He denies the accusation, but his machine hit the buggy with force enough to tear the rear all to pieces. Buckley claims he was pocketed by cars and wagons, and that he couldn't avoid smashing into the buggy, although he was on his lowest speed notch. Mrs. Sachs struck the roadway with considerable force when the crash occurred, but escaped with a bruised arm. The baby was not hurt.

Buckley drove on without pausing to see the extent of the damage. He had three women in the machine with him. A man in a buggy, driving ahead of him, told Officer Saffron at Somerset street of the accident, and the bluecoat held the automobilist up to place him under arrest.

The auto, followed by Keizer, Mrs. Sachs and the latter's husband, to whom the carriage belonged, was taken to police headquarters. James E. Martine, who saw the accident and declares Buckley was going fast, confronted the autoist at the station house door and gave him a warm lecture out. Buckley had become losing his sangfroid rapidly and the Martine lashing took the last bit of ginger out of him.

He was quiet and anxious to please when Judge Hanson, who was summoned by Chief Kiely as soon as Buckley was brought in, had him arraigned. The magistrate decided that he was responsible enough to release under his own recognizance, and put off the hearing until Saturday morning, to give both the police and the defendant a chance to secure witnesses.

Mr. Sachs has retained Lawyer Francis J. Blatz, of the First National Bank building, to press the case against Buckley. Mr. Blatz this morning that he had evidence to prove the autoist had made a wide and reckless sweep to the wrong side of the roadway in hitting the buggy. It was intimated that a civil action would follow Bulkley's refusal to settle for the damage to the buggy.

LODGES ARE INTERESTED.

Will Compete for Gavel to Be Awarded at Band Concert Fair.

Interest in the coming band concert fund fair has been aroused among local lodges by a voting contest that Promoter La Vere has announced. Visitors to Saengerbund Hall are to be entitled to a vote, and the organization receiving the largest number will be awarded a handsome gold mounted gavel. Several lodges have already planned to secure it and are securing the aid of friends in getting votes.

The preliminary plans for the fair have been completed and it will be a big event. All the singers who are to appear will do a double "turn" on the night they hold the programme, giving selections at 9 and 10 o'clock among the vocalists already secured are "Billy" Redmond, Fred Elliott, Jack Dorlane, Theodore Morse, Bert Fitzgibbon and Nick Parker.

M. C. Van Arsdale has again been secured to act as treasurer of the band concert fund, and F. M. Slater will act in this capacity during the fair.

Flash Went Off Too Soon.

There was a party at J. W. Van Sickle's house, East Third street, last night, and Willie Van Sickle, who owns a camera, wanted a picture of the gathering. He posed the guests and got his father to hold the pan of flash powder while he sighted his machine at the group. The powder went off too soon, and caught Mr. Van Sickle with his guard down. His hands were burned and his mustache and hair were singed. The guests were scared, but there was no other damage. Willie didn't take a picture.

Exchanged Properties.

Henry P. Seader and John Goodman, of the borough, have exchanged properties. On April 1 Mr. Goodman will occupy Mr. Seader's house on West Fifth street, corner Stanley place, and Mr. Seader will remove to Mr. Goodman's house, 102 Manning avenue.

KEROSENE HURRIED FIRE

It Worked So Well That the Stove Blew Up.

BOY FIRE-BUILDER HURT

Donald Patterson's Face Burned, His Hair Scorched Off, and More Serious Injury Very Narrowly Averted.

Donald Patterson, the young son of James Patterson, of West Front street, wanted his breakfast in a hurry early this morning, and an older brother went into the kitchen to help him. The brother decided that kerosene would liven up the fire and poured some on. Donald touched a match to it.

In the explosion that followed he lost a lot of hair and skin, and the kitchen was nearly wrecked. The lids and other loose sections of the stove were blown all over the room, and the rest of the family, who were still in bed, were awakened with a start that threw them into a panic.

Donald had a narrow escape from serious injury. The sheet of flame that followed the explosion came too quickly to give him time to jump back, and it enveloped his head and face. The hair from the top of his head, and his face was scorched, but his eyes closed instinctively, just in time to save them from injury.

Donald was made comfortable with home remedies. The stove was in worse shape than the boy, and breakfast was a good deal later than if Donald had made the fire with a rotating stick.

MERCHANT WANTS BOTTLE FOUND IN FISH'S STOMACH.

Fred Ivamy, the Finder, Decides to Let Him Have It For Window Display.

Fred Ivamy, the West Second street seafood dealer, who found a bottle containing a message in the stomach of a bloater smelt, has received an offer from W. P. Gill, of the W. P. Gill Company, commission merchants, New York, for the glass receptacle. Mr. Gill is well acquainted with the members of the T. B. Eaton firm, of Toronto, whose trade name was stamped in the bottle and he wants to send it to them for a window display and souvenir.

The finder intended keeping it for the same reason but Mr. Gill has been so anxious to secure it he has decided to let him have it. Accordingly the bottle will be sent back to its original starting point after travelling a distance of more than 2,000 miles.

The fish that carried the bottle was in a barrel sold Mr. Ivamy by the Gill company and the fact of its discovery was learned by the firm through the newspapers.

MISS FOUNTAIN'S FUNERAL.

At the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Fountain, of Jackson avenue, the funeral of Miss Sadie S. Fountain was held yesterday afternoon. It was in charge of Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace church, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends.

The service was concluded with quotations from Miss Fountain's valedictory address delivered by her last June at the graduating exercises of the North Plainfield High School. The young woman was but eighteen years old and was greatly liked by a large circle of acquaintances.

The floral tributes were numerous and included set pieces from school friends and others. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

Forty-one Indictments.

The Union County Grand Jury having completed its work, presented a report to the court this morning. Thirty indictments were presented, making forty-one in all. There were two presentments, one against the Pennsylvania Railroad for the killing of Mrs. Eliza Davis at Rahway on Wednesday, January 17, and the other against the Public Service Corporation for the killing of Raymond Devine.

—The best place to get fresh vegetables is at Neuman Brothers'. Their consignments are received direct each morning.

LOCAL FIRM TO HAVE ITS OWN ICE PLANT

SMALLEY BROTHERS PLAN TO PROSPECTIVE SHORTAGE.

Anticipating that there will be a great shortage in the ice crop this winter, Smalley Brothers, the North avenue butchers, have decided to install an ice-making machine of their own. The machine will be put in the cellar and operated by a gasolene engine. Pipes will be run to and within the large refrigerator for freezing purposes and in this way the firm expects to have all the ice that it will need during the summer.

There are other business houses in town also considering this idea and it is believed that if there should be a failure in the local ice crop there will be an unusual demand for machines. It is said that small machines can now be purchased with capacity from ten pounds a day to any number desired. Smalley Brothers have placed the order for an ice-making machine and it will be installed soon.

There is now no denying the gravity of the situation as regards the ice crop. The local dealers are planning to meet the condition and it is expected that the hygeia ice plant will be started just as soon as everything is put in readiness. It is also possible that the daily capacity will be increased from twenty tons to double or more than that number. Reports from Pennsylvania indicate that the crop there is light and in Maine it is said that very little ice has been harvested.

The beauties of the Grand Canon and the Yosemite Valley were attractively pictured in Watchung Chapel last night by Rev. A. C. McCrea, the pastor, who visited that country during 1904. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Brotherhood of the church. There was a large attendance and many friends.

With the assistance of J. Hervey Doane, who operated the slides, a large number of views of the Grand Canon and Yosemite were shown and Mr. McCrea described them in an interesting way. In addition Mr. McCrea also displayed views taken in San Francisco.

During the evening a silver offering was received for the benefit of the Brotherhood's treasury.

NURSERY A SUCCESS.

King's Daughters' Enterprise Becoming Popular With Mothers.

The King's Daughters' Day Nursery is meeting with gratifying success. Scarcely a day has passed that there has not been from three to six or more children at the nursery and it is expected that there will be more within a short time. Mothers who have occasion to place their children there for the day are much taken with the well equipped quarters and especially the cleanliness of the place. Some of the children have expressed a desire to remain all night at the nursery in preference to going home when their mothers have called.

The wisdom of starting this nursery is now evident from the support and patronage given. The returns for keeping the children are nominal at present, but as the place becomes better known and the objects are understood better, a substantial sum will no doubt be realized in this way.

The McIntyre Concert.

Tomorrow evening's chamber concert at the Casino offers a programme of the greatest interest to real lovers of music. The great Dumky trio, by Dvorak, a Beethoven sonata for 'cello, and piano solos by Gwilym Miles and Van Damek, the violinist, should attract a big audience. The tickets are selling at Armstrong's.

GETS BLACK HAND NOTE

T. J. Winckler, Former North Plainfielder Receives Warning at Asbury Park.

DEATH IS THREATENED

Card from Portland, Oregon, Tells Him He Has But Four Days to Live—Police Investigating.

Asbury Park people are greatly wrought up over the sending of a "Black Hand" postal card to one of their most energetic councilmen, Thomas J. Winckler, a former resident of North Plainfield and son of the late Augustus J. Winckler. It came in his mail last Saturday, bearing the supposed facsimile of a revolver, a black hand, and containing the warning that he had but four more days to live. The matter has caused much more than the usual amount of discussion from the fact that the card Mr. Winckler received is identically the same as one sent to Angelo Giuffra, of Millville, both bearing a Portland, Oregon, postmark.

Giuffra and Winckler are both confectioners and this fact is thought to be of some significance. Giuffra has become thoroughly frightened and has asked the Millville police for protection.

When Councilman Winckler was made acquainted with the strange coincidence he said he had never heard of Giuffra. He was at a loss to account for the threatening card but is inclined to take it as a practical joke despite the fears of his friends.

He regards it as remarkable that his name should have been correctly spelled with a "c," a feat, he says, that is never accomplished by strangers. This is one of the things that makes him look at the matter in the light of a "josh." He says he has never aroused, to his knowledge, antagonism among Italian people, has never refused them employment, never mixed in their feuds or been connected in any prosecution or controversy in which they are interested. The Asbury Park police offered to take the matter up and he has given them the card but declines the services of a body guard, such as was asked for by Giuffra.

FIRST M. E. BROTHERHOOD PLANS SOCIAL EVENTS.

The Brotherhood of the First M. E. church is planning a number of social affairs and entertainments to be held soon. Early in February the church choir will render Dudley Buck's "The Triumph of David" and Gounod's "Gallia" under the auspices of the Brotherhood.

French has invited the members to meet at his home in February. Rev. A. C. McCrea will also entertain the Brotherhood a little later.

Empire Dancing School.

John Vardon has sold a half interest in his dancing academy to James A. Gallagher, of New York, and the hall will be known hereafter as the Empire Dancing School. Two receptions will be held every week, Wednesday and Saturday nights, and the place will be conducted in a first-class manner. Invitations will be issued to every dance. The new management becomes effective February 10. It has also been arranged to give private dancing lessons at the school every Monday and Thursday nights and lessons will also be given at the house upon application. Bids are now being received for music.

May Give German Play.

CLERGY IN SALOON WAR

Every Denomination Asked by Catholic Bishops to Attend Excise Conference

WANT LAW PASSED

Meeting at Trenton on Monday to Arouse Public Opinion—Bill Being Prepared by Former Justice Collins.

Bishop O'Connor and Bishop James A. McFaul, of the Newark and Trenton dioceses, respectively, of the Catholic church, who had called a conference of church rectors at Trenton, January 29, to consider the new saloon bill which they are preparing, have widened the scope of the meeting and have sent telephone to the important officers of all denominations in the State, some of which have been received by Plainfield clergymen.

They now propose that every moral agency in New Jersey shall be enlisted in support of the measure.

At this meeting the text of the bill that the Catholic clergymen desire to have introduced in the Legislature will be considered. It has been supposed heretofore that only Catholic clergymen, six from each diocese, would attend this meeting. Former Justice Collins is preparing the bill.

Starting at the conference it is expected that a new Father Mathew and blue ribbon movement will sweep, with the help of the different churches, through the entire State.

Clause by clause the bill will be discussed, so that, when it is introduced in its finished form, it will express the combined opinion on the liquor question of the entire clergy of New Jersey.

The bill will be introduced at Trenton before the last of the month. According to rumor, when the plan of the bill began to form in the minds of its creators, one of the first questions that had to be decided was how to arouse public opinion to a pitch where it would support such a measure. It was decided that the best means of doing this would be through the pulpit.

When the clergymen that attend the meeting at Trenton get down to a discussion of ways and means of enlisting public support, the importance of preaching saloon reform from the pulpit will be expressed by every one present. Following the meeting, it is said, requests will go out to the Catholic bishops of the State, asking them to support the bill.

The same action, it is expected, will be taken by clergymen of other denominations and bishops. As a result, from one end of the State to the other, reform will be preached to the church-going population, as it was never preached before. It will be the greatest movement that has ever swept New Jersey, it is predicted.

Sermons, according to rumor, will begin Sunday, February 4. On that day, it is reported, the combined clergy of the State, from the pulpits of churches of every creed, will begin their work.

DR. MOLDENKE TALKS INTERESTINGLY ON EGYPT.

Before a large and appreciative audience in the German Lutheran church last Night Rev. Dr. Charles Moldenke, of Washington Valley, delivered a lecture on "Egypt." It was illustrated with stereopticon views, greatly enhancing the doctor's description of the "land of the Nile."

Dr. Moldenke is one of the very few Egyptian scholars of the world and has traveled extensively in Egypt as well as in other Oriental countries. In his lecture he spoke from personal experience of the many adventures and interesting researches he has taken part in. It was he who translated the hieroglyphics on the obelisk in Central Park, known as Cleopatra's needle, and edited the Egyptian antiquities in the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The lecture was for the benefit of St. Peter's Lutheran church congregation.

RICE HEIRS REVIVE SUIT AGAINST MR. HAND

Chief Justice Gummere, in Newark, has signed an order reviving the suit instituted by the late William M. Rice, of whose murder Albert T. Patrick was convicted. Mr. Rice's death caused suspension of litigation pending a settlement of Rice's will.

The application for the order was made by John R. Hartin, counsel for the executors under the Rice will, which the New York courts declared valid. These executors are James H. Baker, John B. Barnise, and William M. Rice, Jr., son of the millionaire. The defendant in the suit is Charles H. Hand, of this city, against whom Mr. Rice instituted suit to recover $20,000 on a bond.

The action was brought but a short while before Mr. Rice died.

ANNUAL MEETING OF MEN'S ASSOCIATION

R. E. BOHAN CHOSEN HEAD OF A TRINITY REFORMED ORGANIZATION.

Entertainment and business were combined at the annual meeting of the Men's Association of Trinity Reformed church Thursday. The first part of the evening was devoted to a sleight-of-hand performance by E. Warren Rankin, of this city. He gave a clever exhibition of magic which was greatly enjoyed by all.

Following this the business session was held. Frank P. Storr, president, was in the chair. Charles M. Dolliver, as secretary, reported that during the year eight meetings were held, twenty-one new members were received, and $35 contributed as dues. There were addresses by Rev. Dr. Schenck, James E. Martine, S. S. Swackhamer, Rev. C. E. Herring, Rev. W. T. Griffen, H. C. Krebs and others on popular topics and two evenings were devoted to the entertainment of the women. The total membership of the club is about eighty.

F. E. Smith, as chairman of the nominating committee, then presented those names for the various offices and they were elected:

President, Richard E. Bohan; vice president, Charles M. Dolliver; secretary, Frank Pierson; treasurer, M. F. Gano.

After the business Mr. Rankin continued his entertainment and was very successful in mystifying the members of the club. The programme was arranged by W. F. Oliver, as chairman of the entertainment committee. The new president will announce his committees within a short time.

HOBOKEN AGHAST AT REFORM WAVE.

Policemen Will Have to Attend to Duty, and Saloons Must Obey Law.

Chief of Police Hayes, of Hoboken, has asked the Common Council to revoke the licenses of four saloons which he claims have violated the law. The presence of women and similar illegal practices are made the basis of the allegations against the places. The owners have until February 14 to answer.

This action is said to presage a new era in Hoboken. The city having taken to reform, it is taking it hard. Pulls in the police department have been abandoned. The patrolmen are to do duty, and shirkers will have to get out. Mayor Steil is said to have assurances that the Common Council will back him up in his reform work.

Chief Hayes has been chafing ever since he has been in his present position over the inability to make his men do police duty. Yesterday the Mayor said he was having the experience of his life. A policeman, whose brother-in-law was, until his death a few months ago, in Hoboken, was recently caught off post, a trifle in the old days, but since a man was punished for taking a whole day off without permission from the chief, although told he might do so by a police commissioner. The friends of the man caught off post are anxious.

The Mayor said that not less than fifty men called on him Tuesday to have the man let off "because he is a good fellow." The Mayor says that this will not go while he is in office. He says he will back up Chief Hayes, and that there will be a lot of places in the city closed within the next few weeks.

He intimates that when licensing time comes around again the total of 400 saloons in the city will be very materially cut down. Hoboken is only a mile square, and has more saloons to that mile than any other city in the world.

If the license law proposed by the Catholic bishops and priests, which is being supported to a great extent by other denominations, goes through, the number of saloons possible in Hoboken will be slightly five. Each will have to pay at least $1,000 license.

TOYED WITH WET GOODS

High Jinks Among Inmates at Industrial Home Quelled By Overseer Ayer.

STAR PERFORMANCE

Granted a day's leave of absence for good behavior, Thomas Hefferan, seventy-year-old inmate of the Industrial Home, filled up on West End essence of joy and decided that life at the city's institution was altogether too hum drum. The load he carried made him generous and he procured several flasks of wet goods to hand around to his friends at the home. They were smuggled in despite of Superintendent TenEyck's watchfulness and inside of half an hour after his appearance, the cold, unforbidding atmosphere of the place had changed to the roseate hue of a tropical sunset.

Among the inmates who enjoyed Hefferan's liberality were Mary Luke and her husband and Mrs. Ann Sullivan. The first TenEyck knew that anything was wrong was when Mrs. Sullivan bounded out in the hall with a Comanche Indian whoop and did a weird scalp dance. To add weirdness to her efforts, Mary Luke pulled the electric light globes from their sockets and Hefferan contributed a realistic fall downstairs with a bucket of coal clattering after him. Mr. TenEyck has been blind for many years, was unable to give his famous double shuffle that used to delight the West End youngsters but applauded with all the strength of his lungs and sang "Wait for the Wagon," the song the band organs were playing when the city exiled him.

Superintendent TenEyck found it impossible to head off the celebrants and he telephoned for Overseer Aleck Ayers. The latter was quickly on the scene and succeeded in quieting everybody, after which he placed Hefferan under arrest and had him removed to police headquarters. He appeared before Judge Runyon this morning, humble and penitent but as a warning to the other residents of the home, he was sent to jail for thirty days to think over his conduct.

GOLFERS DEMAND AN EARLIER DATE.

New Jersey State Association Would Hold Annual Championship in May.

This is the time of year when golfers get together in annual meetings, elect officers, talk things over and begin planning for another season. Quite fittingly, the United States Golf Association started the ball rolling with its annual meeting at Delmonico's a week ago. The other associations are to follow shortly, and many trust they will accomplish more than the parent body did at its 1906 session.

Next Monday will be a busy day for a good many, for both the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association and the New Jersey Golf Association will hold their annual pow-wows. Among the former's considering the advisability of changing the conditions governing its championship, fifty-four holes of straight medal play having been suggested.

The New Jersey body is known to favor an earlier date for its 1906 championship than has been the custom during recent years. If the tourney could be held in May instead of the first week in June a larger entry of Princeton boys could be secured. The course of the Morris County Golf Club has been suggested as a likely place for the next championship.

On the evening of February 6 the delegates from clubs in the Metropolitan Golf Association will assemble once again at the Metropolitan Club, and not to be outdone by the U. S. G. A., the executive committeemen of the former have arranged for a banquet. The association will have to settle the open championship question, but now that the U. S. G. A. has voted to give more money for its professional even; the M. G. A. is likely to decide to give another open tourney.

On February 8 the East Jersey Golf League will also meet in New York, when some innovations in the way of scoring in team matches are to be suggested. There is a vacancy to fill caused by the demise of the Newark Golf Club, but as the Glen Ridge organization has applied there need be no difficulty on this score.

"Stanley Dawfs" in Town.

The "Stanley Dawfs," who will appear at an entertainment to be given at the Park Club on Wednesday night, February 7, have arrived in town from Africa and are stopping with friends in the borough and city. They will spend most of the time prior to the entertainment getting acquainted with local affairs and securing hits. They talk excellent English and have already become popular with those who have met them.

NOTE FROM CANADA CARRIED BY SMELT

MESSAGE IN BOTTLE FOUND IN FISH'S STOMACH BY LOCAL MERCHANT.

While cleaning a large bloater smelt that came in a consignment of church Wednesday Rev. Dr. Charles Fred Ivamy, the West Second street sea food man, made a discovery that caused him to jump with surprise. Inside the fish's stomach was a small, bright object that proved to be a bottel about the size of a man's thumb. It was securely corked, and when this was removed Mr. Ivamy extracted the following message, written on a small piece of note paper:

"Whoever gets this note will confer a favor by replying to the undersigned, Harry Durant, Margaret Prince Edward Island, Canada; January 4, 1906."

The bottle holding it was stamped with the firm name of the T. Eaton Co., Ltd., Toronto, and though almost as large as the smelt's mouth could easily have been swallowed by the fish of the kind frequently seize objects half as large as themselves and it is not uncommon to find odd things in their stomachs.

The probabilities are that Durant threw the bottle on the water and that at its floating the glint of the glass attracted the smelt. A remarkable part of the thing is the fact that but nineteen days elapsed from the time the message was written until it reached Plainfield, a distance of 1,000 miles.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER IS DEAD IN NEWARK

WM. TITUS PASSES AWAY ON 57TH ANNIVERSARY OF WEDDING.

William Titus, founder of the bakery business at Lombardy street and Lombardy place, Newark, now conducted by the National Biscuit Company, died at his home, 24 Lombardy street, in that city, Wednesday, the fifty-seventh anniversary of his marriage. Death resulted from heart trouble and a general breakdown. Up to a week ago Mr. Titus was able to be about and his illness did not develop any serious aspects until last Sunday night. Since 1890, when he disposed of his business, then the largest of its kind in the State, to the New York Biscuit Company, which in turn was absorbed by the National Biscuit Company, Mr. Titus had not been active in business circles, other than to look after his real estate holdings.

Mr. Titus was born in Warren township, Somerset county, February 23, 1823. At fifteen years of age he was apprenticed to Jackson Pound, a baker, doing business in Madison. Mr. Titus followed his employer when he moved to this city, and subsequently to Newark. In 1847 Mr. Titus purchased a bakery which Pound had established at Lombardy street and Lombardy place, there, together with another employe. In 1848 he became sole owner of the bakery. At various times Mr. Titus was in plain, and when he retired in 1890 the output of the bakery exceeded any other in New Jersey.

In politics Mr. Titus was a Republican and as such served two terms in the Common Council of Newark, covering the period from 1876 to 1880. He helped organize the North Ward National Bank in 1873, in that city, and had been a director of that institution since.

SINGLE TAX MOVEMENT TO COMBAT THE TRUSTS

THAT IS THE REMEDY ADVOCATED BY JOHN MOODY IN LECTURE IN ELIZABETH

John Moody, of Cranford, delivered an excellent lecture Thursday night at the parish house of Trinity Episcopal church, Elizabeth, the subject of his address being "A Trip in a Trust-car." The speaker traced the promotion of trusts from their inception in this country and endeavored to show the way the evils of trusts may be offset by proper legislation in the places were they are dominant.

The chief remedy he advocated for successfully combating them was the single tax movement.

The lecture, which was largely attended, was the first of a series of four to be given for the benefit of the building fund of Trinity church. The others and the dates they will be delivered are as follows: February 1, "Theory and Practice of Architecture," by Stockton B. Colt; February 8, "The International Prison Conference at Budapest," by Mrs. Emily E. Williamson; February 15, "A Good Word for the Trusts," by Frank Bergen.

Mrs. T. W. Morris, Jr., of New York, has returned home after a visit with relatives here.

Mrs. Charles H. Randolph, of West Front street, mother of Councilman Frank Randolph, is recovering from a severe attack of pneumonia.

BELL WANTS HIS PATENT

J. W. Tygard Negotiating With Telephone Inventor For Sale of His Engine.

A BIG OFFER IS MADE

New Yorker Wants to Control Its Use for Flying Machines—Tygard Expects to Secure a Fortune.

For the exclusive use of his recently patented gas engine in air ship experiments, James W. Tygard, of South avenue has received a cash offer from Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, which proves beyond doubt that the inventions possessed of the superior advantages claimed for it by the owner. It was seen by Mr. Bell for the first time last week during the automobile show and he at once entered into negotiations to secure it. When interviewed by a Daily Press reporter this morning, Mr. Tygard refused to state the money consideration named but admitted when the figure was mentioned that it was about $75,000.

Since the offer was made, the two inventors have been in daily communication and it is possible that terms will be agreed upon. Should the purchase of the engine outright but it has already cost the owner twelve years of incessant study and labor aside from expenditures reaching $85,000. Since bringing it to a state of perfection, or rather to the point that he sought he has received and refused a number of offers to clear at least a million dollars. For this reason he will not sell it outright, although Pennsylvania Railroad officials fully a year ago named a handsome figure for all his patents and the right to make the engine. They are still negotiating with him as the invention promises to revolutionize the operation of trains on suburban lines.

The Tygard engine is a new type of the gas engine and was intended for automobile marine and stationary use. In short it embodies just what Bell has been seeking in his air ship experiments and he made the offer with the understanding that he was to have the sole rights of it for aerial craft in the event of his successfully solving the problem.

Tygard was formerly a school teacher in Pittsburg and was always more or less interested in mechanical contrivances When he first conceived the idea of the improved gas engine he entered the works of the Westinghouse Company and secured a practical knowledge of mechanical construction and applied it in his experiments. He moved to this city a few years ago and attained the results he sought soon after becoming a local resident He has a shop at his home on South avenue, where he exhibits the working of the machine and where he has been building small ones.

DEATH COMES SUDDENLY TO MRS. DAVID BOWDEN

SEIZED WITH FATAL HEMORRHAGE AFTER RETURNING FROM RECEPTION.

Within an hour after she had returned from a reception conducted by the Thistle Club in honor of Robert Burns' birthday, Mrs. David Bowden, of West Fourth street, was seized with a fatal hemorrhage at 2 Friday morning. In response to a call, Dr. Pregar was soon in attendance and immediately summoned the ambulance to have her removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. She died just before the vehicle reached its destination, and it returned to the house.

The reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McDuff, of West Eighth street, and Mrs. Bowden took an active part in the evening's enjoyment. She laughed heartily on numerous occasions and the effort may have had something to do with the attack. On returning home, Mr. Bowden went to his room, leaving his wife to make some preliminary preparations for breakfast. She remained downstairs a long time, and, becoming concerned, started to see what was keeping her. He was alarmed to find her missing, and after a hurried look about located her at the foot of the cellar steps. He thought she had fallen down them and injured herself, but later it developed that she had started to descend them to secure something and was attacked by the hemorrhage as she reached the bottom.

Mrs. Bowden was 58 years old and had been a local resident for the past twenty years, coming here from Scotland. She was a member of Hope chapel and active in its work for a long time and was also identified with the Shepherds of Bethlehem. She leaves one sister, Mrs. William Gray, formerly of this city but now of Elizabeth.

JUDGE AGREES "D—" IS "UNPROFANE" WORD

JOHN VENABLE'S IDEA OF CUSS WORDS SUSTAINED BY COURT.

According to John Venable, a figure in local colored political circles, the word "d——" is "unprofane." It was thus classed in the city court Friday morning on a charge of using profane and indecent language preferred by Mrs. Holmes, who occupies with Venable and his wife a house on West Third street. They had an agreement between them regarding the use of the territory and Mrs. Holmes asserted that the Venables didn't hold to the contract. She made some accusations at the house and in his excitement John is supposed to have let go some words that were not intended for parlor use.

"I didn't use any cuss words," argued John in court; "what I did say was "damn" and you know Judge that that word is unprofane."

Mrs. Venable came to her husband's assistance and said "certainly that's unprofane" as if that settled it. Noah Webster or anybody else to the contrary.

Hiding one of his broad smiles, Judge Runyon agreed with John with the word in question is "unprofane" and the defendant was discharged, "pending further developments."

In addition there will be a vocal and instrumental programme and some darkey character sketches. There will also be a sale. Miss Saunders is in charge of the details for the production of her play, which is considered exceedingly clever. There are four persons in the cast—Miss Louise Saunders, Miss Josephine LaTourette, Miss Marion Hall and Miss Helen Stevens. The play will be given both afternoon and evening.

Other numbers on the programme will include vocal selections by Mrs. W. L. Saunders; violin selections by Miss Tiny Hyatt, together with character sketches and possibly vocal selections by a male quartette from the Oshkosh club. PLAINFIELDER DESIGNS LARGE LOCOMOTIVES

WILLIAM M'INTOSH PLANNED ENGINES TO BE USED ON JERSEY CENTRAL.

William McIntosh, of College place, superintendent of the motive power for the New Jersey Central, has designed a number of large locomotives just purchased by the company for passenger service. They are what is known as the American type, eight wheeled They are designed for hauling light trains over crooked divisions where grades are heavy, and will be used for the service between Bethlehem and Scranton, a distance of 105 miles. They will pull one combination baggage and passenger, one coach and one Pullman.

Ten wheeled engines were used for their service, but repair charges were excessive on account of sharp curves which put the locomotives to a severe test. The new engines will be put in the service within a short time. The last number of The Railroad Gazette devotes considerable space to illustrating and giving a description of these engines.

Tomato Sauce.

Put one-half of a common sized onion sliced thin into a pint of canned tomato and cook half an hour. Rub through a strainer to take out the seeds. Corn Meal Mush.

Put one cup of corn meal into a double boiler and pour on one and one-half cups of boiling water. Let stand one hour, turn in two cups of milk and cook an hour, adding a saltspoon of salt. Serve with milk.

Sausages and Mashed Potato.

Prick the sausage several times with a steel fork and lay in a frying pan with boiling water to cover. Drain and fry until browned on all sides. Make a bed of mashed potato on a platter and arrange the sausages on it. Garnish with a sprig of parsley and serve hot.

Chicken Timbals.

Heat one cup of milk in a double boiler, add two level teaspoons of cornstarch mixed with a little cold milk. Cook five minutes, add a tablespoon of melted butter and two eggs beaten well. Stir in one cup of minced chicken and two tablespoons of chicken gravy or stock seasoned highly with salt, celery salt and a little pepper. Turn into buttered timbal molds and steam one-half hour. Turn on serving platter and add a spoonful of tomato sauce to each.

Luncheon Dish.

Season one quart of hot mashed potatoes with salt, pepper, a little cream or hot milk to make rather moist. Put the potato in a shallow pudding dish well buttered and hollow out the center to hold a little more than a cup. Chop the remnants of cold boiled ham fine and season with a teaspoon of vinegar, a little mustard and pepper and add a tablespoon of butter rubbed with a level teaspoon of flour. Brush the inside and outside of the potato with a beaten egg, pour the seasoned ham into the center and set the whole into the oven to heat the meat and brown the potato. Or the ham may be heated through in a saucepan before pouring into the potato and fine crumbs be sifted over the whole.—Newark Advertiser.

LITERARY NOTES.

The February Century is called the midwinter fiction number—it is also an issue of distinctive Keats interest, and a number beautiful in its color and tint pages, including as it does another of Anna Whelan Betts' quaintly charming pictures of life fifty years ago, "The Guitar;" the fourth of Ivanowski's beautiful sketches of the seasons, "Winter;" in that, the "standard portrait" of Keats by Joseph Severn, an illustration by Harrison Fisher; and, most notable of all, another of Timothy Cole's engravings of old Spanish Masters, St. Agnes, by Alonzo Cano. Madame de Pastourelle, promising to prove one of the most appealing and charming characters Mrs. Ward has drawn, in the dominant figure in the February chapters of "Fenwick's Career." There will be keen interest, too, in the first chapter of the new novel of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, "A Diplomatic Adventure," which opens in Paris with a mystery and promise of a duel which may or may not be fought. Another, Elliott Flower, whose stories have a happy way of dealing with questions of the day, has a specially lively and timely tale in "The Bride That Went Astray," in which the denouement is quite as much of a surprise to the characters as to the reader. There are half a dozen other short stories, including "The Intellectual Miss Lamb," by Florence Morse Kingsley, author of "The Transfiguration of Miss Philura," "The Singular Miss Smith," and "Titus."

True stories of important movements and of good, healthy combat are the Ordinance Traits of McClure's for February. Even after the peep behind the curtains afforded by the sessions of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and of the legislative insurance investigation, and by the upheavals of last fall's political campaign, there are disclosures in this number concerning railroad abuses, life insurance juggling, and political trickery which will take hard hold of every citizen. There is the case of Everett Colby, "The Gentleman from Essex" told by Lincoln Steffens, which is full of the sturdy effort, of honesty and youth. It shows how a young man, with aggressiveness and a conscience can beat the machine to a standstill and wins for himself more than the machine dared give him because he was honest. Ray Stannard Baker continues his series, "The Railroads on Trial," tells the astonishing story of how Armour, through his private car line, monopolized the fruit transportation business of America, practically told the railroads that they might as well turn their own refrigerator-cars, and turning to the shipper reaped a golden harvest by daring and open methods. Then he writes of the revolt of honest shippers against Armour. An editorial under the title "Manufacturing Public Opinion," lets in a little light on the shadows of publicity making methods which has gilded the rotten structures of the life insurance companies, and of the get-rich-quick-at - any - cost corporations; and it lets the public gaze on these publicity men fooling some editors, and how others, but always drawing the wool over the eyes of paying citizens, of whose press they try to make a trust trumpet.

The February American Magazine is an automobile number. The leading article, "The Heart of the Automobile," by Leroy Scott, is a most entertaining account of what has happened in the automobile world since English law obliged a man with a red flag to walk before every motor allowed loose in a public place. It also contains a complete illustrated description of every 1906 pleasure car, all facts and figures which, with the other articles in Henry Kitchell Webster's "The Square Deal with Children," an account of the work of Judge Mack and the Chicago Juvenile Court—a story of intense human interest. The second of W. B. Hawarth's articles on "The Masters of the Earth," appears in this number, and C. H. Caffin continues his series with a paper on contemporaneous American painting. The short stories of the month are fully up to the high standard. Among the authors are Richard Washburn Child, W. B. M. Ferguson, Dorothy Canfield, Charles Battell Loomis, Charles C. Lofquest and W. Bates Adams. Miss Cholmondley's serial "Prisoners" is a hit.

The leading feature article of Success Magazine for February is the beginning of a history of the telephone industry in this country. Under the title "Fighting the Telephone Trust," Paul Latzke tells the dramatic story of the battle of six thousand independent operating telephone companies in the United States to overpower the gigantic trust that operates the service of 5 million telephones, and that has fenced New York City, its greatest stronghold, with court decisions and legal hindrances of every kind, to keep its monopoly privileges intact forever. Mr. Latzke, who is one of the publishers of the American Telephone Journal, speaks with the authority of knowledge when he goes into the history of the telephone from its earliest inception, and traces the progress of the litigation that finally resulted in favor of the Bell patents, and fastened "a gouging monopoly" on the necks of the American people. The whole makes a most graphic and absorbing story. Cleveland Moffett's continuation of his "The Shameful Misuse of Wealth" series deals this month with "Our Closed and Silent Churches." It seems perhaps a startling proposition to speak of our houses of worship as misusers of wealth, but the idea here presented is that the wealth represented by these costly edifices is non-productive and therefore misused, when these buildings are opened to the people only one or two days a week. Montrose J. Moses, in the "Progress of American Playwrights" speaks of the struggles of our native writers in their efforts to develop the American drama. In "Henry Irving's Fight for Fame," Bram Stoker, for twenty-seven years the personal representative of the great actor, gives a short resume of the characteristics that won for him an eminent position.

THE DINNER TABLE.

Bisque of Lobster.—Ten minutes before dinner put two ounces of butter in to a saucepan, and when it bubbles sprinkle in four ounces—four heaping tablespoonfuls—of flour. Let it cook without coloring, then add a cupful of hot cream, a pint of hot stock or water, and about a cup of cooked lobster either in the oven and pounded fine. This gives it a beautiful pink color. Little dice of the boiled lobster are then to be added. It makes a pleasant change to marinate the lobster dice before adding to the soup.

Oysters Southern Fashion—Roll fresh crumbs and drain large, fat oysters. Cover the bottom of ramekins or common shells with crumbs, put in three or four oysters, more crumbs, and a teaspoonful of butter on the top side of each. Season all with salt and pepper, and if the ramekins are used bake in the oven fifteen minutes. If the fireproof shells are used broil them instead of baking. Cover with a tin if broiling on top of coals, or if broiling under the gas leave uncovered until brown.

Frozen Eggnog.—Use six fresh eggs, half a pound of sugar, half a pint of brandy or whiskey, and three pints of cream whipped to a froth. Do not buy the double cream, as the single cream will usually whip in cold weather. If it whips perfectly, mix in the following order before freezing: Beat the yolks of the eggs and the sugar together until it is a froth, then add the whites of the eggs and lastly the whipped cream. If the cream does not whip perfectly freeze the liquid part mixed with the yolks of the eggs and the sugar, and when partly done add the whites and whipped cream. Let the mixture set stand packed well for two hours after freezing, so that it becomes hard. Then open the freezer and work in the liquor slowly with a wooden paddle, working it over until smooth. Cover and let stand a little more to ripen. A grating of nutmeg is an improvement. — Philadelphia Telegraph

MEDITATIONS OF A SPINSTER.

It is now about the time when the fat man gets mad because he has to fall down on slippery pavements.

A man calls it humor when he is mean enough to laugh at you for not doing it.

The smartest thing men ever did was to decide not to try to understand the women.

Furnace fires are aggravating things; always too hot on warm days and too chilly on cold ones.

When a man takes out a big insurance policy his wife knows it will be bad luck for her somehow, either by his dying or not dying.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

"Town Talk," theatrically considered, all centers on the coming engagement of Richard Carle in the newest farcical opera success, "The Mayor of Tokio," at the New Plainfield theatre, Tuesday, February 12, on which occasion the Richard Carle Amusement Co. will present in its entirety all the original scenic costumic and electrical elaborateness as seen for months in New York, Philadelphia and Boston during its runs, and where it was voted by press and public alike, the most pretentious effort of Mr. Carle's marvelous career and the most emphatic artistic and financial triumph of the season. Mr. Carle, who has always been a stickler for life, color and beautiful choral arrays, from all accounts, has fairly outdone himself this year as his present fifty-seven singing and dancing girls are conceded to be a veritable Aladdin dream of youth and beauty. Foremost in this aggregation is the fascinating "Pony Ballet," the dainty "Geisha Girls," and the eminent "Carle Blue Ribbon Chorus of America."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 4: "A Life That is a Trust"—Luke xix, 12-27; 1 Cor. iv. 1, 2; 1 Pet. iv. 10; Gen. iv. 4; xiv. 20; xxviii, 22; Mal. iii, 6-14; Matt. xxiii, 23—Christian Stewardship. Enrollment.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

The consciousness of obligation and the impulse to express this knowledge by a suitable offering to Him who is the Great Benefactor appeared early in the history of our race. The first two boys of the new race of mankind brought gifts at "the end of the days" to Jehovah God. Sacred time, a sacred place and a consecrated offering were all in this act. Men have never missed from that time to worship God in some manner, and firmly fixed in their religious customs has been the offering of gifts to Him in acknowledgment of accountability for all possessions held.

On one occasion Abraham gave a tenth of captured spoil to the priest of Jehovah.

Jacob signalized his acceptance of divine dictation by promising the tenth of all he should acquire in any manner for the service of his God.

Heathenism has ever been heavily exacting of its worshipers in the matter of offerings.

Judaism made the tithe obligatory and carried it to the extreme in exacting strict accounting for all which grew from the earth or was the increase of flock and herd. Garden herbs were even held under tribute.

Christianity is no less insistent of the principle of human obligation to God for all possessions and accountability for their proper use.

Greatest stress is laid on the heart devotion, without which all dedications of material substance are without meaning and morally valueless.

A hopeful spirit of inquiry is observable in the Epworth League in this direction. Earnest desire to use all powers in the service of Christ is certain to be followed by the question of how best to use one's money in His cause. It is not so much the inquiry, "How much does the Lord require?" as it is, "How much can I secure for this special work?"

One must be ever guarding himself lest he come to regard some part of his means as God's and the rest as his own. It is not the true idea that when we have given a certain sum for the church work and benevolences we can spend the rest as we please.

All is God's, and every dime is to be used so as to meet His approval. To pay one's necessary expenses is as obligatory as to give for the support of the cause, but the needful expenses must ever be calculated so as to provide for helpfulness of others besides self.

System in it all is most desirable. Calculation should be made so that a fair proportionate part of the income can be devoted to strictly religious uses. This is not altogether for the benefit of the cause receiving the offering. Rather, the greatest benefit in all giving comes to the one who imparts in cultivation and elevation of character.

Most important is the enrollment of our Leaguers in a Christian stewardship movement. Write to headquarters at Chicago for the leaflets and other literature on the subject. Interest as many in your chapter as possible. At least, join this forward movement yourself even if you are the only one in the chapter who will.

Give, and do it regularly, systematically and proportionately, and you will grow in grace more rapidly than ever before.

God's Will.

The occupations of every day seem often trifling. We may do them without thinking as ordinary things. Yet they are the scenes of our appointed lot—appointed by God for you and me. The ordering, the application, of these ordinary events is the appointing of the Divine purpose. It is for ourselves to carry out. And secretly our character forms according as we handle them. Give they heart to God eternal since thou art thyself eternal. Join thy heart to His teaching and thou becomest of a will like to His own will. Nothing comes by pure accident, not even the interruptions in our busy day. And such as follow on to know God's will see in all events what may lead to good, and so trust grows into a habit, as habit grows by perpetual use, till every circumstance may be seen to be but a fresh manifestation of the will of God working itself out in us.—T. T. Carter.

Mind Pride.

Often we think we are all right, that no one can find fault with us, that those whom we neglect or despise or set aside are not worth considering for a moment, and yet all the while, as God sees us, as others see us, we are injuring the very cause we wish to promote. Those of whom we think so little may be the very likenesses and representatives of God and Christ Himself. In injuring them, in despising them, we may be doing the most widespread mischief, we may be defying God. In helping them we are serving Christ Himself.—Dean Stanley.

Body Erect.

If we look down, then our shoulders stoop. If our thoughts look down, our character bends. It is only when we hold our head up that the body becomes erect. It is only when our thoughts go up that our life becomes erect.—Alexander McKenzie.

Little Things.

To some drear silent heart a kindly word
May mean the touch of a stirring bird,
To troubled mind a smile, however slight,
May mean the vision of a rainbow bright,
To some starved soul a hand clasp—any [illegible]
May mean the warmth and glory of the sun!

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 4.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—New work we may do: "for Christ and the Church."—Luke 12-48. Last half—Gen. xli, 15; Gal. iii, 8. Consecration meeting. Christian Endeavor day.)

Two days ago, Feb. 2, the Christian Endeavor movement was twenty-five years old. It hardly seems possible that a quarter of a century has passed since Dr. Francis E. Clark gathered together a few of the young people of his church and organized the first Christian Endeavor society, with no other thought than that it should be purely a local organization for the extension of Christ's kingdom in his own church. But God had other plans, which no human power could see. During this quarter of a century it is absolutely impossible to estimate the tremendous amount of work that has been accomplished by the Christian Endeavor movement and the millions of lives that have been made better under the blessing of God through it. Twenty-five years ago there was one society, with less than fifty members. Today the Christian Endeavor movement consists of nearly 70,000 societies, having a total membership of over 3,000,000 young people. The movement is worldwide. Christian Endeavor societies are to be found in every land and in every nation in the world. It is also interdenominational. It has never been limited to any denomination, and today its members represent over thirty of the prominent Christian denominations throughout the world. The twenty-fifth anniversary every one who is directly or indirectly interested in the Christian Endeavor movement or has ever been so should be devoutly thankful to God for the great success that Christian Endeavor has achieved.

But the true spirit of Christian Endeavor is not to laud the past so much as to prepare for the future. Anniversaries are pleasant, but they should also be profitable. The achievements of the past should inspire still greater achievements in the future. It is the spirit that has led the committee on the selection of topics to suggest for this occasion the topic of new work. In thinking over the past we should not only continue the methods that have been so successful in days gone by, but should ever be thoughtfully considering and putting into operation new methods of work. Variety is not only the spice of life, but it is one of the most attractive features to success in any phase of life. The same thing done in the same way year after year will soon lose its effectiveness, and therefore it is absolutely necessary that if the Christian Endeavor movement is to continue new methods of work must be introduced from time to time. The Christian Endeavor World, published by the United Society of Christian Endeavor at Boston.

The opportunities of the young people of our church through their various organizations are great. God holds us responsible in proportion to our opportunities. Opportunity means responsibility. Abraham was blessed and prospered not simply for himself, but that he might be a blessing to others. The Christian Endeavor movement has not been divinely inaugurated simply for the purpose of its members, but that God has blessed us in order that we may be a blessing to others. Let us, therefore, celebrate this twenty-fifth anniversary of Christian Endeavor by the consecration of ourselves in service to others in the name of Christ.

The Memorial Building.

The proposition for a memorial building in honor of Dr. Clark and to serve as headquarters for the movement has received hearty indorsement in different parts of this country and abroad. The small sum of 25 cents sought from each member of the 64,772 Christian Endeavor societies would furnish the million dollars desired and does not seem to place a severe tax on any individual. The returns from such a fund would be utilized in various ways for the interdenominational and missionary work of the organization. It would permit Dr. Clark and his associates, thus freed from certain burdens, to do a larger service for the churches. The fact that no building is to be erected until all the money is in hand is a guarantee against any trouble some debt. An endowment fund as well as one for construction should be provided.—Congregationalist.

In Australia and India.

Australia's emblem for the increase and betterment campaign is a kangaroo "on the jump," and many of the societies are going forward by leaps and bounds. "Fifteen new members," "an increase of 10 per cent," "an increase of 15 per cent," "a new society," are some of the interesting news items beneath the cut of the kangaroo in the Australian Christian Endeavor News.

At a three days' conference at Landaur, India, Rev. Herbert Hallwell, Christian Endeavor field secretary for India, met ninety missionaries for discussion of Christian Endeavor methods. A conference was held at Kodaikanal.

In the Fiji Islands.

Christian Endeavor has taken root in the Fiji islands, which must now be added to its fellowship. A letter from Rev. Arthur J. Small to Dr. Clark says that "the numbers are few, but the meetings are helpful and inspirited." Lately the members have been led to pray for such revival blessings as have come to Wales and in some of the churches in the United States.

FLOUR MILLS USED IN THE OLD TIMES.

The first two mills in this State were built by the Hudson Bay Company, one in Vancouver and the other at Colville. When the one at Colville was built I have been unable to learn; the one at Vancouver was built in 1836. When that company took possession of this country as far as the fur trade was concerned in 1821, Astoria was their headquarters. In 1824, however, they determined that Vancouver would be a better place, as it would be nearer their inland posts, and also because there was far better agricultural land there. It, however, took until 1832 for the company to completely move everything to that place, writes Myron Eells in the Shelton Journal.

At first, in order to obtain flour, they used a great hollow stump that had been hollowed out, which wheat was pounded with a spring pole that worked a heavy pestle. They had there in their employ a Kentuckian named Cannon, who had come to the coast in 1811, in connection with Astor's expedition, who was a blacksmith and quite ingenious. When the wheat produced there outgrew the great stump and pestle, Cannon came to their relief and made a flour mill, procuring his burrs from the granite in the hills near by, and by rigging wheels and cogs he had a power that took four yoke of cattle to operate. Later they had an improved mill sent from England. Previous to 1828 they brought their flour from England.

When Dr. Marcus Whitman and Rev. H. H. Spalding came to the coast in 1836, they at first obtained their flour from the Hudson Bay Company, it being worth $24 a barrel at Dr. Whitman's in the Walla Walla Valley. In 1838 four more mission families came (among them being Rev. Cushing Eells and wife), all of whom wintered there. During that winter they usually had a "baking of bread" once a week. It was generally gone by the third day, and then they cooked corn wheat whole.

Dr. Whitman built a flour mill at his place in 1839. There is nothing in his writings, as far as I can find, that tells us about the building of it. T. J. Farnham reached his place about the middle of July, 1839. In describing the premises he says (p. 21, "Travels in the Great Western Prairies"): "And last to the grist mill on the other side of the river. It consists of a spherical, wrought iron burr, four inches in diameter, surrounded by a counter-burred surface of the same material. The spherical burr was permanently attached to the shaft of a horizontal water wheel. The surrounding burred surface was fixed in the mill frame, in such position that when the water wheel was put in motion the operation of the mill was similar to that of a coffee mill. It was a crazy thing, but for it the doctor was grateful. It was used, when he himself and an Indian, grind enough in a day to feed his family a week, and that was better than to beat it with a pestle and mortar."

After Dr. Whitman had left for the East, in the fall of 1842, this mill was burned by the Indians, in November of the same year. Whether it was the result of carelessness or design is not known. It was said that two boys, known to be of malicious habits, were fishing and threw fire down on the bank of the river, which communicated with some straw that was lying near the mill. The sensible portion of the Cayuse Indians felt the loss deeply, so did Dr. and Mrs. Whitman, for much of their living depended on it. About 200 bushels of wheat and corn and some flour were burned at the same time.

When Dr. Whitman returned he rebuilt the mill, procuring stone burrs, which he obtained from some of the old mission stones at the mill now owned by ex-Governor M. C. Moore. After the doctor was killed, in 1847, the mill was for a long time in a dilapidated condition, and at last the stones were taken to Fort Colville and used in a flour mill on the Colville River.

After a time the mill was abandoned and the stones disappeared. They had been seen many years ago, but no one paid any attention to them. Senator Allen after the took much interest in them, and had several men looking out for them. At last Sheriff McMillen concluded that they must be in the bed of the river near where the mill had stood, and explored it. He succeeded in finding nine pieces, which when put together, formed about three-fourths of the lower stone, with a part of the iron frame that held them together. It is said that they were cut by Whitman's own hands. They were found incased in sand. Senator Allen presented them to Whitman College.

Rev. H. H. Spalding was the next one to build a mill, and this was put in operation in January, 1840, at Lapwai, Idaho. He had considerable difficulty in finding suitable stones, his search having been for nearly a year, as he began in February, 1839. The first quarry to which he sent he found too much injured by fire. The next one was too far away, on Snake River, near the Tukkanon; but in November he found some near his home. A man named Blair dressed them and made the water wheel. One of these is in the museum of the Washington Historical Society, at Tacoma.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

Published at

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1906.

Reform is in the air. So is the axe that hovers over the chicken's neck. And the grafters are going to get it just where the axe hits the chicken.

If that second assistant chiefship of the fire department is withheld from him this second time, John Case can sit down and figure how much politics is like a shell game to the aspiring one.

Why is it that the ministers of Plainfield do not show any interest in the local option law now before the legislature or in the general agitation to improve the liquor law, the subject of conference among the clergy of the State?

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, called himself a foreigner at the Board of Trade banquet the other night, because he lives on what Mayor Smalley calls the chilly side of the brook. We do not feel that way toward North Plainfielders. We regard the North Plainfielder as our brother. And we would like to be our brother's keeper.

Two of the cops spanked by the police committee were charged with being off duty. One of the things brought out by Corporation Counsel Marsh in interpreting the police rule-book at the late trial was that an officer is on duty all the time. How did those two cops get away from duty without committing suicide or resigning? Clearly, they were only technically guilty, if at all. Pay their expenses.

Senator Hillery was brought here for the avowed purpose of showing the good points of his tax law but he failed to "make good" for he attempted the impossible. The arguments presented by the representatives of the various progressive cities of the State at the conference on the tax question have brought out its Plainfield defects. But how is it, we want to ask, is the powers that be were so anxious to get Hillery here to enlighten the people on his queer statute, that they do not take as much interest in the judiciary committee conference? In short, why is it that nearly every city in the State, except Plainfield, is represented?

Much to the credit of the committee and their well-chosen toastmaster, the annual banquet of the Board of Trade Thursday proved to be both delightful and instructive and at the same time served many good ends. It brought together the progressive merchants, the commuter with civic pride, and the professional man who earns his living here. The wisdom in selecting Frank Bergen as a principal speaker was demonstrated by the time the Elizabeth man had gotten underway with his topic. "Permanent Pavements" is a subject of more than usual interest in the community just at present, and no one listened to that speech without learning something of value. Senator Hillery met with a good reception, although his subject, "Taxation," was a dry one. He did the best that could be expected of one endeavoring to defend the maximum tax law and showed the traits of a lawyer in bringing out the good features and evading the many weak ones in that unpopular law, which will soon be off the statute books. Mayors Buckle and Smalley and Rev. Mr. Warner also stood up well as after-dinner talkers, as did Father Bogan, whose scholarly remarks were worth going a long way to hear. As for the toastmaster, forget him. Maybe W. L. Saunders—well, he was capital.

AMUSEMENTS.

The latest and most sensational novelty yet given to the public is one that is creating a furore in New York. It is the thrilling and pulse-jumping automobile race in "The Vanderbilt Cup" now playing at the Broadway theatre, in which two enormous racing cars are driven at top speed to the accompaniment of sparks, dust, shooting flames and explosions that fairly shake the theatre, while the scenery wheels past at a gait that makes the head swim. There have been races on the stage before, such as the famous contest in "The County Fair," "The Suburban," "The Sporting Duchess" and "Ben Hur," but for up-to-date realism there is nothing to beat the motor race. And this is not merely an effect due to a clever "property man" and the electricians. The cars are veritable racers, and those that have seen service, too. One is the famous "Green Dragon," with which Barney Oldfield took every record from one mile up to fifty from California to Maine, and South to Florida, and the other is a white racer built for speed and speed alone. That they travel and travel fast anyone who sees the race will witness. While the race lasts but one and three-quarter minutes, some distance is covered by the wheels. If the cars were run upon the ground and in the open, two and one-eighth miles would have slipped by at a speed slightly better than the best railroad time. The machines require two drivers and Barney Oldfield and his racing partner trust no one to touch them but themselves.

The biggest comedy hit of the year in New York is Fay Templeton in Geo. M. Cohan's music play, "45 Minutes from Broadway," at the New Amsterdam theatre, where she is now in her fourth week. Miss Templeton is undoubtedly the foremost comedienne on the American stage. Her versatility was never more strongly tested than in this play, wherein she has serious and emotional, as well as broad comedy situations. Her work is particularly pleasing to women. She is a women's comedienne, always refined in all that she does and never resorting to the slightest suggestion of coarseness to make her comic points. Victor Moore plays the opposite role, "Kid" Burns, has made a hit second only to that of the star. Mr. Moore, too, belongs to the quiet, unctuous and refined school of comedy, and in him Miss Templeton finds much sympathy in full sympathy with her stage methods. It is a pleasure to witness the situations between these really great artists, who make their points through real delightful nature. As for the piece itself, it far surpasses expectation and any one who sees it cannot leave the theatre disappointed. It is a very effective conglomeration of different schools of theatrical entertainment in to a powerful story of human interest, staged with novelty, variety and snap. "45 Minutes from Broadway" is quite the real thing in New York.

Thomas Dixon, Jr.'s, play, "The Clansman," has made a substantial success at the Liberty theatre. It is a powerful melodrama and both from a sensational and entertainment, for while it holds one's closest attention as a drama, it reveals the truth of the horrors of negro domination in South Carolina and the real reason for the organization of the Ku Klux Klan. Holbrook Blinn, the famous character actor who made an international reputation through his superb impersonation of Napoleon in "The Duchess of Dantzic," in London and New York, plays the role of Austin Stoneman, the Abolitionist, the prototype of Thaddeus Stevens. Mr. Blinn's makeup is remarkable. Sydney Ayres, the young leading man, who has played many important parts in notable productions, acts the role of Ben Cameron, the Clansman, who leads the Ku Klux Klan. Mr. Ayres presents an ideal impersonation of the fiery young Southerner. Miss Georgia Welles plays the heroine. The favor with which "The Clansman" has been received indicates a long run at the Liberty.

That Hap Ward will have an offering containing many goods things in his new vehicle, "The Grafter," goes without saying. This attraction is to be seen at the Grand this week. Mr. Ward has ever been abundantly resourceful in the musical comedy line and the many entertaining productions made by Ward & Vokes, the result of his handiwork. In "The Grafter" it is promised that Ward and his company of fifty people have a work decidedly more legitimate than anything we have let seen this unctuous comedian in. Of course it has plenty of music and specialty features, but these are simply to maintain an atmosphere and have nothing to do with the complications of the farce. Hap Ward will be seen as "Bill Grafter," "a fellow who could use five" at all times and his method of outwitting himself in to the good offices of wealthy folks is said to be highly amusing. In the company surrounding Mr. Ward will be found such able players as Lucy Daly, William Friend, William Maxwell, Charles Bates, Donald Harold, Tony Williams, Richard Barry, Miss Winifred Spaulding, Miss May Thompson, Miss Daisy Dudley and a chorus of forty.

New York is enjoying the privilege of appreciating the merits of "The Galloper." Henry W. Savage, its producer, has it at the Garden theatre with Raymond Hitchcock surrounded by a numerous company, including Nannette Comstock, Edgar Davenport, May Buckley, T. Daniel Frawley, Helen Lackaye, Scott Cooper, Herbert Corthell and others. The scenes of "The Galloper" are laid in and about Athens during the Graeco-Turkish war, during which conflict Mr. Davis himself was himself a "Galloper," representing the New York Herald and London Times. "The Galloper" is set forth in three scenes. The action is said to abound in amusing situations, which are described as screamingly funny. "The Galloper" will probably be rendered into book form by the author. Mr. Davis is a prolific writer as a war correspondent, novelist and dramatist. Several of his works have been dramatized, but this will be the first instance of any of his stage works being "novelized." The idea of rendering a play into "story" form is not a new one; several authors have hitherto tried it with more or less success. The most notable instance perhaps being the late Wilson Barrett, who "novelized" "The Sign of the Cross," after the play had been successfully produced on the stage.

JURY FINDS FOR JULIA AGOCHEEK IN HER SUIT AGAINST FAITHLESS SWAIN.

Julia Agocheek's suit for $5,000 damages against Joseph Stanischef, which was instituted early last year, came to trial in the Supreme Court at Elizabeth Monday. The jury gave the plaintiff, who sued in tort for breach of promise, a verdict for $1,000.

The damage action supplanted criminal proceedings which Miss Agocheek instituted against Stanischef when she first set out to hold him to account for his faithlessness. The pair came to this country from Austria together, Stanischef promising to marry the girl and right the wrong he had done her in the new world. He put her off, and finally married another girl. Miss Agocheek then took action and Stanischef was arrested on his wedding morning and taken from his bride's side to the county jail. Counsellor Newcorn, acting for Miss Agocheek, decided to abandon that line of procedure, however, and withdrew the criminal charge to sue for damages.

HOME MISSION WORKERS DELIBERATE

WOMEN OF ELIZABETH PRESBYTERIAL SOCIETY CONFER.

The conference of Home Mission Workers as arranged for by the executive committee of the Elizabeth Presbyterial Society for Home Missions, took place Friday afternoon in the Sunday school room of the First Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, and was largely attended. The president of the society, Mrs. Aug. S. Crane, presided.

The officers of all local societies and of each society in the Presbytery had been invited, and each had a representative of two or more women who presented a word of encouragement from her society or asked for help and advice along lines of advancement.

The subject of the meeting was "The Need of Specific Prayer and of Increased Usefulness of Our Societies."

Among those who took part in the discussions were Mrs. Samuel Parry, of Elizabeth; Mrs. W. W. Cassedy, of Dunellen; Mrs. Adrian Lyon, of Perth Amboy; Mrs. Potter, of Union; Miss VanDerbeck, of Lanington; Miss Alward, of Basking Ridge; Miss Beahe, of Roselle, and Mrs. Clarkson Woodbridge, and from Elizabeth, Mrs. B. M. Ogden, Mrs. Ira B. Wheeler, Mrs. J. E. Keron, Mrs. J. A. Frazer, Miss M. J. Peck, Mrs. W. B. Hamilton, Miss E. Norris and others.

The whole meeting had a tone of deep spiritual interest and consecration and will without doubt mean an uplift along those lines to each society represented.

The next annual meeting of this Presbyterial Society will be held on March 30, in the Presbyterian church at Dunellen, and will comprise a morning and afternoon session, to which all those interested in home missions are invited.

The work undertaken by this society, which is an integral part of the Woman's Board of Home Missions, at 156 Fifth avenue, New York, is the systematic raising of money through its auxiliary societies, to supply schoolhouses, teachers and hospitals among the exceptional, ignorant and poor people of this land, which includes the foreigners thronging to American shores, the Alaskans, Indians, Cubans, the Freedmen, Mormons, mountaineers of the South and native populations of Cuba and Porto Rico.

LOCAL DEALERS GOING TO ELIZABETH FOR ICE

SCARCITY OF THE COMMODITY GETTING MORE SERIOUS.

There being a growing scarcity of ice for the local trade, one of the local dealers went to Elizabeth Saturday night with several wagons to secure a supply. With slim prospects of securing a sufficient supply of natural ice, the local firm controlling the hygeia ice plant on North avenue will undoubtedly be forced to operate it. The capacity of this plant is twenty tons a day, and by combining to manufacture ice now a large quantity could be stored away for the coming summer trade.

Thus far only twenty car loads of ice have been cut and shipped from Lake Hopatcong, but this has been sold for current needs, and Mr. Bradley is now searching the country for a supply. Last winter 4,500 carloads of ice were shipped from Lake Hopatcong. Unless a severe spell of freezing weather arrives soon the local dealers will not be able to gather anywhere near an adequate supply of natural ice. The icehouses at Watchung are all in readiness to be filled and electric lights have been arranged at convenient points so that if it is possible to harvest ice the work can be carried on day and night.

Mrs. Edwin S. Hooley and family and Mrs. Hooley's sister, Miss Lillian Brooks, of North Plainfield, will sail on Saturday on the Steamer Campania for a three months' trip abroad.

Mrs. Cory Johnson, of Newark, has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Horace G. Young of the borough.

BONFIRE IN A KITCHEN

BUILT BY CHILDREN

Harry Rosenthal and his wife went away from their home at 140 West Third street Sunday afternoon and left their two children behind. In search of amusement the children built a bonfire on the floor of the summer kitchen. It was a very successful fire. Before it got through the house was damaged $400 worth and the furniture of the Rosenthals and of Samuel Thornton, whose family lives upstairs, was damaged to the extent of $100.

The Thorntons were at dinner, at perious moment upon Thornton got a notion to go out and have a smoke. He went out into the hall and saw a thick column of it curling upstairs. He went down to the lower floor to investigate, and discovered the kitchen of the Rosenthals full of flame. He went upstairs on the jump, smothered his wife about the waist and hurried her out.

At the same time a passerby saw the flames licking up the outside of the building, from an open window, and pulled box 46. There was something wrong with the alarm mechanism, and the blows sounded crazily. The box did not register at headquarters and at the West Second street house, and only the last two rounds came in at the West End house. Three minutes were lost while the firemen were figuring what the blows meant, but some one in the neighborhood of the fire, noting the queer blows and the delay, finally ran to No. 1 Hose Company's house and told the men where the blaze was.

When the apparatus did reach the house the lower story was all afire, the kitchen literally being filled with flame, and the fire had worked up into the attic along the sides and back. The blaze was hot, but it lost ambition when the streams hit it. The firemen did a lot of salvage work, and the loss was kept down.

Chief Doane learned how the fire started. He went out. The latter saw the remains of the bonfire burning merrily in the center of the summer kitchen floor, and a neighbor saw the children run out, presumably when the blaze got beyond their control.

LITERARY.

A Garden of Babies, in full bloom, is described, with the aid of photographic illustrations, by Grace Hortense Tower in Good Housekeeping for February. Not the least novel feature of this "garden" was the fact that it was prepared by children—nor is this article the only striking feature of the February Good Housekeeping. The tricks of the trade in antique furniture and china are many and ingenious, as described by Bertha H. Smith. Bogus antiques are so made as to deceive the very elect, and are sold in vast quantities. Miss Smith's article, amply illustrated, is one of several features of unusual interest in the new household magazine. Coal costs enough, but vitiated air costs still more, paid for in doctor's bills and reduced capacity for work. This has been clearly demonstrated with facts and figures by Prof. Robert H. Richards, of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in an article entitled Fresh Air as an Investment. This is a new and convincing treatment of a vital problem. The loss from bad air in school rooms is particularly set forth by Prof. Woodbridge. The February Good Housekeeping, by the way, is a particularly handsome and interesting number.

A good newspaper story appears in the second instalment of "The Looting of Alaska," by Rex E. Beach, in the February number of Appleton's Booklovers Magazine. It tells of an adroitly worded bill, so fashioned as to admit the Louisiana Lottery into North Dakota, which was introduced in the Senate about 1890, when the lottery's charter was about to expire. The Pioneer Press, of St. Paul, got wind of the affair, and sent a special representative to investigate. "One Spencer, a Senator from Alabama, was there as the representative of the lottery, working hand in hand with Alexander McKenzie that infamous wager-of-battle fight on the side of morals, single handed. So absolutely were attempts under the gang's control, and so set were they upon success, that when Conde Hamlin made known his errand, his life was threatened, and he was forced to remain in hiding. There followed a sensational fight, waged by this young man alone against Alexander McKenzie's corrupt and desperate band. He was spied upon, assaulted and his life attempted, yet he completed his investigation, turning on the affair such a glaring light of publicity that the lawmakers took to cover and the bill, which would have disgraced North Dakota for thirty years, was killed."

MISS CROSMAN PLEASES

Crowded House Enthusiastically Applauds Her "Rosalind" in "As You Like It."

CAS IS A GOOD ONE

Miss Whitehouse As "Phoebe" Most Agreeable—Her Work of a Superior Order—Malcolm Dunn Capable.

For the first time since the New Plainfield theatre opened its doors, Shakespearean comedy held the boards Friday night, and the playgoers public responded in numbers that tested the capacity of the house. "As You Like It," the offering of Maurice Campbell, with Miss Henrietta Crosman as "Rosalind," was the attraction, and the verdict was that production, star and cast were of the first magnitude. The evening's entertainment will remain as one of the striking dramatic events of the season.

Although recently winning laurels in other lines, Shakespearean comedy is no new venture for Miss Crosman. She has appeared in it for years, and is universally acknowledged to be the most convincing Rosalind of the present generation of dramatic stars. She has retained all her former magnetism and her performance last night was as refreshing as though she were still seeking to win her first spurs as a delineator of this pleasing character. Her artistic conception of the role evoked spontaneous applause throughout the five acts and won for her a warm spot in the hearts of Plainfield's playgoers.

The supporting company was equally strong in the respective parts and enabled the performance to move with absorbing precision. Malcolm Dunn's conception of "Orlando" was a splendid impersonation and Miss Frances Whitehouse, as "Phoebe," revealed dramatic ability worthy of special commendation. She has a splendid stage presence and her lines were delivered without the seeking for elocutionary effect too often the fault of Shakespearean artists. Her work in every way was finished and made a lasting impression.

The production was magnificently staged, the forest of Arden being one of the heaviest settings yet placed on the stage of the Plainfield theatre.

"COMEDY CLUB" ORGANIZED.

Amateur Thespians Plan a Series of Dramatic Offerings.

For the purpose of giving three or four amateur performances during the year, a Comedy Club has been organized from among the members of the Park Club. The membership is now about thirty and the club, under the direction of H. C. White, is planning to give a play called "My Lord in Livery," the latter part of February. The performance will be at the Park Club.

The cast for the play has been selected and rehearsals are now being held at regular intervals. Since the formation of the club considerable talent has developed, and it is believed that it will be one of the strongest amateur organizations in this part of the State.

RESTORED $1,500 GEMS

For His Honesty Plainfield Messenger Boy Gets $100 as a Reward.

FOUND IN HE SA ION

Little Fellow Picked Them Up—Saw "Lost Advertisement"—Owner a Philadelphian.

Victor Smith, fourteen years old, of this city, who is employed by the Central Railroad as a messenger boy at Jersey City, while walking through the waiting-room of the station there, last Sunday afternoon, picked up a small chamois bag containing several diamonds, a gold necklace and two diamond rings. The boy did not know the value of his find, and, in accordance with the company's rules, turned the jewel bag in at the station master's office. Up to Wednesday night no one came to claim the lost treasures and the little fellow eagerly scanned the morning papers in search of an advertisement for the lost article.

In looking over one of the papers yesterday he noticed an advertisement offering a reward of $100 and giving an exact description of the jewels, which he had found on Sunday. The finder of the jewels was requested to bring them to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. Young Smith showed the advertisement to his superior officer and a representative of the road took the chamois bag of jewels and, with the boy, went to the hotel, where they met James Allen, a wealthy hosiery manufacturer of Philadelphia, who, with his wife, came to New York last Sunday afternoon, when the treasures were lost.

Mrs. Allen gave an exact description of her lost jewels, which tallied with that of the articles found by the boy. The railroad representative turned them over to Mrs. Allen, and Mr. Allen presented the boy with $100 as his reward. Young Smith comes of a poor family and the money will supply many a long-left want of the family. Overcome with joy upon receiving so generous a reward, the little fellow exclaimed: "Gee, what a bundle of money. Thank you, sir. I must go right home and give it to mamma." Mr. Allen took the boy's address and promised to remember him in a more substantial way later on. The jewels are said to be valued at about $1,500.

William Collier, with the plaudits of both London and New York still ringing in his ears, will add to the local joy and laughter by appearing in the successful Augustus Thomas Comedy, "On the Quiet," at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday night, February 10. Mr. Collier is the same breezy and delightful American comedian that he has always been, only perhaps a little more so, since his late double triumph in London, where he captivated and upset the staid gravity of the British theatregoers, according to all reports, by his uproarous performances of "The Dictator" and "On the Quiet." It is said the triumph has not turned his head in the least nor has it affected his comic powers, unless it has been to extend and add to their laugh-making qualities.

SIX COPS UP BEFORE THE POLICE BOARD

Charges of Dereliction of Duty Lodged Against Them—After Reprimand Sentence is Suspended.

FOUR NEW POLICEMEN

Saunders, Meyers, Vanderweg, Paine, Flynn, McKeon, the Offenders.

First Two Coming in for Worst Roasting.

Something akin to a bombshell was exploded among the members of the police force Friday, when six of the bluecoats were informed by Chief Kiely that their immediate presence was needed before the police board, then in session at headquarters. They appeared before their superiors and charges were preferred against them by the chief as follows: Patrolman Nicholas Meyers, loitering in places off post and failing to ring signal boxes; Patrolman Alfred Saunders, off duty without leave; Patrolman James McKeon, neglecting to ring boxes; Patrolmen Martin Vanderweg and Charles Flynn, neglecting to ring boxes and loitering on post; Patrolman John Payne, neglecting to ring boxes and absenting himself from duty without leave. After a thorough sifting no serious penalty was imposed.

The charges were heard by Messrs. Randolph and Gloak, of the board, the remaining member, Mr. Mellick, being absent. Mayor Buckle and Ralph I. Tolles, president of the Common Council, were present, but not officially. In speaking to the board proper, the chief said the most serious offenders were Meyers and Saunders, the former especially. He declared Meyers made it a practice of going into buildings on his post and remaining there a long time, always providing an excuse to account for his not ringing in the signal report.

The night Mrs. P. P. Bird was robbed by a highwayman on Watchung avenue, Meyers was supposed to be on post in that vicinity, and to Sergeant Fredericksen claimed that he was, yet said he didn't hear or know anything about the occurrence. Chief Kiely made a personal investigation and found that at the time the robbery was committed Meyers was in the basement of Hall's drug store, enjoying a rest. He added that Meyers made a favorite hang-out place of the Rink building and that he was in there more than he was outside doing patrol duty.

In Saunders' case, the chief explained, the trouble was his practice to remain off duty without securing the necessary permission, and thus hampering the workings of the department. He stated that Saunders, who is the only colored policeman on the force, has been before other boards on similar charges, and that he had frequently been warned. The most trivial of the charges was against McKeon, who had failed to ring in on various occasions and was unable to give a satisfactory explanation.

After detailing the offenses, the chief personally scored each one of the men. He informed them as to what their duty is and that failure to perform it reflects upon him and secures the censure of his superiors. He declared that if the efficiency of the force is to be maintained, the policemen must realize the situation they are in and under no circumstances neglect their duty.

"You men who have been taking the matters of this department in your own hands," he said in conclusion, "must get busy at once or be dropped from the force."

The men were all allowed to go with suspension of sentence but Meyers and Saunders were instructed that they were on their last chance and the slightest breach of discipline would result in their dismissal.

Before adjourning, the board considered several other matters and decided to appoint four new men to the force. One will be stationed in the Netherwood district in response to the petition of the residents of that section and the others will be placed where most needed. A letter bearing on the Netherwood situation was read from William Palmer Smith. The Board decided to accept an offer made by Dr. Lathrop to instruct the police in first aid to the injured and lectures will commence as soon as the time can be agreed upon.

It was also decided to have the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium classes continued but to make attendance compulsory only with the younger men.

A Second "Carnival Sitting."

The Gesang anc Turn Verein has planned to give another of its "carnival sittings," the first of which proved so successful. It will take place on February 18 and will be conducted on a more elaborate scale than was last year's. G. O. Keller is arranging the programme, while the general committee consists of Frank Neidig, chairman; John Wirth, John Reiser, Charles Meyer, Sr., and Frank Haurand.

During the tea, the buffet supper and at the dance, music was furnished by Westervelt, an attractive programme being rendered throughout.

3:00 p. m.—"Suggestions on the Renewal of the Peach Industry," Prof. G. F. Warren.

3:45 p. m.—"The Riddle Answered," Rev. D. C. Clair.

The two evening lectures will be fully illustrated with stereopticon slides.

ST. MARY'S PARISH RAISED $19,140 DURING PAST YEAR.

Most Gratifying Financial Statement Just Issued by Father Bogan.

The financial statement just published by Father Bogan, of St. Mary's church, is most gratifying to him and every member of the parish. It shows that during the past year more money was raised than during any previous one. The receipts were $19,-140, and the expenditures $18,120, leaving a balance of $1,260.

A gratifying feature of the work is that $2,000 has been paid off on *the Parochial School debt and $3,-*000, the expenses of the school for the past year, have been paid. There is no debt on the church, this being one of the obligations imposed when it was consecrated.

The total indebtedness of the parish is $10,000, which covers the cemetery, convent and other property owned by the parish, and which is not so burdensome but that it can be well cared for.

Approaching Nuptials.

Invitations were issued yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reid, of 923 West Seventh street, to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Anna Eugenia Reid, and Richard Browning Kent, of Sioux City, Iowa. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride's parents Tuesday afternoon, February 20, at 4 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Brett, of Jersey City, a former pastor of the bride, will officiate. The couple will reside at Sioux City, where the groom and his father are the owners of two large hotels.

BIG RELIGIOUS MEETING

W. D. Murray and H. K. Carrol to Take Active Part in Student Volunteer Session.

AT NASHVILLE, TENN.

Fifth International Conference of the Movement—Feb. 28 Selected As Opening Date.

What it is declared bids to be the greatest student religious meeting ever held will convene at Nashville, Tenn., the latter part of next month, the occasion to be the fifth international conference of the student volunteer movement, of which John R. Mott, of Montclair, as chairman of its executive committee, is the leading spirit. It is of local interest inasmuch as W. D. Murray and H. K. Carroll, both of this city, will figure conspicuously in its deliberations. Wednesday, February 28, has been selected as the opening date and the sessions will continue through to March 4. The principal meetings will be held in Ryman Auditorium and the First Presbyterian church, of which Rev. Dr. James I. Vance, of Newark, was formerly pastor.

The local clergyman mentioned will be one of the speakers, his address, the subject being "The Pastor as a Base of Missionary Enterprise," to be delivered Saturday, March 2. No less than eight others—clergymen and laymen—from this State will speak. Among them are Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, president of Princeton Theological Seminary. Then there are Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Brown, of East Orange, and Robert E. Speer, of Englewood, secretaries of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, and Dr. Avery K. Shrout, of the national secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Missionary Society. The remaining four are as follows: Rev. John W. Conklin, field secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America; Rev. Harlan P. Beach, of Montclair, educational secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions; E. T. Colton, of Upper Montclair, secretary of the Foreign Mission Department International Committee, Young Men's Christian Association, and W. D. Murray, of this city, chairman Foreign Department International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. At the opening meeting a "quiet session" will be held under the leadership of Mr. Mott and Mr. Speer.

The conference is held quadrennially, and this year about 3,000 delegates are expected to attend. In 1902 the convention took place in Toronto, Canada, and there were 2,-957 delegates. In 1898 the meeting place was Cleveland, O., and there were 2,221 delegates. The aim is to have the delegates from among volunteers for the mission field and not volunteers also. Under the basis of representation adopted, each institution of higher learning in Canada and the United States may send two delegates and one additional delegate for every 100 or fraction above the first 100 students, provided the names are received on or before February 14. The railroads have made reduced rates, and the delegates will be entertained by the citizens of Nashville.

There will be representatives from thirty-one boards and missionary societies, and miss.onaries and workers from the following fields: India, Arabia, Brazil, Burma, China, Chile, Ceylon, Cuba, East Africa, Egypt, Corea, Japan, Persia, Syria, Turkey, Central Africa, South America, South Africa and the Philippine Islands.

The purposes of the convention will be: "To bring together college professors and students and leaders of the missionary enterprise, both at home and abroad, for helpful association and conference; to consider unitedly the leading problems of the world's evangelization; to gain inspiration and a vision of the missionary possibilities of the church; to pray and earnestly resolve to enter with great consecration upon the work of extending the Kingdom of Christ among non-Christian nations."

As the object of the student volunteer movement is to bring young men and women, while college students, to decide to devote themselves to the foreign missionary cause, the convention consists largely in a discussion of missionary problems, talks about the mission field, the problems of the evangelization of the world, and the like. There will be a large exhibit bearing upon the progress of Christianity in the world. General sessions of the convention will be held morning and evening, while conferences on special topics will fill the afternoons.

The conference of foreign missionary officers will be held in Nashville also next month, ending the same day that the religious students gathering opens, and many attending the former meeting will remain over. Delegates to the missionary conference include secretaries and treasurers of boards and societies, and for*eign missionaries who are home on* furlough.

One of the important topics to be discussed at this conference is: "Shall There Be One Protestant Church in Corea?" This is suggested by Bishop M. C. Harris, of the Methodist Church, who is in charge of the work of that body in Japan and Corea, and is a question to which mission leaders have of late been giving much attention. Other matters will come up under committee reports, and include "Reference and Arbitration," which looks to greater comity on the mission fields and "Anglo-American Communities." The latter topic was discussed at last year's conference, and a committee was then appointed to determine what may be done toward bettering the spiritual condition of American and European residents in mission communities.

WELL-KNOWN VOCALISTS FOR BAND CONCERT

BEN LA VERE SECURES A SPLENDID ARRAY OF TALENT.

Arrangements have been completed by Ben La Vere for the fair which he will give in Saengerbund Hall for the benefit of the coming season's series of band concerts. In addition to having the assistance of a committee of local people he has secured the help of the New York publishing houses, and they have promised him the best vocalists in the business for his entertainments.

The opening night is Monday, February 8, and that occasion he has arranged to feature William Elliott, a tenor new to Plainfielders, but well known to Broadway audiences. He will sing the best selections from Geo. M. Cohan's play, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway." Tuesday night Nick Parker will entertain with Von Tilzer hits, and on Wednesday Bert Fitzgibbon is to appear. Thursday night has been reserved for the "only" Mr. Redmond, otherwise "Billy," who will sing as he alone can sing the best vocal numbers from Cohan's play, "George Washington, Jr." Friday will be another banner night, as Theodore Morse, the author of "Blue Bell" and "Starlight," will appear with his comedy trio, comprising himself, Jack Delmore and Bert Fitzgibbon. On Saturday, the closing night, Harry MacDonald, one of the tenor soloists for the Edison phonograph company, is to hold the boards.

In addition to these attractions, Mr. La Vere will introduce the popular "shadow" dances, the stage at Saengerbund Hall possessing all the needed requirements, and he has other ideas in embryo that will make this fair the crown of his previous efforts. With the dancing and nightly change of bill, together with the purpose for which the proceeds will be used, large attendances should be the rule. Mr. La Vere presented a good series of concerts last summer, and if the proper patronage is afforded he will do even better in 1906.

DISTRICT DEPUTY BARBER IMPROVING I.O.O.F. LODGES

HAS COMPLETED INSTALLATION AND ARRANGES SCHOOL OF INSTRUCTION.

District Deputy Grand Master A. G. Barber, of Queen City Lodge, this city, on Friday last completed the task of installing the officers of all the lodges in the district, No. 19, numbering eleven in all. The work was accomplished in a thorough and efficient manner and the officer has received warm complimented. The lodges are located in Elizabeth, where there are four; two in Plainfield, and one each in Westfield, Carteret, Woodbridge, Rahway and Perth Amboy.

The deputy learned that all have been making great strides in the growth of membership and that financially they are stronger than ever before. Since assuming his duties he has started a school of instruction for officers in all lodges to perfect them in the unwritten work and make the conferring of degrees a ceremony of more importance to older members, and he will hold meetings to exemplify the parts. The first will be held in the rooms of Queen City Lodge Tuesday night, and at that time he will make plans for further improvements during his term.

In all his initiatory work he has been assisted by the following staff, which will also accompany him in future visits: Grand marshall, Alexander Muir; grand warden, R. J. Neal; grand recording secretary, D. C. Patterson; grand permanent secretary, W. L. Leitheusser; grand trasurer, Charles W. DeGraw; grand guardian, F. G. Welch.

The costumes seen in Richard Carle's production of "The Mayor of Tokio," are acknowledged as being one of the most beautiful and costly wardrobes seen on the American stage today. Spangles of every known color of the rainbow bedeck each gown to an exceptional degree. Over three million spangles are used in the entire production and Miss Mazureen's gown worn in the first act alone carries over thirteen thousand of these varied-color spangles that weigh seventeen pounds and seven ounces.

WAR ON THE ROOKERIES

A HEARING ON FEB. 6

The Plainfield Board of Health has taken its first step to abolish the unsightly and untentable rookeries that exist in this city. A complaint having been received, action will be taken to close up the properties Nos. 36-46 Watchung avenue, near the brook, owned by the heirs of Hannah Durlach.

The complaint filed by Health Officer Thurlow states that the buildings on that property are unfit for habitation by reason of uncleanliness, rendering their condition dangerous to health. It is further set forth in the complaint that the floors of the building are filthy; there is an accumulation of rags and rubbish; the plaster of the ceilings and sidewalls is down; window panes are broken; there is an absence of a proper water supply, and there being but one well for the occupants of eight apartments.

The police have served notices on Henry I. Durlach, executor for Hannah Durlach, deceased; Milton I. Durlach, and John P. Emmons, their agent, and on Mary Fay, J. L. Laird, Mrs. James Tracey, Julia Doyle, Mrs. Abbie VanPelt, Charles Kuhn and Annie Snyder, lessees or occupants of this property, informing them that a hearing will be held at the office of the Board of Health on Tuesday afternoon, February 6, at 4 o'clock, to enable the Board to decide whether the buildings referred to should be abolished, by reason of the unfit and sanitary condition cited in the complaint.

At this hearing an opportunity will be given all interested to be heard and present such evidence as they may have. The action is in accordance with the rules of the Sanitary Code. It is also expected that the Board of Health will proceed with any similar properties located in other parts of the city. It is the purpose of the Board to abolish all such buildings found to be unfit for habitation.

The buildings referred to on Watchung avenue have long been an eye-sore and a disgrace to that part of the city and it is expected that radical changes will result from the action of the Board of Health.

"LOU" WILTSE RETURNS FROM SYRACUSE VISIT.

Has Not Yet Completed His Plans for the Coming Season.

"Lou" Wiltse, the popular baseball twirler, returned home yesterday from Syracuse, where he and his family have been visiting since the holidays. As yet he has not decided where he will play ball this season. While away Manager Heckert, of the York Tri-State League team, of which Wiltse was a member last season, was in town for the purpose of getting the player's signature to a contract, but as yet he has not yet affixed his name to a paper.

Wiltse is quite anxious to get into faster company, having the confidence that he can make good. It is barely possible that he may wear a Cincinnati uniform this season, if he can be reinstated. "Ned" Hanlon, formerly of the Brooklyn Nationals, who is now managing the Cincinnati team, it is said, is anxious to secure Wiltse, and if the National Commission will lift the ban there is a strong possibility that the Plainfield*er may go West. If he does not, he* will likely return to York, Pa., providing he is offered as much as he received last year.

It is the opinion of many players that "Lou" is even a stronger pitcher than his brother George, and that if given a fair chance with a good team, will make even a better record than the latter. "Lou" is in the best condition, having kept in training all winter, and he believes that the coming season will be one of the best for him.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. McGee, of the borough, attended the Junior Class promenade at Cornell University, yesterday. Their son, Vaughn McGee, is a member of the Junior Class at that university.

WIFE SECURES DIVORCE

Mrs. Searles Gets a Decree in Suit Against Dr. Frank R. Searles.

STATUTORY GROUNDS

Given Custody of Children, Lawyer's Fees and Alimony—Craig A. Marsh Her Counsel.

In a decision just handed down by Vice Chancellor Stevens, Mrs. Rose Myra Searles, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Lowerie, of Park avenue, is granted a divorce from her husband, Dr. Frank R. Searles, on statutory grounds. Mrs. Searles is given the custody of her three children and Dr. Searles is directed and ordered to pay all costs of the suit, counsel fees and permanent alimony. Craig A. Marsh, Esq., represented Mrs. Searles in her suit for divorce.

The decree for divorce follows soon after Mrs. Searles recovered her verdict for damages against the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway, now known as the Public Service Corporation. Mr. Marsh, who also had charge of this case for Dr. and Mrs. Searles, obtained a verdict against the company for $15,000, of which amount $12,000 was for Mrs. Searles and $3,000 for her husband.

The accident in which Mrs. Searles was injured occurred August 18, 1902, and there was a settlement of the suit, in which Dr. Searles joined, on July 6, 1904. The company obtained an order for a new trial on the ground that a sufficient time had not elapsed since the surgical operation performed on Mrs. Searles, to enable the doctors to determine how much improvement would result from it.

Shortly before the day fixed for the new trial, Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, representing the company, settled with Mr. Marsh. Despite the testimony of physicians and surgeons of the highest authority in New York, who testified at the trial, Mrs. Searles has greatly improved and it is confidently expected that in time she will entirely recover. At present Mrs. Searles and her children are stopping at Truell Inn.

Mrs. Searles received a severe nervous shock and injuries to her spine at the time of the accident, which occurred at West Fourth street and Madison avenue. The trolley car on the Fourth street line collided with a carriage in which Mrs. Searles was riding, throwing her and other occupants out.

Went Through Show Window.

A scuffle between two well-dressed youths led to the smashing of one of the side panes in the big show window of C. Peck's dry goods store on West Front street Saturday night. One of the young men lost his balance and went through the window backwards. He was considerably cut by the falling glass, and his feelings were much agitated. Mr. Peck refused to make a complaint against him, and the young man promised to straighten out the damage question with the insurance company.

Engagement Announced.

BUSINESS MEN LISTEN TO ABLE SPEAKERS

Maximim Tax Law Defended by Its Author and Permanent Pavements Advocated at Board of Trade Banquet.

AN IDEAL TOASTMASTER

Mr. Saunders Furnishes Bushels of Wit; Mr. Hillery a Lucid Explanation of Much-Attacked Statute.

Probably the most representative body of citizens that has assembled in Plainfield in years gathered at the Casino Thursday, when the local Board of Trade gave its annual banquet. The arrangements had been made on a more elaborate scale than ever before and the smallest detail showed careful preparation in order that the affair might prove a success. The guests numbered 140, most of them business men of the city and borough, though the commuter element was much in evidence.

The programme of the evening began at 8 o'clock with the serving of dinner in the auditorium, and there were constant surprises from the moment places were secured. The arrangements of tables to give every attendant the benefit of the position occupied by the speakers was perfect, while floral decorations were most effective. The national colors, coat-of-arms and original designs were suspended from the ceiling and about the stage. Candelabra, cut flowers and plants added to the tables. The menu arranged by Mrs. Lena Hellstrom, the Casino caterer, gave evidence of her skill in this capacity and a large corps of waiters prevented the slightest delay in serving. Andrew G. Carpenter's orchestra of five pieces was stationed back of an array of palms and rendered a musical programme.

The last course was placed on the table at 10:30, and from then on until 12:30 the time was devoted to addresses on stated subjects. Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of the borough, made a capital toastmaster, and his subject was received many a hearty laugh. He introduced the speakers and subjects as follows: "Taxation," Hon. T. J. Hillery, of Boonton; "Permanent Pavements," Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth; "Morality and Citizenship," Rev. Father B. M. Bogan, Plainfield; "Why a Man from Orange Likes Plainfield," Rev. George A. Warner, North Plainfield. Informal addresses were made by Mayor James H. Buckle and Mayor Newton J. Smalley.

In introducing Senator Hillery, Mr. Saunders said:

"When the chairman of this dinner committee honored me with an invitation to preside he said that it had been decided that only outsiders were wanted as speakers on this occasion. I understood then why he wanted me, and he evidently understood that I lived just outside of the Board of Trade. But I overlooked some thing more, and that is that being one of the near outsiders, I was expected to glorify Plainfield, and now I come here and find that the whole story is printed in full on the menu card, even to the death rate. Now, what more is there to say and what more can be said. We are born to suffer from the hand of relentless fate. As some poet has said:

I've seen my fondest hopes decay.'

"Well, one thing has so far been proven, and let the newspapers now be silent, the board from which this dinner has been served is a board of trade, and not of politics. They know their business—a condition quite uncommon among politicians.

"I once heard an Irishman say, 'Every man loves his native land, whether it be North Carolina or not.' So let us all, whether we belong here or not, join in drinking the health of fair Plainfield. In proposing this toast, let me give you a bit of sentiment:

"Here's to fair Plainfield, in peace may she reign,
As now, so forever a star of the plain.
Here's to thy women, so bright and so fair,
Here's to thy soil, to thy men ever true,
Plainfield the Greater, the old and the new!

"As we look down on this plain field from the Watchung Mountains we are reminded of the glories of the Western plains. It is a great pleasure for a North Plainfielder to go up on the mountain, and with his feet planted on the rock of the immortal Washington, calmly look down on Plainfield. It is at all times a pleasure for a boroughite to look down on Plainfield, but to do it in this historic way is simply great. You have a broad unbroken field, where the sun rises on your eastern horizon and is seen slowly sinking in the West. You people of Plainfield are living in an eyelan field. But lest you run away with your conceit, lest you get the swelled head, let me remind you that the records of history show that the great men of this world did not live and move and have their being on the broad plains, but in the mountainous countries of the earth—in places like North Plainfield. Why, gentlemen, every student of history like myself knows this. Look at Socrates, look at Plato, look at Ararat, look at Vesuvius!

"But there are some extraordinary things in Plainfield. You cannot shine, as with Atlantic City. But you have salt water bathing all the year round; but you have fresh water at all seasons and mosquitoes in January—in fact, all the year round. Even if the whiskey is short, there is the best kind of water, and plenty of it, if you have the money enough to buy it. When you want the other thing, North Plainfield is not so very far away, after all, except, of course, when it comes to the home stretch. If the trains should strike you, should the Public Service Corporation, with its watery hand on your purse, also attempt to take you by the throat and stop your gas, in such a case just come over in the brook and fish for suckers, and have a spring and cheap whiskey. We keep late hours over there, so do not hesitate to come, even if you have been out all night. You need not bring anything with you but a full purse and an empty stomach, and you may lose both over there, if you like.

"Another great advantage which Plainfield enjoys is that she is so near a summer resort—so near and yet so far from it. The mercurial thermometer that these plains are steaming with August temperature of 100 degrees in this universal shade, over there at Mayor Smalley's stone cracker you will find plenty of men dozing around the cracker barrel, counting the number of votes that each one is going to cast at the next election.

"But we have had enough wine, so let us get aboard the water wagon. I am not responsible for the placing of so many water experts on this program. It did seem that one president of a water company and two experts would be quite an even balance against one New Jersey State Senator; but when I read the list of speakers I was stunned to find that he was one of the original incorporators and is now a director of the Boonton Water Company. Think of a New Jersey senator being a water expert! Tell me how it happened, Senator Hillery, and please don't tell us that the leader of the Senate is going to put Plainfield up to the maximum tax rate.

"The Senator said in part:

"The proper thing for me is to love my native town, then his native country and after these two loves to love all the rest. So to meet on a common ground as we are all residents of New Jersey, these states are proud to call her father, but she is not and I defy anyone to prove her other claim to fame. Her population is numbered among the leading states in the Union. Her corporations are among the most much abused and is being said, have been copied by other states in many respects, and some not copied.

"I have been asked to speak upon 'taxation' and I shall keep to the subject. I won't attempt a definition but I know it has a synonym, and that is 'robbery.' I don't know what you are trying to avoid it. Somehow or other we always reimburse ourselves. We have all had a usual discussion with it.

"In his inaugural address, Governor Stokes mentioned the need of a maximum tax rate and its introduction into New Jersey is not a new thing. Many other states have it and it has been embodied in numerous bills and legislation. The bill which I had introduced in the last legislature provided that in cities of less than 50,000 inhabitants the maximum tax shall be $1.50 for $100 of assessed valuation, excepting the state school tax; over 50,000 inhabitants the maximum rate is $2 and $3 plus the school tax. The bill also contains a provision which makes it necessary for the people's vote before the maximum stipulated can be exceeded. These are the principal features of the law is, "shall there be a limit to taxation?"

"The whole trouble in this state as well as in others is the overlooking of personal property in the assessments. As it stands now, realty bears the greater part of the burden and personalty is getting worse each year. The expenses per head in this state are higher relatively than the wealth and it is through an equalization of taxation that the difficulty can best be met. Investors claim that they cannot find sufficient personal property to meet the demand in a general way because they do not want to find it. There is no question but that personal property that is visible and can be easily taxed but it always escapes and the owner of real estate, the farmer, the man who continues to meet the greater part of the assessments is disgusted.

"It has been charged that the maximum tax law would be a benefit to the railroads but I defy any man to show that it is a railroad act. If it can be shown that it is, I'll be doing more for anyone I do not desire to see it on the statute books.

At the conclusion of the Senator's remarks, Toastmaster Saunders introduced Mr. Bergen, saying:

"It is an old saying that nothing is certain but death and taxes. Let us amend this maxim and add—except water bills. We have with us a little corporal from Elizabeth who, as a lawyer, is without a peer in this State. I speak from experience, as he has been a friend of mine in legal affairs, and it was he who drew, without charge, the Annexation and Consolidation bills. This last mentioned bill still stands to-day, and to the means, later on, by which the two Plainfields will be united. Mr. Frank Bergen will tell us why permanent pavements add to the safety and beauty of cities and incidentally prevent the tearing up of water pipes."

Mr. Bergen's remarks will be found in another column.

The next speaker was Father Bogan. He was introduced in this wise:

"As no community is complete or safe without its priest, so no dinner is good without an Irishman for a speaker. We shall be glad to hear from that popular young priest of St. Mary's, Father Bogan."

America as no other nation honors manhood, consecrates its rights and gives it the freedom to develop its power and activity as unhindered as possible. The action of the people—governed for the people by the people, and in because one of the people of America it suffices to be a man.

In this country all men are equal in citizenship; there is no civil or political privilege for the few; there is no civil or political inferiority for the many. In the long history of the human race, the world, has not known such a manhood of itself was no title to equal rights with others. But the triumph of manhood was to come. It came in the workings of Providence first among a people far off—across the Atlantic. The nation is great that builds up man.

America exalts, not in vast domain and mighty seas, not in the fertile soil and splendid air, not in magnificent cities and world-reaching commerce, exalt in the manhood of itself, exalt in the liberty of the manhood of itself to its dignity.

"The peril of America is her democracy. Democracy is the last experiment of democracy that it is a government for gods, but for men.

It is putting too high an estimate of manhood, this writer thought, to trust to the people. It is unscriptural, it refuses to believe that when political power is distributed among the many the individual will not be made of it. At the present day, with the record of the past before us, many believe that there are numerous political writers in Europe who assert that democracy is but the beginning of government and that its ultimate failure, even in America, is but a matter of time. It is myself fullest faith in the democracy of America because I have faith in the people of America, and because the democracy of this country has amid terrific trials proved itself to be the best to live. I have faith too in the future of the democracy of the nations, and this is the first condition of humanity is towards it, and the Being who moves humanity moves democracy.

I admit that democracy requires delicate and careful handling, but that is surely will be the reward of never-ceasing vigilance. Whenever this is relaxed there is the tendency of immorality? Whence the love for country, that zealous support of its institutions, that unwavering reverence to its laws? Whence the morality of patriotism? Whence the sacredness of the sacred word—Conscience? The holiest, the noblest thing in man is conscience. It is the greatest gift to man.

And I will place within them as a guide, my umpire, Conscience.
Whom if they will heed, light after light well used
They shall attain, and to the end persistant rise in glory.

Conscience is the witness and avenger of duty; and duty is the highest law to a man's true grandeur and to the attainment of his true destiny. I am not preaching a sermon, I am pleading as an American for the citizenship and democracy of America.

If the blessings we enjoy today are the fruits of our political institutions, with those blessings come down to us the solemn duty of guarding and protecting the well-being of our happiness and the resources of our national glory.

The danger to democracy reaches us a prolific lesson, and the history of nations assures us that the life of a nation is as short as to be impervious to decay. Man with all the weakness of mortality about him, is not endowed with that of immunity. In circumstances that a nation, Nations are not immune from the diseases that are susceptible of political change and as liable to decay and death as is the life of man with all the human system to changes of temperature and climate.

Under this conception it is not the duty for the privilege of the people to raise their voice in favor of our institutions, but under our system the people constitute the governing power; and if that power is not enlightened itself, it fail to perform its work and trust to corrupt and designing leaders. Democracy is the government of the people in all the affairs, what result can reason apprehend from intelligent leaders, but the overthrow of liberal institutions?

If democracy requires delicate and careful handling, it is the duty

AUTO OWNERS AROUSED

A BITTER FIGHT AHEAD

Opposition to Provision Imposing Heavy Fine or Imprisonment For Violations of the Law.

The introduction of the Frelinghuysen automobile bill in the Legislature, despite the effort of representative automobilists to have it modified, has aroused autoists, and will doubtless precipitate the most bitter war that the automobilists have ever waged, but Senator Frelinghuysen announces that he is ready to make the fight.

The features of the bill that are most strongly opposed by the automobilists are those providing a fine of $500 or two months' imprisonment for failure to comply with the law, and the arrest of the automobilists without a warrant. Another feature that is objectionable to the autoists is the provision that all owners or chauffeurs operating machines must be licensed by the State. The Frelinghuysen bill also proposes that, instead of maintaining a limit of twenty miles an hour in cities and villages and at crossings, they shall be run at eight miles an hour.

"It is just the same old fight of the automobilists against any restrictions that can be enforced," said Senator Frelinghuysen today. "The people demand protection, and the autoists will fight, just as they did last year. This bill is fair, embracing many of the provisions of the French and Austrian regulations."

If the bill should become a law in its present form, it would bring the State an annual revenue of about $125,000, which would be devoted to the improvement and repair of the stone roads in the State. The number of automobile licenses issued by New Jersey in the three years the present law has been in force has been 14,619, for which the State received a dollar for each, or $14,619. A dollar is also charged under the present law for each transfer of license, and there have been about 400 of these, so that the total income to the State on account of automobiles in the three years has been about $15,000, or $5,000 a year.

It is said by some of the State authorities that the average horsepower of the automobiles in the State is twelve. Assuming that 14,000 should take out licenses each year, the horse power would be 168,000, producing a revenue, at seventy-five cents per horse power, of $126,000. The net gain under the new bill, therefore, would be about $120,000 a year.

The new bill has the sanction of the New Jersey road department, and the object of the department will endeavor to secure its passage.

"MAYOR BILL" SMITH NOW A BOWLING ALLEY OWNER.

After Numerous Ventures in This Locality Tries New Business in Essex County.

"Mayor Bill" Smith, who succeeded in making more history for New Market in the past few years than it had ever piled up in all its previous existence, has shaken the dust of the Middlesex county village from his feet. He recently went to Caldwell, where he purchased a bowling alley and pool business, which he has since been conducting. His family remained at New Market until last week, when he became firmly established in his new capacity and had all his household effects moved over.

Since "Mayor Bill" received a share of his sister's estate he has embarked in from a half a dozen enterprises, some of which amounted to a great deal from a financial standpoint. As a rule they cut large gashes in his bank account and he formed the opinion that New Market was "four-flushing" him. He embarked in the automobile repair business in this city, but there were more expenses than receipts, and "Bill" gave Plainfield the "go-by" in a few months.

TWO "AT HOMES."

Given by Mrs. Kinney In Honor of Her Guest.

Mrs. William C. Kinney, of Arlington avenue, gave two delightful "at homes" Thursday and yesterday afternoon, for Mrs. Otis E. Hovey, of Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield. During the two afternoons about 150 persons called. The home was attractively decorated with palms and cut flowers. The prevailing color in the reception room was pink and that of the dining room red, there being a profusion of tulips and carnations.

Mrs. Kinney and Mrs. Hovey were assisted in receiving by Mrs. William M. Stillman, Mrs. James R. Joy, Mrs. Darsee Hatch, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore, Mrs. William T. Kaufman, Mrs. W. A. Pinto and Mrs. Roger F. Murray. In the dining room pouring tea and chocolate were Miss Virginia Hegeman, Miss Edith Fisk, Miss Grace Kaufman and Miss Elsie Harman.

FALSEHOOD, SAYS STOKES TO STEFFENS

GOVERNOR OF NEW JERSEY DENIES CHARGES MADE BY WRITER.

In a current magazine Lincoln Steffens, who has on several previous occasions made charges against prominent Jerseymen, only to have them flatly contradicted, repeats the assertion that Gov. E. C. Stokes was the "Pennsylvania Railroad man at Trenton." Mr. Steffens makes other serious allegations against the Governor, in upholding Senator Colby, the New Jersey reformer.

When asked what he had to say concerning the Steffens charges, Gov. Stokes replied that the statements concerning his were untrue in inference and in fact. He said that the suggestion that he had been influenced by the Pennsylvania Railroad or any other corporation was entirely without foundation.

"The falsehood," the Governor continued, "has been repeated again and again, and I have often denied it. It was repeated over again and over again during the Gubernatorial campaign, and yet in that campaign my opponents were not able to substantiate the charge by reference to a single vote which I had cast during my eleven years of legislative service. The majority of 51,000 which the people gave me was a sufficient refutation of the slander."

Concerning a resolution for limited franchises which Steffens intimates the Governor opposed, the executive denied the truth of Steffens' assertions.

"I was entirely friendly to the limited franchise resolution, and so expressed myself many times," he said.

The Governor said he knew nothing whatever of A. J. Cassatt's attitude on the subject, or the attitude of any of that gentleman's associates. Mr. Cassatt, he said, had never made any suggestion to him on this or on any other subject, either at this or any time.

The Governor said he did not know where Steffens got his information for his article, but he did know that he was badly misinformed.

LUNCHEON AND SALE BY KING'S DAUGHTERS.

There were 100 at the luncheon, while many more attended and assisted the worthy cause by patronizing the sale of useful articles and cakes. Over $100 will be realized as profit from the affair and this sum will go towards the circle's pledge in support of the city nurse.

The sale of useful articles was in charge of Mrs. Nelson A. Miller and that of the cakes Mrs. William Murray. Miss Susan Rafferty is the president of the circle, and she received, assisted by other members of the order. Aside from the sale and luncheon the social features were greatly enjoyed.

COLOR LINE WITHDRAWN.

The East Orange Board of Education, at its meeting Monday night, rescinded the resolutions passed early in December authorizing the segregation of the negro children in the lower grades of the public schools. This was not made known until yesterday.

The new resolutions authorize the continuance of segregated classes in the Ashland and Eastern schools, but eliminate the word "Afro-American."

Superintendent C. Vernon L. Davey said the resolutions had been rescinded not because the board had repented of its action, but because of the objection to the wording. With the rescinding of the resolutions the board will be unable to establish separate classes in any of the other eight schools of the city; but the children in the Ashland and Eastern schools will continue in the segregated classes.

Hermis in Winter Quarters.

"Hermis," the famous son of "Hermence," is spending the winter at Bound Brook, and according to Trained John Shields, is getting along finely. "He is doing as well as I could wish," said Shields to some friends the other day, "and there is no good reason why he should not train this spring. You know, perhaps, that he would have trained all right last year if he had received fair play. They jumped the races into him too quickly; one on top of the other. Had it not been for that he would have stood a preparation nicely. I think they will let me take my time with him this year, in which case I will bring him to the races in fine form. His lameness has disappeared entirely and he is as rugged as ever."

Afloat Club Will Banquet.

The third annual banquet of the Wanamassa Boat Club will be held at the Broadway Central, New York, on Saturday night, February 17. Covers will be laid for forty.

GOOD WHOLESOME ADVICE TO WOMEN.

Here is some carefully thought out advice for the unfortunate woman of pet hallucinations who imagines she is the victim of oppression and especial persecution at the hands of fate; who believes that she has been mismated and that marriage is, after all, a failure of the dismal dyed-wool sort; who thinks her husband's sole ambition is to deny her everything she desires, including the right to be happy in her own sweet way, says the San Francisco Call.

They are written by a mere man of common experience, a bald head and a mite of wisdom, whose mother, a true woman of the old school of rawhide and no-nonsense-around-the-house amenities, early trained him in the noble art of knowing his place in the domestic circle:

Take in that washing.
Be ladylike.
Don't trump your partner's ace.
Don't snore.
Carry your own tally punch.
Read the "Simple Life."
Forget it.
Blame it on central.
Stop telling people that you haven't a bug in the house.
Don't bite your nails.
Quit talking over the back fence.
Do your manicuring in private.
Remember you promised to obey him.
Ring off.
Remember you're not a Gibson girl.
Sell the punch bowl.
Quit the C. O. D. habit.
Give the parrot a chance.
Remember not to smile when your false teeth are at the dentist's.
Chuck the kimono.
Keep that stocking pulled up.
Stop sassing the gas man.
Learn to knit like grandma.
Leave the peroxide alone.
Make a cake once in awhile like mother made.
Or a pie.
Or some biscuit.
A dozen but no two.
Or even a bean stew.
Let the dead past bury its dead.
Don't play euchre for charity.
Don't whistle at the milkman.
Dust off your Bible.
Don't take beauty naps before the dishes are washed.
Chew your food thoroughly.
Chew it thirty times.
Chew it forty times.
Chew it fifty times.
By doing this you will give your husband a much needed rest and at the same time cure that dyspepsia.
Shed that red wrapper.
Take your physical culture in the kitchen.
Don't buy what you don't need, even if it is a bargain.
Look your prettiest at all times.
Don't argue with the cook.
Remember that even your friends have feelings.
Lay the duster down before you take up the novel.
Save your smiles for your husband; the letter carrier has a wife of his own.
Try to look wise.
Quit calling at the top of your voice from the front window for "Hennery" when the minister calls in the afternoon.
Don't let small things annoy you; not even the instalment man.
Use a button hook for those top buttons.
Shake the matinees.
Do something.
Do nothing.
Do as you like.

DO NOT LOOK UPON IT AS DRUDGERY.

The thoughtful wife looks back upon the year that has gone and reckons up her mercies. First of all she is unduly thankful that those whom she lives are spared to her for a little longer, and if there are vacant places since last the family gathered together, she tries in spite of her grief and sense of loss to think gratefully of the sweet memories and blessed examples.

Perhaps her thoughts will turn to the material side of life, and she will be thankful for the prosperity that has come to her and hers. Thus she will realize her blessings.

But how many women, it is to be wondered, are grateful for their daily work, or give praise that they are housewives. It has not become the fashion to speak slightingly of the "drudgery of the housework" that many women are prone to think it betokens superiority to declare themselves above it. This is quite as absurd as if men announced that they had souls above the "drudgery of business."

Such men do exist, but they are not looked upon as very wonderful beings; in fact we call them by the unkind name of tramp.

Much of the discontent of women with their home work arises not from their mental superiority, but because they have in fact very superficial minds. Were they built on a broader plane and grasped whole instead of half truths, they would realize the immense importance of their work to the world and endeavor to perform their duties with intelligence.

Household work is not by any means confined to wives and mothers. How many families throughout the land rise up and call blessed some spinster aunt or sister who devotes herself to their welfare.

It is not only among discontented women that the idea of "drudgery" is insisted upon. We find it in every walk of life under other names. There is no position so exalted as not to have been won by tedious plodding and maintained by a considerable amount of good, hard, honest work, foolishly termed "drudgery."

DELICIOUS CONCOCTIONS

Little supper dishes are always a prime concern of the chafing dish girl at this season. Among the stand-bys is shrimp wiggle, a sightly and tasty concoction. Have ready a small can of shrimps and a small can of French peas. Turn both from their cans, rinse them and let them stand in the air for an hour or so. Make two cupfuls of white sauce with a cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of flour and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Season with salt and white pepper. Turn in the shrimps and peas and beat the mixture through thoroughly.

Sometimes my lady has trouble when she needs to heat a mixture in a small dish, because the size of her chafing dish frame suits only the pan made for it. To fill the need, the manufacturer has brought out what he calls a "hanger." It is a nickel disc, perforated in ornamental fashion, to admit the heat of the lamp and fitted with three nickel strips at the sides, each ending in a hook to catch it onto the frame. The disc thus hangs inside the frame over the lamp. On it may be set a small tea kettle, saucepan or other utensil, as occasion may require.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

It may interest many who use carbolic acid as a disinfectant to know that the difficulty of mixing it with water is quite overcome if boiling water is used. With a little shaking or stirring this makes a complete and permanent solution and will keep for many weeks unaltered.

If a cloth is wetted in vinegar and wrung out as dry as possible with the hands and wrapped around cheese and then the whole put in a large paper bag and kept in a cool place the cheese will retain the moisture and freshness of a new-cut cheese and will not mold.

Loosen knife handles are quite easily mended. Take the handle off, mix together three parts resin and one of bath brick. Nearly fill the handle with this, heat the steel beyond the blade till nearly red-hot, insert in the handle and press down in its place. It will be as firm as when new.

Before using preserved vegetables drain away all their liquor, place the vegetables on a sieve or colander and pour boiling water over. This process rids the vegetables of the water in which they were preserved and which often causes a bitter taste, and boiling water also tends to soften the vegetables and makes them more easy to cook. Preserved vegetables, as a rule, do not require to boil so long as fresh.

To brighten the inside of a teapot, fill it with water, add a small piece of soap and let it boil about twenty-five minutes. The teapot must be thoroughly rinsed out afterward, so as to leave no taste of soap.

Art muslin curtains should never be washed in warm water. Put them in a lather of nearly cold water. If the curtains are green add a little vinegar, if lilac or pink, a little ammonia. Salt will set the colors of black and white muslins.

If a tin of paint has to be left open stir it thoroughly, so as to dissolve all the oil, then fill up with water. When it becomes necessary to use the paint pour off the water and you will find it as fresh as when first opened.

To clean finger marks on doors rub the finger marks with a clean piece of flannel dipped in paraffin oil. The marks will disappear like magic. Afterward wipe with a clean cloth wrung out of hot water to take away any traces of oil. Then wash using soap and water, as it does not destroy the paint. Paraffin oil is also excellent for cleaning varnished hall doors which face a dusty roadway.

If a lamp should be overturned do not attempt to put out the flame with water, for it will simply spread it. Instead, throw down flour, sand, garden earth or salt, any of which will have the desired effect.

To prevent a lamp smoking, soaking the wick in strong vinegar and drying thoroughly before using. It will then burn both sweet and pleasant. This has been tried and never known to fail.

To Mend Broken China.—Half an ounce of gum arabic dissolved in a wineglassful of boiling water and adding plaster of Paris to form a thick paste. Apply with a brush to the edges of the broken china and join evenly together.

To Clean Pamboo Furniture.—Dirty bamboo furniture may be cleaned with a small brush dipped in warm water and salt. The salt prevents the bamboo turning yellow and the washing makes the bamboo look bright. Rub very dry with soft cloths, and you will be delighted with the results.

How to Keep Coal.—Coal should be kept in the dark. Its nature changes under the influence of strong light, especially under sunlight. It becomes friable and is less able to give out a strong heat when burned. When stored it should have salt sprinkled over it. This keeps it in condition and prevents its undue drying.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, has recovered from a very heavy cold and was able to occupy his pulpit yesterday morning and evening.

WANT A BROOK CLEANED

Dunellen People Agitate the Dredging of Bonegut, a Cedar Brook Tributary.

BREEDS MOSQUITOES

Choked Up with Weeds and Is Stagnant—Want the Board of Health to Take Action.

Residents of Dunellen, particularly those living near by Bonegut brook, a tributary of Cedar brook, which runs through the town, have started an agitation to have the brook dredged and cleaned out before spring. E. H. Carney, Mrs. Charles Hill and Mrs. William Parnell, who reside near the course of the stream, claim they have been compelled several times during the summer months to keep all windows of their houses closed in order to avoid the stench that arises from the stagnant water. Howard Bird, who resides in Dunellen and does business here, as well as other residents, have requested the Board of Health to take action in the matter, and it is said Piscataway Township has offered to bear a proportion of the expense necessary to do the work.

It is estimated that the cost of dredging and cleaning out the brook would amount to about $175. It is claimed by those residing in the immediate vicinity of the brook, that fever and malaria is caused by the stagnant water and that it also affords a breeding place for mosquitoes. Taxpayers of the borough are of the opinion that they should not be compelled to risk their health, which is threatened during the summer months, when the stream is nothing less than a stagnant pool.

State Entomologist Smith, who is waging a war on the mosquitoes, has had his attention called to this brook, with the view of having something done to stop the breeding of mosquitoes at least. Some eight years ago the late Christian Schepflin, at his own expense, had the brook cleaned out its entire course, but through the intervention of Joseph Peterson, who objected to the workmen trespassing upon his property, the work was abandoned. Recently the Aluminum Press Company, located at a point in the borough where the brook bends. This concern constructed a culvert and cleaned out the brook in order to protect the health of its employes.

The Dunellen Heights Realty Company owns the greater part of the property, through which the stream flows. The stream has not been cleaned out in so long a time that its course, which was never more than five feet wide, has gradually been choked up by weeds and water vegetation to such an extent that at times there is a rainfall collars of nearby houses and hollow spaces near the brook fill with water and become stagnant pools. Unless the local Board of Health does something to relieve the bad condition now existing it is said residents along the line of the stream will call the attention of the State Board of Health to the stream.

COLBY MEN ARE IN A REFORM LEAGUE,

Launch Permanent Organization to Further Political Principles They Espouse.

Citizens who have been prominent in the Colby movement met in the Scheuer building, Newark, Thursday afternoon and organized the Essex County Republican League for Limited Franchises and Equal Taxation. Gardner Colby was elected chairman. Among those present were Senator Everett Colby, Assemblyman William P. Martin, William Fellowes Morgan, Henry C. Hines, Gustav Sommer, Gustav A. Mayser, George P. Serbe, Philip C. Walsh, Jr., of Essex, and Edward K. Tucker, of Union; William Stainsby, John S. Gibson, Henry Hahn, Lathrop Anderson, George Virtue, Alderman Jerome Coughton, Gardner Colby, Sheriff Frank H. Sommer, Alden Freeman, R. Arthur Heller, Edward S. Perry, Harrison Van Dyun, F. K. Gahrs, A. L. Hatfield, William Riker, Jr., Henry Wright, Frank F. Smith, J. R. Whitfield and Benjamin F. Jones. Mr. Anderson was chosen committee chairman and Mr. Hahn secretary.

The meeting was a continuation of one held about two weeks ago, and the committee of five then appointed to prepare a constitution of the organization reported through Mr. Jones, who said the committee had held several meetings and had prepared a constitution and mapped out a plan for a State organization to be represented by a branch in each county.

The constitution was read and declared the objects of the organization to be to promote the best interests of the Republican party in the county of Essex; to eliminate bosses and the corporate control of the Republican party; to further the cause of equal taxation, limited franchises, taxation of bonds, popular selection of United States Senator, popular interest in primary elections, and such other progressive measures as may be necessary in the interests of the people; to promote honest elections and prevent political corruption in every form.

BOUND BROOK'S ONE SOP

Typical Somerset Co. Community of 5,000 People With One Policeman.

AND THEY HAVE NO JAIL

Business Men Threaten to Wake Up and May Yet Be As Progressive as North Plainfield.

Bound Brook, with 5,000 inhabitants, has no police station or jail of any kind. Its police force consists of one man, who is only on duty at night. The authorities of Somerset county are of the opinion that the town is marked by all crooks as an easy place to perpetrate crime. This fact was plainly drawn from a member of the "Dutch" Ides gang, who is now serving time in State prison for robberies committed by members of the band some three months ago, when the stores of M. Rosenthal, a clothier; Voorhees & Giles, hardware dealers, and Frank Venelli's jewelry store were robbed.

It has been learned that crooks operating there have traveled in pairs, one pair watching a lone policeman as he patrolled the streets, while the other two perpetrated the robbery, and if the policeman appeared in the near vicinity of the robbery the two men detailed to watch him would start a fight among themselves, or else give a yell and lead the policeman on a merry chase to a side street or to some secluded part of the town far from the scene of the robbery, thereby securing the safety of their confederates from police interference, and giving them due time to make good their escape should they be detected by the person whose place they had entered, or by some citizen who happened to pass by on the street.

Should the policeman make an arrest there, he would be obliged, to take his prisoner to Somerville, four miles away, in order to lock him up. No place is provided there for the confinement of persons who come within the jurisdiction of the law, even the fire department houses, where cells are usually placed in towns of this size, being without this improvement.

It is very probable that the business men of the town will at the next meeting of the Common Council petition for an increase in the police force and for the placing of cells in the firehouses, or the construction of a building to be used for the detention of prisoners. The population of this town is made up of a thoroughly distinctly cosmopolitan, the greater part of which are Italians, attracted there by the employment offered in the woolen industries. Should an increase be made in the town's constabulary, it is quite probable that one of the policemen would be of Italian descent.

TRIBUTE TO MR. ARNOLD

Trustees Past and Present of Crescent Avenue Church Present a Loving Cup.

TREASURER 25 YEARS

Take Him Completely by Surprise —Quarter of a Century Treasurer of the Church.

William F. Arnold, cashier of the City National Bank, city treasurer of Plainfield, custodian of school board funds, and for twenty-five years treasurer of Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, was presented with a loving cup Friday night.

When Rev. Dr. William R. Richards was called to the pastorate of this Crescent avenue Presbyterian church he was a young man, and was impressed with the size and importance of his charge, which at first made him feel a little uneasy. Upon assuming his duties, he asked to see the various officers of the church, including the treasurer. When the latter, who was but eighteen years old and naturally boyish in appearance, was introduced Dr. Richards looked somewhat surprised. The dominie said: "Well, if that young man can be treasurer I guess I can fill the position of pastor."

Mr. Arnold served the church as a trustee for twenty-seven years, and all but two years of that time as treasurer, completing the quarter of a century last January.

Last night the present Board of Trustees, together with many former trustees, met at the home of Townsend Rushmore. Mr. Arnold was summoned there, and to his great surprise was presented with a costly loving cup in appreciation of his services. Charles J. Fisk made the presentation in his happy manner. Mr. Arnold was completely surprised and it was some minutes before he could respond, thanking them for the beautiful testimonial, which bore the following inscription:

"To William F. Arnold, from his associates, past and present, on the Board of Trustees of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Plainfield, N. J., in appreciation of his faithful services of twenty-five years, closing January 15, 1906."

PLEASING PROGRAMME MOSTLY OF MUSIC

TWO CHURCH SOCIETIES COMBINE TO ENTERTAIN PUBLIC.

Instead of the monthly social, the Women's Association and Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church, united Friday night in giving a musical and literary entertainment. The change was appreciated and a large audience was present to enjoy the programme.

The Sagamore Club, comprising Fred Smith, violin; Joe Gavett, Munroe Long and Chester Briggs, mandolins; William Briggs, banjo, and Irving Martin, piano, rendered an attractive programme of popular selections. Assisting was Miss Aimee Louise Emmons, impersonator. Miss Emmons gave a number of her best recitations in a finished manner. She was recalled time and again, as were also the musical artists.

After the entertainment there was a social time and refreshments were served. The joint committee from the two societies in charge comprised Mrs. Gilbert T. Rhodes, Mrs. C. A. Rice, Miss Eugene M. Kaling, Mrs. J. V. Beekman, Mrs. F. A. Weeks, Miss Ethel Millar, Miss Barry, Miss Lulu Fuller, Miss Jessie McIntosh and Henry Barlow and George Bentley.

H. Tomlinson, county president, of East Seventh street, or Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, county superintendent of soldier and sailor work, 117 Elmwood place, and they will be forwarded to Mrs. Thatcher.

Lowrie; secretary, F. J. Pope; collector, E. T. Van Winkle; treasurer, D. W. Littell; chaplain, Charles M. Wilson; guide, William T. Carr; sentry, Abram Devine; trustee (three years), A. S. Littell.

"BOLTEN PARK" NAME OF SUMMER RESORT

AN ARTIFICIAL LAKE TO BE A FEATURE OF THE PLACE.

The extensive improvement and development of land in Plainfield and vicinity is now reaching the suburbs and the inside property districts. Ground has already been broken for a settlement on the old Acker farm, located on the main road of the historic Washington Valley.

Bolton Hall, of New York, who has devoted considerable time and attention to real estate questions, is interested in this tract, which is situated not far from Plainfield. Starting from the Warrenville road at a point near the proposed trolley extension, this property extends back to the mountains to a considerable elevation.

The plan is to convert the lowlands into a ten-acre body of water, to be known as "Bolton Lake," by erecting a concrete dam on the northern boundary of the property. Beckmann road, running west to a point where the elevation starts, will connect the main road with Oxford Terrace at the center of the property. "Epping Retreat" will extend the full length of Bolton Park. This fertile land has been surveyed by F. A. Dunham, the civil engineer, and sub-divided into plots of from two to five acres. The present site of Bolton Lake is a perfect natural basis with pure springs flowing through the center. Not only will this make an ideal summer place, but it is intimated that the water will be made profitable in winter through the harvesting of ice.

The size of these farms will enable persons of moderate means to combine the profit of farming with the advantages of village life, and also be within easy access of Plainfield and New York. The work of developing this site is in charge of William Jeffery, the real estate dealer, who has been associated in his efforts to increase land values which have resulted in the building of many houses.

Miss Ernestine C. Smith, who has been detained at her home in Madison avenue by illness, has about recovered and expects to go out today.

AUTO BILL A POOR ONE

MANY WEAK POINTS

Hardly a Redeeming Feature in Proposed Law Presented by Somerset County's Representative in Upper House.

In its issue of yesterday, the Trenton True American, editorially, spoke of the Frelinghuysen automobile bill as follows:

"Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, in response to a very strong opposition to automobiles on the part of the farmers of that county, has introduced a bill for the control of automobilists and their machines that is unique for its selve-like qualities.

"The bill provides for a speed rate of eight and a half miles an hour in cities and towns, and twenty miles an hour in open localities. From Atlantic Highlands to Bay Head there is an almost continuous line of boroughs. The territory is open, but, according to the Frelinghuysen bill, automobiles would have to move along at a snail's pace, or furnish food for the voracious maws of unscrupulous county constables and justices of the peace.

"The law, as it stands, provides that automobiles shall not exceed the speed of twenty miles an hour, but at no time shall the lives, limbs or property of any person be endangered.

"The bill also provides for a registration fee of fifty cents a horse power, which automobilists are taxed for their machines at the same rate that other property is taxed. The larger machines cost more money than the smaller, and pay proportionately higher taxes. Notwithstanding the apparent double taxation feature of this provision, the automobilists are willing to submit to it.

"Then it is provided that all chauffeurs shall be taxed twenty-five cents per horse power for their licenses. The reason assigned for graduating the registration fee, according to horse power, is that the big touring cars are injurious to the stone roads, and the registration fees will supply funds for keeping them in repair. This is in accordance with Road Commissioner Hutchinson's suggestion. But why a chauffeur's license should be graded as to cost according to the horse power of the machine he is expected to drive, is past understanding.

"In nine cases out of ten the employer will have to meet the expense of his chauffeur's license. Suppose a man owns a 40-horse power machine, and hires a man to run it. He pays $10 for the man's license. At the end of a week he finds the man undesirable, and hires another. The owner of that 40-horse power machine may pay for a dozen licenses in the course of a year.

"Examination and registration fees in the law, medicine and chemistry are calculated according to the prospective opportunities of the applicants. Such a proposition would be laughed out of court. Nor should the license of a chauffeur cost more than sufficient to cover the incidental expenses.

"The proposition that inexperienced persons should not be permitted to endanger the lives, limbs and property of the people is sound, and automobile operators should be required to pass certain tests; but Senator Frelinghuysen's scheme is so complex in its conception as to make very remote the possibility of its execution in the spirit of justice.

"Tourists visiting the State shall be required to pay a registration fee of $1 a day, says the Frelinghuysen bill. This clause is entirely unenforceable. For its successful operation the State will have to establish registration bureaus at every bridge across the Delaware, at every ferry house in Jersey City, Hoboken and Camden, and an automobile patrol to keep 'smugglers' out of Sussex, Passaic and Bergen counties. Governor Stokes might be induced to send a regiment of National Guardsmen, with the gallant Colonel Frelinghuysen in command, to the northern frontier. The present law requires non-residents to have their machines registered as Jersey folks' machines are. If the law-makers who pass cents per horse power, why should non-residents be made to pay one dollar a day?

When it comes to creating a new lot of jobs, varying in fatness according to the scruples of the holder, the new auto bill is excellent. It provides for a commissioner of motor vehicles, and as many inspectors as may be needed. Of course, the commissioner is to receive an 'adequate salary,' and the inspectors will regale themselves with fees collected with the aid of magistrates, whose compensation is dependent upon their soaking their victims, and the alacrity with which the victims respond.

"The present automobile law needs amending, but the complaints against it be remembered that the automobile has as much right, no more, on the roads as the horse and the bicycle. That it is a vehicle that in the hands of the reckless, or inexperienced, may be dangerous, is warrant for legislation to guard the public against its improper use. To do more than that would be injustice.

TALKED ON PURE FOOD

Miss Lakey Blames the Indifferent Woman For Adulterated Articles.

LABEL AS A REMEDY

Address Before Monday Afternoon Club—Bill Before New Jersey Legislature.

A large and appreciative audience greeted Miss Alice Lakey, of Cranford, at the Casino Monday afternoon, when she gave an address before the Monday Afternoon Club on the subject of "Pure Food." Miss Lakey is chairman of the food investigation committee of the National Consumers' League and she has secured samples of food adulterations from the Bureau of Chemistry at Washington, with which samples she illustrated her address.

Miss Lakey gave in detail many of the adulterations in spices, canned goods, confectionery, meat and milk, and urged the desirability of national laws compelling the manufacturer to label his food supplies with the articles used in their manufacture. She stated that the advance in the purity of marketable foods was very great in Massachusetts and some of the other New England States, where for twenty-five years the battle has been waged against food adulterations. In New York and New Jersey progress had been slower and the laws in New Jersey, she said, were few and inadequate. She spoke of the bill before the Legislature of this State last year which passed with a two-to-one majority but was lost in the Senate, which bill, with some modifications, would soon be presented again.

Miss Lakey was of opinion that the indifferent woman was the abettor of fraud and deceit and that the remedy for the present widespread adulteration of food with cheap and harmful articles was the will of the women who would refuse to use goods not labelled and who would exert all her powers to influence legislation that would secure pure food supplies to those who desired them.

HIGH BRED ANIMALS FOR THEIR STABLES

MESSRS. M'CUTCHEN AND BUTTFIELD ADD TO THEIR BLUE RIBBON STOCK.

Charles W. McCutchen, of the borough, has just purchased two valuable thoroughbred horses, one being a full sister to his prize winner, "All-Ablaze," which won two blue ribbons at Madison Square Garden and at the Plainfield show. The animal is a good match to "All-Ablaze," being a chestnut color. Mr. McCutchen has also purchased a high-stepping brown gelding. Both horses come from a well known Lexington stock farm.

William J. Buttfield, of the borough, has also added another thoroughbred to his stock of fine horses, having bought a mate to "Miss Banahan," who performed so well at various horse shows. She won second honors at the last show in Madison Square Garden, besides taking the blue ribbon at Orange and New Brunswick and winning second honors at Morristown.

25 YEARS OF WEDDED LIFE CAUSE FOR CELEBRATION.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hope Entertain Many of Their Friends.

The evening was spent playing games, while a vocal and instrumental programme of music was a feature. Mr. and Mrs. Hope received a large collection of gifts, including silverware, linen and other useful articles.

The couple was married in this city twenty-five years ago by Rev. Thomas H. Stockton, who was pastor of the First M. E. church 1880-1883, and they have resided here ever since. They have a large circle of friends, many of whom extended their congratulations last night.

Those who rode Saturday were Lewis E. Waring, G. C. White, H. A. Bowen, C. S. Bellows, R. A. Shebeare, W. DeLa. Anderson, R. A. Anderson and Dr. M. Y. M. Knott. There will be another chase on Saturday, when a large number of riders will be expected to participate.

DOES NOT OPPOSE FITZ

New York Papers Fake Sermon Report Nailed By Dunellen Pastor.

A SURPRISE TO HIM

Mr. Fletcher Sees Sermon in The Globe, Attributed to Him, That He Never Preached.

Under date from Dunellen the New York Evening Globe published an article Monday purporting to be a report on Rev. Frank Fletcher's opposition to the coming of Bob Fitzsimmons' gymnasium-boxing-school retreat to the borough. Mr. Fletcher is pastor of the Baptist church. The Globe said he preached against Fitzsimmons' scheme Sunday night.

Part of the Globe report read:

"Parson Fletcher upbraided the county authorities for allowing the hotels to sell liquor on Sundays without molestation. He declared that as a result of this state of affairs Dunellen and New Market were the stopping-off place on Sunday for Plainfield rowdies.

"'And now,' he declared, 'we are going to be disgraced further by Fitzsimmons, the prize fighter, coming in our midst to open up a sanitarium for the cure of physical wrecks from other places. I hope the Christian people will rise up in their might and keep this prize fighter where he belongs, and not allow him to come here.'

"The church folk are aroused over the matter, and there is no telling what the end will be."

Mr. Fletcher was amazed when shown the article by a Daily Press reporter yesterday afternoon.

"I preached no such sermon," he said, "and never have referred in any way to Fitzsimmons. I have scarcely given his proposed retreat a thought, and never felt a glimmering of opposition to it. I don't know of anything on which to base opposition. I am perfectly content to have Fitzsimmons or anyone else like him to settle in the borough and carry on any orderly enterprise he may see fit to invest his money in. As for Fitzsimmons in particular, from what I have read of him, I think he is a good, clean sportsman of his kind, sober and honest. I don't see why he would not make a good citizen of the community.

"I would like to know where the Globe got that yarn and why they worked my name, of all others, into it. Do you newspaper men sit in your offices and just cook these things up?"

The Morning Telegraph, of New York, sent a long telegram to Mr. Fletcher about the alleged sermon. The dispatch asked him to state his objections to Fitz as a neighbor and a co-worker in the community. "What is the difference in your mind," queried the Telegraph, "between Fitzsimmons' aims to build up physical wrecks and your aims to build up wrecks of souls?" Fitzsimmons, it said, was shown the Globe report, and he declared his feelings would not disgrace Dunellen. "Please assure," prayed the Telegraph.

Mr. Fletcher wired a reply as fast as he could indite it. He sent in a vigorous and categorical denial of the supposed sermon that will make the pugilist feel pleasant and the Globe very sick.

In an effort to find if there was any possible sort of foundation for the Globe story, Mr. Fletcher asked all the other ministers in Dunellen if they had preached on Fitzsimmons. They hadn't thought of such a thing. Neither Mr. Fletcher nor the reporter could find anybody, clerical or lay, who had expressed opposition to the Fitzsimmons scheme. Quite a number said they considered that he was a champion heavyweight surrounded by real sports and swells was pleasing.

YOUNG BIGLOW ONCE MORE AT HIS HOME

RUNAWAY BOY LOCATED IN NORTH CAROLINA BY HIS FATHER.

Earl Biglow, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., who together with two other students from the Montclair Military Academy, ran away from home a week ago, telling many people that he was living south for a good time, is home once more. His father located him in North Carolina, with another one of the trio, and brought them back to Montclair.

Young Biglow thought the trip a big joke and was wonderfully displeased to have it interrupted by his parents. He and his companion were thoroughly enjoying southern climate and as they had plenty of money did not appear to want for anything. The third boy only went as far as Baltimore, when he returned home. The two decided to go further south. A few days ago Mr. and Mrs. Biglow received a photo-postal card from their son. This was dated Baltimore and it said that the writer was going south. It was through the postal card that Biglow was found, the police assisting the father to recover his son.

A LECTURE ON "TACT"

Rev. T. Moore-Smith Talks Interestingly on the Subject.

AT PLAINS CHURCH

Address Heard by a Large Gathering—Given in Connection With Musical Entertainment.

Rev. T. Moore-Smith, whose ability as a speaker is rapidly becoming known to Plainfielders, delivered a lecture on "Tact" at the Scotch Plains Baptist church, Saturday night. It was heard by a large gathering. The lecture in part was as follows:

What is "Tact?" Everybody ought to know, and yet how can you define "tact?" Asked what "salt" was, the little girl replied: "Please, sir, salt is the stuff which makes the potatoes taste very nasty when you haven't got none of it with 'em." The people who are without "tact" usually when they open their mouths put their feet in it, and generally their feet are very big. Tact tells one what to say, and how and when to say it, what to do, and how and when to do it. Tact is the rudder of the ship. It largely controls our speech and actions. It is the lines, or bit and bridle on the horse's head. I think of the people who have tact how beautifully they do things. Think of the people who are tactless how they undo things, and generally make confession worse confounded. It has a value and beauty all its own. It touch gives grace and beauty to life, and is a marvelous power in moulding and forming and finishing character. How it adds to the dignity and strength and usefulness of one's life in society, in business, in literature, in politics, in the affairs of nations, in diplomacy, in our daily contact with humanity.

The lecturer here referred to the early life of Oliver Goldsmith, Lord Byron, the Poet Shelly, Bradlaw, the infidel, and John Duncan, the professor, as examples of young mandom mismanaged by the tactless at a time when habits are formed, and the young life needs tender handling.

When Dr. Thomas Guthrie, of Edinburgh, visited the lowgate in that city on his pastoral rounds he happened one day to knock at the door of a man with a very bad temper and no love for preachers. Dr. Guthrie was received with a flow of language anything but polite. The poor, ignorant man lost his temper completely, rushed for a heavy poker and made a plunge for the preacher. Guthrie saw trouble; but his ready wit and good sense came to the rescue, and looking at the enraged man with a smile, he said in his sweetest way, "What? Would you rush on a defenceless man with an iron bar like that? You see I have nothing and Fitzsimmons' aims to build up physical wrecks and your aims to build up wrecks of souls?" Fitzsimmons, it said, was shown the Globe report, and he declared his feelings would not disgrace Dunellen. "Please assure," prayed the Telegraph.

Mr. Fletcher wired a reply as fast as he could indite it. He sent in a vigorous and categorical denial of the supposed sermon that will make the pugilist feel pleasant and the Globe very sick.

In an effort to find if there was any possible sort of foundation for the Globe story, Mr. Fletcher asked all the other ministers in Dunellen if they had preached on Fitzsimmons. They hadn't thought of such a thing. Neither Mr. Fletcher nor the reporter could find anybody, clerical or lay, who had expressed opposition to the Fitzsimmons scheme. Quite a number said they considered that he was a champion heavyweight surrounded by real sports and swells was pleasing.

MILLIONS IN CLAY INVESTED IN STATE

VALUE OF ANNUAL OUTPUT NEARLY $13,000,000.

New Jersey has $19,056,314 invested in its clay manufacturing industries, according to the annual report of the State Bureau of Statistics, which has just been issued. The report is for the State fiscal year ending October 31, 1905, the statistics given cover the year 1904.

The document shows that the value of the goods manufactured during the year aggregated $11,992,975, while the total sum paid to the 16,508 employes was $8,595,590. The total value of the raw materials used in the manufactories was $3,702,041.

Taking up the brick and terra cotta industry first, the report shows there are 55 establishments in the State. The total capital invested in 1904 was $10,276,076 and in 1903 $8,526,516, showing an increase of $1,531,565. But the report points out that the statistics for 1904 were gathered according to a new plan, in some particulars, in order that they might conform to the United States statistical reports. An increase is shown, therefore, is not so much a real increase as a more thorough covering of that item under the new plan.

In the matter of raw material used during the year, a decrease of $617,749 or 28.8 per cent., is shown. The amount in 1904 was $1,527,640 and in 1903 $2,145,382. A decrease is also shown in the value of the goods made. In 1903 the total output of the 55 concerns was valued at $6,330,099, while in 1904 it dropped to $5,809,788, giving a loss of $502,311 or 7.9 per cent.

The average number of persons employed in this industry was 5,569. The average number per establishment in 1903 was 91, and the average number employed in each establishment in 1904 was 101, showing an increase of 11 per cent. The amount paid in wages for the year was $2,291,852. The average yearly earnings per employe also shows a decrease, amounting to $34.49, or 7.7 per cent. In 1904 this item was $411.54, and in 1905 it was $446.02.

Following the government plan again, the report this year goes into detail as to salaried employes, separating them from the wage-earners. In the brick and terra cotta industry, there were 317 salaried employes and their salaries for the year aggregated $369,812. The total sum expended, therefore, by the 55 plants for raw material, wages and salaries during 1904 was $4,189,304.

One interesting feature of the report is that giving the kind of power used. For instance, it is shown that in the 55 brick and terra cotta works 35 electrical motors were used having a horse power of 738, indicating a growth in the use of electricity in this form of manufacturing. The number of steam engines reported is 90, with a total of 10,106 horse power.

Outlining the pottery industry as given in the report, the facts to be given follow: The number of separate potteries is 37, and the increase in capital for 1904 over 1903 is $1,304,607, with the same conditions applying as already given for the other industry. The aggregate capital in 1903 was $7,250,152, and in 1904 $8,554,759.

A decrease is shown in the value of the raw material used, and while there is an increase in the value of the total manufactured output for the year it is less than 1 per cent. In 1903 $1,543,147 worth of stock was used, and in 1904 the amount fell to $1,531,169. This was a decrease of $148,978, or 9.6 per cent. The exact increase in the value of the manufactured pottery goods was but $10,625, or 0.1 per cent. In 1904 the 37 potteries turned out goods to the value of $5,521,340, and in 1903 the amount made was $5,510,715.

The average number of persons employed per pottery in 1903 was 116, and in 1904 but 102, a decrease of 12.1 per cent. The 37 potteries in 1904 paid to the 3,777 workmen total wages of $2,474,174. The average wage earned by each potter was 1.5 per cent. less than in 1903. In 1903 each potter earned an average of $611.41 for the year, while in 1904 the average was but $602.32, or 9.09 less.

In the item of salaried employes the report for the potteries shows 291, who were paid an aggregate yearly salary of $402,775. These figures show that the total cost of the potteries for raw materials, wages and salaries was $4,071,891.

In the way of power, one pottery got along with a water wheel of 124 horse power, 25 electric motors were in use, developing 235 horse power, and 3,025 horse power was furnished by 48 steam engines.

"In the brick and terra cotta industry the 55 concerns were busy an average of 240.17 days during the year, and the employes made an average of 57.47 hours per week. Each potter made an average of 55.02 hours per week, and the 37 potteries kept in operation an average of 301.40 days of the year.

BASEBALL PROSPECTS IN LOCAL SCHOOLS

INTERACADEMIC LEAGUE PROMISES TO ENLIVEN MATTERS.

As the basketball season is on the wane, interest is being renewed in baseball and preparations are being made among the various school teams for 1906. In every school in this part of the State the baseball enthusiasm seems to exceed that of other years, which is no doubt due to the fact that the outlook for material is very promising.

Although a little early to make any predictions, the Interacademic League is expected to furnish a closer race than last season. What the season will bring for the Interscholastic it is difficult to say although in most cases many of last year's players will be found on the various teams with which they played. All that is needed to make the season a success is close contest for premier position in the two leagues.

While Plainfield will not be represented in the Interscholastic League, there will be representation in the Interacademic League this year. Last week the schedule was just announced it is learned that the Montclair Military Academy will play here on May 5, and Newark Academy will appear here on May 26. Both of these games will be good ones, and as the local management is planning for a strong team, it ought to make a better showing than ever on the diamond.

The Plainfield High School team will be a strong one this year and with Smith and Davis as the battery, it should be able to score many victories. Among the games scheduled is one with Montclair High School on June 2. Manager Gavett is now busy completing his schedule, which will be the strongest in the history of the High School.

It is regretted that there will be no games between the P. H. S., Newark H. S. and Orange H. S., as such contests would arouse considerable enthusiasm and increase the interest in the sport as well as maintain friendly relations. Contests with Newark, Orange and teams of like strength would show just how good the local team is.

The P. H. S. candidates for the team will soon begin practice and within another month the regular aggregation will be selected for the season's work. Games will be seen here this season with Morris High School and possibly Montclair Hall, of New York, while other aggregations from the metropolitan district will appear on the local diamond.

COMMERCIAL COURSE LENGTHENED FROM 3 TO 4 YEARS.

At a regular meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education Monnight it was decided to lengthen the Commercial course, now a part of the curriculum, from three years to four. The present senior class will be graduated this year as usual, but hereafter four years will be required, as of the others. The matter was taken up on the advice of Superintendent Krebs, and the course was considerably revised. It will now be as follows:

First year—English, algebra, ancient history, penmanship (instead of music), bookkeeping I. Second year —English, German (plane geometry or Med. and Mod. history), penmanship (instead of music), bookkeeping II. Third year—English, German II, English history, stenography I, typewriting I. Fourth year—English, chemistry (elective), German (elective) III, American history, stenography II, typewriting II, commercial law and business arithmetic.

Acting on a suggestion by one of the members, it was voted to issue a complete report of school affairs in pamphlet form for the benefit of the taxpayers. Superintendent Krebs and Mr. Townsend have been at work upon it for some time and it will embrace all receipts and expenditures for the school year and give a complete synopsis of the courses and general information about studies. Twelve hundred copies will be distributed before the annual meeting on March 20.

Mr. Townsend informed the board that the truancy problem had been well taken care of by Superintendent Krebs and that the practice has been all but stamped out. It was also reported that the new heating apparatus, which has been giving considerable trouble, is now working satisfactorily.

Death of Robert O'Grady.

Robert O'Grady father of O'Grady Brothers, the well-known contracting firm, and for many years a resident of Mt. Bethel, died Sunday night at his home in Brooklyn, aged eighty-eight years. He had lived for a time located at Mt. Bethel and he remained there for several years. Finally, he moved to Brooklyn, where he continued to reside until his death. He was the father of Robert and John O'Grady and an uncle of John A. O'Keefe, of Grant avenue.

CHOKED BY WHEAT CAKE

Dunellenite Made It to Show Wife How Buckwheats Should be Made.

AND IT WAS TOO GOOD

Looked So Tempting Beckman Connover Cut Off Piece So Big It Almost Strangled Him.

In his anxiety to show his wife how breakfast cookery should be done, Beekman Connover, a Dunellenite who is a familiar figure in his town, nearly choked to death over a big piece of buckwheat cake Sunday morning.

Connover watched his wife preparing cakes for breakfast, and he did as like the finished product. He went to the stove and told her he would demonstrate the proper method of turning out browned "wheats." He made one—large, brown and succulent—and held it up for her inspection.

"There," he said, with pride, "that's the sort of a cake to make," and put it on his plate. After pats of butter and a sweet stream of rich brown molasses had been added to the creation it looked so good that Connover fell more deeply in love with his handiwork.

"That certainly is a fine cake," he said, and moved by an ever-growing admiration for the culinary triumph, he cut off a chunk that embraced half the cake and stuffed it into his eager and watering mouth.

About fifteen seconds later he discovered that his esophagus was not built for that kind of stuff. The chunk of cake stuck in his throat, and he couldn't bulge it. He choked and grew red in the face, while his frightened wife looked helplessly on. Finding it impossible to get it up, Connover seized a fork and ran it into his throat in an effort to jam the cake down. Wrought up by his struggle for breath, he made a wild stroke and jabbed the fork in his tongue, paralyzing the member. He continued to strangle slowly, and finally toppled over in an half-conscious condition.

His fall aroused Mrs. Connover to action and she hurriedly summoned Dr. Brakeley. A minute or so later Connover roused himself to a final desperate effort and managed a mighty gulp. It saved him; loosened by the saliva that flowed around it, the cake slipped down slowly, and the pressure on Connover's windpipe relaxed.

When Dr. Brakeley arrived at the house Connover was lying on a couch, weak, breathless and bleeding from the fork wound in his tongue, but convalescent. The doctor gave him a tonic and left him recuperating rapidly. He was able to be about yesterday, but looked sick wherever his friends mentioned buckwheat cakes.

SNEAK-THIEF GETS TWO HANDBAGS IN CLOAKROOM

MEMBERS OF K. T. AUXILIARY THE VICTIMS—SAW THIEF AT WORK.

While members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Knights Templar were preparing the lodge rooms for a palamagundi party Monday afternoon, a nervy sneak thief abstracted two handbags from their things in the cloak room. He worked in full view of the women.

Mrs. H. W. Marshall caught sight of a well dressed man moving about the cloak room as she walked across the lodge room floor. She became suspicious and called her fellow members' attention to the man.

"I'm going to see what that strange man is doing up here," she said, and started for the cloak room.

"Oh, don't be Mrs. Butt-in," said the other women. "He isn't doing anything. Don't make a scene." They persuaded Mrs. Marshall to stay inside, and the strange man was not molested.

When the women started to dress for the street, Mrs. James S. Pray, of 235 East Sixth street, and Mrs. Henry Woodland, of 49 Grandview avenue, discovered that their handbags had disappeared. Mrs. Pray found her's lying on the stairs, rifled of $1.50 in money. Mrs. Woodland's bag, in which she had $3, was not found.

One woman reported that some trading stamps belonging to her were missing, while another some samples of dress goods. Another had lost a piece of ribbon.

The police were notified of the theft. Mrs. Marshall gave them a good description of the man.

Where Silence Is Golden.

The Public Service Corporation has issued an order forbidding all employes to talk of the company's business. The violation of this rule will cause instant dismissal, no matter how trivial the offense. Officials of the company say the car employes, actually, have been too prone to talk about affairs of the company, and, as a result, stories have been circulated that were erroneous and detrimental to the company. All information that is to be given out in future will come from the high officials.

COUNTRY CLUB ANNUAL

George P. Mellick Continues at the Head of the Prosperous Organization.

REPORT OF PRESIDENT

Club Spent $12,235 and Received $13,441—Assets in Realty and Personalty Amount to $31,451.

The annual meeting of the Country Club was held at the Casino last night. It was a brief session, and nothing but business all the way through. There were no discussions, and aside from a tribute to the work of the retiring treasurer nothing marked the meeting but the reading of the minutes, the presentation of reports and the election of trustees.

Hardly more than enough members to make a quorum were present. In the absence of President G. P. Mellick, Vice-President E. R. Ackerman presided. E. T. Barrows acted as secretary, in place of Leighton Calkins, another absentee.

The trustees elected were L. G. Timpson, T. M. Day and J. M. Shellabarger, for three years. The nominating committee for 1907, chosen, like the trustees, by unanimous vote, is composed of Emory A. McGee, D. H. Rowland and C. Wesley Abbott.

Rising to a point of personal privilege, Elliott T. Barrows expressed the trustees' appreciation of the work done by Stuart H. Patterson, the retiring treasurer. Mr. Patterson did a great deal of valuable work for the club during his term, among other things simplifying the club bookkeeping. Mr. Patterson refused renomination on account of business pressure.

The treasurer's report showed assets of $31,451, represented practically by land, buildings and equipment, with liabilities that embrace $24,300 in outstanding first mortgage bonds, $700 in bills payable, $207 in accounts payable, $62 in locker key deposits and $6,081 reserve, in vested in property.

The club spent $12,235 on its regular expenses during the year. Its total regular income was $13,441. Improvements, embracing new locker rooms, dormitory and office, cost the club, in 1905, $5,462. Of this amount $2,016 was paid out of the regular income account. The heaviest regular item of expense was the maintenance of the golf course, which cost $3,962. The house committee spent $2,109 on general expenses.

President Mellick's report was as follows:

To the Members of the Plainfield Country Club:

Interest in golf during the past year has been very keen and our course patronized by as great a number of our members as in any year in the history of the organization.

Golf events, season of 1905, were:

Second eight cup, presented by the club; won by H. C. Munger.

Third eight cup, presented by the club; won by E. R. Iremonger.

Golf Committee consolation cup, presented by the club; won by J. E. Erickson.

RANDOLPH DENOUNCES STOCK TRANSFER TAX

EXCHANGE PRESIDENT TAKES REPUBLICANS TO TASK.

L. V. F. Randolph, of this city, president of the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange, addressed, on Saturday, a committee appointed by the New York Republican county committee to consider the proposed repeal or modification of the stock transfer tax law. Mr. Randolph, speaking on behalf of the exchange, strongly denounced the stock tax.

Mr. Randolph said:

"If any Republican member of the Legislature were asked to show how it is compatible with free institutions, or with the spirit of Republicanism, to levy a tax so onerous as to become confiscatory and prohibitive upon any one branch of trade alone, he would find it impossible to answer such a question even to his own conscience, much less to any constituents who would be injured by such a tax.

"In effect this law is a scheme of double taxation. Consider, for example, the exchange member whose capital is taxed in the city of New York in the ordinary course of imposing tax on capital invested in business, and then note the fact that this same capital is, in the course of the discharge of its functions as capital, and in the course of the operations into which it enters in Stock Exchange business, taxed over and over again under the oppressive provisions of this stock tax law."

SKULL IS CHAMPION OF Y.M.C.A. ATHLETES

WINS TITLE IN THE CLOSING EVENTS OF ANNUAL MEET.

Harry Scull won the championship at the close of the Y. M. C. A. indoor athletic meet last night. He got two firsts and one second in the events run off, which, with the points won at the opening of the meet last week, gave him a total of twenty-six points out of a possible forty-five. Paul R. Collier was second, with twenty-one points, and Clyde Burgess third, with seventeen.

Scull broke another record, in the three standing broad jumps. He scored twenty-seven feet, ten inches, one foot, two inches better than the old mark. Burgess was second in this event, and Collier third.

The other events were as follows:

Running high kick: Collier, first, seven feet, nine inches; Martin B. Stutsman second; Stryker Hoagland, third.

Running high dive: Stutsman, first, five feet, four inches; Collier second, Arthur Ashbolm, third.

Running high jump: Burgess, first, four feet, eleven inches; Scull second; Aalholm third.

The potato race ended in a tie between Scull and Hoagland, with Burgess second and Collier third. The tie will be run off next week.

The medals and ribbons will be presented to the winners at a sociable to be held in a week or two. Arrangements for the affair are being made by Acting Physical Director Robbie.

FISK AGAIN PRESIDENT

Former Mayor Re-elected Head of the Board of Health at Annual Meeting.

NAME COMMITTEEMEN

Monthly Reports Show Inspection of Fifty-two Dairies—Forty-nine Births, and Thirty Deaths.

Officers were elected, committees appointed and other business transacted at the annual meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health, yesterday afternoon. These officers were chosen:

President, Charles J. Fisk; secretary, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges; treasurer, P. W. Dunn. President Fisk then appointed these committees:

Finance and supplies, F. W. Dunn, Dr. T. S. Davis; nuisance, C. H. Dunham, F. W. Dunn; food and drink, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, C. H. Dunham; contagious disease, Dr. T. S. Davis, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

The city continues to be practically free from all contagious disease. This was shown by the various reports. During January but four cases of scarlet fever and no diphtheria were reported. On January 10 a case of glanders was reported. The horse was killed at once and the stable thoroughly disinfected. No other cases of the disease have been found.

Fifty-two dairies were inspected and forty-two samples of milk analyzed during the month. With one exception all were of good quality. As the water supply of a dairy is of very great importance, the Board is now collecting samples from wells on dairies supplying milk in Plainfield. Thus far twenty-four samples have been collected and analyzed. Four were found to be badly polluted and the wells were closed.

During January there were reported fourteen marriages, forty-nine births and thirty deaths. A milk permit was granted to John McCarthy and a plumber's bond of A. H. Conyne was received and filed.

HELD LIVELY MEETING.

Miantonomo Tribe Works Degree on Nine and Has Smoker.

Miantonomo Tribe, Improved O. R. M., had a lively meeting last night. For one thing, nine candidates were put through the warrior's degree. A smoker, with refreshments to add attractiveness, was enjoyed after the meeting.

The tribe instructed the representatives to the Great Council to vote against the proposed change in the constitution making the body wholly representative. The amendment will not be likely to go through, because the whole weight of the past sachems will be thrown against the effort to curtail their powers and privileges.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the "ladies' night," to be held about February 20, reported great progress. The event will be a most enjoyable one, with plenty of entertainment and refreshments.

Preparing for Fair.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. church met at the parsonage, yesterday afternoon, to complete arrangements for the fair to be held in the church on Thursday and Friday nights, February 22-23. These chairmen of the various committees were selected, and they will chose their own assistants: Entertainment, Miss Alice Carroll; samples' booths, Mrs. H. K. Carroll; fancy booth, Mrs. Andrew Lutkins; cherry trees, Mrs. Isaac F. Runyon; cake table, Mrs. Edward Vermeule; candy table, Mrs. C. W. Parsons; ice cream, Mrs. Charles Lippencott.

New Officers Installed.

The newly-elected officers of Washington Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America, have been installed as follows: President, Charles VanWinkle; vice president, Winfield S. Schomp; master at arms, John Ayers; recording secretary, J. Gray Tomlinson; assistant recording secretary, I. N. Wyckoff; financial secretary, W. D. Williams; treasurer, Theodore VanPelt; conductor, Samuel Ayers; inner guard, Edward GaNun; outer guard, Frank Bennett; representative to State Camp, I. N. Wyckoff.

Autoists to Meet.

The automobilists of this city are to hold a meeting, shortly, to arrange for the attendance of as big a delegation as can be brought together at the second hearing on the Frelinghuysen auto bill. The meeting was tentatively broached by one of a group of auto-owners last night, and interest enough in its was manifested immediately to start the project. "Details of the meeting will be made public just as soon as we arrange them," said one of the autoists to a reporter after the discussion.

—Get right with God.

AUTOISTS NOT OUT AT HEARING ON BILL

NO CLASH AT TRENTON YESTERDAY—ADJOURNED TO FEBRUARY 20.

The expected big fight on the automobile question at the State House yesterday dwindled down to a mild skirmish, chiefly because the automobilists had been unable to get their forces into battle line. The Senate judiciary committee, composed of Senators Hillery, Wakelee and Minturn, took up the hearing on the Frelinghuysen bill immediately after the morning session of the Upper House. Senator Frelinghuysen sent a small company of infantry out on the firing line, but, like a good general, when he saw the enemy was standing off, he reserved his big guns for future use.

Clarence E. Case, of Somerville, presented a petition in favor of the bill signed by 150 of the citizens of his vicinity. John P. Murray, who said he was a citizen of New Jersey and a lover of automobiles, thought there should be reasonable rules and regulations. He claimed the Automobile Club of America was opposing legislation because New Jersey has the most liberal laws of any State, and the club is desirous of continuing them.

Colonel Edwards, of Newark, an officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, spoke on the speed features of the Frelinghuysen bill. It was the tremendous speed that has terrorized people and caused the great opposition to autos, he said.

Dr. Young, of Bordentown, said: "Automobilists seemed to think no one else has any rights. If the laws are not enforced, the next thing you hear will be that the farmers will shoot the automan."

The Associated Automobile Club of New Jersey appeared through Professor John Gill, to ask for another hearing, as they were not ready to present their side of the case owing to the inability to have speakers present.

The hearing was then adjourned to February 20, when Senator Jackson's bill, which is backed by the State Board of Agriculture, the State Horticultural Society and the Highway Protectors' Association, will also be considered.

ACCEPTS INVITATION TO MONUMENT UNVEILING.

Gov. Stokes and President Roosevelt Guests of Honor at Celebration of Red Bank Battle.

Trenton, Feb. 7.—Governor Stokes, after a conference with the Red Bank battle monument commission, has accepted an invitation to be present next June at the unveiling and dedication of the monument erected to commemorate the battle of Red Bank, Gloucester county, fought October 21, 1777.

The battle of Red Bank was one of the decisive moves of the War of the Revolution and elaborate plans are being made for its celebration when the monument is dedicated. President Roosevelt and Governor Stokes will be present, and there will be appropriate military and naval displays.

The battle was fought between Generdl Christopher Green and 400 continental troops, composing the garrison of Fort Mercer at Red Bank, and 2,000 Hessians under Count Donop. The fort mounted but fourteen guns. The Americans won a great victory and the Hessians were completely overwhelmed and put to utter rout. Count Donop was mortally wounded and his command lost 400 men. The American loss was 12 men and one officer.

The monument is a stately shaft surmounted by a statue of a continental soldier. It is being erected under an appropriation of $15,000 made by the Legislature of 1905. The commissioners are composed of William H. Albright, of Woodbury, Sheriff T. Jones and Edward J. Miller, of Gloucester county.

Exposition Commissioner.

Among the Jamestown exposition commissioners for New Jersey named by Governor Stokes is James T. MacMurray, of this city. The other commissioners are Alfred Cooper, of Cape May; Harry Leeds, Atlantic City; Harry Chandler, Vineland; Clarence E. Breckenridge, Maywood; James Harper Smith, Somerville; Dr. E. L. Stevenson, New Brunswick; Richard Herbert, Wickatuck; A. B. Leach, South Orange; Wallace M. Scudder, Newark, and Dr. Thomas K. Reed, Atlantic City.

Library Directors Meet.

At a meeting of the library board of directors last night Dr. Leonard Waldo, Alexander Gilbert and L. V. F. Randolph were appointed as forming the library welfare committee. The thanks of the board were extended Samuel Huntington for his valuable gift of a set of books to the library.

PLAN WEEKLY MEET

Track Day Here Will Be July 4—Adam Blair Represents Plainfield at Association's Meeting.

Adam C. Blair, with a number of others in this city, are members of the New Jersey Road Drivers' Association, which was formed at Trenton on Monday. At the meeting a State racing circuit was formed to include Plainfield, Trenton, Bordentown, Freehold, New Brunswick, Flemington and Hightstown. The association has a membership of 1,000 and fully 100 of that number attended.

Meets will be conducted weekly, beginning Memorial Day. William Allerton, of Trenton, was chosen president and Harry Baldwin, of Pennington, secretary.

On Decoration day there will be meets at New Brunswick and Freehold. Hightstown will have the next meet on June 9. Bordentown will have a meet on June 16, Trenton on June 23, Pennington on June 30, Plainfield on July 4 and New Brunswick on July 11. Then the meets will be the same as on the first round.

With such an association formed Plainfield will be assured of good trotting exhibitions. It will bring the best stock from the central part of the State here and give lovers of such sport an opportunity to witness the best racing. As soon as possible the work of putting the Plainfield Driving Park in first-class shape for the summer meets will be started. If possible better arrangements will be made to take the people to and from the park and everything will be done to provide for the comfort and amusement of those who are fond of the sport.

MRS. M. B. FRENCH DEAD.

Was Mother of Mrs. John Corey, of West Front Street.

Mrs. Margaret B. French, widow of David A. French, died at her home in Union Village, Monday night. She was in her ninety-first year and was widely known in this vicinity, where she leaves numerous relatives. There are surviving two daughters, Mrs. John Corey, of West Front street, and Miss R. A. French, who resided at home; and two sons, Barzilla French, of Union Village, and Theodore French, of Newark.

The funeral will be held at her late home tomorrow morning at 10:30 and interment will be made in Hillside cemetery, this city.

Getting Posted on Compressed Air.

Borough Electrician A. V. Searing has been in conference with several authorities on compressed air and has been gleaning information for the possible substitution of a gong for the present bell attached to the fire alarm system. There is but little doubt but what the Council will order the change as the bell is badly cracked and the iron tower is in a rickety condition. Compressed air could be used, it is said, to operate a whistle cheaper than maintaining batteries for the bell.

Over 200 Will Attend Smoker.

Over 200 acceptances have been received for the college smoker to be held at the Casino on Friday night, and the committee now feels that it cannot comfortably provide for more than twelve or fifteen more people, on account of the lack of room. Before the list is closed those planning to attend are urged to notify Owen H. Fleming as soon as possible. The banquet is fixed for 9 o'clock and all patrons are asked to be prompt in attendance.

Death of Mrs. Walpole.

Following a long illness from a lingering complaint, Mrs. Johanna Walpole, wife of Lynus Walpole, the well known hotel proprietor, died at her home in Scotch Plains at 10 o'clock last night. She was the daughter of the late William Reardon and lived in the vicinity of Scotch Plains all her life. She leaves five children. The funeral arrangements have not been completed but it will be held from her late home Friday.

Fireman Lohsen Recovering.

Benjamin Lohsen, the fireman, who was injured in the recent wreck near Berckman street on the New Jersey Central, when a wild-cat engine ran into a mill train, is improving at the hospital and expects to be discharged in a few days.

"Larry" to Be Sentenced Feb. 21.

"Larry" Wallace, charged with breaking and entering Rapp's Hotel at Scotch Plains, pleaded guilty in the County Court this morning, and he will be sentenced on Wednesday, February 21.

DURLACH AGREES TO CLEAN ROOKERIES

IF NOT MADE TENANTABLE THE DILAPIDATED ROW WILL BE TORN DOWN.

The hearing set by the Board of Health for yesterday afternoon to consider the complaint of Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow against the row of houses on Watchung avenue, near Front street, owned by the Estate of Hannah Durlach, was postponed to Tuesday afternoon, February 20, at the request of Henry I. Durlach, executor of the estate.

Mr. Durlach has assured the Board that he will either make the row tenantable or clear the property of the rookeries. He said that he was desirous of seeing his brother first before deciding upon any plans.

The board gave Mr. Durlach to understand that steps must be taken at the earliest possible time to abate the nuisance complained of by Mr. Thurlow, and he showed a disposition to cooperate with the health authorities in the matter.

The property complained of has long been unfit for human habitation by reason of the number of tenants, want of cleanliness and is considered dangerous to health and life. The Board of Health has taken this action in accordance with the sanitary code which gives it the right to abolish such nuisances. The Board also proposes to get after other similar rookeries in the West End of the city and will not rest until these places are removed and made fit for habitation.

NICK PARKER PLEASES BIG CROWD AT FAIR

GAVE THREE SONG SUCCESSES ALL FINELY ILLUSTRATE.

Nick Parker, who is a great favorite with Plainfielders, made a big hit with his solos at the band concert and fair in Saengerbund Hall, last night. He sang "When the Morning Glories Twine About the Door," "Wait Till the Sun Shines Nellie" and "What You Goin' to do When the Rent Comes 'Round." All were illustrated, the slides being among the best that have ever been seen in the city. A. E. Willard operated the lantern.

All the attractions about the hall were again liberally patronized and the fair promises to be a record-breaker. Ben LaVere and his corps of assistants are always present and are doing everything possible to help along the cause. This is one reason why the attendances have been so large. The Singing Section of the Gesang and Turn Verein was present last night and rendered several selections in a manner that won hearty applause.

Jack Elliott will sing tonight, using selections from "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway." For tomorrow night a big bill has been arranged, headed by "Billy" Redmond, of assistant coach at Yale. Maddie Weston will also sing and cornet solos will be contributed by Louis Anderson, who appeared at several of the summer concerts. For the remainder of the week Mr. LaVere has several other interesting features.

Will Organize Girls' Society.

The girls of Grace M. E. church are invited to attending a meeting to be held at the home of Mrs. Stevens, 65 Grandview avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a Girls' Home Missionary Circle. Miss Ham and Miss Weeks, secretaries for the home missionsocieties of the church, will assist in the organization.

Sentence Suspended on Servants.

He suspended sentence and put the women in charge of Mrs. Emily Williamson, the county probation officer.

Cold Caused Class to Suspend.

Owing to the extreme cold one of the classes in the Watchung School, North Plainfield, was dismissed yesterday. The trouble was due to the lack of weather strips on the windows, which allowed a strong draught to enter. The trouble was remedied in time to allow the room to be used today.

Overbaugh Recovering.

Patrolman Herbert Overbaugh, who has been confined to the house for more than a week with rheumatism, is slowly recovering. He is able to sit up part of the day.

Meeting Postponed.

The meeting of the Republican City Committee, which was to have been held last night, was postponed to Friday night.

HORSE SHOW JUNE 7-8-9

Riding and Driving Club is Making Arrangements For Third Annual Exhibition.

ON ITS NEW GROUNDS

C. W. McCutchen Again Chosen President—List of Directors—Ring to Be 325 Feet Long and 170 Feet Wide.

Assured that its new show grounds will be complete in every detail by that time, the Riding and Driving Club decided on the dates for the third annual horse show, last night, at the annual meeting. The show will run from June 7 to 9, inclusive, one day more than last year.

Details of the show have not yet been considered. They will be arranged by the club executive committee, at the head of which is L. E. Waring.

Reports on the progress of the work of transforming the twenty-three-acre property at Randolph road and Woodland avenue into a highly attractive and modern show ground were of the most encouraging character. The track is practically completed, with perfect under-draining. the stables are well under way, and the grandstand will shortly begin to take form. There is no doubt that the grounds will be ready for the show.

The ensemble buildings, track and grounds will be striking in its attractiveness. The stables and stands will be done in Spanish mission style, with red tile roofs and shingling of some sharply contrasting tint, to stand out boldly against the background of woodland in which the grounds set. There will be three stables, with accommodations for 150 horses, and a grandstand that will seat over 800. The stand proper will seat 500, with about forty-six boxes. The ring is 325 feet long and 170 feet wide, which is larger than that at Philadelphia, Long Branch, Atlantic City and other well-known places. It will be one of the most spacious in use.

The main entrance to the grounds will be at the junction of Randolph road and Woodland avenue. On the other side of the property there will be a trolley entrance, right on the Arlington avenue line. It is not unlikely that the trolley company will run a short loop into the grounds for specials on show days.

Directors were elected by the club as follows: H. G. Runkle, O. T. Waring, L. E. Waring, G. P. Mellick, E. H. Ladd, G. H. Beaton, R. A. Fairbairn, W. J. Battifield, D. F. Ginna, Paul Taylor Brown, Charles J. Fisk and Charles W. McCutchen. In organizing, the directors elected Mr. McCutchen president; L. E. Waring, vice president; L. G. Timpson, secretary, and J. Herbert Case, treasurer.

JESSE FRYSINGER DEAD.

Baseball Manager, Well Known Here, Succumbs to Operation.

Jesse M. Frysinger, who managed the champion Holyokes, of the Connecticut league, when the team played here last summer, died in Williamsport, Del., Monday, as the result of an operation for appendicitis. Frysinger was to have managed the Lancaster team in the Tri-State league, this year. He was the manager of the Harrisburg club at one time.

During the winter Frysinger was a newspaper man, working for his father, in Chester, Pa., where his home was located.

Warrie McLaughlin know Frysinger well. The dead manager had a great admiration for Mac's pitching, and said, when he was here last summer, that he would be glad to sign the Plainfield twirler for any team he managed.

Newark Five Coming.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will meet the Newark five, on the local gymnasium, Saturday night. The Plainfielders are on pins and needles to get at the Newarkers, because the latter are the only combination that defeated the locals on their own floor this season. They did it by 15 to 12, fouls figuring largely in the victory. The Plainfield line-up will be Thompson, Smith, forwards; Scull, centre; Letson, Leary, guards.

Mr. Besler in Jamaica.

W. G. Besler, vice president and general manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, has been visiting the island of Jamaica and is reported to be enthusiastic about the scenic beauties of the island. He sailed for home on Monday, in the Royal Mail Company's steamer, La Plata.

Change Fair Date.

Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., has decided to put off its fair from the week of February 19 to the week following. The change is made in order to make a bigger interval between Company K's fair and the Junior enterprise.

TROLLEY AT ELIZABETH

EXPECTED OPPOSITION

Elizabeth, Feb. 5.—The Essex Cross Railroad franchise, granted to Francis Eppley several years ago by the City Council of Elizabeth, Newark and Irvington, to construct a trolley road from this city to the last named town, is about to be sold to a Pittsburg concern, the name of which is not known, but which is being represented in this city at the present time by C. W. Bishop, a former Elizabethan, and the holder of considerable property on North avenue.

The company purposes to take up the Irvington, Newark and Elizabeth trolley franchise, operate its cars over the route, laid down in this city with an extension out Rahway avenue, beginning at Cherry street, to some point near the city line. It is probable that the road may be extended to Rahway, or some of the shore towns. The negotiations have progressed so far that it is understood, upon good authority, that some of the financial consideration has already been paid over to the Eppley company.

Council Friday heard a petition from the Eppley people, asking that one clause in the old franchise be modified. That clause relates to transfers. In the twelfth section of the old ordinance it makes it a condition upon which the franchise is granted that transfer privileges be extended to all intersecting lines which pass or terminate near the lines of the Eppley road. It is asked that this section be stricken out.

The difficulty lies in the possible refusal of the old "horse car line," now the Elizabeth avenue trolly line, to acknowledge the transfers. Under the present clause, if all lines did not recognize the new company's transfers, then the franchise would be held to be invalid. The Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey road, the "Green Line," now the East Grand street line, and the Morris line, are compelled by their charters to receive and issue transfers to the new line. It is in view of avoiding probable litigation that the company asks for the change in that section of the franchise. That is the only request so far asked for by the company.

The construction of the trolley road will be started at once after the sale of the franchise rights has been effected. The company is willing to take the franchise, which terminates after only a few years, without a renewal clause, and it is willing to accept the conditions of the fifty-year franchise recently approved by the City Council in face of the objection on the part of the Public Service Corporation, a rival company, which company afterward refused to accept a franchise under the conditions granted in the one referred to.

The time limit of the Eppley franchise was renewed at a special meeting of Council held in October, expires July 1, but if the company is unable to complete the new line by that time it is probable that a further renewal will be granted by the City Council. Franchises will have to be secured for the extension of the line from the corner of Union and Grand streets, up West Grand street, through one of the finest residential streets of the city, thence through Cherry street to Rahway avenue and from there to the city line. What further extensions will be made cannot now be stated.

The new company was induced to look over the field and to finally agree to purchase the Eppley franchise by A. D. Mulford, of the firm of A. D. Mulford & Son, real estate brokers, and a prominent and active member of the Elizabeth Board of Trade.

Mr. Mulford has been interested in the extension of trolleys out Rahway avenue for many years. There is very little trolley accommodation in the Sixth and Tenth wards at the present time. The Public Service Corporation recently made an attempt to secure a franchise through that street, but refused to accept a limited franchise. Undaunted by the refusal of the company to accept a franchise which they had originally asked for, Mr. Mulford, with Mr. Eppley, has held on to the principle of the project, with the result that within the present week the deal will be consummated, in all probability, and that part of the city which is now isolated will have as good trolley service as any other section of the city.

Considerable opposition is expected by the promoters of the company from the Public Service Corporation. The new line has to cross the tracks of the Public Service Corporation in at least two places—one at Morris avenue and Union avenue and the other at West Jersey street and Cherry street.

The company's lines will be laid from the city line on Rahway avenue providing franchises can be secured for it, which seems probable now, to Cherry street, to West Grand street, to Union street, passing the depots of the Pennsylvania Railroad within a half block, passing under the tracks and near the depot of the Central Railroad, touching the tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, after passing through Union street to Union avenue, crossing Morris avenue, and thence in a straight line to Newark and Irvington.

The petition presented Friday by Councilman John S. Sauer, from the Ninth ward, was the first intimation that something was going in trolley circles here. Mr. Bishop has been here for the past week conferring with Mr. Mulford and Mr. Eppley about the proposed deal, and from every source of information obtainable it is evident that the deal is about to be formally closed.

THEY WOULD BETTER NEW JERSEY'S COAST

RESOLUTION IN LEGISLATURE SEEKS CONGRESS' ASSENT FOR IMPROVEMENT.

Trenton, Feb. 5.—Assemblyman Henry D. Thompson, of Mercer, in the joint resolution No. 3, pending in the Legislature, has a measure of the utmost importance to the entire coast section of New Jersey. The resolution provides that a joint committee of two Senators and three Assemblymen shall be appointed to memorialize Congress to permit this State to improve the inlets of the coast to protect the shellfish industry and provide more harbors.

Dr. Henry D. Kummel, State geologist, and his department, will operate in the movement involved in the resolution.

The resolution was called forth by a peculiar condition of affairs which is set forth in the annual report of Dr. Kummel, now in the hands of Governor Stokes. Dr. Kummel says:

"The coast of New Jersey from Sandy Hook to Cape May is of great importance in many respects. It forms the southern approach to New York Harbor, and the large tonnage between New York and the West Indies and South and Central American ports passes close at hand. Although from Sandy Hook to Delaware breakwater is only 134 miles, records of the United States life-saving service show more disasters on this coast than on any other of equal extent in the United States. During the past decade 332 strandings occurred, more than one-half of them within range of the Absecon Light at Atlantic City, during a single year (1903-4) nearly two millions of property ($1,999,745) were placed in jeopardy by accident along the coast, although, owing to the efficiency of the life-saving service, the loss of life was less than $75,000, or only 3.75 per cent. These figures warrant the statement that the New Jersey coast in its present condition is a menace to commerce, notwithstanding the lighthouses and life guards which guard it.

"Owing to the enormous demands made upon the national treasury for river and harbor improvement, demands which cannot be fully met for years to come, there is small chance of obtaining national aid for improvement along our coast, since the tonnage is restricted by bars. To a certain extent Congress has established the policy of permitting local interests to undertake improvements of local character. There is need for further legislation by Congress giving more power to State and municipal governments to initiate and carry forward improvements in navigable waters.

"Such has been the case with remedial measures at Absecon Inlet and others on the New Jersey coast. Under these circumstances there is much justice in the demand that Congress confer upon localities the right to carry forward improvements in navigable waters, which have not been denied national aid, according to local plans and without regard to the approval or disapproval of the War Department.

"The policy which refuses government aid, and forbids local endeavor, except under conditions which are prohibitory, when applied to New Jersey, has abandoned the inlets and bays of our coast to the fatal ravages of the waves and currents, and will make their improvements under existing condition forever possible. All persons to whom the fullest development of the States' beaches, bays and inlets is a matter of importance should unite in urging their Senators and Representatives to secure from Congress legislation permitting localities to make such improvements, if desired, at their own expense according to their own plans, and to charge tolls thereon. Such a policy would accord with that under which the enormous railroad systems and most of the waterways were originally built, by private capital as commercial enterprises."

The resolution of Assemblyman Thompson is designed to provide a remedy for the condition referred to. A special effort will be made to secure its passage, in order that the State, or private corporations, may take up the work of improving the Jersey coast.

Arranging Smith Dinner.

The invitations to the dinner to be held in honor of Fred B. Smith, international secretary for religious work, by the Y. M. C. A., February 11, have been sent out. Mr. Smith will return to his recent trip to England, India and Australia. He has been greeted by great audiences in the large cities.

George Smith, tenor soloist of the choir of the First Baptist church, who has been in the south for his health, is much improved. During his absence, Dr. Whitford has been taking his place.

STORK SWIFTEST OF ALL

There are certain species of ducks that are given the credit by naturalists of being the fleetest of winged creatures. Recently, however, it has been ascertained that the learned men were in error, and the stork is found to outstrip by far all members of the air in speed. An exhaustive survey of the field is now attracting attention in the ranks of sport of honor, beside Wallace, literally pored him with questions as to what mountain that was and what river he was following.

The old driver, who detested this sort of interrogation, stood it as long as he could. Finally he blurted out: "Say, stranger, if you'll mind your business I'll mind mine."

That settled, the young man reposed into silence.

They had driven about ten miles further when they came to a long hill, there the driver was obliged to apply the brake. As he did so Wallace noticed that it had immediately noticed that he mail bag, which always lay there, was gone. Evidently it had dropped off along the road.

Wallace stopped his horses; then, breaking the long silence, he said: "Say, driver, did you see that mail bag slide off?"

"Yes, I did; some ten miles back," calmly remarked the young man.

The "tinder" looked him squarely in the eye for a moment, and then he drawled, imitating Wallace's tone: "Say, driver, you mind your business and I'll mind mine."

The rest of the journey was driven in cold silence.

STRANGE ACTION OF LAKE.

Capt. J. C. Crosthwait directs attention in an English science journal to the magnetic and meteorological observations established at the Argentine government on New Year island, a small island about five miles off the coast of Staten island, Patagonia, says the Baltimore American. The observatory, which is common in every respect, is superintended by Argentine naval officers. It was opened in February, 1902. The magnetic observatory is kept at an almost constant temperature of 64 degrees F. Many interesting facts about Terra del Fuego are given by Capt. Crosthwait in his paper. He directs attention to the astonishing number and variety of the glaciers, and to the fact that most of the larger ones show signs of shrinkage. The lake called Lake Martin lake undoubtedly occupies what was once a strait joining the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. The level of the water of the lake rises and falls in a peculiar manner. Exact measurements of these fluctuations of water movements are irregular, but on an average they amount to about five inches, having a period of about four minutes between two successive high waters. The surface of the water to the eye is perfectly smooth.

WEBSTER'S OLD CARRIAGE.

Denizens of Jefferson City, Mo., little new that a historic old carriage, once the property of Daniel Webster, orator and famous statesman of Revolutionary days, is now in use in that town but such is the case reports the Brooklyn Eagle and the carriage in question is that owned by William Holt, says the Sedalia (Mo.) Democrat. It is driven by one horse and presents an appearance that, to say the least, might be termed odd. Even then it can be readily seen that the "boss" was a carriage such as even a senator might be glad to ride in.

Mr. Holt purchased the carriage at an auction sale in Washington after the world's fair, where the carriage was on exhibition. Attorney General Crow, of St. Louis, recognizing the historic value of a ride in this carriage, was among Mr. Holt's first passengers.

It is said that when Webster rode in this venerable carriage while going from his room to the senate chamber upon the day when he made his memorable reply to Senator Haynes, of South Carolina, in which he gave voice to the expression, "Liberty and liberty, now and forever, one and inseparable."

Child's Head on Banknote.

The accepted design for the new Austrian 100 crown banknotes is remarkable for the picture of a sensually beautiful child's head which forms its chief ornament. The model for this head was the son of Prince Franz Josef Rohan, whom the artist met in the Prater. Sir Frank, and with whose beauty he was so much struck that he asked the child's name, and obtained the parents' permission to make a drawing of him for this purpose.

Favorite of Fortune.

Joseph Chamberlain, the celebrated Englishman, is not a graduate of any university or of any of the large public schools. He was a full-fledged business man at the age of 16 years and his fortune grew so rapidly that at the age of 38 he was able to retire from commercial life and devote himself to the study and practice of politics.

MINDING HIS OWN BUSINESS

Inquisitive Traveler Evened Up Scores with Stage Driver Who Was Nosy.

Wallace Cummings used to drive the old stage which ran between Bridgton and Fryeburg, Maine, the Boston Herald. One day Wallace had as a passenger out of Portland a young city chap of dude, as Wallace called him. The country along the stage route was both beautiful and diversified; the young man was quite interested, and as he sat on the box, or seat of honor, beside Wallace, literally pored him with questions as to what mountain that was and what river he was following.

The old driver, who detested this sort of interrogation, stood it as long as he could. Finally he blurted out: "Say, stranger, if you'll mind your business I'll mind mine."

That settled, the young man reposed into silence.

They had driven about ten miles further when they came to a long hill, there the driver was obliged to apply the brake. As he did so Wallace noticed that it had immediately noticed that he mail bag, which always lay there, was gone. Evidently it had dropped off along the road.

EFFICIENCY IN THE NAVY.

Every Other Consideration Set Aside in England's Warships for Perfection of Personnel.

Vigorous minds are essential in any navy, but in the British navy the matter is vital as the prosperity of millions of people and the existence of the nation itself depend upon naval power. Hence, says American Medicine, every other consideration must give way to naval efficiency, and the personnel receives the major share of attention to eliminate the unfit. The alcoholics are invariably thrust to one side without pity, for they are really a menace to the nation's welfare. The supervision has gone to the extreme of elaborating a system whereby an officer is retired even if he does not attain promotion before a certain age, whose maximum is fixed for each grade. The results are most excellent, and the navy is wonderfully vigorous body of men, fully accounting for the proverbial efficiency of the British navy. In every grade, from the boyish midshipman to the experienced admiral, there are no men too old to do the duties, and the mental powers are not healthy and vigorous. It is expensive, of course, to secure this survival of the fittest, as the eliminated ones must be cared for, and there is a tremendous list of healthy retired officers, but it is necessary.

BUFFALOES OF PABLO-HERD

Largest Band of the Animals in the United States Soon to Be Scattered.

"With the opening of the Flathead Indian reservation in Montana to settlers, about the coming summer the last large band of buffalo in the United States will be scattered to the four winds or else removed to the Blackfeet reservation, further north, or into the Milk river country of the Canadian waters.

This is the statement made by Howard Eaton, of Wyoming, who is interested in the largest herd of buffaloes in the world, mostly belonging to Michael Pablo, who has a herd of about 700 on the Flathead reservation, according to the Helena Independent.

"The Pablo herd is the largest in existence," said Mr. Eaton, "and comprises one-third of all the buffaloes in the world. A few years ago, when the buffaloes were broke on a big irrigating scheme, he sold his bunch, which was then in Kansas, to Pablo and Allard, making the largest herd of pure bloods now in the world, and carrying the strains of the old herds of Texas, Indian territory, western and northern Montana, North Dakota and Manitoba."

FRANCE'S ART TREASURES.

Vast Number, Estimated at $1,200,000,000 in Value, Are Being Inventoried.

The French prefects have received instructions to make inventories of the art treasures of all the prefectures. The exact value of these is unknown, but it is immense, and has been computed at $400,000,000, reckoning only the religuaries, pictures, tapestries and things of like kind. Here is a London report to the New York Sun.

If the statues, altars, stained glass windows, etc., are included, it is estimated that the figure will reach $1,200,000,000. The treasures in one small church in the department of Aveyron, which were on view at the exposition of 1900, drew an offer of $6,200,000 from a syndicate.

At Beauvais the tapestry in one room in the bishop's palace is worth $60,000. The Rheims cathedral has one reliquary worth $40,000. The present duke of Norfolk's father offered $800,000 for the chasuble and stole of Becket, which are preserved in Paris.

DURLACHS TO BE HEARD BY HEALTH AUTHORITIES.

On the complaint made by Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow, the Board of Health will grant a hearing tomorrow afternoon to Henry I. Durlach, executor for Hannah Durlach, deceased, and Milton I. Durlach, owners of property at Watchung avenue and East Front street, reported to be in an unfit and unsanitary condition. Since the papers were served in accordance with the complaint, Mr. Durlach, the executor, has been in Plainfield, but has not signified whether it is his intention to make a defense.

John P. Emmons, agent for the Durlachs, has also been notified of the proposed action, and he may appear at the hearing. It is the purpose of the Board of Health to abolish the present nuisance if possible. The complaint made by Mr. Thurlow is very strong and is sufficient to authorize the Board to take action as will make the place sanitary.

Several times the owners of this property have proposed improvements, but they have never materialized. The corner was once talked of as a good site for Plainfield's city hall, but this proposition also fell through.

JERSEY CITY TEAM MAY TRAIN HERE.

Manager Murray Looking for Suitable Grounds.

"Owing to the delay in completing the new baseball park in Jersey City, Manager Murray is obliged to look about for suitable grounds on which his team can train," says the Hoboken Inquirer. "He had a consultation with Manager Daab last week and it is possible that he will take his men to Plainfield to get their limbs and muscles thawed out.

"Manager Murray," the report says, "will have his players report early in March and will probably devote the entire month of March in practice work. After getting in form the team will play a series of exhibition games.

"The Jersey City manager is out after the pennant this season. He is not in the least deceived over losing the flag last year in the closest race ever seen in the Eastern League. He claims to have a few stars in sight whose acquisition will bolster up the weak parts of the team.'

SLASH IN SALARIES.

At the meeting of the Lackawanna League last week the magnate of that combination took the salary question by the horns by making an iron-clad agreement to adhere to a salary limit of $65 per game for players. This action represents a deduction of nearly 50 per cent., as the price of team-averages ran from $100 to $125 for Saturday games.

The initiative taken by this organization will also be followed by similar action by other strong semi-professional clubs. An official of this league stated a few days ago that there was not a single club in that circuit owe its players money from last season. In some instances the players have been reimbursed by shares of stock. This means, of course, that if the coming season is successful they will probably get part of their money back. If no money is made, of course, they will be losers.

Plenty of Entertainment.

Bandmaster Don La Vere has arranged a number of surprises for those who attend the opening of the band concert fair at Saengerbund Hall Monday night. The programme he has prepared exceeds anything he has ever given and entertainment will be plentiful. The handsome gavel to be awarded the most popular lodge in the city was received today and is on exhibition in the window of Vail's jewelry store.

Pupils' Roll of Honor.

These are the honor pupils at the Watchung School for January: Grammar Grade—Roy Herdman, Edward Bodin, Victor Clements, Douglas Demler, Mary Texler, Leontine Texler, Elsie Schmidt. Primary Grade — Marion Smith, Minnie Blume, Alice Willis, Hippolyte Texler, Clement Texler, Helen Schmidt, Daisy Schmidt.

The winds of winter are nipping now. They are late, but on their job. They bring thoughts of that overcoat you deferred buying. Get it at Harry Werner's store, West Front street, at a midwinter reduction. If you have your coat, it isn't too early to think about a spring suit. The seasons are closing up.

—The Rasores Club will meet tomorrow morning, February 6, with Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, 440 West Eighth street; subject, Schiller.

Mrs. T. J. Merceirs, who has been visiting her daughter, Miss Mamie Merceirs, of West Fourth street, Plainfield, has returned home.

Miss Gaddis, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Robert Guttridge, has returned to her home in Plainfield.

Irishman's Joke.

Over in Clay County, Mo., there was a funny Irishman, says the Wellington News. It was years ago when Philander Lucas was judge of the Circuit Court. The Irishman had a suit before Lucas, and when it was called, his attorney said that it be passed as his client wanted to employ additional counsel. When the judge was going to dinner, the Irishman accosted him. "Your honor," he began. "Oi'm thinkin' iv imployin' another lawyer fr me case. An' Oi think Oi c'n raise pay yees if ripraysint me than wan else. Because, judge, Oi think yeez have a very good knowledge iv th' law, an' thin, bein' on the bench, yeez wud have a very good notion iv how th' thing is goin'."

GIFTS TO THE LIBRARY

Transparencies of Yellowstone Presented by Mr. Waring are Placed in Position.

RARE BOOKS GIVEN

E. V. Bartine Donates Old Bill—Samuel Huntington Files Congressional Records.

The two transparencies of the Yellowstone region presented to the library by Orville T. Waring have now been placed at the staircase landing in the library building. Their full beauty is best seen from the upper hall. The expense of placing these was borne by Alexander Gilbert and Mason W. Tyler, to both of whom the city is already much indebted for their gifts of value to the library. The work of placing in position was done by William C. Smith.

One of the most popular of the library's bulletins has been the recent one on genealogical books. Those interested in this subject who failed to see this will find it in The Daily Press, December 12 and January 21. It was prepared at the request of a local genealogical worker. The library authorities say they welcome all suggestions of this kind, and will gladly prepare bulletins or lists on any subject desired.

The installation of a telephone in the institution promises to be of great assistance to library users who live at a distance, and to the business men, who can often obtain desired information without the expenditure of time otherwise necessary in coming or sending to the library. Library borrowers having telephones are requested to read the library's article about the telephone in the library which appeared in the Daily Press January 17.

Among such miscellaneous matter there have recently come to the library the Harvard graduates' magazine, given by the Harvard Alumni Association. The Princeton and Rutgers alumni magazines are desired.

Samuel Huntington has presented to the library volumes 1 to 14, in twenty-nine volumes, of the Congressional debates from 1789 to 1837, inclusive; the journals of Congress, in 4 volumes, and the first twenty volumes of the Massachusetts Supreme Court reports, 1804-1827. This forms an extremely valuable addition to the reference department of the library.

A bill of one shilling and sixpence "emitted by a law of the Colony of New Jersey passed in the 14th year of the reign of his majesty King George the Third, dated Mr. 25, 1773," has been handed to the W. Barline. This bill is of especial local interest, bearing the imprint of Burlington, N. J.

Mason W. Tyler has presented the last volume of the Proceedings of the National Conference of Charities. The library now has an almost complete set of these reports, which form the most important contribution to a subject of increasing importance and widening interest.

S. B. Leonard recently presented the original constitution of the Plainfield Library Company, a document of much interest in the educational history of the town. Another gift of Mr. Leonard, of great value, is the scrap book genealogy of the Dunham family, compiled by himself. This is of course unique and of especial interest as a contribution to local history. It will be placed in the reference department.

The library has by gift also recently added the two books by W. D. Murray entitled "The Messages of the Twelve Prophets," and "The Life and Works of Jesus." Another library friend has given two popular little religious books, "Quiet Talks On Prayer," and "Quiet Talks On Power." All the religious periodicals are gifts either from individuals or from the societies which they represent. The "Holy Cross Magazine," published by the Order of the Holy Cross, is the latest added to these. The library welcomes any good representative periodical of any religious body.

High School for Dunellen.

The Board of Education of Dunellen is planning to give the pupils of the borough some form of secondary education. At present the pupils must pay for a high school course themselves after their sixteenth year. The State law says the children must be educated up to their eighteenth year, and the Dunellen board has awakened to the fact that it must give the pupils a full four years' course beyond the grammar school or risk the loss of State school moneys.

Direct from a remarkably successful London engagement, supplemented by a run in New York, William Collier, one of the quaintest and brightest of high comedians, will be presented by Charles Frohman at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday night, February 10, in Augustus Thomas' triumph of comedy, "On the Quiet." The London cast will be retained intact and the London scenery, which is said to be unusually elaborate for a comedy, will be used without change. Mr. Collier's funmaking is of a quick, clean, healthy order that is contagious; his every move, expression and saying being a cue for unrestrained laughter.

THE ORANGE AS FOOD AND DRINK

There is so much real tonic and value in an orange that it is worthy a more frequent place in our dietary. It may be prepared in various ways, as for instance:

Orangeade.

Squeeze the juice of three or four oranges on to three rounding tablespoons of sugar, add a teaspoon of lemon juice and pour on two cups of water.

Orange Shortcake.

Sift two cups of flour with four level teaspoons of baking powder, rub in one-quarter cup of butter and mix with one cup of milk to make a soft dough. Pat this dough out in to a flat cake and lay on a pan. Split the cake open as soon as taken from the oven and spread with orange pulp freed from all the white skin and sweeten well.

Orange Sherbet.

Soak a level tablespoon of gelatine in one-half cup of cold water, add half a cup of boiling water and stir to dissolve it well. Add two cups of orange juice, one cup of sugar and two cups of water, strain and freeze.

Orange Pudding.

Soak one cup of stale bread crumbs in one and one-half cups of milk until soft, then beat well with a spoon. Add the grated rind of one orange and the juice of two rather small oranges. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs and one-half cup of sugar, then stir in the whites beaten stiff. Butter six cups, fill with the mixture and bake until firm, or about twenty minutes in a slow oven.

Sauce for Orange Puddings.

Cream one-third cup of butter, add one cup of powdered sugar slowly, then add two yolks, one at a time, and beat well each time. Beat all until very light, then add one-third cup of cream and two teaspoons of flavoring. Set over hot water long enough to melt the butter but no longer. Pour the sauce round the little puddings and serve at once.

Preserved Orange Peel.

Wash the orange peel thoroughly, then boil in clear water until the peel can be pierced with a broom straw. Drain, and when cold scrape the white part from the rinds and cut the thin yellow shavings into very fine shreds with scissors. Use a silver teaspoon for taking off the white portion. Make a syrup of equal measures of sugar and water, and when it comes to the boiling point add as much shredded peel as the syrup will cover well. Simmer slowly until the peel is clear, then seal in tumblers.—Boston Traveler.

Fried Bananas.

Cut bananas into two slices lengthwise and dip into a batter. For the batter use one egg, one-quarter cup of milk, one-quarter cup of flour sifted with one-half level teaspoon of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Fry in deep hot fat until colored, and serve on a hot dish.

Sugar Hasks.

To two cups of raised bread dough add one cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, two beaten eggs and enough flour to make a stiff dough. Cover and let rise light, then shape into small rolls and set them closely together in a pan to rise. Dust the tops with sugar and bake.

Southern Sally Lunn.

Put one quart of flour into a bowl, add two rounding tablespoons of butter, and rub well, add one-half yeast cake dissolved in one-half cup of milk, and then one and one-half cups more of milk, using a pint in all, and last four beaten eggs. Beat hard, turn into a buttered pan, let rise light and bake.

Onion Soup.

Slice six large onions and cook five minutes in a rounding tablespoon of butter, a saltspoon of salt, a little pepper and a teaspoon of minced parsley. Add one and one-half tablespoons of flour and stir well, add four cups of chicken stock and two cups of hot milk. Press through a strainer, return to the boiler and heat. Serve with croutons.

Creamed Tomatoes Tripe.

Cook a pound of tripe in boiling water until tender, then cool and cut in long, narrow strips. Fry two rounding tablespoons of butter and two large onions sliced very thin together, adding a tablespoon of vinegar, a teaspoon of minced parsley and salt and pepper. Add the tripe and when fried brown turn into a hot dish.

Breakfast Rolls.

Beat three eggs, add one-half cup of milk, one-half yeast cake dissolved in the milk, a pinch of salt and five cups of flour. Cover and let rise over night. Roll half an inch thick and shape into small pointed rolls. Brush with the white of an egg or with milk and let rise; bake in hot oven.

Broiled Halibut.

With a wet cloth wipe a slice of halibut, season with salt and pepper and rub over with soft butter. Dredge with flour and broil on both sides, which will take from eight to ten minutes. Serve with maitre d'hotel sauce.

Maitre d'Hotel Sauce.

Cream one-half cup of butter, add a tablespoon of lemon juice, a tablespoon of minced parsley, a half level teaspoon of salt and a saltspoon of pepper.—Newark Advertiser.

SOMEWHAT PERSONAL.

How many of the "400" will get one of those 5,000 wedding invitations?

Wireless communication with that floating dry dock 3,000 miles away leads us to believe that the Dewey is quite as big as brag made it.

Mexican Indians appear to carry on murderous enterprises with almost as much impunity as if they were operating in Chicago's streets.

Young Mr. Rockefeller says a life is never justifiable, and yet Missouri's Attorney-General has not subpoenaed him.

It may be a poor pun, but he was a Balfour-flusher, all the same.

This appears to be a case in which Castro will not find the Monroe Doctrine a shot-proof shield.

In his talk of a third term is Jacob Riis threatening or merely talking through his hat?

Boston's new District Attorney is not afraid of work. He has set himself the task of finding out whether Lawson or Rogers committed perjury in the Bay State gas suit.

President Elliot, of Harvard, is reasonably safe in predicting that this will be somewhat of a sizeable republic one hundred years hence. It has a pretty fair start.

Colonel Mann couldn't have done much better if he had been a life insurance magnate.

After all, was it beneath Vardaman's dignity to kick a convict?

RULES TO HEED IN MANAGING A MAID.

When engaging a maid be careful to explain her work to her, and let her understand that the work must be done in your way and not in the way of any former mistress she may have had. And the explanation must be made so that it shall not reflect upon the routine of any other household.

Try to arrange the hours so that the maid may have an opportunity to attend church on Sundays.

When the servants do well encourage them by a few words of praise.

Do not allow them to have visitors after certain hours in the evening.

Give your orders for the day as early as possible.

Insist upon being informed when anything is broken or lost.

See that the maid wears a clean apron while making the beds, and that she knocks at each bedroom door before entering.

Tell the maid who opens the door not to let visitors stand in the hall, nor to give parcels to strangers without previous instructions.

Retain your temper under all circumstances.

Pay your maid's wages promptly.

LUNCHEON DISHES.

Cold sweet potatoes may reappear as croquettes. Reheat them and press them through a seive. For each two cupfuls of potatoes, add a teaspoonful of salt, an egg, three tablespoonfuls of very finely chopped blanched almonds and beat the mixture. If it is too stiff, add a little cream carefully. Roll into cork-shaped croquettes, cover with egg and bread crumbs and fry in smoking hot fat.

A tasty luncheon dish for a morning when hearty food is not desirable was suggested: Sweetbreads and ham served on toasted English muffins. Parboil the sweetbreads and then broil them. Have ready very thin slices of broiled ham, cut round like the muffins. Put the ham on the buttered muffin, then the sweetbread and dress with cream sauce.

Finnan haddy a la Delmonico is another dainty dish. Wash the fish and let it stand for half an hour in cold water. Then drain and cover with hot water and soak fifteen minutes. At the end of that time drain the fish and dry it, remove the bones and skin and break into flakes. For each cupful of fish allow a cupful of thin white sauce. Put the fish in a buttered baking dish, cover with the sauce, top with buttered crumbs and brown in a quick oven.

MEDITATIONS OF A SPINSTER.

When lips say no, appeal your case to the eyes and take only their verdict.

Temperament is that faculty by which you can hate and love a person at the same time.

A lover's lies may be either black or white, but they always look rose-colored to the girl who wants to hear them.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

An Instructive Volume.

Rev. Charles Fiske, rector of St. John's church, at Somerville, and one of the examining chaplains of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey, is the author of an interesting book just issued by the Young Churchman Company of Chicago and Milwaukee, entitled "The Religion of the Incarnation." The volume of essays has met a most favorable reception in the religious press, and has had an extensive sale. The introduction, written by Bishop Scarborough, commends it as an instructive and entertaining work of special value to the laity in solving their doubts and difficulties in the various problems of our modern religious life.—New Brunswick Home News.

Dr. Fasserarch, a Zurich professor, spent much time the past five months standing up to his neck in the water of Lake Luzerne, testing the taming of fish. He has succeeded in taming about 200 fish so that they eat out of his hand and let him lift them out of the water.

Although the Kaiser's automobile is the only one without a number in Prussia, and consequently is not taxed, nevertheless his Majesty is taxed for carrying a gun.

Prof. Baldwin, of the Johns Hopkins University, has just returned from Mexico, where, at the request of the Mexican Government, he has spent six years inspecting the educational system of that country as a guest of President Diaz.

The Duke of Manchester has been appointed Captain of the Yoemen of the Guard by King Edward. The position carries with it a salary of $6,000 a year.

General Frederick Funston will soon be relieved from command of the Department of California and ordered to the Philippines, where he will be placed in charge of one of the brigades which is being formed on Luzon, with a view to their possible utilization in connection with any move which may be made against China.

SEASONABLE RECIPES.

Spaghetti Creole.

Cook half a pound of spaghetti in salted, rapidly boiling water until tender. Let one pint of canned tomato, three slices of a cup of sliced onion and half a teaspoonful of salt cook until the onion is tender. Stir a pound of Hamburg steak in a very hot frying pan until it turns from red to brown. Then add the spaghetti, drained and rinsed in cold water, half a cup of butter, half a cup of grated cheese and the cooked vegetables. Lift the whole with two forks or a spoon and fork until the ingredients are evenly mixed, then serve at once.

Onion Glaces.

Pour a third of a teacup of olive oil into a frying pan. When hot add six or eight good-sized sliced onions. Cook slowly until they are lightly browned, skim them out and put in a saucepan. Rub a heaping tablespoonful of flour into the oil and add a half pint or a little more of soup stock. Season with salt, pepper and a little nutmeg. When this has boiled pour it on the onions and add a little celery, chopped fine. Cover and simmer until the onions are thoroughly done. Serve with Hamburg or broiled steak.

DRESS HINTS.

Never dress older than you are. Dress younger.

Velvet that has become crushed may be restored by placing the linen side over a basin of hot water.

Make bloomers of the same material as the dress for schoolgirls. Make quite full, with elastics at the knees and waist.

To dry damp feathers throw a handful of salt on the fire and hold the feathers over, shaking them vigously. Don't put them so near the fire that they will burn.

If a new wash dress is unused, but not soiled enough to go into the tub, make a little thin cold starch, squeeze a rag lightly in this, brush the wrong side of the dress first with the starchy rag, then with your bare hand, and iron as you go along. It will look like new.—Ex.

Protecting Cooper's Bondsmen.

Former State Senator Charles A. Reed has returned from Washington, D. C., where he went to consult with the Federal Postoffice Department authorities regarding the affairs of Postmaster Cooper, of Somerville, particularly concerning the latter's bondsmen, whom he represents.

CLOSE TO THE PEOPLE.

Something Doing in Hogwallow.—Yam. Sims was kicked by his mule last Sunday just before he put on a clean shirt. He does not mind it much, however, as he is becoming accustomed to the hard knocks of the world.

Through the almanac the postmaster has been informed that Christmas will this year fall on the last of December. He has posted up a notice to the effect that Christmas must be recognized in Hogwallow this year.

Sidney Hocks rode his mule up under a persimmon tree Thursday evening, and while gathering fruit the animal walked out from under him. He spilled a large bucket of persimmons, but otherwise escaped bodily injury.

Last Wednesday little Fidity Flinders became interested in the pursuit of a frawg and followed it into the huge mud hole in front of Sim's house. Fidity was rescued, but the frawg made good its escape.

Poke Easley has been disturbed several times this week by some midnight prowlers. He has an idea that a drove of hawgs have took up sleeping quarters under the house.

Buddy Gilson is busily looking young man of Bounding Billows, has been given the job of teaching the Wild Onion school. He is kin to Fletcher Henstep and Fletch got him in by a little political wire-pulling. Buddy don't know any more about running a school than a hawg does about sailing, but we kin him much success in his new venture.—Hogwallow Kentuckian, Dunk Botts, Editor.

Two Bits from Nemaha.—A number of our music inclined young men are talking of organizing an orchestra.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dodge and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mulverhill ate goose at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dodge, in Nemaha.—Nemaha (Ia.) Register.

The Stork's Tab in Maine.—The stork got busy on River Road this week. As a result of his visit, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eugene Dodge have a ten-pound daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Francis have a twelve-pound son. This makes six boys straight for Mrs. Francis.—Damariscotta (Me.) Herald.

Changes in Missionary.—How things have changed at the State capital since Governor Folk and the new state officials assumed office. Nearly every one except Governor Folk now smokes pipes, and jars of tobacco are to be seen.—Jefferson City (Mo.) Tribune.

GET BUSY.

When you are worried.
When you have been disappointed.
When the outlook seems hopeless.

When people repeat the things your friends have said against you.

When the goal seems about as impossible as the pot of gold at the end of a rainbow.

When the schemes on which you've staked everything goes up.

When you have about concluded that there is no use in trying any more.

When everything and everybody seems to conspire to keep you down.

When the world and everything in it appears to be going to the dogs, and you feel ready to go along.

In short, whenever you feel laziest or maddest, or saddest, or most despairing—get busy!

There is no cure like it.

It is amazing how just getting busy will knock the kinks out of life. —Philadelphia Bulletin.

CRISP ORANGE CHIPS.

Put three pounds of sugar over the fire with a pint and a half of water and a fifth of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Mix over the fire and cook, scraping down the sides occasionally until it barely reaches the hard crack when tested in water. Turn it out on a buttered marble slab and as it cools pull it over the oil of orange. Fold together until this is worked in and then cut the lump in two. Color one-half of it orange color and pull the other half until it is white. Work it out into a flat mess on the clear orange-colored part, wrap one around the other, white outside, and flatten out again with a heavy buttered iron, if necessary to handle it. Pull out into a ribbon, cut into chips and lay on a cool marble; leave till cold and break apart.

UNLUCKY EMBLEMS.

The Parasian has an idea that when lucky charms fail unlucky ones may succeed. Thus she seeks eagerly after various little emblems, such as these: A peacock's tail feather in enamel, a little bunch of green ribbons, a tiny pair of crossed knives suspended from a ring, a round tablet of gold, bearing the number 13, a cracked mirror charm, or a single eye—presumably an evil one—painted upon a plaque. These are supposed to bring good luck when the usual lucky ones fail, just as the number 13 and the opal are claimed as individual luck bringers by certain English believers in their power for good.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 11.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—How to conquer our temptations.—Matt. xxvi. 41; I Cor. x. 12, 13; Jas. iv, 7; Heb. ii. 18; iv. 14-16; xii. 1-4.

The presence of sin in this world is one of the most insoluble problems of human life. When God created man He created him morally and spiritually perfect. But man even in the state of perfection had the possibility of sin within him. Moreover, the opportunity or temptation was placed before him, and, saddest of all, man yielded to the temptation. Humanity also fell when Adam fell. His descendants even unto the present day are morally imperfect, having inherited the traits and dispositions of their ancestors. But no sooner had man fallen than God held out to him a way of conquering sin. On the day of the first sin ever committed against God on earth God in passing judgment upon all concerned in man's fall said to Satan, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman and between thy seed and her seed, and it [the seed of the woman] shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." Doom had no sooner fallen upon the human race than God held out the assurance of final victory, through Jesus Christ, the seed of the woman. Therefore sin has entered into the world by the mysterious providence of God, yet God Himself arranged for its overthrow.

Our topic addresses itself to the problem of conquering temptation. God says it can be done. It has been done. It should be done. How, then, can we do it? First of all we must realize that we are human and subject to temptations that have power over us. The man who does not realize his sins is a hopeless case, so far as overcoming them is concerned. Second, we should be filled with a desire to overcome sin. Many know their besetting sins, but they do not want to lay them aside. At times they loathe their baseness, but still they cling to them. Often they even excuse themselves, which makes it all the harder for them to overcome sin, even if they attempted to do so. Convicted of sin, possessing an intense desire to overcome it, turn with faith to God in Christ, and it can be done. And when sin has been overcome we should keep it so by watchfulness and by prayer. If you have temptations that overcome you and really want to overcome them, God will give you the grace to do so. Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need."

BRAZILIAN NOTES.

BY ELIEZER DOS SANTOS SARAIVA.

The work in Brazil is thus organized: A national union with eighty enrolled societies, a state union (in the state of S. Paulo with fifty societies and a total membership of 1,500, a state superintendent, a state treasurer, a district union in Jahu and its neighborhood with twelve societies and a local union in the city of S. Paulo with seven societies.

The chief feature of our movement now is the constitution of a central committee of the day of prayer according to the resolution of our last national convention. This committee is to be formed by a representative of each of the denominations that work in this country and of the societies that work in connection with the church. The object of the central committee is to carry out the idea of a national day of prayer in all the evangelical churches of our country in behalf of the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ in this part of the world. Probably the day to be chosen is New Year's day.

The question of political elections on Sunday in Brazil has brought a resolution of the third state convention, which met in Jahu last May, asking the houses of congress, through the board of the Federation Alliance in Rio de Janeiro, to cancel the law that permits elections on Sunday.

Rural Family Endeavor was established last year by our national president, Rev. Erasmo de Carvalho de Carvalho Braga, last June in the villages of the Juquia river, in the state of S. Paulo. The Christian people are very scattered in those places, dwelling in the margins of the river, so that many of them must take more than one day by canoe to go to attend the church services in the town plan. At each side of the river. For this reason the C. E. society, which had about thirty members among a Christian population of more than 100, has been divided into five societies, the total membership of the movement increasing, therefore, according to the new plan. At each period of three months the five societies meet in the chapel to hold a consecration meeting and to plan about the common interests of the societies, which form a union, superintended by the earnest worker of those valleys, Willis A. Banks.

The Brazilian Union is looking now to the Lutheran field to establish there C. E. principles. Many steps have been given in this line. Miss Kuhl of Curityba wrote in the C. E. W. an article about this plan. Meetings which with the German Union will prepare the way and remove the difficulties.

The Lettish people of Orleans do Sul, Santa Catharina state, among whom the C. E. movement was organized last year by the secretary of our union, are very glad with the blessings which were brought by the C. E. idea. By a notable coincidence the movement was organized almost at the same time in the motherland—that is, in the Russian provinces of the Baltic.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 11: "The Freedman's Aid and Southern Education Society and Its Work."—Matt. xxv, 31-40; John iv. 35.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

The headquarters of this branch of work of the Methodist Episcopal church is in Cincinnati, 220 West Fourth street. A monthly journal is published at 50 cents per year, which represents the work. An annual report is also printed and sent to all who ask, which is extremely valuable. The Christian Educator is the title of the monthly publication. Drs. W. F. Tuleksid and M. C. B. Mason are the corresponding secretaries in charge of the work. Bishop Walden as president is the official head of the society. A board composed of ministers and laymen meets monthly in Cincinnati to have oversight of all operations. The general committee meets annually, as previously stated, at the meeting of the general missionary committee and the church extension committee and has final and full charge of all the work of the society, subject to review by the general conference every four years.

Every member of the Methodist Episcopal church is under obligation by voluntary pledge to contribute to the support of this work, as of all other benevolent operations of the church.

The civil war freed 4,000,000 colored people in the south, who had formerly been slaves, nominally free. None of them owned a foot of land, a house for shelter, an article of furniture, any implement of labor or even the clothing they wore. They had no experience in caring for themselves in body, mind or soul. Slavery had not taught them habits of thrift and economy, nor had it made labor attractive. They knew how to do some kinds of work for others. They must learn how to work for themselves. No people ever had a more stupendous task set them. Slavery had not encouraged moral purity. They could never rise except as they became industrious, frugal and chaste.

The government could help very little. Ultimately, it gave little or no aid to them industrially, socially or morally.

The church came to their aid. Schools were started, and old and young were taught the elements of an education essentially industrial. Industrial features were added, and habits of industry were encouraged. Various trades were taught and the young men and women fitted to earn a livelihood as carpenters, seamsons, blacksmiths, printers, dentists, doctors, dressmakers, milliners and housekeepers.

Theological work was opened and the preachers taught what and how to preach to their people.

The colored population has doubled in these forty years since the war. It is said that the Caucasian race is less deeply interested than formerly in this work. Can this be so? Does any one expect that forty years is to put a slave race on their feet abreast of the most virile and progressive race the world ever saw? That would be an absurd expectation.

The time calls for greater efforts than ever before. Some signs of the times are ominous. The race is beginning to awake. They cannot yet stand alone. Never were the gifts and oversight and prayers of alle needed more needed than at this present hour. To falter now is to jeopardise all yet attained. Study this problem. Pray and then give money and care to the brother in black.

Character Making.

Character is made up of small duties faithfully performed, of self denials, of self sacrifices, of kindly acts of love and duty. The whole tone of character is laid at home, and, whether the constitutional tendencies be good or bad, home influences will, as a rule, fix them into activity. Kindness begets kindness, and truth and trust will bear a rich harvest in the home life. There are many little trivial acts of kindness which teach us more about a man's character than many vague phrases.—Samuel Smiles.

An Excellent Habit.

A good habit to acquire is the habit of thanking God for every blessing at the time it comes. At the instant let us say inwardly, "I am very grateful, dear Father, and thank thee."

Sentence Sermons.

Many prayers would be more profitable if they were pruned.—Henry C. Cope.

Where God builds a church there the devil would also build a chapel.—Martin Luther.

He who wishes to secure the good of others has already secured his own.—Confucius.

Though we travel the world over to find the beautiful, we must carry it with us or we find it not.—Emerson.

The world will soon forget its masters, but will cling with loving remembrance to its servants.—L. F. Sweezy.

Patience is the ballast of the soul, that will keep it from rolling and tumbling in the greatest storm.—Bishop Hopkins.

Life is as in a football game, the principle to follow is: Hit the line hard. Don't foul and don't shirk, but hit the line hard.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Miserable thou art, whosoever thou art or whithersoever thou turnest, unless thou turn thyself to God. Keep thy heart free and lifted up to Him.—Thomas a Kempis.

Men remain the same slaves they have always been and always will be while they continue to be guided not by religious consciousness, but by passions, theories and external influences. —Tolstoi.

DR. SHEKEL AND MR. SNYDE.

I have read of his fame in the papers
And gazed on his picture with pride,
"Dr. Shekel can cure!" The friend of the poor!"
But never have seen Mr. Snyde.
Yet in high patent-medical circles,
Where Shekel is lauded to the skies,
I've heard it inferred, by a hint, by a word,
That Shekel and Snyde are the same!

That a psychical, strange metamorphical change
Comes over that healer of pain,
That at will he can change into the aspect of Snyde,
Or Snyde to Shekel again.
(Shekel and Snyde in a single man
Graft on a purely medicinal plan
To play both ends and the middle, too.
"The more we take, the more we Believe in a Heathen Science.
Snyde in secret advises the stuff,
Shekel in public sells enough
What a frightfully neat appliance!)

When invalids come to his office
A kindly old man doth appear,
"I can cure you," says he, "for a nominal fee."
Then he fades to a room in the rear,
When he mixes a poison prescription,
Phenetin, alcohol, cocaine,
And labels the dope, "Shekel's Waters of Pain."
As he grins in a cynical vein,
"It's swift and it's sure; if it kills it's a cure!"
"Twill ease 'em of money and pain."
Then Shekel fades into Mr. Snyde
Ere he changes to Shekel again.

(Shekel and Snyde is the way they do
To play both ends and the middle, too.
"The more we take, the more we Believe in a Heathen Science.
The motto of Heathen Science,
Shekel shows his benevolent side,
But when he changes to hideous Snyde
He roars: "It kills! I'm the thing that kills—
What a frightfully neat appliance!)

There's Shekel's Pate Pills for the Puny,
"Brain Cordial," and "Belgian Nerve Bleat," Cheap whiskey in some, in others bad rum,
But others judicious morphine.
When a funeral trails by his office,
"It's really a shame, and there's no one to blame
But that naughty bad man, Mr. Snyde!"
Then he fades to the rear and turns to the queer
Old Devil who sings the refrain,
"It's swift and it's sure; when it kills it's a cure!"
Ere he changes to Shekel again.

(Shekel and Snyde—just another name
For the double deck of a bunco game
To squeeze the tin from the pale and thin
Believers in Heathen Science.
The sicker they get the more they sell—
Quackie would starve if folks kept well.
So their favorite trick is to keep 'em sick
By their frightfully neat appliance.)
—Wallace Irwin, in Collier's Weekly for December 2, 1905.

WASHING DISHES.

Those who have in charge the most delicate china wash one piece at a time in warm, soapy water, and then rinse them well in cold water, letting them drain on a tray, and drying with soft linen glass cloth to give them a polish.

Fine dinner plates and dishes are washed with soda in the water, so as to take certain that no fat or grease are left on them, without rinsing in hot water. They are then rinsed in running water, and put on a plate rack without being dried. If there is a gilt on the china hotter water must be substituted for the soda, which is particularly hard upon gold and sometimes makes it rub off altogether.

New thoughts upon dishwashing do away with many pet theories held by housekeepers First and most radical is the order of washing the dishes followed by a housekeeper trained on a cooking science school. The usual order was followed, and with the glass and the silver, the teacups and saucers, and then the astonished visitor, who wielded the dish towel, found that she was being handed tinware

"I now rule milk buckets, pans or any of my bright tinware to go into the dish water after butter dishes or greasy plates have been in it," said this housekeeper. "The tin dishes that have been merely used in preparing the meal, or even those that have contained fine fruits and sauces, do not hurt the dish water if they have been prepared properly, by rinsing out anything sticky by a little broom and cold water. They are much cleaner than the plates and platters which have had gravy on them, no matter how fine they may be. As you see, all of my tinware is bright, because I keep it so by putting it into the suds while it is still hot and clean."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

WITH ONIONS.

Onion Leftovers.

Chop cold boiled onions fine, add a little white sauce and put in a baking dish with bread crumbs over the top. Brown in the oven.

Baked Onions.

Peel and boil for about forty-five minutes. Dry with a cloth, squeezing the water out of them, put in a baking dish, put a small piece of butter on each and bake for an hour with a covering of buttered paper.

Fried Onions.

Cut large white onions in thin slices so as to form large rings. Drag them around in a pan of flour until they are thoroughly covered. Plunge them into a kettle of hot lard and fry until they are golden brown and quite crispy. Drain on a cloth, season with salt and serve on a folded napkin.

Onions Supreme.

Peel and cut into thick slices a half-inch thick. Throw into a kettle of boiling salted water and cook for thirty minutes until transparent. Drain, saving the water. Take half a pint of it and add a thickening of a tablespoon of butter and one of flour, salt and pepper. Take from the fire and add two beaten egg yolks and four tablespoonfuls of cream. Stew over a pan of hot water for a minute and be careful not to curdle.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

Published at

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1906.

Colby is coming.

The foxy Denman has the Westfield Standard offer that suggestion this week that Dash's Plainfield aggregation use Westfield's grounds. Great idea.

Say what you please about Councilman Tyler, he keeps them all guessing.

One would suspect that Councilman Hibbard had been a press agent at some time in his career judging by the way he worked the Globe on his manganese steel puff.

Somehow or other the rural editors of Somerset county make it a habit of breaking loose from their scissors once in a while to wield their lead pencils against the Plainfield newspapers and people. They are always amusing in their seriousness and sometimes ridiculous. For instance, Mr. Bateman, who buries himself at Somerville, rises in his wrath to denounce former Senator Reed because the latter sees fit to take an interest in Somerset politics after the Unionist-Gazette has repeatedly printed his political death notice. Another jaundiced journalist, Mr. Mason, who does not kick against spending his life in Bound Brook, throws his ire into a paragraph regarding a story on that hamlet which was written by a newspaper writer there and subsequently appeared in many dailies throughout this section. He accuses "the Plainfield knockers" of being the author of the sad little tale, although there is no evidence to substantiate him. Somerset's weekly journalists don't stop for anything of that sort. They must spend their spleen against Plainfield because its sympathies with North Plainfield in its effort to try to forget that the borough is a part of Somerset.

The Trenton True American devotes half a column in an effort to show that high license is a failure and this is the kind of argument it uses: "Theoretically, the man who pays $1,000 a year for his license will more rigidly observe the law than he who pays $250, the fee in Trenton at this time. In reality the same influences which saloonkeepers depend upon to get them out of trouble under low license are also depended upon under high license." Its argument, therefore, is that the size of the license fee has nothing to do with the case. Consequently, no matter how much the saloonkeeper has paid to run his establishment in accordance with the law, "political pull" can be depended upon to get him out of trouble. This may be so in Trenton, but happily all New Jersey is not judged by that city. Plainfield's license rate is $1,000 and it is going to stay at that figure. Why? Because there are men eager to pay that amount into the city treasury for the privilege of selling liquor between 6 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night. And they obey the law. Why? Because they know if they violate it, their privilege will be taken away and it would be impossible to get another. There are just twelve licensed places, wholesale and retail combined, in this city of 17,500 people and the holders appreciate the fact that they are paying a big price for their permits but not too big in comparison with the profits they make. If the True American wants to find a community where the high license idea is a success, just let it turn to Plainfield.

COURT OF PARDONS HAS NEW RULES.

Public Notice Required of Applicants for Parole or Pardon.

The Court of Pardons, consisting of the Governor, the chancellor and the six lay judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, has just completed the revision of its rules and regulations and will hereafter work under a system that promises to relieve the body of the criticism that has prevailed in the past, because so much of its pardoning process was done in secret and without publicity of any kind.

The principal change in the rules is one which makes it necessary to publish notice of application for pardon or parole at the place where conviction was had, giving all interested parites a chance to be heard. The executive clerk is to be known as the pardon clerk and the Secretary of State is to be the clerk of the court. All applications for release from prison must be filed with the pardons clerk. A committee of inquiry is to make preliminary investigation of all applications for release. Provision is making for the revoking of pardons or paroles granted to prisoners who do not subsequently abide by the regulations which require periodical reports to the State authorities and the leading of a decent life.

Rule 7 shows how well the public will be informed as to who are petitioning the board for parole.

AMUSEMENTS.

Forthcoming editions of dictionaries will contain a new word—Hippodrome—meaning something wonderful, beautiful, extraordinary, while conveying a scene of vastness and immensity. Responsibility for the coinage of the word rests with the New York Hippodrome and, especially with the production of "A Society Circus," the greatest of all modern spectacles. The incidental circus tournament is the greatest ever witnessed. It includes Mlle. Loris, whose equestrianship has been a sensation in Paris; the Boulair-Gregoire troupe of acrobats, Europe's champions, appearing for the first time in America; Ralph Johnstone, whose exploits on the wheel are the limit of reckless daring. Claire Hellot remains the exponent of feminine courage. She also is the star of the tricks displayed by her lions. Slivers and Marceline, clowns, have injected new lines of comedy throughout the performance. "A Society Circus" continues to grow in popularity. Its great ballet, beautiful ensemble, wonderful scenic spectacles and catchy music amaze and delight. Matinees are held daily.

Western plays there have been aplenty of late years, but it is doubtful if any have reached the popularity of "The Squaw Man," at Wallack's theatre, New York. For three months or more this extremely virile play has packed the theatre at every performance, and is not alone the truthful type of characters presented. They are just men and women with their usual frailties, and not idealized products of a playwright's brain set dancing and talking to the tune of an impossible fancy. The plot is of the Lafcester and West and its inhabitants. William Faversham, the star of "The Squaw Man," portrays an English army officer in the first act of the play. Curiously enough Mr. Faversham was prior to his adoption of the stage, a captain in the Leicester regiment, the very regiment in which he now appears as a lieutenant at every performance at Wallack's theatre. The star says he feels a thrill run through him every time he inserts himself into the old uniform.

It is seldom that four well known stars are found in the support of another star, and yet in "The Vanderbilt Cup" at the Broadway theatre, New York city, may be seen Otis Harlan, who starred in "A Black Sheep," Henry V. Donnelly, of "Natural Gas," Charles Dickson, of "Incog," and Aubrey Boucicault, of "Heidelberg" and they lend their efforts to help Miss Elsie Janis keep the comedy ball rolling, and the result is the one really successful comedy of a musical nature that Broadway has seen this season.

Miss Ellis Jeffreys, who is appearing as the star in Alfred Sutro's play, "The Fascinating Mr. Vanderveldt," at Daly's theatre in New York, relates an incident connected with her first meeting with the noted author. She was playing in London when Mr. Sutro was announced at the door of her dressing room. When she went out to meet him, Mr. Sutro merely said: "Sorry to have troubled you, and delighted to meet you, but I just wanted to get a look at you quite closely. I have a play in mind, and the principal character as I have imagined her, looks like you. I just wanted to see what your hands looked like and how you wore your hair. Thank you and good-bye!" Later Miss Jeffreys was asked to appear in the role for which she stood as model for a brief instant.

The biggest comedy hit of the year in New York is Pat Templeton in Geo. M. Cohan's musical play, "45 Minutes from Broadway," at the New Amsterdam theatre, where she is now in her fourth week. Miss Templeton is undoubtedly the cleverest comedienne on the American stage. Her versatility was never more strongly tested than in this play, wherein she has serious and emotional, as well as broad comedy situations. Her work is particularly pleasing to women. She is a modern comedienne, always refined in al that she does and never resorting to the slightest suggestion of coarseness to make her comic points. Victor Moore, who plays the opposite role, "Kid" Burns, has made a hit second only to that of the star. Mr. Moore, too, belongs to the quiet, unctuous and refined school of comedy, and in him Miss Templeton finds a most able second, in full sympathy with her stage methods. It is a pleasure to witness the situations between these really great artists, who make their points through refreshingly natural methods. As for the piece itself, it far surpasses expectation and any one who sees it cannot leave the theatre disappointed. It is a very effective conglomeration of different schools of theatrical entertainment into a powerful story of human interest, staged with novelty, variety and snap. "45 Minutes from Broadway" is quite the real thing in New York.

In "As Ye Sow," the new play by the Rev. Dr. John Snyder, of Boston, which had its premier at the Garden theatre, New York, Christmas, William A. Brady and Joseph R. Grismer believe they have another popular success of the type of the "Old Homestead," "Way Down East" and "Shore Acres." It will be recalled that the last named plays gradually grew to great popularity after having been at first received with some skepticism by the more severe critics, and that they still—years after their initial presentations—are potent and profitable attractions throughout the country. That "As Ye Sow" has many of the qualities which made famous "Way Down East" is conceded, and its reception in New York is much the same as that which characterized the advent of that immensely successful play here some nine years ago. "As Ye Sow" will not satisfy those who revel in the risque or who rejoice in the unclean in the drama. It is a play built on simple and altogether wholesome lines, but withal intensely interesting throughout, with strong love interest, pathos and comedy situations blended. It is a play which appeals to the "average citizen" and is not intended for the edification of those who seek only the frivolous things which the stage offers.

Blanche Walsh is playing her annual engagement at the Grand Opera House. On her last visit she appeared as Maslova in Tolstoy's "Resurrection," and made a lasting impression on our patrons. She was the very incarnation of the Tolstoy heroine in all its stark quivering realism, revolting at times if you like, but from a standpoint of dramatic art, it is said with reverberating. Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper, her managers, now place her in a more attractive atmosphere in a new play from the pen of Clyde Fitch, entitled "The Woman in the Case," which Miss Walsh presented last season, and it enjoyed a run of six months in New York. In "The Woman in the Case," which Miss Walsh presents on this occasion, Clyde Fitch, without going down to the depths as Tolstoy did, gives a very faithful portraiture of the world he knows so well, the so-called world of society. Strange to say, Miss Walsh does not play the sinful woman, but in the character of a noble woman of the ideal American type, who, because life is at stake, is compelled to use weapons with which she would not otherwise soil her hands or risk her reputation. That such a case is possible has been only too graphically illustrated by several of the sensational criminal trials of recent years.

LITERARY.

Mr. Dooley's picturesque description of hotel life, in our last issue, treated a theme of serious and far reaching moment in American existence. In "The House of Mirth" Mrs. Wharton includes a biting picture of a large hotel and the homeless class who form its population. Mr. Dooley rollicked among the thoughts that a great hostelry brought to his riotous imagination, but amid the fun with which he was filled by the follies of social distinction, there lay visible always a genuine feeling for homes, as contrasted with caravansaries which, in the now classic jest, are built to furnish sleeplessness to the masses. The simple "Home, Sweet Home" and "God Bless Our Home" legends on the walls of honest citizens have done much to induce in more sophisticated brains witticisms against domestic life. Now, among the thoughtful, less stress is laid upon satirical possibilities than upon the very real dangers which may lurk in loosening the family unit. Whatever makes the individual citizens stable in their sympathies is strengthening to the people. Whatever substitutes hotelic amusement for stable responsibility has in it a possibility of sapping energy. We believe, however, that while the hotel tendency increases in some of the most congested spots, the hotel and boarding-house habits over the whole country are relatively on the decrease, and among the class especially referred to by Mr. Dooley and Mrs. Wharton the establishment of country homes is doing much to create a healthier tone.—Collier's for February 3, 1906.

GIRL PRESS FEEDERS GO OUT ON STRIKE

TEN EMPLOYES OF CRESCENT EMBOSSING CO. DEMAND MORE MONEY.

The ten girls who feed the presses at the Crescent Embossing Company went out on strike Saturday morning for an increase in wages. They were given a chance to come back in the afternoon, but refused to take it.

The girls made their demand for more money Friday afternoon. The management decided that it could not recognize the feeders as a body intreating such a demand, but would deal with the feeders individually. The girls learned of this decision at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, and promptly went out, at a word from their leader.

They came back for their pay later. The management gave them to understand that the whole force could return to work, with the exception of the leader. The girls decided to support the standard bearer, and voted to stay out.

GETS A PARISH HOUSE

St. Stephen's Church Acquires Title to a Property in the East End.

NOW RAISING FUNDS

Mrs. Charles Hyde, Mrs. Dorsey Hyde and Mrs. Everett Colby Each Give $1,000—Other Gifts.

A great success attending the earnest efforts of Rev. A. S. Lock since he became rector of St. Stephen's church was in part realized Sunday, when, at the morning service, he made announcement of the plans to secure a parish house where the work can be carried on more satisfactorily. The site chosen is that offered by Mrs. Charles Hyde at South and Woodland avenues, upon which is located a fine house well adapted for the proposed work.

Through the generosity of friends over $3,770 has been contributed toward the purchase of this property, of which amount Mrs. Charles Hyde gives $1,000, Mrs. Dorsey Hyde $1,000, Mrs. Everett Colby $1,000, Louis P. Hyde $250, Mrs. Robert McCready $250, Robert McCready $50, donations $50, cash on hand $100, A. C. Wilmerding $5, Mr. Bunker $10, J. D. Phillips $5, and S. S. Schuyler $50. The balance of about $1,220 will be raised within the coming week, it being the purpose of giving all interested a chance to contribute to the purchase of the property.

The matter of securing a parish house was first mentioned by the rector on Easter Sunday last, when he pleaded earnestly for a place to carry on the parish work. The first donation was a $1 bill in an envelope, and from that time on contributions have been received daily.

The title for the property was passed on Saturday, deeding to the rector, wardens and vestrymen of St. Stephen's church, Plainfield, the lot and dwelling described. This church is incorporated under the laws of the State as an independent parish of the church in the diocese.

It is proposed to establish in the new parish house a reading room, a press room for the publication of the parish paper, guild rooms and library. Later on it is hoped to have bowling alleys and a gymnasium and there will also be a large assembly hall for gatherings of all kinds.

The announcement yesterday by Rector Peck was the occasion of much rejoicing on the part of the entire parish, and it is believed that it will mark the beginning of new life in this important field of Christian effort.

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH HAS FINISHED 31 YEARS' SERVICE.

The close of the thirty-first year of the work of Rt. Rev. John Scarborough as bishop of the Diocese of New Jersey occurred last week. The occasion was marked in Trenton in connection with the dedication of the new parish house of All Saints' P. E. church at Trenton. Bishop Scarborough delivered the sermon.

Referring to the close of the thirty-one years of his work as head of the Diocese of New Jersey, Bishop Scarborough said his heart was full, as he thought of the great blessings God had given him. He said he had asked to have this event set for last night, because it was particularly pleasing to him to celebrate his anniversary in a service which marked the progress of one of his churches. He spoke of the great progress in the diocese in the thirty-one years. When Bishop Scarborough took charge there were but 6,000 communicants in New Jersey, now there are 50,000 in the State. The Diocese of New Jersey, which includes the southern half of the State, is stronger today than was the whole State thirty-one years ago. This marvelous growth, the bishop said, should make his hearers take courage and forge ahead more determinedly than ever.

"WILLIE" DEEGAN BECOMES PROPRIETOR OF A HOTEL.

Will Conduct the Scotch Plains Inn Owned by His Bride of Three Weeks.

"Willie" Deegan, who, as the star twirler of the Plainfield ball team last season, pitched himself into the hearts of local fandom, became a genuine Boniface Saturday night by assuming proprietorship of the old Scotch Plains Inn, which is owned by his bride of three weeks. The inn has been conducted for the past year by Mrs. Deegan's father, William S. Rapp.

It has been rumored for several weeks past that the popular twirler would settle at Scotch Plains and take up the hotel business, but it was not until last week that he finally decided to become a Boniface in reality. Mr. Rapp and family will continue to live at the hotel and will manage the place during Mr. Deegan's absence, as "Willie" will not desert the diamond and will be found wearing a uniform as usual when the season opens in May.

COPS RAID CRAP JOINTS AT 4 IN THE MORNING

TEN PRISONERS CAPTURED BY ROUNDSMAN AND DETECTIVE.

In the chilly hush of 4 a. m. Sunday Roundsman Flynn and Detective McCarthy raided a negro crap joint at 239 West Front street. They broke up a game that was going full blast, captured ten prisoners and confiscated a baize covered crap table.

The joint was located in a rear room on the second floor. The police have had their eyes on the place for several weeks, and found things ripening for a raid Saturday night. The game began, according to the police, at midnight. They waited four hours before raiding to give all the habitues a chance to get in. Their descent was a complete surprise and none of the men in the place had a chance to get away.

The prisoners captured are Peter Simmons, whom the police say is the keeper of the place; Albert Butler, Joseph Pritchard, J. F. Bowser, W. H. Lee, Leonard Fidgette, William Blanchard, Lee Edwards and George Lee. Judge Runyon has set their hearing down for next Saturday morning. The police have put the crap board with the slot machine they captured recently in a Liberty street store. When the equipment collection is big enough Chief Kiely will hold amashing bee in the headquarters backyard.

SEWER SYSTEM URGED FOR NORTH PLAINFIELD

ITS BOARD OF HEALTH ALSO WANTS BETTER GARBAGE COLLECTION.

At the regular meeting of the borough Board of Health Monday, former Recorder Thomas Dodd, one of the new members recently appointed, formally launched the subject of a sanitary sewer system and was seconded in all his remarks by Andrew Kenney, the other newcomer. The need of a system was fully discussed and in the end a resolution was adopted calling upon the mayor and Common Council to take the necessary steps as soon as possible. It will be presented to the authorities in time to be presented at the next meeting.

The present method of garbage and similar collections in North Plainfield came in for censure and several of the members asserted that the rickety, unsightly wagons used for the purpose must go. On a vote it was decided to issue a call to all men in the business to confer with the board at a special meeting on February 13 to devise some way to bring about a change. Complaints of wagons dropping part of their contents along the streets have been received by the board on numerous occasions and merely speaking to the owners has met with no response.

Change Time of Meeting.

In future the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital will hold its regular meeting on the second Monday of the month instead of the first. This change is made to allow the various bills to be prepared and presented in due time.

Many incubator manufacturers guarantee their machines to be as represented, etc. We do all this and also guarantee results. So many inferior machines have been purchased by enthusiastic, earnest people, who desire to hatch chickens by the artificial method, that thousands and thousands of "would be" successful poultrymen fail and lose their courage on account of the inferiority of the incubator with which they started. E. M. JOHNSTON, IS DEAD

ONLY ILL BUT ONE DAY

Edward M. Johnston, one of the oldest residents of Scotch Plains and widely known throughout this vicinity, died early Sunday afternoon after a brief illness. He has been conducting a coal business at Fanwood and was at his office as usual Saturday, but soon after the noon hour he was taken with a fainting spell. He was hurried to his home and Drs. Westcott and Jenkins, who were summoned, ascribed the trouble to a severe cold. During Saturday night he continued to grow worse, and because of his advanced age became very weak. The end came at 12:15 Sunday.

Mr. Johnston was born in Morris county in 1823 and moved to Scotch Plains forty years ago. He engaged in farming and contracting and when the New Jersey Central shifted its tracks from what is now Midway avenue to their present location in Fanwood he had charge of a large part of the work in the "cut." He continued farming for some years afterward and then opened a coal yard near the Fanwood station and built up a large and prosperous business. He was at his office almost every day and his four score years did not prevent him from attending to every detail of routine.

Mr. Johston was a life-long Republican and always took an active interest in the doings of his party, at various times having a place on the township ticket. The affairs of Scotch Plains were always his and he was always identified with anything it undertook.

He is survived by a widow and five sons—John J., engaged in the coal business at Netherwood; James, who assisted his father; Robert T., who is the Chicago representative of the Campbell Printing Press Co.; George H., engaged in the insurance business and well known as a baseball manager, and William D., a mason and contractor at Scotch Plains, and also two daughters, the Misses Jennie and Alice Johnston, both of whom reside at home.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH COMPLETES FIRST YEAR

SPECIAL SERVICES HELD IN HONOR OF ANNIVERSARY.

Members of the Christian church observed the first anniversary of its organization at the Grove Street Mission yesterday. Three services were held, one in the morning at 10:30, another at 2:30, and the last at 7:30 in the evening, all being well attended. Rev. Phil. A. Parsons, the pastor, had arranged the programmes and was in charge on each occasion. Music was provided by an orchestra and a chorus of mixed voices.

Among those who spoke at the meetings were Evangelist William Carney, of Newark; John B. Oakley, and Howard B. Scheckler, of Elizabeth; John Simonson, of New York; Rev. H. N. Jordan, of New Market, and Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook. Special anniversary remarks were made by Pastor Parsons.

The Christian church started with a small membership, but has been increasing rapidly and gives promise of becoming one of the city's important religious institutions. Mr. Parsons has always had charge and much of its success is due to his efforts.

BANDIT MICE CRACK A CRACKER-BOX SAFE.

Mrs. Wolfe Finds in Her Home-Made Safe Deposit Only a Few Remains of Former Contents.

Mrs. Joseph Wolfe, of Orange, has asked the Orange Common Council to cancel sewer assessments on her property, Nos. 219 and 230 Washington street, alleging that she has paid the assessments, but cannot produce the receipts because they have been eaten up.

Mrs. Wolfe owns considerable property and is known for her thrift. She has never patronized safe-deposit boxes in banks, but has relied on a safe-deposit box of her own—an old cracker-box. Recently Mrs. Wolfe went to her safe to look up papers relating to her property, and, to her dismay, found nothing but a few pieces of badly macerated paper, the remains of a banquet of mice, which in some way had squeezed under the cover and devoured everything in the box.

Watchung Hunt Club Chase.

Starting from Mt. Pleasant, a dozen members of the Watchung Hunt Club enjoyed a chase after the hounds to Colonia and back home Saturday. The ground was in fairly good condition for the chase and the new pack of hounds did good work.

Union's Population Increases 44,744 in Fifteen Years—Big Gains in Other Nearby Counties.

SIGNIFICANT FIGURES

Show Great Growth. Union Being One.

Figures in the State census of 1905, just issued from Secretary of State Samuel D. Dickinson's office, reveal a surprising growth in the number of New Jersey commuters—and especially of those living closest to New York City. The population of the State, taken as a whole, has jumped from 1,113,116 in 1880 to 2,144,794 in 1905. The increase of more than 100 per cent. since 1880 in the counties within easy access of New York, and to be brought nearer by under-river tunnels and trolley connections, is regarded by the economists of the State as significant of coming cetropolitan greatness in that end of the State. One of the counties—Bergen, of which Hackensack is the center—has considerably more than doubled her population within the last fifteen years, while the ratio of growth in the larger and more thickly settled counties, since 1880 even, has been from 54 per cent., in the lowest, to more than 67 in the highest.

It is significant, too, that Hudson county, directly across the Hudson from New York City, and within which the river-front cities of Bayonne, Jersey City and Hoboken lie, has far outstripped all the others—even Essex, which up to 1880 had always led her in population. The city of Newark, which is the center of Essex county, has not yet yielded the palm of leadership to any of the river cities in the sister county, but the county nearest New York, which in 1880 just about equaled Essex in the number of her people, has since then taken the lead from her by 40,000, and is growing at a rate that seems to make Essex's recovery of her supremacy out of the question.

Those who are looking forward to the eventual consolidation of all the communities in the five counties nearest to New York City into one imposing metropolitan district find interest in this table, comparing their several populations in 1880, 1890, and 1905:

At the same ratio of growth the five counties will have at the expiration of fifteen years a population of 2,069,167, and at the end of twenty-five years of 2,924,954.

A proposal for the erection, on the river front across from New York, of Jersey City, Bayonne, Hoboken, and the thickly settled towns in the northern part of the county into a "Greater Jersey City" is already being discussed by the people who live there. Such a consolidation would include Jersey City, Hoboken, Bayonne, West Hoboken, Union Hill, North Bergen, Weehawken, West New York, Guttenburg and Secaucus.

The total population of these communities by the new census is 420,645, but their new strides, even since the census was taken, will probably bring them close to the 500,000 mark.

For the rest, the State census shows that the 2,144,794 people in the commonwealth are divided into 468,894 families, and live in 363,116 dwellings. In two of the counties there are more dwellings than families. Cape May has 4,572 dwellings for 4,371 families, and Cumberland's 12,402 families have 12,876 homes to live in. Mercer, Middlesex and Passaic are the counties that come nearest to the Roosevelitan idea of big families. The average membership there is 5.

SPECIAL SERVICE FOR ENDEAVOR ANNIVERSARY.

Congregational Society Marks Quarter-Centennial of the Movement.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church held a special service last night in observance of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Christian Endeavor movement. Papers by members and special music made the exercises interesting. There was a large attendance, the celebration taking the place of the regular evening service.

President Clarence La Rue opend the service with a brief address. Papers reviewing the work of the Christian Endeavor supporters since "Father" Clark first gave the movement impetus a quarter of a century ago were read by Miss Ethel Millar, Miss Alice Barlow, Mrs. Phillip Suffern, and Harold Millar. Phillip Suffern read a paper on the future of the work. He saw great possibilities for the Congregational society. Rev. C. L. Goodrich made a short address in closing the service.

The feature of the musical programme was the singing of Miss Caroline Edgerly, of Cambridge, Mass. Three violins augmented the musical accompaniment. The church quartette also sang.

Long-lost Fair Heir Comes East to Collect What is Alleged to be Due Him.

WILL MAKE A FIGHT

Westerner Displeased Over Hasty Settlement of Estate—To Consult With His Lawyers.

Being summoned East by his attorneys, F. P. Smith, a brother of "Moyer Hill" Smith, of New Market, and one of the Fair heirs, arrived in Plainfield Sunday night from Topeka, Kansas. He has practically recovered from a recent auto accident, in which three ribs were broken. His visit East is in the interest of a settlement of his claim against the Fair estate.

When seen Monday by a representative for The Daily Press, Mr. Smith said that as yet nothing has been done on his part toward adjusting his claim. "When the estate settled with my mother and brothers they counted me as being dead," said Mr. Smith, "and, of course, I did not receive a share of my sister's estate."

"I put the matter in the hands of Chandler & Beekman, New York lawyers, and expect them to see that my interests are carefully attended to," continued Mr. Smith. "I have not lost one minute of sleep over a settlement, for I believe that it will come out all right. I expect to see my attorneys today or tomorrow and will then learn what has been done."

Mr. Smith said he was displeased over the manner in which his relatives settled their claims, and especially their anxiety to go to California and get what was coming to them. He said that their share of the estate was not going to get away, and if they had remained home, those in charge of the estate would have hunted them up and made a settlement on their terms and not on those of some lawyers who were only too anxious to have them sign off for a certain amount, which eventually led them into all sorts of trouble.

MEN CHARGED BY GIRLS PLEAD NOT GUILTY

GALBRAITH, LINZER, ROSS AND HOLLAND WILL BE TRIED ON FEBRUARY 13.

John Galbraith, Peter Linzer, William Ross and Thomas Holland, the latter colored, were arraigned before Judge Voit in the County Court in Elizabeth Monday, to answer to indictments found against them last week, under charges made by small girls. The indictment is for carnal abuse of minors. There are three counts against Galbraith, the others, escaping with one each.

The pleaded not guilty and were remanded for trial on February 13. Ross and Galbraith are out on $1,000 bail. Linzer and Holland have been unable to get bondsmen. Galbraith is represented by W. L. Heefield, Sr.; F. J. Blatz is Ross' lawyer, and W. G. De Mesa is counsel for Linzer. Holland asked the court to appoint counsel for him.

The men were arrested two months ago, after alleged repeated offenses. They were caught after an investigation instituted by Father Bogan, of St. Mary's R. C. church. At their examination before Justice Mosher the four girls who figure in the case told shocking stories with shocking detail.

WALLACE'S TRIAL SET FOR WEDNESDAY

HE PLEADED NOT GUILTY—TWO SERVANTS CONFESS GUILT BEFORE JUDGE.

"Larry" Wallace, of Scotch Plains, indicted on a charge of breaking and entering Rapp's Hotel at Scotch Plains, was among those arraigned in the Union County Court, this morning. He entered a plea of not guilty and was released on $500 bail, furnished by his mother. His trial is fixed for Wednesday.

Louise Kehak and Lizzie Bednerik, two servants employed by Samuel Huntington, of Franklin place, indicted on a charge of larceny, that of stealing clothing, etc., and who were brought from New York to this county on requisition papers, entered a plea of guilty. They will be sentenced later.

John Peterson, colored, of Westfield, indicted on a charge of assault and battery, pleaded not guilty. His trial was set down for Wednesday. John P. M. Joseph, of Cranford, indicted on charge of cruelty to a dog, being accused of shooting and maiming a canine, pleaded not guilty and his trial was set for Wednesday.

The annual meeting of the Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of New Jersey, will be held at Trenton on Wednesday, February 21, and at that time a district deputy grand chancellor for this district will be elected. Horace J. Martin, of Unity Lodge, No. 102, is a strong possibility.

Clock golf cups—Rushmore cup, presented by Townsend Rushmore; won by Miss M. Uhler; Maxwell cup, presented by Mrs. T. W. T. Maxwell; won by Miss A. Taylor; women's clock golf cup, presented by the club; won by Miss A. G. Ball; Labor Day clock golf cup, presented by the club; won by Mrs. N. P. Rogers; mixed foursome cups, subscription by women; won by Miss M. Van Boskerck and W. Lester Glenney; women's handicap cup, subscription by women; won by Mrs. N. P. Rogers.

Team matches—Men's team, W. Lester Glenney, captain—Plainfield Country Club, 13; Columbia University, 6. Plainfield Country Club, 15; Princeton, 12. Plainfield Country Club, 13; Yale, 12. Women's team, Miss Margaret Goddard, captain—Plainfield Country Club defeated Baltusrol and Essex County Country Club by default. Plainfield Country Club, 2; Morris County C. C., 7.

From the foregoing it will be seen that many members of the club have added to the interest of the play by presentation of various cups, and such gifts have been much appreciated.

The increased appropriation (commensurate with other clubs), for maintenance of the course, has enabled the playing conditions to be so improved that the greens, etc., have been kept in a uniform condition during all days of the week. The change from dirt to grass tees has done that takes several seasons to accomplish, but with the increased area to be put into commission next spring, it is hoped and expected that these will be more satisfactory than during the past season. During the year the second hole has been lengthened, and the fair green widened and improved; the fourth green removed to what was formerly swamp, and during the coming season this hole will have the fair green widened and improved; the fourteenth hole has been lengthened and early in the spring the green will be reset at the junction of Woodland and Rahway road; the fifteenth has also been lengthened, and the tee across the road will be used during the coming season. These changes have added all the length that is possible with the ground at our disposal at the present time, and though shorter than a championship course, it is expected that when the bunkers and sand traps now under way and contemplated are finished, that we will rank with other metropolitan courses.

The new clock golf green and approach to the automobile plaza has passed through a trying season, but it is expected that the former will be in a playable condition during the coming year. It is hoped that next season it will be possible to place clumps of shubbery at different points of the drives, and around the caddy house, thus adding to the pleasure of a large percentage of our membership, who only care for the club house and its attending features.

During the past year the interest in tennis has been greatly on the increase, and our six courts have not proved sufficient to accommodate the players of the club. This has been particularly the case when tournaments have been in progress. At such times the players not entered in competition have given way with commendable good nature, but it is not right to ask them to sacrifice altogether the best tennis days of the year, and these, naturally, are the ones selected for the tournaments. Sufficient space for three new courts remains unoccupied by the side of Woodland avenue, in a line with the two courts last built, and south of the club house. It is hoped that the funds at the command of the club will warrant the construction of at least two of these courts during the coming spring. During the past season the surroundings of the courts have been much improved by the erection of the summer house, the construction of stairs and a bluestone walk, and general grading and surfacing. The courts themselves were never in better condition than last year. To keep them in good order, however, considerable labor will be required.

The tennis season was opened on May 10 by an exhibition match between Holcombe Ward, the then champion of the United States, and Malcolm D. Whitman, a former champion, which was won by Mr. Whitman.

The mixed doubles tournament of the East Jersey Lawn Tennis Association, as in the preceding year, was played on our courts, beginning May 30th, and was won by Messrs. B. C. Edgar and L. Dunham, of the Ilderan Outing Club, Rahway. The singles championship of the association, played for at Jersey City in June, was won by H. J. Cochran for our club.

A system of team matches was inaugurated by two matches with the team of the Elizabeth Town and Country Club, one of which was won by our team, the other resulting in a tie.

The club championship in men's singles (played in September) was won by H. J. Cochran.

The club championship in women's singles (also played in September) was won by Miss Sarah E. Schuyler.

The winners of other club tournaments were as follows: Men's doubles, May 13, won by H. J. Cochran and T. M. Day, Jr.; women's handicap singles, June 15, won by Miss Elsie Burke; boys' singles (under fifteen years of age), June 27, won by Master James O. Fleming; girls' singles (under eighteen years of age), July 6, won by Miss Hope Ivins; junior mixed doubles (under eighteen years of age), September 5, won by Miss Edith Mellick and Master T. M. Day, 3d.

With this is enclosed an audited statement of the treasurer, which shows the affairs of the club to be in a prosperous condition, notwithstanding the large expenditures made necessary, not only by the creation of new additions to club house, but by reason of the advances in the cost of labor and material. This new work largely exceeded the original estimate, and further new work, unforeseen at the time when improvements were contemplated were deemed wise to complete; such expenditure makes it necessary to carry over a small floating debt, but during the coming year there will be no difficulty in liquidating the same.

Improvements to the club house have met with much favor and the interest in our organization in all its departments is certainly apparent, and there is reason to believe that the coming year will prove the success of the club assured.

Membership at the present time—Active members, 382; non-resident members, 38; associate, 101; junior associate, 266; honorary members, 3. (Signed) GEORGE P. MELLICK, President.

The trustees organized for the year immediately after the meeting. President Mellick, Vice-President Ackerman and Secretary Talkins were re-elected. J. M. Shellabarger was elected treasurer in Mr. Patterson's place. The committee chairmen were chosen as follows: Greens, E. T. Barrows; tennis, T. M. Day; golf, T. R. Van Boskerck; house, A. G. Timpson. The chairmen will announce the makeup of the committees some time next month.

NEW JERSEY'S RANGE BEST IN THE COUNTRY

KANSAS INSPECTOR GENERAL COMMENDS LOCATION.

William A. Pierce, inspector general of Kansas National Guard, in his report to the adjutant general of Kansas concerning the national trophy competition at Sea Girt, highly praises the state range in this State. In part his report follows:

"The Sea Girt range today is perhaps the most extensive and complete in this country. It has but one fault—the fire is directed toward the east, thus making the early morning and late afternoon light often poor and uncertain.

"The range has about 120 targets, all distances up to 1,000 yards, fully equipped, although not all of them can be used simultaneously.

"There are substantial permanent buildings, consisting of executive offices, arsenal, armory, quartermaster's stores and depot, stables, kitchens and a mess hall capable of caring for three regiments. An independent supply of artesian well water of the very best quality is piped to all parts of the camp from a high stand-pipe.

"The soil is of a loose, sandy character, very finely sodded, and it is ideal for the purposes of a camp ground; even during heavy rains it does not become muddy, and the progress of drills or rifle practice need never be long delayed by reason of the rainfall.

"A railroad passenger station is adjacent to the grounds, and a freight siding runs to the quartermaster's depot, 100 yards distant.

"The camp is easily accessible from all parts of the state, not more than two hours being required to reach it from any home station.

"Too much cannot be said of the healthful, exhilarating effect of a stay at this seaside camp. Sea bathing, sea food and the tonic of the sea breezes enable a man to remain on duty the entire day without the slightest sense of fatigue.

"Nowhere, nor under where higher scores can be made, but I know of none where pleasure, comfort and facilities of the contestant are equaled or approached.

"During the first week of my stay, the New Jersey guard were completing their first season's shooting, and each day from two to four companies assembled there for record and qualification.

"It is required of the guard in New Jersey that each company perform a fixed amount of rifle practice, and, in the event of failure to do so, the company will be mustered out.

"It is my opinion that there is no question as to the wisdom of this policy. It not only helps to fill the ranks, but compels the soldier to learn to do the thing that is necessary that he shall do well. This practice and record shooting is carried on under the active supervision of a large and competent corps of state inspectors of rifle practice, which the state of New Jersey generously provides.

"I desire to here express my appreciation of the thoughtful consideration and courtesies that were shown me by every officer of the national board and of the New Jersey State Rifle Association, both as your representative, and personally. Nothing was left undone that could have added to my comfort or pleasure. I shall always cherish the memory of the happy hours and the friends that I made at Sea Girt."

The Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will meet on Friday night.

AFTER LIQUOR SELLERS

WANT A REFORM

Miss Adams Suggests at Meeting That Traveling Libraries be Established for use at Penal Institutions.

The reports of alleged drunkenness at the Plainfield Industrial Home was the subject of discussion at a meeting of the Union county committee of the State Charities Aid Association held at the home of Mrs. Williamson in Elizabeth on Friday, and it was suggested that legal steps be taken to prosecute those who had sold liquor to the inmates and to adopt more stringent measures to prevent a re-occurrence of intoxication.

Rumors of such drunkenness had previously reached the committee and led to an investigation. It is the belief that liquor is either smuggled into the home, or, the inmates when they are allowed to visit town secure intoxicating drinks. It is quite likely that efforts will be made to ascertain who sold the liquor and to prosecute them.

It will also be suggested to those in charge of the Industrial Home that more stringent measures be adopted to prevent liquor from entering the home or the inmates from securing it when they get out.

Another interesting feature of the report presented at the meeting is the suggestion offered by Miss Emma L. Adams, librarian at the Plainfield Public Library, that inmates of penal institutions be allowed to have good books to read. As a means to this end she suggests that traveling libraries be established not only in the county, but the State, something on the plan of the Tabard Inn Library. The idea was kindly favorably impressed, and will probably consider the matter more fully in the future.

Mrs. Abram B. Wetmore, Mrs. Charles E. Ryder, Miss Emma L. Adams, Mrs. Dexter Tiffany, Henry B. Maxson and Hugh F. Fox, all of this city, attended the session.

Company K Inspection Postponed.

Owing to a mistake in orders, the expected inspection of Company K did not take place Saturday night. The postponement was a great disappointment to the militiamen as every member was in attendance and two left a sick bed in order to help the company secure 100 per cent. The regular drill was held and the inspection date will be announced later.

MISS REINHART A BRIDE

Popular Young Society Woman Becomes Mrs. Matthew Maury Corbin.

WEDDING AT GRACE

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart—Nuptial Ceremony a Brilliant One.

Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Joseph W. Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, and Matthew Maury Corbin, of Cincinnati, were married in Grace church at 8:30 Wednesday night, in the presence of a large gathering of society people from this city and many distant points. The affair was a brilliant one. The rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, officiated.

The bride's attendants included her sister, Mrs. John A. Thayer, of Charleston, W. Va., as matron of honor; Miss Madeline Ostermoor, of this city, as maid of honor; Molly Timpson and Mary Elizabeth Thayer, the latter a niece, as flower girls, and Edward Morris Van Buren, Jr., a nephew, as page.

Mr. Corbin's best man was W. Robinson Molinard, of Baltimore, and the ushers were Edward M. Van Buren, of this city; John A. Thayer, of Charleston, W. Va.; Hancock Griffin, John Livingston Heber Reginald Bishop, of New York, and Frank O. Reinhart, of this city, a brother of the bride.

The bride was gowned in white satin and chiffon cloth, trimmed with point lace. She wore a veil well and carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and white orchids. A beautiful adornment was a horseshoe of diamonds, the gift of the groom. The matron of honor's gown was of Irish lace, princess mode, and she carried white lilacs. The maid of honor wore a gown of pale blue crepe de chine, trimmed with duchess lace, and she carried pale pink roses. The flower girls were dressed in white silk with satin sashes and carried baskets of pale pink roses, while the page wore a white serge sailor suit.

While the guests were arriving, Mrs. William Frederick organist, rendered a varied programme of classical selections from well known composers. The full vested choir of the church, which took part in the ceremony, announced the arrival of the bridal party when it entered the edifice, singing "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden," as a processional. The choir entered by a side aisle from the choir room and met the bridal party at the front of the church and, leading the way through the main aisle, sang the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

Following, were the ushers, the maid or honor, the flower girls, page, the matron of honor and the bride's accompanied by her father, who gave her away in marriage. They were met by the groom and best man at the chancel, where the bethrothal service was performed. As the bride and groom approached the altar the solemnization of the marriage vow the choir sang "The Gloria." Following the ceremony, while the bridal party was leaving the church, the choir sang the Mendelssohn wedding march.

It was a green and white wedding and the church was lavishly decorated with these colors. About the chancel there was a profusion of azaleas, Southern smilax, narcissus and palms, while from the arches above were three white doves suspended by long white satin ribbon.

Following the ceremony, a large reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was thronged with guests. Mr. and Mrs. Corbin received in a bow window beneath a green bell studded with small incandescent lights. This bell was used at the weddings of the bride's mother and sister. The decorations at the house were chiefly green, smilax and a great many potted plants being used. The bow window in which Mr. and Mrs. Corbin received was decorated with smilax and encircling it was a row of incandescent lights. The same color decorations were used to garnish the table in the dining room, while the large reception hall and broad staircase were profusely decorated with smilax. During the reception music was furnished by the Hungarian orchestra from the Cafe Francis, New York.

The bride was the recipient of a large collection of gifts of great value, including everything about that one could wish for in silverware, goldware, cut glass, jewels, furniture and linen. One special gift was a large silver tray from the Oshkosh Club, of which the bride is a member, and the usual club monogram were inscribed thereon. Another gift was a handsome silver loving cup given to the groom by the officers who served with him in the First U. S. Engineers at Porto Rico during the Spanish-American War. Mr. Corbin's best man and two ushers, John Livingston and Heber Reginald Bishop, served with him in Porto Rico.

In the exchange of gifts among the members of the bridal party the bride gave the matron of honor and maid of honor necklaces of topaz and pearls, pearl pins to the flower girls and gold cuff buttons to the page. The groom, in addition to the horseshoe of diamonds presented to the bride, gave the ushers and best man golf cuff buttons bearing the initials of the bride and himself.

Late in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Corbin left for Florida, where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside in Cincinnati, where the groom holds an excellent position with the General Electric Company. The bride is well known here in society circles and has been a prominent figure in a number of social events, especially those of the Oshkosh Club, where she won high praise for her natural talent.

Mr. Corbin, although his home is in Cincinnati, is a native of Virginia, where he resided for some time. He owns a very valuable farm at Farleyvale, in King George county, twelve miles from Fredericksburg, Va. He has been very successful in the electric business and occupies a place of prominence socially both in Cincinnati and Virginia.

MEN DEMONSTRATE ABILITY AS COOKS

PREPARE AND SERVE DELICIOUS MEAL AT SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Under the auspices of the men of the Seventh-day Baptist congregation the sixth annual dinner and entertainment was held in the parlors of the church Wednesday. The men took entire charge of the dinner and programme and once more demonstrated their ability. The affair was a great success and the liberal patronage will net about $60 for the Women's Society for Christian Work, for whose benefit it was given.

A most excellent dinner was prepared and served by the men, the menu including all the good things from oysters on the half shell to chocolate and coffee. The menu card was unique. Opposite each course was an appropriate selection from some well known author. On the easnier's check was printed the following:

"If the waiter didn't punch the $10 amount it was probably an oversight." "Report any such inattention to the headwaiter, and he will relieve you of your valuables." "Don't forget to tip the waiter, and remember that the cooks have got to live."

The waiters were not forgotten, for nearly $12 was received in tips, and those who had dinner were very liberal in their orders. The dinner committee, comprising Frank J. Hubbard, chairman; William B. Whitford and Prof. J. B. Cottrell, had charge of the kitchen and, in the proper regimentals, were busy throughout the evening preparing the food to be served.

C. L. Ford was in charge of the dining room and his assistants, who acted as waiters, were Charles Neagle, Arthur Spicer, Rolla Williams, Nathan Wardner, Milton St. John, Cora S. Rogers, Clark Green, Robert Mitchell, Arthur L. Titsworth and Jerome Davis.

After the dinner was served the entertainment was enjoyed. David E. Titsworth had charge of the programme, which was arranged by Dr. Marcus L. Clawson, chairman of that committee.

The programme comprised organ solos by Arthur L. Titsworth, aleighthand by E. Warren Rankin, humorous selections by DeWitt Paxton, of New York, and violin selections by Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston. Every number was enjoyed and an encore given.

Another feature of the affair was a portrait gallery, where there was displayed about fifty pictures of well known members of the church taken early in life. They afforded much amusement to those present in comparing likenesses of the past with those of today.

THIEF GETS $50 IN FINDLAY'S SALOON

Saloonkeeper Alex Findlay, of East Second street, is minus $50 that he very sad well spare the usual stake from his barroom early Thursday morning. Only the money was taken.

Every night after closing time Findlay places about $50 in bills and coin in a box over the bar, for early morning change when his bartenders open up. Following the usual custom, the saloon man put $50 in the box Wednesday night, and went to bed.

Next morning box and money were gone. The lock on the rear door had been neatly cut out. The thief apparently knew all about the place and the change box custom, and went straight for the money. Neither liquor nor cigars was touched.

No Would-be Cops.

No applications for the vacancies on the police force have been received at headquarters. The department lays the reluctance of young men to apply to the scale of pay. It is too small to attract the class of men demanded for the work. Patrolmen get $60 a month the first year, $65 the second year, $70 the third, fourth and fifth years, and $75 monthly thereafter. That is the limit under the scale established in 1903. The sergeant only gets $1,000 a year and the chief $1,400.

TWO BAD COLORED BOYS

Pollard Twins, Hans and Howard, Brought Before the City Judge.

INCORRIGIBLE BULLIES

Among Other Things They Tripped Rev. Mr. Mooney's Son and Broke His Collar Bone—Supt. Maxson Testifies.

Hans Pollard and Howard Pollard, fifteen-year-old colored twins, were arrested Thursday afternoon on the Irving School grounds for throwing stones at the pupils and misbehaving generally. In court Friday testimony enough to take away the character of a dozen pairs of colored boys was produced against them, and they were put under a sixty-day sentence that will fall on them the very next time the police have any reason for locking them up.

According to the witnesses, who included Superintendent H. M. Maxson, the twins are very tough and spend most of their time bullying smaller boys without regard to color. One of the dozen schoolboys brought to court to appear against the prisoners testified that he saw one of the twins trip up the young son of the Rev. George Mooney, pastor of the Seventh Day church, a few days ago, and give him a fall that broke his collarbone.

Supt. Maxson declared the twins were incorrigible, and had been barred from the schools. He said they would be he couldn't entertain the idea of taking them back, and believed the school board would endorse his action. It appeared that the boys have been reported to the teachers a number of times for hitting and bullying pupils and that they invariably thumped the boys they thought were responsible for the complaints.

Judge Runyon gave the boys a scorching rebuke in passing sentence. He announced them that the sixty-day sentence would be imposed the first time they were brought before him again. The father of the twins made a speech at the court, but nobody could make out what he was trying to argue. The oration didn't figure in the disposition of the case.

ACCOMPLISHED MUSICIAN LOCATES IN PLAINFIELD.

G. C. M. Smith Returns from a Long Study in Germany.

George C. M. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Craig place, who recently returned from Europe, where, since August, 1901, he has been perfecting his musical education, has a very promising career before him in the musical world. During his absence he has attained great knowledge of the violin, piano and other instruments, while as a director he is considered a peer.

Mr. Smith was born in Plainfield November 27, 1883, and at the age of nine began taking violin lessons. His first public appearance was a year later. He was graduated from the North Plainfield High School in the Class of '01, and before going abroad in August, 1901, he took part in many local concerts.

While abroad he studied at the Royal Conservatory of Weimar, Germany, the seat of the Grand Duchy Saxon-Weimar-Eisenmach. Besides the violin and piano, Mr. Smith took up the harmony, theory (harmony), sight-singing, musical dictation, history, conducting, etc., under the following masters: Violin, Concert Master Rosel, Kammervirtuos, Kotcher and Uhlig; piano, Kammermusiker Saal; history, Kammermusiker Soda and Reik; theory and history, Music Director Rorich and Prof. Degner; sight-singing and conducting, Dr. Mullerhartung and Prof. E. W. Degner.

Mr. Smith played in the court orchestra after the second year at the conservatory under the royal conductors Krzyzanowski and Richard.

At the beginning of 1905 Mr. Smith was admitted to the Philharmonic Orchestra at Leipsic, after passing a most difficult examination. He was offered this position for the following season, but preferred to return to his home. After leaving the Philharmonic Orchestra he made an extended trip through Germany, Bohemia, France, Switzerland and Italy, at the same time making a special study of the music of the different countries.

Mr. Smith will now remain in Plainfield if sufficient interest is shown in the course of studies to be taught. He intends to teach violin, piano and bassoon, as well as theory (harmony), sight-singing, musical dictation and history.

Bequeathed $11,000 by Uncle.

By the death of an uncle in Sweden, Mrs. Jeremiah Cash, of South avenue, has inherited $11,000. She has been apprised of the fact by the executors of the estate and her interests are being looked after by the Swedish consul at New York.

At Charity Ball.

Among the guests at the Charity ball given Thursday night at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, were Burritt H. Shepard, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard, of "The Gables," Fanwood, and Edward R. Finch, of New York, whose parents reside on Park avenue, this city.

SURPRISING STATISTICS IN THE SCHOOL REPORT

SUPT. BAXTER'S ANNUAL STATEMENT IS OF GENERAL INTEREST.

The forthcoming annual report of Charles J. Baxter, State superintendent of public instruction, contains some surprising statistics of the magnitude of the public school interest. They will probably prove a revelation to all except the comparatively few people who study these statistics intelligently in the annual reports.

For the fiscal year 1904-5 the total amount of money for public school purposes aggregated $9,759,602.33. It came from the following sources: Amount appropriated from the State fund, $1,211,679.13; amount appropriated from income of State school fund (riparian leases), $200,000; State school tax, $1,801,911.92; amount raised by district school tax, $6,546,011.28.

The last item will cause many people to open their eyes in astonishment. The general supposition has been that the free public school system of New Jersey derived its chief income from the 2½ mills State school tax. Until a few years ago this tax was collected directly out of the taxpayers, but thirty-five per cent. of this amount is now paid yearly out of the surplus in the treasury, under the system inaugurated by Governor Stokes when he was Senator from Cumberland. The State tax, including the thirty-five per cent. appropriation, last year amounted to $3,000,000, which is less than one-third the total amount expended in the support of the public schools. This is supplemented by local taxes for the support of the schools levied by the several school districts, aggregating last year $6,546,011.28. The total amount raised for public schools in New Jersey is nearly one per cent. upon the ratables.

Of this total $5,208,838.19 last year went for teachers' salaries; $2,066,635.15 for building, enlarging and repairing schoolhouses, and $435,427.75 for repairs and apparatus. There are 9,157 teachers in the State, of whom 8,038 are females. The average salary of the teachers is $568.83, being an increase of $5.58 over the preceding year. The total value of public school property in the State is $22,094,076, and the average value of the 1,986 school buildings is $11,592 each. The total number of pupils enrolled is 277,435, an increase of 14,584 over the year before.

Two items of disbursement that will puzzle some people are these: For transportation of pupils $9,701.07, and for tuition of pupils in adjoining districts, $31,751.99. The school laws of New Jersey, as Superintendent Baxter explains in a circular sent out to school officers this week, provide that school facilities must be provided for every child of school age in the State. If the child lives more than two miles from the town district it must be sent to the nearest school in another district, and its transportation and tuition expenses must be paid out of the school moneys in the district where the child resides. The attorney general has given Mr. Baxter an opinion unreservedly indorsing his views to this effect, as set forth in his circular.

TRINITY MISSION BAND CHOOSES ITS OFFICERS

REPORTS FOR YEAR SHOW ENCOURAGING CONDITION OF AFFAIRS.

Interesting reports and the election of officers for the coming year were features of the ninth anniversary meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church held Friday afternoon. There was a good attendance and much enthusiasm was shown in the work.

The secretary submitted a brief report of the work of all the committees, showing that each one has been active. The present membership is sixty-five, an increase of seventeen during the year. The treasurer reported a balance of $213. This will be divided between the foreign and domestic boards of missions of the Reformed church, as is the custom.

These officers were elected for the year: President, Miss Lillian A. Force; vice-president, Miss Mabel Wilson; recording secretary, Miss Hazel Martin; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Pierson. The committees will be announced later.

After the transaction of business there was a roll call and each member responded to her name by reading some item of missionary news either from the home or foreign field. This was a helpful feature of the meeting.

A preacher was saying the other day, "I once had in my Sunday-school a young urchin from a poor neighborhood. He did his best to bring recruits, and one afternoon I said to him, 'Billy, don't you think you could induce one or two other boys to come to Sunday-school?' Billy answered: 'Well, sir, I could bring one, but all the other fellers in our alley can lick me."—London News.

TAXING AT HALF VALUE

Local Assessors Make Frank Admission Before the State Board of Taxes.

THE CUSTOM, NOT LAW

H. C. VanEmburgh, H. C. Runyon, J. A. Hubbard and C. H. Hand All Admit Following Precedent of 50 Per Cent.

H. C. Van Emburgh, Charles H. Hand, H. C. Runyon and J. A. Hubbard, of the Plainfield Board of Assessors, appeared before the State Board of Equalization of Taxes at Elizabeth Thursday, together with representatives from all parts of Union county, and explained the method of taxation in this city. The hearing was given for the purpose of investigating the methods adopted by the various boards of assessors in the county in the assessment of real and personal property, and to ascertain in what particular the laws are defective or are improperly or negligently administered.

When Plainfield was reached, after a call of several rural taxing districts where true value means anything from 40 to 60 per cent., Harry C. Van Emburgh responded for the First ward. He openly declared that the rate of assessment was about 50 per cent., as did Charles Hand, assessor for the Second ward. Mr. Hand said that precedent has fixed 50 per cent. as true value for his ward, and that he believed that Granford and Summit were assessed at only 35 per cent. He said that $200,000 of personal property ought to be $800,000, but that he would not raise the assessment unless the rest of the county did likewise.

J. A. Hubbard is assessor of the Third ward. When the 50 per cent. proposition was reached Charles C. Black asked Mr. Hubbard how an assessor could reconcile a 50 per cent. assessment with an oath to assess at full value, and if such action was not a malfeasance.

Mr. Hubbard, who has been a taxing officer for thirty years, said that upon his entrance into office the city attorney of Plainfield had said that an assessor should not assess at over 40 per cent., and that he was the "victim of custom," without attempt to reconcile glaring effects. Harry C. Runyon, of the Fourth ward, also assessed at 50 per cent.

The perfectly frank confessions of the Plainfield assessors that they had not obeyed the spirit or letter of the law led ex-Judge Armstrong, a brother of T. S. Armstrong, of this city, to say that the tacit agreement of all county assessors to assess at 50 per cent. of true value cannot excuse any assessor for participating in such an agreement.

It was the judge's personal view that if the assessor of any district knew of the violation of the law the board of equalization on appeal would immediately right the wrong.

Altogether, it is a field day for the board, and the assessors have rarely had such open confessions made that there has been such complete failure to obey the law.

NEW HOUSE NUMBERS ON BOROUGH STREETS

FOR MODERN METHOD PROVIDED FOR AT COUNCIL'S MEETING.

Mayor Smalley introduced the subject of renumbering properties on borough streets at Friday evening's meeting of the Common Council, and there is a possibility that the method in use in the city will be adopted. The Mayor informed the councilmen that he had received numerous complaints of the system and that it is one that has been discarded by nearly all municipalities. He introduced a resolution that the borough clerk receive bids from engineers for renumbering by the block instead of beginning at one end continuing until the end of the street is reached. For this purpose a new map must be prepared and residents will have to be informed of the change.

In speaking of the numbers as they exist at present, the Mayor said that repetitions were frequent on numerous streets, but aside from this it is now impossible to direct strangers and give them an adequate conception of how far they must walk to reach a certain number. In Plainfield this an easy matter and the crudeness of the borough's way has often been commented upon. Definite action will be taken as soon as the cost of preparing the maps can be learned.

Cannot Secure Permits.

Because the governing bodies in the different municipalities between Plainfield and Elizabeth refuse to give the Public Service Corporation permits to locate "Y's" at certain points the company is unable to operate any number of single-end motor cars on the main line. At present only one car of this type is now being used. An effort will be made to secure the necessary permit so that other cars may be run. They are considered a great improvement over the old style cars.

SENATOR COLBY WILL SPEAK HERE ON MARCH 1

GENUINE ENTHUSIASM AT CHAMBER CONCERT.

Vladimir McIntyre and Gwilym Miles Delight Audience.

The Casino was filled Thursday on the occasion of the second of the McIntyre chamber concerts. Vladimir Dubinsky, cellist, who was so enthusiastically received at the first concert last December, appeared against as a soloist, and deepened the splendid impression which he had made on the music-lovers of Plainfield. The singer last evening was the Welsh baritone, Gwilym Miles, who stirred the audience to real enthusiasm. His singing of "Danny Deever" and "It Is Enough" was very dramatic; and the little Irish song which he sang as an encore was charmingly done.

It is gratifying to see the response with which Mr. McIntyre's concerts are meeting. He has unaccompaniedly set the very best as his standard, both as regards performers and programme. If these concerts become a fixture, as it is hoped that they may, they will be not only the source of great enjoyment, but also of great educative value to the musicloyers of this city. For the next concert, the last of the present series, which will be given at the Casino, March 22, it is likely that Mr. McIntyre, himself will be heard as a soloist. Last night's programme was as follows:

Beethoven—Sonata in A for 'cello and piano, Allegro, Scherro, Adagio-Allegro Vivace; Tschaikowsky—"Pilgrim's Song;" Foote—"On the Way to Kew;" Damrosch, "Danny Deever;" Mendelssohn—"Violin Concerto;" Andante; Finale; Mendelssohn—Aria, "It is Enough," from "Elijah," (with 'cello obligato arranged by Mr. Dubinsky); Dvorak—Trio, Op. 90.

MISS EMMA L. WOLFE A FEBRUARY BRIDE.

She Becomes Mrs. Peter V. Stroble at Quiet Ceremony.

Miss Emma Louise Wolfe, daughter of Amada Wolfe, of West End avenue, was quietly married Thursday to Peter V. Stroble, of Easton, Pa. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, performed the ceremony at the bride's home in the presence of a small gathering of immediate relatives and intimate friends.

Miss Wolfe was unattended and was gowned in a pretty creation of white Brussels net over white silk, trimmed with point lace. She wore a large picture hat and carried a shower bouquet of roses. Her traveling gown was of gray broad cloth.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at which Mr. and Mrs. Stroble were congratulated by the gathering and a supper was served. The bride and groom left later for a trip through the New England States and on returning will make their home at Easton, the former being in charge of the New Jersey Central. Mrs. Stroble is a trained nurse and has been practicing her profession in Plainfield for several years. Both she and her husband are popular among a large circle of acquaintances as attested by numerous handsome presents which they received.

MR. ANTHONY FELT HE WAS INTRUDED UPON.

So He Kicked Up a Fuss at the Bowser Home.

James Anthony and Victor Bowser, colored, arrested Thursday night for fighting, were arraigned in the city court this morning. The testimony showed that Anthony was at fault and it cost him $5 to get away. Sentence was suspended on Bowser.

The quarrel took place in Bowser's house. Mrs. Bowser testified that the trouble began when she and her husband refused to drink whiskey and port wine that Anthony had brought with him.

"I'm mad. It seems to me I've been intruded upon," recounted Mrs. Bowser. "'How have you been intruded on, Jim,' I asked, and he said, 'Do you want to know? Well, I don't give a ——— for you or anybody like you, ———.'"

"That's the way he was intruded on, was it?" asked the judge, and the courtroom crowd laughed.

The advance sale of seats for the approaching engagement of "The School Girl" at the New Plainfield theatre on Monday, February 12, matinee and night, indicates two of the largest and most fashionable audiences of the season. Not in years has a musical attraction come so highly spoken of, and in view of the fact that the entire original production will be presented here just as it was for four hundred nights in London and 150 nights in New York City, there is every reason to believe that the event will be a memorable one in local theatricals. The music of "The School Girl" is by Leslie Stuart, the famous composer of "Florodora," and possesses all the fragrance and freshness and the same elusive form of orchestral coloring that characterized the latter great success.

GOV. STOKES MAY COME

Foe of Political Corruption is to be Guest of Honor at The American Banquet.

Governor Invited — Assemblyman Tucker to Be Another Speaker —No Politics in the Affair.

Senator Everett Colby will be the principal speaker at the Junior American banquet, to be held at the Casino on Thursday night, March 1. This was announced Thursday by the joint committee from Franklin and Benevolent councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., under whose auspices it will be held. It is also expected that Governor Stokes will attend, while acceptances have been received from Assemblyman Everard Tucker and the State Council officers of the order.

In reply to the invitation asking him to speak at the banquet the committee received this letter from Senator Colby:

"Newark, N. J., Jan. 31, 1906.

"My Dear Sirs:—I am in receipt of your very kind letter of January 27, and accept with much pleasure the invitation to speak at the Jr. O. U. A. M. banquet at Plainfield on March 1.

"Very truly yours,

"EVERETT COLBY."

The committee in charge of the banquet states that politics are not to play any part in the affair; that the efforts to bring the Senator here were begun long before the Board of Trade planned its banquet. It is also stated that only Mr. Colby, Governor Stokes and all others invited to speak there are members of the order and that it is for the purpose of arousing greater enthusiasm among the members that the event is planned. It is proposed to make it an annual gathering and have prominent speakers present.

About fifty per cent. of the tickets now in the hands of the committee will be offered the public outside of the order, and the price has been fixed at $2 each. They can be secured from A. D. Honeyman, chairman, or any of the following members of the committee: Harry C. Runyon, secretary; T. E. Currin, Jr., treasurer; Ephraim Compton, Alfred A. Treachant and John G. Bicknell.

Senator Colby will be asked to select his own subject for the occasion and he will undoubtedly talk about something of especial interest to the order, as well as other matters in general. He will inform the committee within a short time as to his subject. The toastmaster has not yet been decided upon, but his name will be announced in a few days. While Governor Stokes has not signified his intention of being present, the committee hope for a favorable reply to the invitation.

While arrangements were being made with Senator Colby to come here, he was asked whether the recent action of the Board of Trade would influence him in his decision. He replied that it would not, that as regards that affair he was not asked, neither did he ask to speak at the Board of Trade banquet, and he could not understand why the mention of his name as a speaker for that occasion should have caused such a discussion. Mr. Colby is a member of the Orange Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and takes a lively interest in its affairs.

Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday at Elizabeth by the Granite Block Manufacturing Company, of Plainfield, formed for the purpose of manufacturing granite and cement blocks. The company has issued 12,500 shares at $10 each, the capital stock being $125,000. The incorporators are Francis M. Bacon, of Plainfield, Charles E. Lockwood, of East Orange, and Roscoe H. Sanborn, of Elizabeth.

The company's plant is located at one end of the old lumber yard of DeWitt C. Ivins, where it is proposed to carry on this business on an extensive scale.

Will Consider Religious Life.

For the purpose of meeting and conferring with Fred B. Smith concerning the religious life and work of the local Y. M. C. A., a dinner will be held at the association building on Friday night, February 9, at 6:30 o'clock. Mr. Smith is the International Secretary for Religious Work of the Y. M. C. A. and has recently returned from a trip to England, India and Australia, which was made in the interest of the religious work of the association. In the large cities of these countries he was greeted by great and enthusiastic audiences of men. A nominal fee will be charged per plate for the dinner and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

DISCUSS STREET PAVING

Board of Trade's Delegate to Confer With Councilmanic Committee as to Cost.

NO DISTRICT COURT

Mr. Coriell Says Other Improvements Are Needed More—Mr. Woolston Denies Colby Was "Turned Down."

In the regular order of business at Thursday's meeting of the Board of Trade, the subject of permanent pavements and arc lights was again taken up and the committees having the matter in charge announced that additional data was being secured. Former Sheriff B. F. Coriell, who had, been instructed to investigate the advisability of establishing a district court in Plainfield, detailed the cost of the innovation. It would amount, he said, at least to $2,500, this figure including the judge's salary of $1,200 and a clerk's at $600. The revenue would be about $800 and the remainder would have to be borne by the taxpayers. In the opinion of Mr. Coriell, the court would be a good thing but there were other improvements that the city needed more, specifying permanent pavements and are lights. These, he said, the people would gladly welcome and do their share toward securing them.

In a discussion of the pavement subject, the question of cost was also brought up and Secretary Frank H. Smith, Mr. Coriell and A. J. Gavett were instructed to confer with the public affairs committee to ascertain what the increase would be over the present amount expended for the purpose.

President Woolston reported on the inundation of the Perrin Freres Company property by Green brook and stated that he had consulted with Councilman Buxton about the matter but as yet they had arrived at no practicable plan to remedy the trouble.

Formal denial that Senator Everett Colby had been "turned down" in the selection of speakers for the recent visit of the Trade Fleet was made by President A. V. Woolston, who said that he took the opportunity in order to clear up the existing belief in the minds of the people. Mr. Colby's name, he alleged, was not once discussed at a full committee meeting and the talk that had arisen led many to believe that the board had had a dispute over the speakers.

Eugene M. Laing, chairman of the dinner committee, made a complete report of the affair and expressed the opinion that all who had attended had been fully satisfied with the programme. The report was accepted and the committee was discharged with thanks.

The next meeting of the board will be held on March 1 and for that occasion former Mayor William L. Saunders, Westfield, and Joseph O. Osgood, chief engineer of the Jersey Central and designer of the new Newark bay bridge, have been secured to make addresses. Messrs. Coriell, VanAradale and Woodruff were appointed a committee to make special arrangements for this gathering.

Because of their inability to attend the meetings, J. P. Emmons and Edward Kapp resigned as members of the board and the following new members were elected: Charles H. Lyman, C. C. Westcott, H. G. Black, Moses Roth, Marchand Brothers, A. D. Edgar, B. J. Schreiner, Senator E. R. Ackerman, John W. Murray, Jr., former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Walter Apgar, W. F. Arnold, Councilman Herbert Buxton, Christian Gloekler and H. A. Todd.

175 COLLEGE MEN TO BE AT THE SMOKER.

Thus far 175 college men have accepted the invitation to attend the smoker which is to be held at the Casino on Friday, February 9, and the committee is gratified with the response. There are still about twenty-five men who have not sent their money, and once more the committee urges that they do so. Prompt ness in this respect will enable the committee to determine exactly how many to provide for. Replies may be sent to Owen H. Fleming, of Park avenue.

All arrangements are complete for the entertainment at the smoker. Plenty of good vocal and instrumental music is assured, also speakers, while the dinner and its accompaniment will be all that one could desire. With representatives from so many different colleges, this feature alone will insure of good time and afford an opportunity for all to become better acquainted with each other.

Co. K. Banquet.

Although not yet decided, it is likely that the annual dinner of Co. K. to be held in February, will be at Trucil Inn. The committee in charge will meet soon to complete the details for the banquet and announce the names of the speakers.

Visitor From Cuba.

Mrs. Arthur Lee, of Santiago, Cuba, accompanied by her daughter, is spending several weeks in this city. They are staying with friends.

LITERARY NOTES.

The February Atlantic presents an unusual variety of timely articles. Nathaniel S. Shaler, the veteran geologist and man of letters, contributes a notable paper upon Exploration, setting forth something of the history of exploration in the past and pointing out its present status as a science. The paper is at once very informing and uncommonly picturesque. William Everett contributes a searching study of the present status and effectiveness of te United States Senate. There is a helpful article upon Industrial Securities, by Arthur Lowndes, by Charles A. Conant, treasurer of the Morton Trust Company. Jesse W. Weik has an able paper upon the independent telephone movement. There is an interesting summary of the important events of the year in a Letter from Mexico by Frederic R. Guernsey, editor of the Mexican Herold. Among the literary and historical papers especially notable are the first of Andrew D. White's remarkable historical studies of the statesmanship of Turgot; Plaisted Now and Then, by W. J. Henderson; and Eliana: the Latest Windfall, by W. C. Hazlitt, which contains an interesting set of letters of Charles Lamb, which have never before been in print. There are some excellent stories by such writers as Maarten Maartens, Latta Griswold, and Henry A. Beers, and poetry by Henry van Dyke and Fannie S. Davis.

In the matter of raw materials, such as building stones, if a builder or owner anywhere in Germany discovers a stone which seems valuable, he can send this to the laboratory. It will there be tested, with a large scale. One of the most interesting machines used in thte whole establishment is an enormous freezing-machine, by which large stones may be frozen and thawed many times in the course of a day, thus subjecting them all the year and tear in a few days which they would receive from fifty years of weathering. In a similar way, machines have been invented for the testing of silks and textiles, of cotton thread, for breaking great beams of iron and steel to determine their strength and hardness and physical properties which make them valuable in manufacture or in the arts. An immense laboratory has been built up for experimenting and the testing of building stones and earths of various kinds. Chemistry has been used in the most skillful manner to solve the problems of industry and to deal with all the complicated processes which enter into manufacture. The aim has been, on the whole, to establish an institution in which a body of experts familiar with the facilities and the literature of modern science shall be ready to turn themselves at any time to the solution of any practical problem which the inventor, the manufacturer, the metal-worker, the farmer, or the builder might bring to them.—From "How Science Helps Industry in Germany," by Henry S. Pritchett, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for February.

The Popular Science Monthly for February contains the following articles: "The Passing of China's Ancient System of Literary Examinations," by Professor Charles Keyser Edmunds; "The Lapses of Speech," by Professor Edwin W. Bowen; "Recent Advances in Meteorology and Meteorological Service in Japan," by Dr. S. Tetsu Tamura; "With the British Association in South Africa," by Professor. Ernest W. Brown; "Some Recent Tendencies in Mathematics," by Professor G. A. Miller; "The Wealth of the Commonwealth, its Consumption and Conservation," by Dr. A. C. Lane; "The Honor System in American Colleges," by Professor W. Le Conte Stevens; "The Work of the Department of Agrimulture under Professor Wilson;" "The New Orleans Meeting of the American Association of the Advancement of Science."

MOUNTAIN CAMPS PLAINFIELDERS' IDEA

OUTING MINUS "ROUGHING IT" DURING SUMMER MONTHS.

For the purpose of providing facilities for camping out on the mountains with the usual "roughing it" conditions eliminated, a company is being formed under the name of "Ye Olde Mountain Camp Company." The promoters of the idea are William Jeffery and Francis E. Bodin. They propose that the camp shall embrace as many home comforts as possible consistent with ten accommodations, and the arrangements include many new ideas.

Mr. Bodin was formerly quartermaster of Co. K., 13th Heavy Artillery, N. G. N. Y., and has spent some time studying camp life from a hygenic standpoint. Some of his ideas are now being used in the Government service and these will be adopted for the summer camp to be located at Berkeley Heights.

New army wall tents will be used, providing for individuals and families, and will be so arranged that each party will have his or her own private quarters with sufficient land to plant a garden, or use in whatever manner the patron desires. A competent commissary will devote his time to the cuisine and plenty of good food will be provided. Numerous forms of amusements and games will be provided and many novelties are being planned.

WILL OPPOSE BOROUGH FORMATION FOR A YEAR

PISCATAWAY CITIZENS WOULD HOLD SOUTH PLAINFIELDERS TO ACCOUNT.

Citizens of New Market and other parts of Piscataway township who are not heartily in favor of the South Plainfield borough movement met at Thornton's Hotel, New Market, Thursday afternoon to discuss the project. Between fifty and sixty representative men were present. More attention was given to the veiled charges of graft in the township government, made by the South Plainfield committee in a published communication Wednesday, than to the question of separation. The statements made by the South Plainfielders in that communication have aroused indignation in New Market and the surrounding sections, and the sentiment of those at the hotel Thursday spiritedly accepted the challenge thrown out by the borough boomers.

There was not much set speaking at the meeting—more of general discussion of a crossfire nature than of oration. Several brief speeches were made by such citizens among those who spoke most pointedly being former Assessor Kelly and Silas D. Drake. It was the consensus of opinion that South Plainfield could get out of the township any time it wanted without any detriment to the rest of the township sections, if the secession were "decently accomplished." It was felt, however, that the South Plainfielders had made statements that could not be allowed to rest unchallenged. In that connection the South Plainfield committee, referred to above, the threat was made that if separation was not accomplished this winter the South Plainfielders would work "to a man" to have the township form of government thirteen years past investigated. The new borough would start off, the communication said in another place, "with honest officeholders and an honest administration."

The meeting agreed that the South Plainfielders must be compelled to make their insinuations good or retract as completely and publicly as they had presented them. It was unanimously voted that a committee be sent before the Legislature to ask the borough bill comes up for consideration, to urge that action on the separation be deferred for a year. If the separation is halted, the anti-South Plainfielders point out, the borough boomers must make good their treat or stand convicted of malicious misrepresentation.

The legislative committee is composed of S. D. Drake, C. E. Kelly, E. S. Veghte, Lewis D. Walker and William Fitz Randolph. The meeting was presided over by George Bunting, and Charles Day acted as secretary.

The reason which induced the people of New York State to vote in favor of the barge canal was that New York State needed it. No state or nation ever had reason to regret such an act as this.—Syracuse Post Standard (Rep.).

SEWER SYSTEM AGITATION

Mayor Smalley Hammers Away in His Advocacy of Needed Improvement.

WANTS EARLY ACTION

Borough Executive Suggests That Board of Health Get to Work on Proposition—Councilmanic Routine.

That the borough officials are determined to bring the question of a sewer system before the people was evidenced Friday night, when Mayor Smalley requested former Recorder Thomas Doud, recently elected a member of the Board of Health, to have that body take action as soon as possible. Mr. Doud was in attendance at the Council session and the Mayor directed his remarks principally to him.

"The installation of a proper system is one that will have to be decided upon in the very near future," the executive said, "and the sooner it is done the better. The Board of Health can do a great deal in having the subject brought up formally, and I trust that the members will see their way clear to appoint a committee empowered to confer with representatives of the Council and to act accordingly. This matter cannot be brought to a head any too soon."

In the regular order of business, Councilman Lee offered a resolution that the borough collector be authorized to write off as uncollectable prior to 1903 that do not appear collectible. This matter was advised by E. L. Suffern & Co., the experts who recently audited the borough's books. There are numerous small amounts that have been carried along from year to year and make a great deal of unnecessary work. The idea is to put them in a separate account and keep a record for future reference. The resolution was carried.

Alex. F. Stiglitz, William C. Smith and others petitioned the Council to accept Allen place and residents of upper Duer street asked for an electric light on that thoroughfare 200 feet north of Greenbrook road. Both matters were referred to the street committee. The N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Company was granted permission to lay a conduit 600 feet long in Rockview terrace and William H. Daley was appointed a call-man in the Company No. 1.

The mayor remarked that at the next regular meeting of the Council, petitions would be presented asking for the opening of Watchung avenue from Codington avenue to the foot of the mountain and for the widening of Somerset street from Jackson avenue to Johnson's drive. He spoke favorably of both and expressed the wish that the councilmen would see fit to carry out these improvements.

SALES AND RENTALS BY E. M. FRENCH AGENCY.

Realty Deals of Importance Reported for January.

During the month a number of fine dwelling properties have been sold and rented through the agency of Elston M. French.

The property on East Front street adjoining the Hyde and Randolph estates was recently purchased by Edward H. Worzel, a wealthy resident of Brooklyn, who will remove to this city after making some extensive alterations on his now home. Mr. Wetzel's property is particularly attractive on account of the magnificent park of trees on its southerly side and picturesque Green brook in the rear.

Another deal is the sale for a large consideration of the lot of land on the use southerly corner of West Seventh street and Madison avenue to Henry B. Coombe, at present residing on Madison avenue. Mr. Coombe expects to erect a handsome home on the tract in the near future.

George O. Earhart, of New York City, has purchased a large tract of land on Rahway road, near Prospect avenue, formerly owned by Robert B. Vail, of Rahway. It is the intention of the new owner to improve the property in the spring.

The E. McConnell, a New York banker, has rented the large dwelling located at 923 Woodland avenue formerly occupied by W. W. Davenport. Mr. McConnell will take possession of his new home on February 1.

The Lyall Endress' property on Plainfield avenue, adjoining Robert H. McCutchen's home, has also been rented on a long lease to Frank H. Lewin, of Brooklyn, who will take possession on March 1. The property comprises ten acres of cultivated land and is one of the prettiest places on the outskirts of this city.

Mr. French states that the demand for modern houses to rent is greater than the supply at present.

"The Advent of "Under Southern Skies" in this city should be a matter of much import to local theatregoers. The theme of the story is intensely interesting and the comedy is delightful. The acting company is especially large, numbering twenty-seven people, and the production is carried intact. "Under Southern Skies" is by Lottie Blair Parker, whose "Way Down East" is well known to Plainfield amusement seekers. It will be at the New Plainfield theatre Friday night, February 16.

NEW FIRE ALARM SYSTEM

Borough May Substitute Compressed Air Whistle For Antiquated Bell.

CHANGE IS NECESSARY

Report of Electrician Filed With North Plainfield Council—Action to be Taken Shortly.

Following a statement made by Mayor Smalley recently that North Plainfield's fire alarm system is in need of extensive repairs or else an entire change, the latter preferred, the following report in regard to the matter was submitted to the councilmen by Borough Electrician A. V. Searing Friday night:

"This report will, of necessity, be very short as I have not had time to complete the investigations regarding certain parts of the fire alarm system.

"It has been suggested that a compressed air whistle be placed on the rear of the fire house to take the place of the present large bell. The bell, however, I believe is worn so badly and will soon be very unsafe; the wood work also needs attention as some of the boards are decayed. I have not found out the cost of the above-mentioned change, but if a whistle could be maintained at a reasonable expense, I believe it would be a great improvement over our present public alarm.

"*Charles W. Runyon, of the tele*phone company, made me a verbal proposition that they will supply current to operate our fire alarm system for $100 per year. This, as near as I could find out, is about $20 or $40 less than is paid for battery supplies now, and would insure a steady source of power.

"On inspecting the line I find it in need of a general overhauling, particularly the portion west of Somerset street, where a number of new wire is needed, as, in many places, the insulation is entirely gone. In fact the line is in such a condition that Mr. Runyon said that they were unwilling to connect to it until it was put in better shape.

"There are some minor changes underway which, when completed, will add to the efficiency and safety of the system and building. This work will be reported on at a later date.

"The present equipment consists of the following: One indicator and gong, one clock for ringing time signals at 7 a. m. and 6 p. m.; one bell alarm; four house tappers; fourteen street boxes and about eight miles of line, all operated by sixty cells of gravity battery.

"Respectfully submitted,

"A. V. SEARING, JR."

This was the first report that has been received from a borough electrician in a long time and the fact was commented upon by Mr. Lee. The suggestions mentioned were discussed informally and afterward the report was referred to the fire committee for action. There is but little doubt as to a change as the present system has not been giving satisfaction.

MR. SMITH'S RULES VETOED BY COUNCIL

MAYOR SAYS BOROUGH FIRE DEPARTMENT NOT IN NEED OF "SYSTEM."

Edward P. T. Smith, who took his seat as a member of the borough Council the first of the year, received a jolt from his older colleagues when he introduced a resolution Friday. It called for a set of house rules to be applied to the fire department and embraced some clauses that brought vigorous protest from Mr. Lee and others.

They specified what time the regular men should go home to meals, when and how the horses should be fed, how long they should be exercised, when apparatus should be cleaned and what time the house should be shut up for the night. Mr. Lee asserted that such rules were trivial and superfluous, as the men were fully aware as to when the horses should be fed and knew as well as anyone else the time to clean apparatus when it needed it. Mr. Van Arsdale seconded his remarks and Mayor Smalley expressed the opinion that he didn't see any need of introducing such matters, as the regular men had been doing their duty all along.

The framer of the rules insisted on their adoption on the ground of the need of "system," but no one rallied to his support. Mr. Lee asked that the resolution be placed on the table in order to give "the new member" a chance to look up the borough ordinance already covering the daily routine at fire headquarters. Mr. Smith submitted to the inevitable, and there is a possibility that "system" of the kind he sought will be lacking for some time to come.

TRAIN STRIKES A TRUCK

Easton Flyer All But Wrecked in Accident at Rock Avenue Grade Crossing.

HORSES BARELY ESCAPE

Vehicle Loaded With Lumber Had Broken Down on Tracks—Engineer Signalled but Unable to Stop.

A heavily loaded lumber truck belonging to the J. D. Lolzeaux Company broke down as it was being driven across the Jersey Central tracks at Rock avenue Saturday, directly in the path of the Easton flyer due in this city at 9:59. Men in the vicinity sought to signal the engineer, and though he perceived the obstruction and applied the emergency brakes, he was unable to stop and struck the load with terrific force. Walter Pallas, the driver, had leaped from his seat the instant he saw the horses could not pull the wagon off and unhocked the traces. The animals were drawn to one side just in time to escape getting killed.

The load consisted of 3,000 feet of boards and these were hurled in every direction. Several small parts on the locomotive and a step on a passenger car were torn off, otherwise the train escaped injury. Several of the largest timbers dropped directly beneath the wheels and then raised the cars directly off the track, but they dropped back in their places. To many who witnessed the crash it seemed miraculous that a wreck did not result. The train ran ahead several hundred feet after striking and was delayed fifteen minutes while the crew made sure that everything was in shape to proceed.

The Louizeaux Company's West End yard is located at Front street and Rock avenue, where the only grade crossing in the city exists. Pallas started to take the load of lumber south Rock avenue and ahead in passing over the rails caused the front axle of the wagon to break in two. The wheels were in such a position that the horses were unable to pull them out, and it would have taken an hour to remove the obstruction. Express trains pass this point at almost a mile a minute, and the Easton flyer was at the Dunellen yards when the break occurred, consequently it was impossible to warn the engineer in time.

HE SEES A BOOM IN EAST END REALTY

R. FRENCH SAYS ACTIVE OPERATIONS WILL START IN THE SPRING.

Active real estate operations will be carried on this spring in the East End by the Highland Park Realty Company, which has recently bought the Cole farm, extending from East Front street nearly to the Central Railroad and just above Leland avenue. The tract consists of seventy acres of cleared land. The Highland Park Realty Company, of which Elston M. French is president, is composed of Plainfield men, who are using every effort to make this part of the town a first class residential district.

While other sections of the town have hitherto been given attention by the city government, Mr. French argues it is now time for improvements in the east end of the First ward, which is rapidly increasing in population and new buildings.

Mr. French says: "The Highland Park Realty Company intends spending a large sum of money opening several new streets and also building a number of new houses during the year, and this active work on their part should be encouraged by the city's hearty co-operation. While the company has only had charge of this tract for a little over a month, nearly forty lots have already been sold; this being a good indication of the desirability of the tract. Nearly all the lots are situate on a terrace 10 feet to five feet above the street levels, and are thirty to forty feet higher than ground in the center of Plainfield. All lots sold are subject to restrictions, so that no spite houses, stores or factories can be built on neighboring property."

The funeral of William Alpaugh was held from his late home on East Third street, yesterday afternoon. With Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss in charge. The attendance was very large and included delegations from Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., and Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. At Hillside cemetery, where interment was made, the Odd Fellow burial service was conducted by Chaplain Charles M. Herbert.

ABNER S. CORIELL DEAD

Veteran Piscatawayite Succumbs to Three Months' Illness, at 85 Years.

WAS LONG POSTMASTER

Abner S. Coriell, one of the best known men in Piscataway and the surrounding sections, died at his home in New Market Wednesday afternoon in his eighty-ninth year. Mr. Coriell lived in Piscataway all his life, and was a familiar figure to everybody in New Market and Dunellen. He was a veteran business man of the village and held office for many years.

Mr. Coriell became seriously ill about three months ago. Until that time he was unusually well preserved for a man of his age, going out about the town and keeping abreast of the times through the columns of the newspapers, which he read without difficulty in spite of his age. His illness weakened him rapidly, however, and he sank with a steadiness that foreshadowed the end weeks ago. He died quietly at 3:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Coriell is survived by a widow and nine children. The latter are Charles and Abner, who live in Dunellen; George and William, of New Market; Andrew, of Bound Brook; Mrs. Van Curen, of Red Bank; Mrs. Clarence White, of Red Bank; Mrs. B. J. Elliott, of Scotch Plains, and Miss Kate, living at home. He leaves seventeen grandchildren, ten grandsons and seven granddaughters.

Mr. Coriell passed his eighty-fifth year on November 11. He was born at Harris' lane, and never moved out of the township. He started his career as a farmer. Storekeeping attracted him and he set up in business as a local dealer on the corner opposite the Hotel Nelson. He gave up business twenty years ago, and bought the home where he died.

For twenty-eight years Mr. Coriell was postmaster at New Market. He was appointed first by Abraham Lincoln. He was a stanch Republican, and every succeeding President up to Cleveland reappointed him. He was dropped when the Democratic chief executive made his appointments, but went back into office when Harrison took the seat. Mr. Coriell was assessor as well as postmaster, holding the township office for twenty-one years.

Mr. Coriell espoused Republicanism when it was born, before the war, and remained an ardent follower of the cause all through the rest of his life. It was his boast and his greatest pride that he never had failed to cast his vote for a Republican presidential candidate. His appearance at the polls in New Market was always, of late years, the event of the day. He cast his ballot for Roosevelt in 1904, walking sturdily to the polls and voting without assistance.

ENDEAVORERS OBSERVE THEIR ANNIVERSARY.

Sketches Read by Members of Park Avenue Society.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the organization last night by using the prepared programme of the United Society. A feature was a short address by Rev. Dr. Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, who spoke earnestly on the future of the Endeavor movement, and incidently referred to its wonderful achievements.

The what, when and where of Christian Endeavor was presented in interesting sketches by Rev. A. E. Phinney, A. E. Finn, Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Bessie Giles, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Herbert Brokaw, Charles Van Winkle and Joseph M Hawkins. These papers showed what Christian Endeavor has done, when it was founded and where other societies are located. Christian Endeavor songs were sung in the place of special music. Miss Florence G. Hawkins was in charge of the meeting as leader and spoke a few words of encouragement.

MR. AND MRS. I. H. BOEHM TWENTY-FIVE YEARS WED.

Reception Marks That Anniversary and Mrs. Boehm's Birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Boehm, of Somerset street, entertained a large company of relatives and friends, including all of the clerks at Mr. Boehm's dry goods store, Wednesday, in honor of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary and the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Boehm. The double celebration was of great interest to all and the celebrants were the recipients of hearty congratulations.

The evening was passed in dancing, vocal and, instrumental music being rendered, followed by the serving of supper. An unexpected pleasure to Mr. and Mrs. Boehm was the presentation to them by the clerks of a handsome china salad set. Miss Burke made the presentation on behalf of the clerks, and words of appreciation were spoken by both Mr. and Mrs. Boehm. They also received many other gifts of value and use.

COUNCILMANIC ROUTINE

Better Police Protection in East and West Ends is Promised Now.

REPORTS FOR MONTH

Board of School Estimate Appointed —Plainfield to Keep Informed of Legislature's Doings.

When the petition of East End residents for additional police protection was presented at the February meeting of the Common Council Monday night, Frank Randolph, chairman of the police committee, announced that the petition had been before the committee and that in response an extra policeman would be stationed in that part of the city and another officer located in the West End.

Frank Stillwell, who has been a special patrolman doing regular duty since November last, having been appointed by the former police commission, communicated with the Common Council that his probation period was up and he wanted to know what action they proposed to take. He said that he was willing to continue as a regular, if desired, and on advice tendered his resignation as a special. It was accepted, and Mayor Buckle's appointement making him a regular was confirmed.

Chairman Randolph, of the police committee, explained this procedure, stating that a question was raised as to whether or not the former police commission would stand. Corporation Counsel Marsh advised the committee in the matter. In answer to a query from Mr. Tyler, Mr. Randolp informed him that Stillwell had been regularly examined, mentally and physically. Mr. Tyler voted against confirmation.

William H. Rogers asked for permission to erect a one-story building of cement block in the east end of the city and it was granted on the recommendation of the fire and buildings committee.

The Board of Education informed the Common Council that Leander N. Lovell and C. F. Abbott were appointed members of the School Board of Estimate, and according to custom and upon the motion of Mr. Daniel, Councilmen Tyler and Hibbard were chosen to represent the the city, who, with the Mayor, comprises the board.

P. F. Duffy asked for an adjustment of a tax assessed in error. This matter was referred to the proper committee, as was also a petition received from the Central Union Realty Company asking that sanitary sewers be established in Park, Kensington, Prospect, Evergreen, Martine, Thornton and Edgewood avenues.

S. B. Godyke, Jr., who has the contract for building the Richmond street stone sewer, asked for an extension of time to May 15 next, and it was granted. He stated that he understood a $2,000 limit placed on the contract had been waived, and that he had purchased material with a view to completing the job.

H. K. Miller, agent for the Board of Fire Underwriters of New York, asked the Common Council concerning a model building code furnished that body, its purpose being to know what disposition the Common Council proposed to make of it. The matter was referred to the fire and buildings committee.

The certificate of the sale of property for 1904 taxes was received from former Tax Collector R. I. Lee and filed.

Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of fifteen permits during the past month. Mr. Daniel moved to concur with the Common Council adopted January 1 of this year, be made the by-laws, and it was adopted.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel, $2,000 was transferred from the general to the poor fund. The same member presented a certificate from Tax Collector J. W. Murray, Jr., regarding the redemption of property by W. A. Coddington for his clients. Mr. Daniel took this action so that the lien of the city might be discharged, and he moved that the city clerk and Mayor be authorized to execute the papers. The motion was adopted.

On Mr. Daniel's motion the city clerk was instructed to have H. G. Walter, bill clerk of the Senate, send a copy of each bill presented in either House to Corporation Counsel Marsh, at an expense not to exceed $25. The member explained that this was according to custom, the only difference being that heretofore Plainfield's representative in the Legislature had attended to the matter. The motion was adopted.

Another resolution by Mr. Daniel provided for the borrowing of $8,000 for sewer improvements, the same to be secured by notes. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Daniel reported unfavorably on the petition of Mrs. Eugene A. Gross, in which she asked that the city provide proper surface drainage near her property on West Fourth street. He instructed the city clerk to inform her that the city has no authority in the matter, as it would necessitate going on private property. Mr. Daniel added that Mrs. Gross could remedy the trouble by filling in on her property.

On a motion offered by Frank Randolph, the fire and buildings committee was authorized to have fire department headquarters re-wired at an expense not to exceed $400. This figure represents that of the lowest bidder and is done by order of the Board of Underwriters.

Mrs. Jennie W. Kenyon was given a permit to erect a dwelling on Wilcox street, on a motion offered by Frank Randolph, acting for the chairman of the fire and buildings committee, who was absent. In the same capacity he offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the expenditure of $350 to put rubber tires on the Hayes truck, $150 to scrape and paint the truck, $70 to paint two hose wagons, and $40 to touch up the chemical engine.

Mr. Randolph also reported that 1,000 feet of new hose had been purchased in 100-foot lengths at an expense of ninety cents a foot. This was in accordance with a previous action of the Common Council authorizing the purchase.

Mr. Daniel called up on third reading the ordinance to change the name of Jackson avenue, in the east end, and it was adopted. He also moved the payment of $2,335.56 to Corporation Counsel Marsh, being the total awards for damages in the matter of widening Park avenue and Sycamore street and opening of Robbins place. Mr. Marsh will offer the affected property owners the various amounts allowed by the commissioners.

Mr. Daniel moved that when the session adjourned it be to meet on Friday night, February 23.

DAVID KRYMER SUCCUMBS TO PULMONARY TROUBLE.

Son of Mrs. J. H. Krymer Passes Away After Six Weeks' Illness.

David J. Krymer, son of Mrs. John H. Krymer, died Tuesday morning at 4:20 o'clock at his home, 610 Liberty street, following an illness of six weeks. He was first attacked with pneumonia and this developed into pulmonary troubles.

Mr. Krymer was born at Lebanon, Hunterdon county, and was thirty-five years old. He came to this city when a boy and later learned the trade of machinist at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, where he remained until illness compelled him to give up. He was a member of Trinity Reformed church and a regular attendant at the services. He was also a member of Franklin council, Jr. O. U. A. M.

A wife and two children, one two years old and the other two months old, and a mother and two sisters, Mrs. William F. Oliver and Mrs. Theodore Mantz, survive him.

The funeral services will be held from the late home Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and interment will be in the Plainfield Avenue cemetery. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will have charge of the services.

This will be the last one before Lent, but two more will be held afterwards.

ASKS PLAINFIELD'S HELP

Dunellen Board of Education Wants to Send High School Pupils to This City.

HAS NO UPPER GRADES

Matter Discussed at Last Night's Meetings of Local Boards—Arrangements Complete for New School Dedication.

At the regular meeting of the city Board of Education Monday the plan to allow Dunellen pupils who have completed the grammar grades in their district to enter the local High School at special tuition rates was broached to the members by a formal letter from the Dunellen Board. The communication was as follows:

"Board of Education, Plainfield.

"Dear Sirs—The State school department is making a move to give an opportunity for a full High School education to every child in the State, and has informed us that Dunellen must either provide a ful four years' High School course in its own school or pay tuition in some other High School for our pupils who wish a full course.

"Our building is already full and we cannot meet this requirement without enlarging our building. We realize, too, that even then it would not be possible for us to furnish equipment and teachers that would give our pupils anywhere near the opportunities and advantages of a school like that in Plainfield. We, therefore, request your board to consider the question whether you will admit to your High School Dunellen pupils who meet the requirements set by your superintendent and what tuition you would charge, the same to be paid by our board, in accordance with the advice of the State Board of Education.

"If it is possible for you to admit our pupils on terms that we can meet, you would not only aid us in meeting the problem that confronts us, but would open to our young people a much broader educational outlook than we can ever give them. We feel too that by such an arrangement both boards would be carrying out the policy of the State Board of Education.

"Respectfully yours,

"W. S. FREDERICK.

"President Dunellen Bd. of Ed."

The matter was discussed in an informal manner by the board, and the opinion prevailed that something could be done by Plainfield without incurring any expense to the taxpayers. No positive action was taken, but Superintendent Maxson was authorized to confer with the Dunellen authorities and reach some decision in regard to terms. They can afterward be submitted to the local board for ratification.

Mr. Abbott reported to the board that the new High School will be in readiness for the dedication on Washington's birthday and that the program has been arranged. The speaker has not yet been secured, but Superintendent Maxson announced that he was in correspondence with several men and would probably have this matter taken care of within the next few days.

Bids for furnishing the new school building with shades and rollers were submitted by local dealers and the contract was awarded to J. A. Green. He asked $238.75 for 178 shades and rollers complete.

THIRD WARD WANTS MORE ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

And Councilman Leslie M. Daniel Sees That It Gets Them.

Councilmen Daniel and Hibbard sparred for points in settling a question concerning electric lights at the February meeting of the Common Council Monday, and the former won out. Mr. Hibbard is chairman of the light committee and recommended in response to a request that one light be located at Darrow avenue and Essex street. He explained that he had visited the street and decided that a single lamp would suffice.

Mr. Daniel thought differently. He said that the Third ward had always been modest in its requests for favors, but that in this case he thought the street in question should be well lighted, for the reason that it leads from the West End fire house to Seventh and Eighth streets and in case of fire it would be a great help to have that thoroughfare well illuminated.

Mr. Hibbard still insisted that one lamp would do, especially as the street in question is macadamized and is a short avenue, leading from Fourth to Seventh streets.

Mr. Daniel finally offered a motion that three lights be placed there, one at Darrow avenue and Essex street, and two between Essex and Fourth streets, and he said that he hoped his colleagues would support him. On the vote Councilmen Buxton, Giana, Montgomery, Frank Randolph, Tyler, Tolles and Daniel decided in the affirmative, while Councilmen Hibbard and C. C. Randolph cast their votes in the negative.

AGAINST AUTO MEASURE

Wm. Jeffery Tells the Governor Why Frelinghuysen's Bill Should Not be Passed.

AUTOS COME TO STAY

Provisions Opposed to Best Interests of the Real Estate Men—Interview at Trenton This Morning.

On his invitation, William Jeffery, of North Plainfield, met Governor Stokes at Trenton Monday morning to recite in person his objections to the Frelinghuysen automobile measure, which is being given a hearing this afternoon before the Senate judiciary committee.

Mr. Jeffery's objections were in part as follows:

"Real estate agents especially ought to see that the Frelinghuysen bill is against their interests, whether or not they themselves own autos. The bill does not add to the protection of the public but simply discourages the ownership of autos. Residents of the State ought to be encouraged to buy and use autos if only to make them interested in having good roads, which add to the value of real estate. Instead of discouraging the use of autos the State ought to exempt them from taxation as personal property when owned by a resident who had paid a registration fee, as is proposed in a bill now before the New York Legislature; and should make it easy for a non-resident to travel in the State whenever he felt like it—the oftener the better. This bill puts a premium on scorching through the State when if any favor is to be shown it should be given to the leisurely tourist and summer visitor.

"Non-residents who are wealthy enough to own autos ought to be encouraged by all possible means to travel throughout the State. Not only will they spend money and increase business, though this is an important matter to the summer resorts, but they will see the natural beauties and other advantages of the State, and some of them will locate here, buying property and adding to our population and wealth. A liberal policy towards autos would add to the land values of the State and increase revenue far more than absurd attempts to punish anyone with enterprise enough to invest hundreds of dollars in a modern improvement.

"The license feature of the bill is objectionable for several reasons: It discriminates unfairly against the man of family by compelling him to pay extra to get permission for his pleasure. It is a handicap to business men who may wish to have several employes run the machine as they would a horse.

"Licensing does not insure safety. Bad accidents do not happen to inexperienced drivers but to skilled ones who take chances. Owners of machines seldom have accidents when driving themselves. Accidents are the result of chauffeurs doing stunts to delight strenuous employers in order to hold their jobs. Neither examinations nor the fear of losing licenses have prevented steamboat captains from violating the law for years in order to hold their jobs—instance the General Slocum disaster. Most auto accidents are the result of excessive speed, which should be prohibited by severe penalties enforceable against not only the chauffeur but the owner as well if he is in the vehicle.

"But this bill imposes the same penalty for running sixty miles an hour or showing false numbers, as for leaving a license home or having the numbers on the lamps an eighth of an inch too small.

"It is impossible to legislate brains into people's heads and the only effective way to diminish accidents is to let incompetent and reckless people know that they will be held to strict accountability for the damage they do and they had better not try to show off in a machine.

"Among the minor objections to the bill are the arbitrary power given to the commissioner, enabling him to revoke a license without appeal and for the most trivial violation, leaving it entirely to his discretion to refuse licenses. To permit any magistrate to revoke a license is absurd, but to provide that an acquittal by a higher court of an offence charged shall not restore a revoked license is outrageous.

"Notice of appeal served on a magistrate and filing of bond should be sufficient to stay imprisonment; by section 31 the defendant goes to jail forthwith until appeal is perfected. Warrants for alleged offences need not issued for five months. This opens the door for unjust prosecution and for the most of the violations, a summons would be sufficient.

"Section 4 says no machine shall be licensed if its levers are liable to be confounded. Who shall decide as to this? Some people lose their heads in the smallest crisis and couldn't be kept from shoving the wrong way."

Mrs. O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, is much improved from a recent illness.

Mrs. Theodore Mantz, of Richmond street, is detained at home with a severe cold.

CABBIES MAKE DEMANDS

They Ask For All Sorts of Concessions From the Common Council.

A PETITION IS FILED

Radical Changes in the Present Ordinance Requested—Their Demands in Detail.

The licensed cab drivers of the city petitioned the Common Council Monday for an adjustment of several matters which they believe will tend to benefit their business. The first request was that within the limits they be permitted to charge twenty-five cents for the first passenger and fifty cents for two or three passengers to the same address. The present additional charge is forty cents for two passengers or fifty-five cents for three.

Another request is that they be allowed to remove the license numbers from the lamps on their cabs, and that instead of the same be compelled to display a large badge on their coat, they be allowed to wear a white button in the lapel of the coat, about an inch in diameter, showing their number. The cab drivers also ask that instead of displaying a large card bearing the section of the ordinance which regulates their business, that a small folder be used and placed in the pocket of the cab. The petition is signed by John C. Lynch and others.

As to the display of large numbers on the lamps of the cab and on the coat of the driver, there is considerable objection. The cabmen claim that many of their patrons are opposed to engaging a cab distinguished in this way. They would much prefer, the cabmen say, that there be no distinction made from a private carriage.

The petition was referred to the license committee of which Mr. Montgomery is the chairman, and there is no doubt arrange a meeting with the cab drivers to discuss the matter further.

GOFF WANTS A LICENSE

Though Fined For Running a Speak-easy He Files Petition With Common Council.

SCHANZ APPLIES ANEW

Shay the Last of Trio to Make Another Attempt—Twelve Ask for Renewals.

There were three new applicants for liquor licenses at the February meeting of the Common Council, making fifteen in all. The new ones were Charles Schanz, formerly of Park avenue, who asks for a license at 208A Watchung avenue, in a building owned by Charles H. Hand; John Shay, who applies for a license on West Third street, between Liberty street and Plainfield avenue, and John J. Goff, who again seeks a license for George Seeber's hotel on West Front street near Clinton avenue.

Goff pleaded non-vult to selling liquor without a license just a short time ago and was fined $50 in the county court. Tuesday he was arraigned for running a disorderly house.

The other regular applicants are as follows: Henry Haurand, Michael Wiesen, Jerome W. Leary, Henry Windham, Jacob Blimm, A. Staats, Frank Clark, John Rafferty, Alex. D. Findlay, Chris. Gloeckler, Frank Linke and the Eastern Bottling Association. The last two named are for wholesale licenses.

The applications were referred to the license committee, of which Francis L. Motgomery is the chairman. They will be advertised in the usual manner and will come up at the adjourned meeting Friday night, February 23, for action.

While no opinions were expressed on the part of the councilmen, there is a feeling that the number of licensed places will not be increased this year. There would be strong objection to a licensed place on Watchung avenue, near the trolley stand, where so many persons congregate.

It is said that the word has been passed to John J. Goff that it would be useless for him to attempt to secure a license. John Shay has applied for a license on West Third street before and been refused, and it is unlikely that he will be successful this time, especially as the city ordinance prevents the granting of a license to anyone outside of the prescribed district. This would also affect Mr. Goff.

The license committee will consider the various applications before the time for action arrives, and it is thought that they will not recommend the granting of any new applications.

MR. COSE NOT CONFIRMED

Mayor's Appointment of 2d Assistant Chief of Fire Department Tabled.

JENNINGS MOVED UP

John H. Cose, aspirant for the position of second assistant chief of the fire department, as a result of the resignation of First Assistant Chief John W. Murray, Jr., failed to get the place at the meeting of the Common Council Monday. He was appointed by Mayor Buckle, but by a vote of five to four Councilmen Mellick and Glosk being absent, the nomination was placed on the table, where it will remain for a time at least. Councilmen Daniel, Giana, Hibbard, C. C. Randolph and Tyler voted to table the appointment, while Councilmen Buxton, Montgomery, Frank Randolph and Tolles voted in the negative.

William Townley, senior captain of the fire department, is a candidate for promotion and it is understood that Chairman Mellick favors him.

After the resignation of Mr. Murray was received and acted upon, the appointment of First Assistant Chief Andrew D. Jennings to Mr. Murray's position was announced by the clerk, and Councilman Frank Randolph moved that it be confirmed.

Mr. Hibbard arose to ask about the salary question and then a lengthy discussion. Mr. Randolph said that the matter had been considered by the fire committee and the salaries would remain the same, that is, Mr. Jennings would continue to receive $900, while the second assistant would get $100, unless a change was made by the Common Council.

Mr. Daniel, while not opposed to the proposed action, thought there might be possible complications over the salary question and he would like to have it well understood. He then quoted the ordinance on the subject. Mr. Randolph urged his motion to confirm, which was adopted, after which there was favorable action on his motion making Mr. Jennings' salary at $900 and that of the second assistant, whoever he might be, at $100.

The above action was followed by the appointment by the Mayor of John H. Cose to the position of second assistant. Mr. Tyler wanted to know right away what Mr. Mellick, chairman of the fire committee, thought about the appointment and regretted that he was not present to speak on the subject. He urged that it be laid on the table until Mr. Mellick could be heard.

Mr. Tolles believed the appointment should be confirmed, and Mr. Buxton sought to explain that the action was supported by four members of the committee, who had learned that the call men preferred Mr. Cose and the members had decided upon him.

Mr. Hibbard wanted to defer action, but Councilman Frank Randolph attempted to enlighten his colleagues so as to secure favorable action. He said that it was with no desire to hinder any deserving promotion that Mr. Cose was appointed, but simply because the call men, who have been represented by the board of engineers by Mr. Murray, believed that they should still continue to be represented and the committee decided that way.

Councilman C. C. Randolph wanted to know if the call men had urged the appointment of Mr. Cose, and President Tolles informed him that they had.

Mr. Montgomery stated that Chief Doane had informed him that there are twenty-four call men, each receiving $50 a year, and that $5 per call of the force always responded to fire alarms. In view of this, he thought the call men entitled to recognition. If a senior captain is promoted, that would leave Chief Doane short-handed and another regular would have to be appointed at a salary of at least $600 a year. This would mean an increase in fire department expenses. On these grounds he said that he would favor Mr. Cose and vote for his appointment.

Mr. Tyler wanted to know the names of the four members of the fire committee who favored Mr. Cose, whereupon Mr. Buxton informed him that Councilmen Montgomery, Glosk, Montgomery, Frank Randolph and himself, and in reply to a question said that Mr. Mellick favored Captain Townley.

This led Mr. Tyler to remark that while he was not a member of the fire committee, or several other committees, this year, he did not think there was urgent need for action and that there was no good reason why the appointment should not be laid on the table for the present. He said that he had heard considerable talk about the matter and he would prefer to wait until Mr. Mellick could explain his position.

In concluding the argument, Mr. Buxton said that he could see no good reason why the appointment should not be confirmed, while Mr. Tyler again urged that it be laid on the table. The vote was then called, with the result that it was laid on the table.

EDUCATION HELPS WOMEN

DOESN'T SPOIL COOKING

Higher education of women, as it affects their attitude toward life and the capabilities in whatever sphere they moved, was the theme of a highly interesting lecture delivered before the Monday Afternoon Club Monday by Miss Mary Jordan, of the department of literature, Smith College. The audience was large. The subject, which naturally appealed to them, was treated in a way that was most entertaining.

Miss Jordan's lecture embraced a consideration of the relative intellectuality of men and women, so far as the subject had been settled by the trend of thought for many centuries. She held that woman's intellectual fitness for higher culture had been recognized very early in the history of education and made it plain that she did not claim any essential newness for the so-called "new" status of woman in the world of thought. She cited Dante, who held that both women and men should be educated. Queen Elizabeth was advanced as a type of intellectual womanhood of pre-modern times. The lecturer said Elizabeth was essentially a modern woman—"expressed in Tudor terms." She said this woman and the renaissance period were on an intellectual level with women of today, but not so conscientious. They were heedless of the future and builded neither in themselves nor their associates for the future.

The present form of education is not better than that of the past, Miss Jordan said, but it is more extensive and offers greater opportunities. The character of the privilege is higher.

"I am often asked by anxious fathers and mothers," she said, "if higher education will make a girl dissatisfied with her home." My answer to that is, if the girl inherits a sweet and magnanimous disposition, her attitude toward the home will not be altered. If she inherits a petty, mean spirit, four years among any set of young people in any environment will not change her temperament.

"Will higher culture prevent a girl from being a homemaker—a good cook?" is another question I am asked. Not if anybody inspects the cooking equipment gathered at every college of girl students, the conclusion will be inevitable that man is a cooking animal. 'Does higher education make a girl a good table companion?' is sometimes asked. I think that the conversation at every restaurant where one may meet the educated girl will demonstrate that conversationally she has not been harmed."

The lecturer's general conclusion as to the effect of higher education was that it did not unfit or tend to unfit a girl for any sphere in which the average girl of the middle classes might move. It certainly did not unfit her, Miss Jordan said positively, for earning a living.

RETIRED FARMER DEAD.

Alexander Bayles Succumbs to a Stroke of Paralysis.

Alexander Bayles, one of the best known residents in Middlesex county, died early Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Gildersleeve, of East Sixth street. He was stricken with paralysis a month ago and sank steadily.

Mr. Bayles was eighty years old and was born at Kingston, where he was a well known farmer until ten years ago. He was always identified with the county's affairs and held various offices, being elected on the Republic ticket. He is survived by a widow and eight children.

The funeral will be held from the residence of N. H. Stryker, Monmouth Junction, Friday afternoon and interment will be at Kingston.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXVIII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1906. NO. 7

"Support the Constitution, which is the Cement of the Union, as well in its Limitations as in its Authorities."—Madison.

PETITION TO THE LEGISLATURE FROM AUTOISTS

Plainfield Drivers Complete Organization and Formulate Protest Against Bills.

AGAINST RECKLESSNESS

Favor Laws to Check Discreditable Automobile Users—Object to Being Arraigned Before Justices.

The automobilists, drawn together by their opposition to the Freilinghuysen and Jackson bills, completed their organization last night. The temporary officers were made permanent and a constitution and by-laws were adopted.

A petition to the Legislature against the proposed legislation was presented to the members. It expressed to the members. It exautomobilist, and favored laws curbing him. Objection is made to the taxation of autos, as proposed, and to arrest without warrant. It is contended that the autoist should not be haled for speed violation before any judge lower than the Common Pleas.

"The undersigned, being citizens of the State of New Jersey, residing in or near Plainfield, and owning or accustomed to drive automobiles, or motor vehicles, respectfully set forth:

"We are not opposed to any reasonable legislation upon the subject of the use of public roads by vehicles of any kind.

"We realize that every new type of vehicle, every new motive power and every new means of locomotion meets with opposition, and must overcome much prejudice before it wins popular favor and is accepted upon its merits.

"We contend that the highways of the State are public property and are intended for the common use of all our citizens, and we admit that in their use the duty is imposed upon every citizen, no matter what the character of his vehicle, to so use his own as not to injure his neighbor.

"We realize, too, that there are among drivers of automobiles, just as there are among drivers of other vehicles, a certain percentage of incompetent and reckless persons. The number of these persons compared with the total number of drivers is very small: This fact is not generally recognized, and, in the estimation of the public, the sins of the few are too often visited upon the many who are innocent.

"We ourselves are strongly opposed to the use of the roads by the reckless and incompetent driver, who brings discredit upon us as a class; and are willing to advocate any reasonable legislation that will bar him from the road.

"We believe that this can be accomplished, and if so, it certainly should be accomplished without the adoption of any drastic legislation which would unreasonably restrict or unjustly burden us as a class.

"We are satisfied that if the present law on the subject be so amended that no person be permitted to operate a car upon the road unless he has a license, properly granted, and that for reckless driving that license shall be revoked, the problem will be solved.

"We contend that the license fee should be a reasonable and fixed amount and should not be imposed for the purpose of revenue.

"We object to the taxation of automobiles, except under the same general laws and uniform rules which may be applied to other vehicles. We contend that if one class of vehicles is to be taxed upon the basis of the wear and tear it occasions to the streets, then every other class of vehicles must be taxed upon the same basis.

"We are willing to pay our share of the taxes, but we confidently assert that automobilists, as a class, pay already as full a share as any other class, whether it be toward repair or building of roads, or toward any other object of public expenditure.

"We strenuously object to the application of criminal procedure to cases of violation of the speed law. We object to arrest without warrant, and to summary procedure before any justice of the peace, and we contend that cases of violations of speed laws should be within the jurisdiction of no court inferior to the Court of Common Pleas."

The organization will be called the Union County Automobile Association. Its objects, as named in the constitution, are the encouragement of just laws regulating the use of vehicles, the discouragement of radical

MAYOR N. B. SMALLEY TO BE TOASTMASTER

BOROUGH'S EXECUTIVE GIVEN PLACE OF HONOR AT THE AMERICAN BANQUET

Arrangements are rapidly being completed for the "Juniors' American banquet," to be given at the Casino on Thursday night, March 1. The committee has secured the consent of Mayor Newton B. Smalley to act as toastmaster for the occasion. His Honor is a member of Benevolent Council, and he is very enthusiastic about the proposed banquet, at which time Senator Everett Colby will be one of the speakers.

Efforts are being made to secure Governor Stokes as a speaker, and it is said that he has assured the committee that if legislative matters do not interfere he will attend. Among other speakers will be the State councilor, vice-councilor and other State officers, including J. Morgan Reed. Within the coming week the committee will have its programme completed and ready for announcement.

The response for tickets has been large, especially from those outside of the order. About fifty per cent. of the tickets have been reserved for those not members, it being the wish to give others the privilege of attending.

CHURCH WOMEN HOLD A VALENTINE SUPPER

CHICKEN AND HEARTS FIGURE IN A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR.

Chicken and sentiment were successfully blended at the Monroe Avenue church last night. The Ladies' Aid Society held a chicken supper in an atmosphere very much of St. Valentine's Day. Red hearts figured everywhere in the decorations—on the tables and walls.

The supper was a great success. The attendance was large and the menu was perfect.

The tables were presided over by Mrs. Edgar Beekman, Mrs. W. S. Decker, Mrs. T. Tovall, Mrs. Walter Manning, Mrs. John Daub, Mrs. John Praed, Miss Carrie Brouwer, Mrs. J. C. Pierson and Mrs. Charles Van Pelt. The waitresses were Miss Minnie Gunzelman, Miss Olive Klein, Miss Agnes Brown, Miss Florence Brown, Miss Marion Pierson, Miss Ruth Thompson, Miss May Matthews, Miss Anna Matthews, Miss Stella Rink and Miss Avis Aldrich.

Music was a feature of the evening. A delightful programme was played by an instrumental quintette made up of Miss Charlotte Aldrich, piano; Herbert Smith, Charles Heaune, Sadie Brouwer and Arthur Mosher, violin.

Mrs. Fred Wenzel, president of the society, was in general charge. The reception committee was composed of Mrs. Nicholas Brouard, Mrs. George Mooney and Mrs. J. S. Higham. The kitchen staff was made up of Mrs. J. C. Pierson, Mrs. LaRue, Mrs. William Gunzelman, Mrs. J. D. Brown, Miss Mary Brouwer and Mrs. Carrie Waldron. The candy table was presided over by Miss Carrie Brouwer and Miss Sadie Brouwer. John Daub was cashier.

PLEASED CAPACITY HOUSE.

"Mayor of Tokio" Makes Bigger Hit Than at First Local Performance.

"The Mayor of Tokio" has a host of admirers in this city. The fact was demonstrated at the New Plainfield theatre last night, when the refreshing Japanese play was given its second local presentation. Not a seat could be had after the doors opened and every bit of permissible standing room was sold.

Richard Carle, Emma Janvier, "the wardrobe mistress," and "Rusty," the song book boy, again made big hits and kept the audience laughing continuously. Miss Janvier's work is one of the drollest bits of character acting ever seen on the local stage, and is bright and unusual. The chorus has been improved since the show was here last November and the production in other ways was highly satisfactory.

COPS ARE POORLY PAID

WANT $60 A MONTH

Hitch Over Legality of Raising Pay Without Vote of the People —Referred to Committee.

The Somerville town commissioners have been presented with a monster petition, signed by the leading residents of the town, asking for an increase in the pay of the members of the Somerville police force from $50 to $60 a month. Clarence E. Case, of the law firm of Clark & Case, presented the petition in behalf of the police. He said the petition had been signed by the heaviest taxpayers of the town.

In addressing the board, Mr. Case said that the town was the best protected in the State. Not a store or business house in the town had been robbed in ten years and no burglaries of any consequence had been committed in private residences for more than a year. The Somerville policemen, he said, worked twelve hours every day for wages below those of a day laborer who tolls on the streets.

The oldest policeman on the force, who had served the town faithfully for twelve years, receives only $50 a month, while the chief of police forces of the neighboring towns of New Brunswick and Plainfield received $57 and $85 a month, respectively.

Mr. Case recalled the tragic death of Policeman Manning T. Erow, who was killed by lightning in the performance of his duty several years ago. Erow's family was left in want, owing to the fact that the peculiar form of government of the town made it illegal for the town commissioners to appropriate money for the policeman's funeral expenses or the aid of his family.

The commissioners expressed themselves as heartily in accord with the movement to increase the salary of the policemen, but it was the opinion of the majority of the board that the law under which the town is governed prohibited the body from exceeding the annual police appropriation for the year, which had already been made, and that it would be necessary to leave the matter of increasing the salary of the policemen to the vote of the people at the annual town meeting to be held next May.

Commissioner Charles Houston dissented from this opinion. He said he had recently been informed by Vice-Chancellor Bergen, who was formerly president of the Board of Town Commissioners, that the commissioners had the power to fix its appropriations and expenditures independently of the vote of the townspeople. The matter was referred to the police committee for investigation of the power of the board.

CONDITIONS BAR FIVE FROM P. H. S. ATHLETICS.

Mr. Travell Makes it Plain that Deficient Pupils Can't Play Ball.

Baseball affairs at the Plainfield High School are looking rather dubious at present. Some of the best players selected for the team may not be able to take part in this season's schedule unless they get busy in their studies. Five members of the team are now under conditions which they will have to work off before they will be allowed to participate, not only in baseball, but in any other athletic event under the P. H. S. colors.

Yesterday morning at chapel exercises Principal Travell sounded a note of warning to the pupils of the school who have athletic ambitions. Recently one or two boys have just been able to play basketball owing to study conditions, and as they have shown no improvement, they may yet be barred. During recess yesterday some of the boys held a conference and decided that something must be done at once to work off the conditions or the chances for a representative baseball team would be very poor.

To Attend School Dedication.

The committee which is arranging the reception to be given in connection with the opening of the Plainfield High School, Washington's Birthday, has received word that Mrs. James C. Shelland, of Morris, Minn., will be among the attendants. Mrs. Shelland was formerly Miss Julia Bulkley and preceded Dr. Maxson as superintendent of the Plainfield schools. She will make the trip East especially for the dedication and will return home after spending a few days with local friends.

WILL PETITION COUNCIL

FAVOR SALOON ZONE

Unwavering opposition to John Goff's application for a license was voiced by the men of the Monroe Avenue church last night. They held a meeting on the subject, and as strong a stand against Goff was taken as in the original crusade, in which the Monroe Avenue church took a leading part.

Warm approval of the saloon zone ordinance was expressed. The church men will battle strongly to keep that ordiance on the books.

The meeting was well attended. Rev. George Mooney, the pastor, presided over it, and N. Mansfield Smith was secretary. It was voted to present a petition to the Common Council, at the license meeting, February 23, praying that Goff's application be denied, and that the saloon zone ordinance be kept upon the books. Emphasis will be laid upon the point that the church men are opposed to any saloon in the neighborhood. They are against giving a license to Goff or any other man. A committee of five was named to draft the petition. The committee is composed of Samuel Beekman, E. H. Beekman, F. R. Phillips, Blanchard Randolph and N. Mansfield Smith.

COURT TO SENTENCE GOFF ON WEDNESDAY

GENERALLY BELIEVED HE WILL BE HEAVILY PUNISHED.

Remaining out less than an hour, the jury in the John Goff disorderly house case, returned at 3:48 yesterday afternoon with a verdict of guilty as charged but with a recommendation for mercy. The jury's report was received by Judge Vail and he announced that sentence would be pronounced next Wednesday.

The verdict was no surprise to the Plainfielders at court and the opinion prevails that a heavy penalty will be imposed. Goff's defense, as stated yesterday, was that his place was headquarters for the West End Pinochle Social Club and that in serving drinks to them he only acted as steward.

Another Church Petition.

A petition against granting a license to John J. Goff, or to anyone else in that neighborhood, and against the repeal of the liquor zone ordinance, will be presented by the men of the Monroe Avenue church to the Common Council. The step was decided upon at a meeting held in the Epworth House of the church last night, and a committee of five—Samuel Beekman, E. H. Beekman, F. R. Phillips, Blanchard Randolph and N. Mansfield Smith—was appointed to draft the petition. The Monroe Avenue church took a leading part in the original crusade against Goff. Rev. George Mooney, the pastor, was chairman of the meeting. N. M. Smith was secretary.

"The Little Gray Lady" Coming.

Channing Pollock's dainty play, "The Little Gray Lady," has been secured by Manager Counihan for next Monday night at the New Plainfield theatre. It opened at the Garrick theatre, New York, several months ago and scored a big success, but owing to bookings could not remain. It was transferred to the Majestic, where it now drawing crowded houses, and comes direct from there to this city. The play deals with life among Government employes in Washington, and treats the subject from an entirely new standpoint.

Veteran Carpenter Dead.

William J. Pearson, fifty-five years old, a former Plainfielder, died at the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon at 3:20 o'clock. He was well known in this city and the borough as the senior partner of the old carpentering firm of Pearson & Gale. The body has been brought to the home of his son, William Pearson, 930 West Third street. The funeral will be held tomorrow at 3 o'clock. The dead man is survived by one son and two daughters.

Whist Party.

Mrs. F. M. VanEmburgh, of Westervelt avenue, entertained a whist circle at her home last night. Gilbert Fletcher won the gentleman's prize and Mrs. Samuel Hollingsworth got the ladies'. Refreshments were served.

SENATE LEADERS CLASH

Hillery Attacks Statements Made By Colby at Public Meeting.

A SHARP ENCOUNTER

"Never Felt That You Were Absolutely Free," Says Essex Man to His Morris Colleague.

A sensation was created in the Senate yesterday when Senator Hillery, of Morris county, arose to a question of personal privilege.

When asked by President Bradley to state his point, Mr. Hillery said:

"The question is whether or not the Senator from Essex (Mr. Colby) is correctly quoted in two certain articles that appear in the newspapers of February 7. I will read the two articles which refer to me, and ask the Senator from Essex to either affirm of deny the truth of the statement. In the Newark News of February 7, 1906, there is the statement: 'It was the idea of making the Colby movement here that the Essex Senator accepted the invitation to visit Morristown and so impressed were the men that arrangements are being made to have Mr. Colby address a public meeting. He told them that he wanted to see Morris county represented in the Legislature by men who had the courage of their convictions and not representatives who bowed to the will of a political boss.'

"That is from the Newark News. I ask the Senator if the statment is correct?"

"No. I made not such statement," said Mr. Colby.

"That is sufficient, Senator," said Mr. Hillery.

"I should like to be heard," Mr. Colby said.

"I have another article," Mr. Hillery resumed. "The other is from the New York Herald, of the same date. The Herald prints the article, one which refers to me, says this: 'He spoke in high terms of Senator Hillery, who, he said, was honest in his actions ,but lacked a strong backbone.' I ask the Senator if he is correctly quoted in this newspaper article?"

"I don't know how to answer that," said Mr. Colby. "I would be glad to recall anything that in the least way reflected upon the integrity of the Senator from Morris. In fact, all through my campaign last summer I cited the Senator from Morris as one of the men in this Legislature of whom the people should be honestly proud. I have suggested, and I repeat it, and I shall say it whenever I please, that I propose as far as possible in every town in this State to have ben represent their constituents who are absolutely free in their intelligence from the dictation of the party boss."

"Then," said Mr. Hillery, "you affirm the truth of the statement here?"

"Yes," said Mr. Colby. "I do—not the truth, but I say that it is my opinion, if the Senator from Morris wants my opinion. Here is a statement that I never felt that you were absolutely free in your own intelligence and brains and mind."

Senator Hillery, in defending himself, said in part:

"As to the accusation that I bow to the will of a political boss, Mr. President, that is not true. If the Senator from Essex feels that there is a man in the county of Morris, that there is a man in the State House at Trenton, no matter what his political career, no matter what his political prestige and power, who can suggest or advise me against my will and against my convictions he is wrong.

"I know no boss. We have no bosses in Morris county. If there was a boss in Morris county, Mr. President, I would be the first to raise my voice against him."

Senator Colby, in replying, said he was sorry the incident had occurred. He claimed he had never suggested the Senator from Morris was dominated by a boss or that he did not have a backbone. Then the Senator concluded:

"But I indict him with the rest, Mr. President, on the ground that he does not any more than a great many of his fellow members approach all problems and all difficulties and all intricate questions which we must face here, absolutely and solely on the merits and according to the way his own mind and brain plays about that subject. That is what I say. If I have said one sinble thing against the gentleman's character or against him as a gentleman I would gladly, openly, willingly apologize on the floor of this Senate; but, gentlemen, I have only expressed my personal view as to the condition with which I believe him with the rest are subject."

Plainfielder Fined.

Henry James, the Plainfielder who fell in the borough police dragnet, was given his preference of $5 or ten days last night. He took the former.

TO DIVIDE COUNTY INTO ASSEMBLY DISTRICTS

Union County Republican Committee Plans to Distribute Legislative Offices Fairly.

TO BE NO CHANGE IN P. S. C. MANAGEMENT

OFFICIALS OF CORPORATION SAY NOTHING OF KIND IS NOW CONTEMPLATED.

It is denied by Public Service Corporation officials that there is to be any change in the management of the company under the new combination of interests which is expected to take command shortly. Dr. Leslie D. Ward yesterday told a reporter that nothing of this sort was contemplated. "The present officers," he said, "will retain their positions." Continuing, Mr. Ward said:

"There have been consultations and meetings, but they have only been preliminary and nothing definite as to details has been agreed upon as yet. Such a thing as a $50 is possible, but the probabilities are that the scheme will go through and everything be perfected in about four weeks, five weeks at the longest.

"If anything does come from these negotiations it will be a great thing for these underlying securities, $225,000,000. It will give them a market so that anybody wishing to sell can get their value. If we can get a wider market it will mean a great deal for our city, county and State. Our securities are absolutely giltedged, but there is not enough loose capital to take care of them when they might be offered. With the introduction of this new capital we can develop the property more rapidly than we could be financering it year by year."

GALBRAITH ON TRIAL FOR HEINOUS CRIME

FIRST OF THE FIVE ACCUSED PLAINFIELDERS TO FACE A JURY.

John Galbraith, the oldest of the five Plainfielders accused of serious offenses, was placed on trial before Judge Vail at Elizabeth yesterday afternoon. It was continued this morning and from present indications will occupy the attention of the court all day.

The proceedings are being conducted quietly and no one outside of witnesses and the necessary attendants are allowed in the room. Two of the girls were placed on the stand yesterday and gave damaging testimony. Another was thoroughly questioned today and her story made an impression on every one within hearing. It is possible that Chief Kiely and Father Bogan may be called as witnesses this afternoon.

Galbraith is being defended by Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., while the State's case is being handled by Assistant Prosecutor John K. English. The defendant is over seventy years old.

OLD GRADS OF P. H. S. WILL GATHER IN FORCE.

Reunion Washington's Birthday Night Promises Great Success.

The reunion of former High School students, principals and teachers, to be held at the new High School Arlington avenue, on Washington's birthday night, promises to be a very great success. Many of the older graduates living out of town have signified their intention of returning to the city to renew old friendships on that occasion. It is hoped that Prof. George E. Vincent and Dr. Reese, president of Syracuse University, will be present.

All those who attended the High School in past years will be welcomed at the gathering; graduation is not essential to participation in the reunion. Former students who have not yet received tickets will be given them upon application to W. C. Hubbard, 111 West Fifth street.

His Bike Wasn't Stolen.

Officer Meaker found a bicycle standing in front of P. B. Hodge's pharmacy shortly after 10 o'clock last night and gathered it in as a stray. Mr. Hodge claimed it this morning at headquarters. He thought it had been stolen.

Against Saloons.

Through Rev. W. W. Casselberry, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Dunellen is represented in the crusade of the churches in this vicinity for the passage of the local option bill. Mr. Casselberry appeared at the hearing in Trenton last week.

Another Concert.

The Y. M. C. A. orchestra will give another popular concert on Monday evening, February 19, and will repeat it on February 20. E. C. Martin will be the soloist. A silver offering will be taken at the door.

A COMMITTEE NAMED

J. W. Murray, Jr., William Newcorn and J. F. Buckle Plainfield Members of Standing Committee.

At a regular meeting of the Union County Republican Committee held in the Dix building, Elizabeth, last night, the proposed legislation to elect Assemblymen in districts of the various counties, instead of from the county as a whole, was brought up an dthoroughly discussed. The subject was broached by Charles N. Codding, of Westfield, who stated that the matter is being considered in many parts of the State and that there is a favorable sentiment. He offered a suggestion that a committee of seven be appointed to take in hand a possible division of Union county and to report on the feeling of the voters. The plan has been in vogue in Pennsylvania for a number of years.

Vice-Chairman James C. Calvert, who occupied the chair in the absence of Chairman Smith, appointed the following for this purpose: Hamilton F. Kean, Union; Charles N. Codding, Westfield; Robert J. Kirkland, Elizabeth; S. Reading Ryno, Rahway; Albert M. Jones, Summit. Mr. Smith and Mrs. Calvert will make up the seven.

The proposed amendment to the constitution, providing that before meetings of the committee at which candidates are to be endorsed for office, each member shall be notified in writing before the session was also taken up, but no definite action was taken.

The following standing committees for the year were appointed: Executive, Hamilton F. Kean, Robert J. Kirkland, John Farrell, William H. Lawrence, James White; finance, Robert J. Kirkland, H. S. Fullerton, John W. Murray, Jr., Henry Krouse and James F. Buckle; primaries and halls, Charles N. Codding, Joseph Kaufman, William Newcorn, W. B. Parrot and William F. Hall.

The meeting was attended by the greater number of the members from this city.

Day Nursery a Success.

The work at the King's Daughters' Day Nursery, 444 West Third street, continues to progress favorably. Last week there was a total of forty-five children provided for at the nursery and there were thirteen cared for one day. The committee in charge realizes that if the patronage increases at this rate it will be necessary to secure an assistant to the matron, Mrs. Bird. On Tuesday night, February 28, "The Pirates of Penzance" will be given at the New Plainfield theatre for the benefit of the nursery. Tickets will be put on sale at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Ice Cutting Ends.

The thaw checked ice cutting at Watchung yesterday afternoon. The Natural Ice Company's harvesters kept at it until their footing gave way beneath them, and succeeded in getting blocks enough to fill a third of the ice houses. An effort was made the night before to keep the men at work all night, but the harvesters refused to go on after 9 o'clock.

Mr. McCutchen Confirmed.

In executive session yesterday the Senate received from the Governor the appointment of Edward G. Roberts, of Newark, as a member of the State Board of Education, in place of ex-Mayor James M. Seymour. The appointments of S. St. John McCutcheon, of this city, James L. Hays, James B. Woodward and Francis Scott as members of the State Board of Education were confirmed.

He'll Sign the Pledge.

Joseph McGuirk, 47 Elm place, was arrested last night, on complaint of his wife, who charged him with raising a rumpus about the house. The patrol wagon carried McGuirk to the quiet of an unpadded cell. He promised to sign the pledge this morning, and Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

Reducing Parish House Debt.

The congregation of St. Stephen's church has reduced the indebtedness on its new parish house to $1,115. The total cost was $5,000. Contributions are constantly being received by the rector.

Mrs. Charles Ryder, of East Front street, is visiting at Greenwich, N. Y.

GROWTH OF THE CHURCH

H. K. Carroll's Statistics Reveal Smaller Growth Than In Several Years.

R. C. GAINS LARGEST

Denominational Families Have Changed Little in Relative Size Since Census of 1890.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, of this city, secretary of the Methodist Episcopal church General Missionary Society, has issued his annual statement of statistics concerning the churches in America, and it shows that the net gains for the year 1905 were smaller than those reported for several years past. His figures differ from those compiled by denominational agencies in that they are for the United States only, while denominational statistics usually include the members in foreign mission lands. The gains of all religious bodies in this country during the past year are given by Dr. Carroll as 1,815 ministers, 1,636 churches and 519,155 communicants. All three items show less gain than was made in 1904, the figures for that year having been, respectively, 3,136, 2,624 and 898,857.

The largest gain in any one body was in the Roman Catholic Church, which reports 16,785,496 communicants, a gain of 192,122 over the previous year. Dr. Carroll points out that the Roman figures are prepared on a different basis from those of the Protestant bodies, so that it is hardly proper to compare them; but the Catholic figures are official and it is proper to include them in this connection. The Methodist Episcopal Church, of all Protestant communions, shows largest gains for the year. Its communicants number 2,910,779, and its increase was 62,847. All Methodist bodies taken together gained 102,000; all Baptists gained 72,667; all Presbyterians, 16,174; all Lutherans, 51,580. The aggregate figures quoted by Dr. Carroll for all religious bodies in the United States show that there are 154,390 ministers, 201,068 churches and 31,448,445 communicants.

Individual denominations which made notable gains in the year just closed, include the Seventh-Day Adventists which added 3,019 communicants; Southern Baptists, 30,091; Colored Baptists, 12,747; Congregationalists, 13,321; the German Evangelical Synod, 9,539; the Lutheran Synodical Conference, 21,637; the Lutheran General Council, 7,711; Methodist Episcopal South, 25,163; Presbyterians North 18,803; Protestant Episcopal, 19,202, and United Brethren, 5,403. In this connection it should be noted that the Disciples of Christ, which have been rapidly growing in numbers in recent years, and which last year showed a gain of over 26,000 communicants, in 1905 added only 1,429. Christian Scientists gained 7,441.

According to Dr. Carroll's figures the denominational families have changed little in relative size since the government census of churches was taken under its direction in 1890. While the fifteen years have seen some of the religious bodies grow more rapidly than others, the important denominational groups into which practically all may be classified show only two changes in relative size. Thirteen bodies have passed Presbyterians and the Latter Day Saints (Mormon) have passed the United Brethren. The order in which these denominational families now stand, with the communicant membership of each, is as follows:

Catholic, 16,915,251; Methodist, 6,429,815; Baptist, 4,974,947; Lutheran, 1,841,346; Presbyterian, 1,723,871; Episcopal, 827,127; Reformed, 405,022; Latter Day Saints, 244,247; United Brethren, 274,012; Evangelical Bodies, 166,878; Jewish, 143,000; Friends, 120,415; Adventists, 116,311; Adventists, 95,427; Mennonites, 61,048.

The benevolent gifts of 1905, counting those that amounted to $5,000 or more, reached the total of $66,000,000; it is probable that the actual amount was larger than the sum named, as many large gifts are not publicly announced, and there is no way of including them in an annual estimate. Based upon the same information as sources that led to the above total, the estimate for 1904 was $62,000,000, while that for 1903 was $95,000,000.

Fully one-third of the $66,000,000 given away last year was given anonymously. The gifts of Andrew Carnegie to various objects represent $14,000,000 of the total, and the donations of John D. Rockefeller added $12,000,000. More than half of the total sum was devoted to educational purposes. Hospitals received about $5,000,000, museums and galleries $7,000,000, and miscellaneous charities $5,000,000. To special forms of church work was given $4,000,000, besides $2,000,000 especially designated for foreign missions.

Cricket Club Officer.

Albert Schoolden, of this city, has been chosen vice-captain of the Round Brook Cricket Club. The organization is anxious to hear from Plainfield candidates for membership.

LIGHT USERS ORGANIZE

Will Form Protective League, to Keep Tabs on Public Service Corporation.

LED BY R. HENRY DEPEW

Comparison of Bills Leads Him to Conclusion That There is Something Wrong in Public Service Corporation.

Organized effort against the P. S. C. is being planned by gas and electric light consumers of Plainfield. A jump in the light bills for January has led to a lot of kicking and an impression in some quarters that the lighting trust deliberately boosted the total on the bills. R. Henry Depew, of Hillside avenue, is one of those whose bills went up with a getpoor-quick leap. He conceived the idea of a consumers' protective league, and set to work immediately to discover if such an organization could be formed.

Encouragement enough was found. The average householder approached by Mr. Depew seemed to regard an anti-lighting trust league as one of the things for which he had been living and praying for years.

Mr. Depew drew up an agreement to be signed by leaguers, and in one day's search for signatures among his friends and neighbors got fifty names on the league roll. That was 12:50 a. m. Friday in the west half sent a general invitation to join the league to several hundred consumers, in every part of the city. The invitation and agreement were laid before *them in the following circular let*ter:

"Dear Sir:

"My electric light bill was increased this month to $17.49 from $12.07 last month and $13.47 for February 1 last year. As I was not aware of any reason for the increase, I began inquiries to see whether the bills of other people had also been raised and I found that in most cases they had been. You can draw your own inference.

"As individual protests in the past have rarely been productive of satisfactory results, I believe that the only way to handle the situation, will be to form a strong permanent organization, and employ such experts as may be necessary to sift the matter to the bottom, in a way which could not be done by a few individuals.

"To that end I have drawn up the following agreement, and though I only commenced yesterday, I have already obtained about fifty signatures. If you approve of this movement and will sign below in ink, will you kindly sign and forward by return mail, if possible, the enclosed agreement, as we wish to organize with as large a number and as quickly as possible?

Agreement.

"In view of the increase of our bills for electricity and gas, and particularly the great increase in the bills of February 1, which increase seems to be more or less general, and also in view of the poor quality of the gas and the insufficient power of the electricity; we, the undersigned, consider it advisable to form an association to be known as the Plainfield Protective Association.

"The purpose of the association shall be to work together as a body, and individually, for the thorough investigation of the situation and the correction of any errors which may have been made by the Public Service Corporation, or others.

"And it shall be the further purpose of the association to take up, from time to time, such other questions as may be deemed advisable for the general welfare of the property owners and residents of Plainfield, and to have corrected any abuses which may be found to exist.

"We agree to become members of the said association and to pay the sum of ten dollars ($10.00) each for the purpose of employing experts and counsel, when necessary, and for the general expenses of carrying on the work.'

"Also will you kindly ask as many of your friends as possible, to forward their names. When a sufficient number of signatures have been secured, a meeting will be called to complete the association. This is a situation in which we must stand (or fall) together and I earnestly appeal to you to lend your support.

"In returning the agreement, will you kindly give me any particulars in regard to your bills which may be of use. Also are you aware that the Public Service Corporation has two ways of charging—one way for those who know and the other for those who do not? On one plan (the pink bills) you are 18 cents per 1,000 Watt hours with 10 per cent. discount for payment in 10 days. On the other plan (yellow bills) they charge 18 cents per 1,000 for the first 24,000 Watt hours if the meter is in 20 light one (for smaller or larger meters a corresponding decrease or increase in the amount charged at 18 cents) and 7 cents per 1,000 for the excess over that amount.

"Trusting you will forward your name, I am,

"Yours very truly,

(Signed) "R. HENRY DEPEW."

"I ask the co-operation of everyone in Plainfield and North Plainfield who feels that independence is still worth fighting for," said Mr. Depew this morning. "The old story of the meter being correct and the increase being due to the servants' waste, or leaks, might be hard to refute in individual cases, but when it becomes general on the same date the cause must be looked for in some other di*rections, and particularly so when*, as I am advised, a similar increase has taken place in Cranford."

AND NOW SOMERVILLE'S ASSISTANT P. M. GETS OUT.

Beekman Resigns Rather Than Work For His Salary.

The latest development in the Somerville postoffice muddle is the resignation of Assistant Postmaster Asariah M. Beekman. Mr. Beekman is a member of the law firm of Beekman & Vosseller and he declares that the Postoffice Department at Washington, D. C., recently issued an order requiring him to work eight hours each day in the postoffice, and as he could not afford to sacrifice his large law practice in order to comply with this regulation he forwarded his resignation.

Mr. Beekman is continuing to assist *Acting Postmaster John G. Gas*ton and will do so until his successor as assistant postmaster is appointed. Among those prominently mentioned for the position are Bogart T. Conkling, Ezra H. Weldon and Abram A. Reger.

The investigation of the affairs of the Somerville office has given cause for many very sensational rumors, and, from the best information that can be obtained until the result of the recent investigation by two inspectors from Washington is made public, Postmaster Cooper will not be reinstated.

It is also said that the inspectors will return here and continue their investigation in the near future.

SCHIPPER RESIDENCE BOUGHT BY ORANGE MAN.

Other Fine Properties Disposed of Through E. M. French Agency.

The handsome residence of Miss Emilie Schipper, located on the corner of West Seventh street and Spooner avenue, was been sold through the agency of Elston M. French, to Nicholas Mauger, a retired New York merchant, who will remove here shortly from Orange, where he resides at present.

Mr. French has also sold the property on Mercer avenue formerly owned by Oscar S. Vale, of New York, who built the house. The purchaser is Thomas G. Clynes, a prominent New York broker, who intends making Plainfield his home in the future. Mr. Clynes will make extensive improvements on the property before taking possession.

Many lots are being sold by Mr. French in Highland Park, the new tract being developed near the Netherwood station and on the East Second street trolley. Among the recent purchasers are William P. Sharpe, of Scotch Plains; Louis Gerstman, of New York; Miss Maude Donaldson, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Helen P. Gill, of New York city, and Thomas Randall and W. C. Chamberlin, of this city.

NEW CHAPEL PLANS.

Warren's Proposed Structure to be of Brick Covered With Stucco.

The Session and trustees of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church in their consideration of the new building for Warren chapel have decided to erect one main structure of brick, instead of two—a church auditorium and a Sunday-school room. This action obviates the necessity of a mortgage, and does not preclude the possibility of changing the proposed building, at some fu*ture time, into* a church and adding to it a Sunday-school room.

It has also been decided to build the structure of brick covered with stucco, and cannot in the nature of things be ready before November of this year. Under these conditions the work will probably not be started before late spring or early summer.

TROLLEY CAR CRASHES INTO A BREWERY WAGON.

Ira Gregg, Driver, Severely Injured. Taken to Hospital.

One of the Rising Sun Brewery Company wagons returning from this city to Elizabeth, last night, about 8 o'clock, was struck by a main line trolley car on Westfield avenue, Elmora, and completely wrecked. Ira Gregg, the driver, of 526 Martin street, Elizabeth, and an Italian, who accompanied him, were thrown out. Gregg was severely cut about the head and shoulders and is now under treatment at the Elizabeth General Hospital. The Italian escaped injury.

The wagon was drawn by four mules. The pair nearest the wagon were cut about the flanks and otherwise injured. The fender and vestibule of the car were wrecked, but the motorman was not injured. He was taken into custody and the accident is being investigated. As yet the responsibility has not been determined.

BIRTHDAY SOCIAL DELIGHTED MANY

An attractive entertainment including charades and other novel features comprised the programme presented at the annual birthday social held in Vincent chapel, Thursday night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church. There was a large attendance of members of the church and not only was the entertainment *greatly enjoyed, but a sub*stantial sum was realized from the envelopes collected from among the members of the society. This money will be used to make needed improvements in the kitchen at the chapel.

The chapel was decorated with varied colored crepe paper, rugs, sofa pillows and flowers, while several cozy corners added to the comfort of many. Mrs. Judd Stewart was chairman of the decorating committee and was assisted by several members of the society.

The programme, the various numbers of which were announced by Henry A. McGee, opened with piano solos by Miss May Vincent Whitney; followed with a recitation, "Thanksgiving at Grandma's," by Miss Bertha Whitney. In connection with this the birthday envelopes were collected by children representing "John Alden" and "Priscilla."

The first part of a charade was then given. This was called "Incompatibility," and the audience was supposed to guess the correct answer. The characters were as follows:

"Father," William Gilbert; "Daughter," Miss Nan Wilson; "Her Lover," Arthur Humble; "Hattie," a little sister, Julian Bowtey; "Billy," a small brother, Chauncey Stewart; "Martha," a maid, Miss Helena Huber. In carrying out the title of the charade, the word was divided up, the participants representing "income," "pati," "bill," "ty," the last two words being interpreted by a wedding scene meaning a "tie."

Interspersing this charade there was a soprano solo by Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis, and various young people represented the months of the year in costume. Miss Margaret Robley, as winter, represented December and January; February and March, Katherine Bingaman and Blanche McVoy; April, Muriel Corson; May, Charlotte Skiff; June, Mildred Burnett, seated in a small wagon being drawn by Donald and Chauncey Stewart; July, Chester Alpaugh; Charles McCrea, Donald Stewart, Chauncey Stewart and Elton Greenleaf, dressed as "Uncle Sam." The representations were all very clever and faithfully portrayed the different months.

The programme was concluded with a piano duett by Miss Frances Rittenhouse and Miss Muriel Collins. Refreshments were then served and a social time had. Much credit is due Mrs. George H. Whitney, as chairman of the entertainment committee, for the success of the affair, and she was ably assisted by Miss Bertha Whitney. Mrs. G. H. Rittenhouse was chairman of the refreshment committee and assisting her were Mrs. Mary Winter, Miss Gertrude Sharp, Mrs. C. H. Rugg and Miss Stafford. The novel invitation was written by Miss Helen Whitney, in which all were asked to bring as many pennies as there were years old.

DECLINES PULPIT FOR Y. M. C. A. WORK.

C. B. Brown Likely to Refuse Assistant Pastorship at Orange.

Charles B. Brown, brother of Tax Collector George H. Brown, of the borough, and formerly assistant to the late Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes in the pastoral work of the First Baptist church, this city, has been honored with a call to be assistant to the Rev. Dr. William M. Lawrence, of the North Baptist church, of Orange. It is understood, however, that Mr. Brown will decline the call, and remain in his present position as associate State secretary of the Young Men's Christian Associations of New Jersey.

Mr. Brown, who has been prominent in Y. M. C. A. work, both in the West and East for some thirteen years, will be remembered by many Plainfielders. In connection with the large Bible class which he conducted in the First Baptist church, the enrollment of which contained nearly 250 men, representing about every line of business.

Shinn, of the Kemendine Girls' School, Burma, whose engagement to Professor Walter St. John, of Rangoon College, was recently announced, will sail for America March 12, for a much needed rest. A set of rubber tires for the aerial truck at fire headquarters has been ordered by the fire committee of the Common Council. They will be forwarded within a few weeks and *installed as soon as the vehicle under*goes a thorough overhauling.

ANNUAL RECEPTION TO PASTOR AND WIFE

REV. AND MRS. A. E. FINN HONORED BY CONGREGATION.

The second annual reception to Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Finn was given in the First Avenue Baptist church Thursday night, and considering the weather, there was a large attendance. The affair was under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church, of which Mrs. Frank T. Ostrom is the president, and the members joined in making it a pleasant occasion.

Japanese drapings comprised the chief decorations, many of these things having been brought from Japan by one of the members of the society. There was also an arrangement of other drapings, rugs and banquet lamps which made the room very attractive.

Rev. and Mrs. Finn were assisted in receiving by the pastor's mother, Mrs. M. A. Finn; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore I. Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Cuming, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dayton, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Ball, Mr. and Mrs. David M. Runyon.

Mrs. Frank T. Ostrom had general supervision of the affair. The refreshment committee comprised Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry, Mrs. A. D. Thompson and Mrs. Lottie A. Udell. The entertainment committee, of the flower and social committees, of which Mrs. Charles VanWinkle and Miss Nellie Miner are the chairmen. These persons acted as waitresses: Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Grace Chamberlain, Miss Olive DeLany, Mrs. H. C. Runyon, Miss Florence G. Hawkins, Miss Peterson, Miss Violet VanWinkle, Miss Elizabeth VanWinkle, Miss Myra Runyon and Miss Giles.

A pleasant feature of the occasion *was the attractive programme of mu*sic rendered throughout the evening by an orchestra of which G. W. V. Moy was the leader.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE CAUSES $300 DAMAGE

STARTED IN DINING-ROOM AT HOME OF CHARLES HEPNER.

From an origin as yet unaccounted for by Chief Doane, fire broke out at 12:50 this morning in the west half of a double house on West Fourth street, near Prescott place, occupied by Charles Hepner, a conductor of the street railway. An alarm was turned in from box 84, and the prompt arrival of the West End chemical engine, stationed bu three blocks away, prevented a serious blaze. The flames started in the dining room back of a couch and spread between the walls, compelling the firemen to put in an hour's hard work getting it out. The loss will reach $300, of which $100 is on furniture.

The family had only retired shortly after midnight when Mr. Hepner was aroused by smoke. He hurried downstairs and found flames lighting up the whole first floor. He hastily aroused his wife and children and then running to the street shouted to men in the car barns to turn in an alarm. Box 84, at Grant avenue and Fourth street, was pulled.

By the time the chemical stream was used in fighting the flames preventing a heavy loss from water.

WEDDED AT RECTORY.

Quiet Ceremony Unites Miss Margaret Harding and J. W. Graham.

With only immediate relatives in attendance, Miss Margaret Harding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Harding, of John street, and Joseph W. Graham, local superintendent of the Metropolitan Insurance Company, were married at St. Mary's rectory Thursday night. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Delehanty, and Miss Catherine Harding and Miss Thomas Harding, sister and brother of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and best man.

Owing to the recent severe illness of Miss Harding, a quiet reception was held at her parents' home. Mr. and Mrs. Graham afterward left for Liberty, N. Y., where the latter will remain until she has fully recovered her health. She is widely known in the city and borough and has been prominent in the social affairs of St. Mary's parish.

Seek Endowment Fund.

For the purpose of having a ready fund to meet certain expenses that are incurred from time to time, a movement has been started in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church which seeks bequests of various amounts. It is believed that in this way there should grow up a fund which, while in no way paralyzing the present giving habit of the church, would enable the officers to do some things not otherwise possible.

Camera Club's New Lantern.

The Plainfield Camera Club has purchased a fine new lantern for exhibition purposes. A committee from the club having charge of a series of illustrated lectures to be given this winter will soon announce the dates.

MEMORIES OF THE WAR

TALK BY CAPT. HAND

He Takes Lecturer's Place on Platform to Tell of His Part In Battle of Gettysburg.

Pictures, memories and songs of wartime were the features of an entertainment tendered to Plainfield veterans by the Reform Club Thursday. The affair attracted a large audience, which included close to 150 old soldiers.

The principal number on the programme was a lecture on the great battles and generals of the Rebellion. Charles M. Raybert, of this city, was the lecturer. The illustrations were graphic and numerous—sixty-one in all being shown.

One of the groups illustrated the battle of Gettysburg. When the first slide in the series was thrown on the screen, Mr. Raybert called on Capt. William Hand, who was in the battle, to take his place on the platform. Capt. Hand told an unusually interesting story of his part in the fight in a conversational way but had a charm of narrative as he described the forced marches that preceded the engagement of his brigade, and his somewhat humorus hunt for a variety in rations the night before he went into battle. Capt. Hand was only in the second day's fighting, going to the rear with a wound in his foot. Fire Chief Doane, who was his tentmate, was wounded in the head that day. He lost so much blood, the captain said, that it was feared he would not live to receive treatment.

Among the musical numbers was a robust rendition of "Army Beans," the old camp song in celebration of the perennial bean, by Capt. W. C. Smith. The Capt. also sang "Marching Through Georgia." Miss Lydia Edgar accompanied him.

The other musical numbers included solos, "Just Before the Battle, Mother," and "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," by Miss Edgar; "Massa's In the Cold, Cold Ground," by Miss Nan Ackerman; and "The Star Spangled Banner," by Mrs. John Manley. Naylor's orchestra played several selections.

The affair was arranged by Capt. W. C. Smith, Mrs. Hattie Gibbons and Alexander McMunn. Other entertainments of similar character are being planned by the club.

MISCHIEVOUS BOYS CAUSED A SHUT-DOWN

FOOLED WITH FACTORY ENGINE, KEPT MECHANICS BUSY TWO HOURS.

Charles L. Norwood, ten years old, Roland McCrea, nine years old, Anderson Harris, thirteen years old, all colored, and Joseph A. Carroll, fourteen years old, were arraigned before Judg Runyon this morning on a charge of malicious mischief preferred by the Spicer Universal Joint Co., which conducts its business in a factory on Madison avenue. The complainant alleges that the boys damaged the factory engine to such a extent that the plant was shut down for two hours.

The damage to the engine was discovered by the factory management when the plant was opened last Sunday morning. The company is conducted by non-Sunday Baptists, and shuts down on Saturdays. When the engineer tried to start the machinery the crank was found to be jammed so tightly by a pin that the shaft could not turn. It took mechanics two hours to set the engine right.

The crank could only have been jammed by outsiders, and the management is making investigation. They learned that some boys had entered the place the day before, while the plant *was idle, and amused them*selves pawing over the machinery. Warrants for the four boys arraigned this morning resulted.

The boys acknowledged going into the factory, but denied monkeying with the engine. Harris said he heard Carrol had done the damage, but the white boy insisted that another crowd, who were in the place before he got there, did it. Judge Runyon couldn't satisfy himself that the boys were telling the truth, and adjourned the hearing to Friday morning, to enable the police to investigate further. The authorities regard the case seriously, because the boys might have done a lot of costly damage, and it is intended to make it plain to the youngsters that they are engaged in dangerous business when they fool with factory machinery.

AND VIEWS OF CITY FATHERS

Majority of Members Set Against Any More Saloons—The Liquor Zone Ordinance to Remain.

Unless there is a radical change of views among the city fathers between now and Friday night, February 23, no new licenses will be granted by the Common Council. A poll of the members made by a representative of The Daily Press shows that the majority of councilmen will vote only in favor of renewals. Following are the expression of opinions obtained:

Ralph I. Tolles—I don't like to commit myself. As yet I haven't made up my mind on the matter, but I can say that I don't think any new applications will be considered. The place where Schanz wants to have a license is too near the Friends' meeting house. I think there is a general feeling against any more licenses. You know I am a high license man. If I could be done I would favor stopping the sale of liquor, but of course that is out of the question. As for that Goff application, I certainly wouldn't favor it. I am not inclined to favor Shay's.

William S. Tyler—The ordinance determines my views on the applications of Shay and Goff. As to Schanz, I think that on general principles there are enough saloons in the town. I don't want to be placed on record without hearing what is to be said when the applications are considered.

Daniel F. Glinn—When the licenses come up I would be better prepared to talk. There are one or two matters I would like to be better informed upon before I express an opinion. Speaking not as an official, but rather as a private citizen, I think the location Schanz has selected would be a very poor place for a gin shop. It is another block to the trolley station. I hardly think there will be any attempt to repeal the saloon district ordinance. Most people are satisfied to give it a fair trial.

Henry D. Hibbard—I haven't given the matter serious attention. On general principles I think that less liquor traffic there is the better. I shall probably vote for the present licenses.

Charles C. Randolph—Goff certain*ly wouldn't get my vote even if we* could grant him a license. I am not in favor of Schanz's application, for that place he wants is right there at the trolley station. I don't think I shall vote to increase licenses, and I certainly shall not vote to repeal the saloon zone ordinance. You can make that as emphatic as you like.

William L. Glonk—Well, I made up my mind at the beginning of the year that I would not vote for any new licenses. There is no use of talking about Goff or Shay. I wouldn't vote for either one. Schanz's proposed place would be a detriment. It is in front of the trolley station and too near the railroad station. If that saloon district ordinance could be repealed I would like to see it done, for I was against it last year and am of the same opinion now. It's unfair.

Francis L. Montgomery—So far as I am concerned, I do not favor renewing the Eastern Bottling Company's license. I don't see why there is need for two wholesale places. One is enough, and unless some very good reason can be presented why I should change my mind I shall vote to re*fuse* the Eastern Bottling Company's permit. As for Goff and Shay, the saloon zone ordinance makes any consideration of their applications out of the question. I don't know anything about Schanz, and would like to be better posted before I express an opinion.

George P. Mellick is in Georgia and Herbert W. Buxton is in Cleveland, consequently their views could not be ascertained by The Daily Press representative. Neither Lester M. Daniel nor Frank D. Randolph could be located last night. Both Mr. Mellick and Mr. Daniel are very likely to oppose any additional licenses, and Mr. Buxton and Mr. Randolph, it is considered, will take the position held by President Tolles.

Will Appear at Sportmen's Show.

Several members of the Wanamassa Boat Club have entered the athletic events to be held at the Sportsmen's Show to be held in Madison Square Garden for three weeks, beginning February 20. Among the events in which they are entered include the canoe race, tug of war in boats and running races. Expensive prizes are offered this year, the cheapest being one valued at $40. The local young men hope to make a good showing.

David Krymer Buried.

The funeral of David Krymer was held from his late home on Liberty street yesterday afternoon. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated in the presence of a large gathering of friends, which included a delegation from the Juniors. Interment was made in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

TRUCE OR VICTORY REV. MR. PARSON'S THEME

PASTOR TALKS TO CIVIL WAR VETS AND THEIR WIVES.

"Truce or Victory" was the subject of a sermon delivered by Rev. Phil. A. Parsons at the Christian church last night, before the members of the G. A. R., Union Veterans' Union, Women's Relief Corps, Veteran Relief Union and other patriotic organizations. The church was filled with a large and interested audience. There was special music by an orchestra, which also led in the singing of patriotic songs.

Mr. Parsons' talk was enjoyed by all. The keynote was that there must be no surrender in the Christian fight, but victory must be the watchword. He related scenes and incidents in connection with the Civil War and drew helpful lessons by way of application to the Christian warfare now being waged. After the sermon remarks were made by William Carey, an earnest and enthusiastic Christian worker from Newark.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP THE ONLY REMEDY

PLAN TO CURB UTILITY CORPORATION USELESS, SAYS MARTINE.

That Henry Depew's plan to curb the gas and electric company is a step to be encouraged none but the Public Service Company will deny, but I fear it will not be conducive of much results. It seems to me that the only hope for consumers lies in municipal ownership of the great utilities, gas and water. These have become so interwoven with our civilization that they are necessities.

There is no hope to be expected from these great companies that have watered their stock four times its legitimate cost, and are bent upon making the people pay dividends on water. This agitation is most welcome to me, for in the past, because of agitation along these lines for years, I have been "shooed" as a "crank" and "agitator" with socialistic tendencies.

I have looked into this question much in the past years and am convinced that this intelligent population can only lower price to consumers, but improve efficiency and service for the people through municipal ownership. Let the good work go on!

LITERARY

Judge Tyler's great novel of Southern life, "The K. K. K.," is begun in the National Magazine for February. Strong pictures by M. L. Blumenthal illustrate the text. Charles Warren Stoddard's "A Misadventure in the Campagna," is a thrilling story in the life of this famous author and reveals delightful glimpses of old Rome, most romantic of living cities. "The World for Christ" is Mary Caroline Crawford's story of the growth of the Christian Endeavor Union during its first quarter century, now closing. It is freely illustrated from photographs. "When Jill Goes to Boarding School," by W. F. Melton, illustrated by Mr. Blumenthal, recounts some of the amorous adventures that solace the heavy hours of youth seeking an education away from home. Innocent, of course, but highly diverting. "Washington and Lincoln," February's famous sons, are studied in the pithy, epigrammatic style of Gertrude McGovern, who considers Washington as "The Ancestor," Lincoln as "The Dictator"—papers in which the republic's founder and its saviour reappear among us in their true characters—our greatest heroes physically as well as intellectually.

LAST GAMES IN CENTRAL JOURNAL TOURNAMENT.

Park Club Will Probably Finish in Third Place.

The chances are now that the Westfield Club will win the series for the year and capture the silver loving cup in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament. Elizabeth is a close second, but hardly near enough to be a possibility for first place. Westfield will meet Cranford this week in the last series of the tournament, and it is fairly certain that the leaders will cinch their hold on the cup. The Park Club is still in second position, and the chances are will remain there.

In the match between Roselle and Park on Friday night, Roselle won the first two, while the Plainfielders captured the last game by a difference of five pins. The first game was likewise close, Roselle winning by six pins. In the individual averages F. O. Ball, of the Park Club, leads, with 176.8 for twenty-four games rolled. Barlow is third, with an average of 171 for the same number of games, and the other local bowlers hold a much lower position in averages. The league series will be concluded a week from tomorrow night, when Cranford will meet Westfield, the Parks will roll against Elizabeth on the local alleys, and Newark Bay will meet Roselle at home.

WRITERS AND MUSICIANS.

Prof. Claude Halstead van Tyne, author of "The American Revolution," is a noted athlete as well as an eminent scholar.

Sir Edward Elgar, the distinguished composer, was at one time a Rabbi in the Jewish empire. There is no such place as Judea. Sir Kipling's theme was the former of the Punjab, which he knows.

In 1873 the German novelist William Raabe wrote a story in which one of the characters remarked that the time would come when there would be an English Shakespeare. Mr. Kipling's theme would then be very animated. "Oh, it to-day Japan and stand before it as before a dark riddle."

Senator John W. Daniel of Virginia is working steadily on the writing of the memoirs of Gen. Jubal A. Early, the distinguished confederate leader. The senator has but recently returned to his home in Washington from an extended trip in search of material for notes and additions to the book.

The late Julius Stinde, one of the greatest wits in recent years in the German book world, went to Berlin in 1876 and for some time no attention was paid him. He brought out "Buchholzens" in Italian, and all Germany laughed with him, and tens of thousands of copies were sold.

Senator Tullo Massarini died recently in Milan at the age of 78. He was extremely rich and provided for his charitable bequests. He had a reputation as a painter and writer on literary subjects, and through his work the German poet Heine exercised considerable influence in Italian belles lettres.

Some of the world's greatest singers have been discovered accidentally. Once upon a time Wachtl, the great tenor of his day in Germany, was cracking his whip and hailing fares in a musical rondo. Mme. Scalchi, the greatest of contraltos, is said to have called her wares in the street before she was found for the opera stage. Campanini, the king of tenors, was a blacksmith, but was heard singing like an angel and was enabled to desert the forge for the footlights.

ODDITIES OF INVENTION.

In Germany clocks have been run by wireless telegraphy. Portable wireless stations, so light that they can be carried by men, have also been devised by German inventors.

An ecclesiastic French invention which utilizes electroplating for the deposit of extremely thin coatings of precious metals is said to make possible the gold plating of lace, without stiffening the fabric. Silver is used in the same way.

A machine has been invented for manufacturing cotton automobile tires. The tires are woven something like lampwicks, only they are heavier and of coarser texture. They are said to resist a pressure of 6,000 pounds to the square inch.

Although not yet perfected, the Majorama telephone bids fair vastly to extend the field of usefulness of the long-distance telephone by rendering audible vibrations too faint to actuate the disk of the ordinary receiver or even the microphone instruments.

An automatic fire alarm recently patented in England sounds an alarm in a hotel office 12 seconds after a fire starts in any of its rooms. The apparatus is simply an application of the fact that heat causes expansion, sufficient in this case to complete an electric circuit.

Aluminum is being used in France to make alloys of brass for the construction of submarine boats. It has been found that the admixture of aluminum produces extraordinary changes in the color of the resulting bronze. A little aluminum makes it deep gold, and at a point where between five and ten per cent. of aluminum is used it becomes rosered. Over ten per cent. of the lighter metal makes the alloy white.

RELIGIOUS REPORT.

The third European Christian Endeavor convention will be held in Geneva next year, July 28-August 1.

The Epworth League of Springfield, Ill., district will support a missionary in Borena, and is raising $1,000 for that purpose.

The Christian Endeavor has now 67,003 societies. This is an increase of 231 since the convention held in Baltimore.

A pension of at least $100 a year was voted to its lay home missionary workers by the recent Wesleyan conference of England.

Leaders of the Methodist church in Brooklyn are expecting a great revival this fall. They think there is a remarkable religious awakening in the city, which they hope to see greatly stimulated by the personal efforts of Bishop Malhiller of Boston.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1906.

Shake 'em up, Mr. Daab, shake 'em up. We want that same brand of ball next season.

Statistics show that there were seventy-three strikes last year. That doesn't include the number made by the printers' devils.

John D. Rockefeller need not worry over the threatened coal strike or an advance in the pricq of ice next summer, though an estimate of his dividends for the last year approximates a paltry $40,000,000.

Dr. Gladden is rather inclined to believe that Congressman Fowler's bill for clean money fails utterly to go to the root of the matter.—Newark News.

There they are at it again. Won't they ever let us try as much as Fowler does himself that he represents the Fifth district.

In requesting that no present be sent his daughter in the name of any government, President Roosevelt acts in good taste and displays his usual good common sense. What reason there could be for any nation to feel that it is called to send a present every time a member of the family of a Republic's executive is married is very hard to discover.

Every citizen of Plainfield and North Plainfield should write to their representatives in the Legislature to oppose the passage of the bill providing for an "open season" for killing of doves. There is no reason whatever for legalizing the slaughter of those little birds, and the senator or assemblyman who advocates the enactment of the proposed measure, to say the least, is a heartless person.

It is quite certain that the petition of the hackmen will not be granted in its present form at least. "There does not appear to be so much objection to allowing the slight increase in rates of fare as there is to its other features. From what can be learned, the majority of the councilmen will not vote to do away with the badges worn by the cabbies or with the numbers placed on the lamps.

Plainfield should be able to build up a college men's club that would rival any in the State of New Jersey. It is quite safe to say that there is as large a proportion of graduates of the various institutions of learning as is to be found in any other city. In the main they are the representative men of the community and are largely responsible for making Plainfield what it is—one of the finest places of abode in New Jersey. By all means let there be a college club here.

The forthcoming conference of the State Charities Aid workers will have as its primary objects discussion of methods for the raising of the standard of relief among the employes of the State, county and municipal institutions and for the bringing about of more effective schemes of co-operation among the various public and private benevolent institutions in New Jersey. That it will be productive of good results there can be no doubt. Officers of the many charitable institutions, members of the judiciary, leading participants in church benevolent organizations as well as many individuals in their private capacity who work independently for the uplifting of the masses and the betterment of mankind will make addresse during the sessions. The first meeting will take place Thursday morning in the Public Library in Newark and the sessions will also be held on Friday and Saturday. It is quite probable that Plainfield will be represented by a large delegation of men and women actively interested in the laudable work of the organization.

Much good can come from the suggested Plainfield Protective Association if it exerts its efforts in the right direction and does not have such a passive existence as usually characterizes a board of trade. One of its first objects, according to Mr. Depew, will be to investigate lighting bills in the interest of householders generally. In this it should receive hearty support, but judgment should be suspended until the company which supplies this utility is given a hearing. Because bills are higher than customary does not warrant anyone jumping at a conclusion that the lighting company is dishonest. The fact that it is the P. S. C. should not prejudice the case and will not in the eyes of sober-minded people. It is a common practice nowadays for reformers to hit at corporations right and left. So long as they keep within the law there should be no difference in treatment between an incorporated body and a collection of individual citizens. If the P. S. C. is charging exorbitant rates it should be brought to book in short order, but because it happens to be a huge corporation but rather because it is robbing its customers.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theodore Roberts, who is appearing in "The Squaw Man" at Wallack's theatre, New York, enjoys the distinction of being the only actor on Broadway who has a part in which he has no word of language other than Ute. Mr. Roberts has been carefully instructed by Baco White, the Government interpreter, who also assumes the role of interpreter in the play. Mr. Roberts has found a keen enjoyment in his study of the language of the Utes, as he and his instructor confine themselves exclusively to it while in the theatre, that is, when talking to each other.

Miss Ellis Jeffreys, the most brilliant of the English comediennes, now appearing at Daly's theatre in New York, in Alfred Sutro's most delightful comedy, "The Fascinating Mr. Vandervelt," is most happily cast in the play as "Lady Clarion Howland." If there is one thing Miss Jeffreys excels in it is the portrayal of a woman of the upper social strata and the naive incouciance of her portrayal, coupled with the clever dialogue that the play is written, goes to make up an entertainment that is delivering a strong appeal to nearly all thinking personscmfw all thinking persons. The play is so scintillating in wit, and is happily free from its good humored battle of wits, that one leaves the theatre refreshed as by a mental bath.

Raymond Hitchcock has burst forth in a blaze of glory at the Gardentheatre, the occasion being Richard Harding Davis' latest and what is considered by many his greatest work, namely, "The Galloper." Manager Henry W. Savage has given the Davis farce a production of scenic splendor, and he has likewise surrounded Raymond Hitchcock with one of the most notable of companies. Its personnel embraces such well known names as T. Daniel Frawley, Edgar Davenport, Scott Cooper, E. B. Tilton, Nannette Comstock, May Buckley, Helen Lackaye, Herbert Corthell and numerous others. Mr. Davis has not only given Mr. Hitchcock one of the most congenial of roles, but he has likewise supplied the various characters with lines and situations of much brilliancy, which afford every opportunity to each and every member of Mr. Hitchcock's company. The action of "The Galloper" is set forth in three scenes, each of which has been admirably described by the well known scenic artist, Walter Burridge. The first act takes place in a hotel at Athens, the second shows the dock at Piraeus, where the war correspondents embark to the scene of action. The third act shows the Turkish camp in the Volo Mountains, all of which scenes set forth a brilliant satire on the Graeco-Turkish War in 1897, in which Mr. Davis was himself a "Galloper" for the New York Herald and London Times. It will thus be seen that the background gives ample opportunity for scenic embellishments.

The Rogers Brothers, in their new musical play, "The Rogers Brothers in Ireland," is the attraction at the New York theatre for a brief engagement, beginning next Monday evening. This piece was presented earlier in the season at the Liberty theatre. The company numbers 125 people, and the scenery and costuming are superb. The story is told in three acts with scenes which show Glendalough, the Lakes of Killarney and Blarney Castle. The Rogers Brothers play the roles of Heinrich Veik and Nicholas Kox, two pushing spirited young German-Americans who visit Ireland to purchase the blarney stone and place it on exhibition in the United States, to raise a fund to release Ireland from the British government. The Germans become involved in a series of comic complications which introduce a varied selection of Irish types. All characters but those played by the Rogers Brothers speak with a brogue. The principal supporting role is played by Corinne, formerly widely known as "Little Corinne." Other noted players are Josie Intropodi, Bessie de Vole, Charles McCarthy, Edward O'Connor, John Conroy, Ethel Intropodi, Julia Eastman, William Torpey, Arthur V. Gibson, Grace Grindell and Pauline Thorne.

The American boy is essentially patriotic and the publishers of the greatest boys' magazine in the world have made this the leading feature in the February number. The front cover with the Washington coat of arms, and a sentiment quoted from George Washington himself, is exceedingly attractive. Among the stories which in variety will please almost every kind of a boy are: The concluding portion of John Barr's "Relief of the North Branch Fort;" also the final chapters of "Denny, a Mule Driver." "A French Frog and an American Eagle" is advanced two chapters. No. 4 of the editor's stories, entitled "Up in the World," teaches the lesson of helpfulness and consideration for others; "Neevus and the Wolf Pack" is a fine story of how an old negro outwitted a pack of bloodthirsty wolves which were after him and obtained a large sum of bounty money; "Forgetful Thomas" tells of a boy who was always forgetting and was cured in a singular way; "The Speak-Cat" is a story for trappers and hunters away up in the north woods; "Cake Eater" shows how the office boy turned the tables on his tormentor, the bookkeeper; "Ned and Billy" is a story of kindness and help; "The Test of Allen Marry" will please every reader who loves courage in sticking to the right; "The Office Boy" tells how a boy remained firm in face of great temptation.

The biggest comedy hit of the year in New York is Fay Templeton in Geo. M. Cohan's music play, "45 Minutes from Broadway," at the New Amsterdam theatre, where she is now in her fourth week. Miss Templeton is undoubtedly the cleverest comedienne on the American stage. Her versatility was never more strongly tested than in this play, wherein she has serious and emotional as well as broad comedy situations. Her work is particularly pleasing to women, as it is entirely devoid of comediennes always refined in all that she does and never resorting to the slightest suggestion of coarseness to make her comic points. Victor Moore, who plays the opposite role, "Kid" Burns, has made his second only to that of the star. Mr. Moore, too, belongs to the quiet, unctuous and refined school of comedy, and in him Miss Templeton finds a most able second, in full sympathy with her stage methods. It is a pleasure to witness the situations in which these really great artists, who make their points through refreshingly natural methods. As for the piece itself, it far surpasses expectation and any one who sees it cannot leave the theatre disappointed. It is a very effective conglomeration of different schools of theatrical entertainment into a powerful story of human interest, staged with novelty, variety and snap. "45 Minutes from Broadway" is quite the real thing in New York.

ROCKEFELLER FORTUNE.

The Enormous Sums of Money That Working For One Man.

John D. Rockefeller's Standard Oil dividends for the year will amount to $20,000,000, and his income from all sources for 1905 is estimated at $40,000,000.

That sum is not the Rockefeller fortune, bear in mind, but the accretions of a single year. "Frenzied finance" would capitalize such an income for a par value of a billion dollars.

Rockefeller might spend and give away $40,000,000 in a single year, and be no poorer at the end of the year than at its beginning. He doesn't spend 1 per cent. of it, and in all his years of giving he has never gotten rid of as much as he is taking in this year. The money is simply piling up, adding to the vast hoard and increasing the enormous power of one man.

Taxes levied in the State of Minnesota for a year amount to $20,000,000. This sum supports the State government, all the State institutions, all county governments, all of our cities with their special assessments, supports all our schools, and pays the expenses of township and road work. The Rockefeller income is twice the income of this great State. Minnesota has the greatest permanent school fund of any State in the union, now over $16,000,000. Rockefeller could supply two such endowments out of his annual income and still have $8,000,000 for pin money.

Such figures are beyond the comprehension of ordinary mortals. Reduced them to lower terms will make it easier. Rockefeller's income for a week is very near $800,000. That sum of money would establish a family in wealth and social position for all time to come, if conservatively invested. The income from that $800,000 would keep the possessors in luxury such as no one dreamed of fifty years ago. The income for a single day, over $100,000 would be a welcome endowment for many a small college.

Every hour adds to the Rockefeller fortune a sum almost equal to a congressman's annual salary. He receives in fifteen minutes from the money that is working for him as much as most skilled mechanics earn in a year of toil.

Regardless of where and how he got it, the fact stands that he has it, and that the increment from his hoard is large enough to be a menace to legitimate industry and commerce. It is great enough to threaten the subversion of free institutions.—Minneapolis Journal.

Former Plainfielder Very Ill.

William Pearson, a former well known resident of the borough, is dangerously ill at the Alexian Brothers Hospital, Elizabeth. He will be remembered as the senior member of the firm of Pearson & Gayle, the contracting carpenters.

Herbert S. Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Yates, all of this city, are stopping at the Chalfonte, Atlantic City.

—Kurzhal's barber shop will remove about March 1 from its present location on West Second street to the store on the south side of the New Plainfield theatre building.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hurley, of Richmond street, are the parents of a son who came to their home yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gillmore, of East Front street, have returned from a stay with friends at Chillicothe, O.

Albert Beers, who has been spending several days at his home here, has returned to Princeton College.

SAID EXPENSES WERE TOO HIGH

FINANCIERS FOUND FAULT WITH COST OF OPERATING PUBLIC SERVICE.

For mal control of the Public Service Corporation, which has been managed by local interests since May, 1903, will be transferred at an early date to the New York and Philadelphia capitalists who control the public utilities of the latter cities and have Hudson and Delaware River connections with New Jersey.

The movement, which has been under way for several months, was engineered and brought to a successful conclusion by A. J. Cassatt, representing the Pennsylvania Railroad interests; Randal Morgan and Thomas Dolan, for the United Gas Improvement Company; Leslie D. Ward, for the Prudential-Fidelity interests; former Senator Smith, for several local interests, including his own holdings in many of the underlying companies, and George W. Perkins, of J. P. Morgan & Co., for the New York end.

The initial demand for the change is said to have its origin in complaints of poor service, heard not only in one section of the State, but in every section where the new corporation was in control, and that meant practically all of the State, as it includes about 650 miles of street railroads and all the important gas and electric companies in New Jersey.

These complaints were attributed in a measure to the fact that the Public Service Corporation when incorporated had promised great improvements and used that as the principal reason for cutting the par stock value of the trolley and electric companies it acquired by purchase with interest bearing certificates from $59,000,000 to $20,000,000.

This was done, it was said at the time, as a means to "water" out of overcapitalized corporations and provide a guaranteed dividend on a fair valuation, thus stimulating investment and providing the capital necessary for improvements.

In this connection $12,500,000 Public Service stock was sold at par, and $7,250,000 interest bearing notes were issued, making a total of almost 20,000,000, which the public assumed was used for improvements.

But at least a part of the sum was so used appears evident from the statment that the $11,508,000 bonds pledged as collateral for the $7,250,000 loan made in 1904 are said to have been acquired for moneys invested by that Public Service to merged and leased companies for improvements.

Of this about $8,500,000 seems to be charged to the North Jersey and Jersey City, Paterson and Hoboken lines, and $1,500,000 to the South Jersey Gas, Electric and Traction Company. Notwithstanding these large outlays it is said the "improvements" did increase the earning capacities of the improved roads.

It is a measure this was attributed, according to the financiers who demanded a change, to lax methods of management and expensive operating forces, amounting to sixty, and, in some instances, to seventy per cent. of the gross earnings.

NEW TROLLEY SCHEME.

New York Syndicate Supposed to Be Planning Mountain Line.

Plans for a high-speed trolley line between Newark and Somerville, to run along the foot of the Watchungs in this section, are said to be afoot. A New York syndicate is supposed to be back of the project.

A statement made by Jonas Staats, who lives on the mountain near Bound Brook, and the sale of three farms, 250 acres in all, near there to New York capitalists, form the basis for the report. The farms were bought recently. Big sums are said to have been offered for other farms in the vicinity. Surveyors employed by Mc-Ilvra & Co., a New York firm that has been doing the buying, have been at work along the mountain in the neighborhood, and Staats declares one of them told him a metropolitan syndicate was back of the land deals and sought to get mountain land as far east as Springfield, with the definite intention of building and operating a high-speed trolley along the Watchung range as soon as satisfactory right of way had been secured.

Dinner Both "Wet" and "Dry."

Recorder Lazarus, chairman of the Bayonne Board of Trade's annual dinner, yesterday announced that the dinner will be both "wet" and "dry." Those desiring wines may have them, and there will be ice water for the teetotalers. Several Prohibitionists in the board favored having nothing stronger than water.

A Copper Capped.

Patrolman John Payne, of the local police force, is mourning the loss of a valuable stick pin which disappeared from his cravat Monday. He holds the opinion that it was stolen as it was so fixed that it could not drop out. The pin is a horse shoe affair set with six diamonds.

Stephen Blazier, of Elmwood place, who has been spending the winter in Florida, is expected to return home early in March.

TIME IS THE TEST.

The Testimony of Plainfield People Stands the Test.

The test of time is what tells the tale. The public soon find out when misrepresentations are made, and merit alone will stand the test of time.

Plainfield people appreciate merit, and many months ago local citizens publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills; they do so still. Would a statement make the statement which follows unless convinced that the article was just as represented? A cure that lasts is the kind that every sufferer from kidney ills is looking for.

Mrs. John Driscoll, of 217 Grant avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I made a statement for publication regarding the merits of Dean's Kidney Pills, and said statement still holds good in every particular. If I were to make a single change in it, it would only be to make it stronger, for during the past few years I have known many people to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and have yet to hear of a case in which the remedy failed to do the work it is claimed to do. My own case was a dull aching pain in the small of the back and backaches, and spells of dizziness when stooping. The remedy, finding, at length, the relief I have described in the testimonial I gave for publication in 1898."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

One of the pleasantest features of the local theatrical season will be the presentation of that delightful play, "Under Southern Skies." No other play of recent years dealing with life in the Sunny South has met with such favor as Mrs. Parker's entertaining play. In fact, no other play of Southern life has ever been written which presents the romance, the gayety, the lavish hospitality and the humor of life in the South with such natural charm and intense interest as Mrs. Parker has succeeded in putting into "Under Southern Skies." It will be at the New Plainfield theatre Friday afternoon and night.

A scene representing in every detail the handsomest of Broadway's roof gardens is the principal scenic feature in "The Choir Singer," which comes after a highly successful engagement in New York to the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night. The entire production is said to be in keeping with the above mentioned scene, which would seem to indicate that a real dramatic treat is in store for local playgoers.

The New York Sun says in its review of May Irwin in "Mrs. Black Is Back," which ran for six months in New York last season, and which will appear at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday: "May Irwin returned to the New York stage last evening after a much regretted absence. She brought her own company to the Bijou theatre in a theatrical production which she and its author, George V. Hobart, modestly called only an 'offering' under the title of 'Mrs. Black Is Back.' Mrs. Black, of course, was Miss Irwin, and a large number of her friends testified to their joy over her return. She is still jolly, expansive and provocative of mirth at all times."

INCUBATOR RESULTS.

Many incubator manufacturers guarantee their machines to be as represented, etc. We do all this and also guarantee results. So many inferior machines have been purchased by enthusiastic, earnest people, who desire to hatch chickens by the artificial method, that thousands and thousands of "would be" successful poultrymen fail and lose their courage on account of the inferiority of the incubator with which they started. Broke His Kneecap.

William Jukes, employed as a machinist in a local shop, slipped on the ice at Second street and Park avenue Saturday night, and in falling broke his kneecap. Friends carried him to the Iroquois Hotel and from there he was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. The break is a severe one and will keep him disabled for some weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. Elijah W. Lawrence, of Washington avenue, have engaged a suite of apartments at No. 9 Fulton street, Newark, where they will remain for the present. They expect to return to Plainfield in the spring.

DISTRUSTS COUNCIL,

Alexander Millar Speaks Strongly For Pending Bill at Congregational Church.

RESOLUTION BY CLUB

Organization Asks Passage of Option Bill and Opposes Any New Licenses in the City— The Moral Commuter.

Speaking before the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church, Sunday, at the regular temperance meeting of the organization, Alexander Millar strongly advocated the passage of the local option bill now pending in the Legislature. He argued for the measure with particular reference to this city, and some of his statements were not without interest for the local political powers.

The day might almost be said to have been given over to local option and the license question by the church. The Men's Club held a special meeting after the morning service to pass strong resolutions in favor of the option bill, and against the granting of any more licenses by the Common Council. Emphasis was laid on the Goff application.

Mr. Millar's argument for local option was long and earnest. He had been interested in the temperance question at an early period, he said, and had never wavered in his hatred of the saloon business. He had nothing against the saloon keeper as an individual, excepting that the law put him on a different footing from every other business man. No other business man was compelled to get endorsers on his application for a trade license, in order to make it certain that he was fit to be trusted in the traffic in which he sought to engage.

Even with the safeguarding endorsements, licensing authorities made mistakes. The Common Council made a mistake in granting a license to a certain place on Grant avenue, because they could not prevent illegal selling there except by that action. It was a matter for wonderment that such an applicant could get twelve satisfactory endorsers.

The liquor curse was not new. Patriarchs of the Bible had fallen under it, and people of all times had been under its shadow. The Anglo-Saxon race and kindred peoples seemed to be particularly susceptible to it, and markedly awake to its gravity. Its power for evil did not change. Rum was always a curse and no sort of license made it anything else. A license did not change the character of rum.

It was true that men did not have to drink, and that argument against sumptuary legislation was well enough as far as it went. But so long as there were weak brothers who would be tempted by the sight and smell and proximity of liquor, their fellows had the right as citizens to protect them through the strength of the law. They recognized its right to pass laws governing the sale and use of nitro-glycerine and other explosives; they were dangerous to the well-being and safety of the citizenry. The case of liquor was exactly parallelli liquor was dangerous. No one had ever suggested that the use of business for the wheat business be checked—the difference in the general attitude toward such lines of trade was suggestive in itself. Ie was to be noted in this conection that liquor dealers were apparently readier to break the law than any other class of business men. A year in the saloon business seemed to have a tendency to make men bad, or, at any rate, worse than they had been.

There were three kinds of liquor laws that the speaker had in mind: prohibition, license law and local option. He was a prohibitionist personally, but he did not favor prohibition where it could not be enforced, and he did not believe it could be in this State. As for the license law, he did not believe in giving the power to create saloons to a small group of men, such as the Council. Bodies of that kind could not be trusted. There was more or less politics in the Council, which was perhaps natural, and men from certain districts would feel impelled to vote for license under the impression that they were pleasing the people who put them in office. There were eleven men in the Plainfield Council, and it might easily happen that the license question would bring about an even division of votes among the rank and file. That would throw the power of making the city license or no-license to one man—the presiding officer. If he was indifferent to the liquor evil —not even friendly to it—the chances were very much in favor of his voting for license. The speaker did not believe in giving any such power to one man, or any eleven men. As for the sentiments of the people represented by the councilmen, while it was true enough, perhaps, that some sections of the city would vote for license, the speaker did not believe it was so of the whole city. He was more optimistic than Councilman Tolles, who had said, in a statement to The Daily Press, that he didn't care how the city could get along without licenses. He believed this city would be no license in a very few years.

It was surprising to discover, after careful calculation, how few people of the city kept the saloons prosperous and under way. They were supported, Mr. Millar figured, by not more than 600 or 700 people. Taking 15,000 as the population of the city, it was to be calculated that 7,500 males lived here. Of these 1,500 were commuters, who gave no support to the saloons here. He had never seen a commuter enter a Plainfield saloon—had never even seen a commuter drunk anywhere. Reducing the remaining thousands by eliminating young boys and the percentage of men who were not to be suspected of saloon habits, the number of men who supply the twelve saloons with practically all their partonage would be seen to come within a total of 1,000.

Local option, Mr. Millar felt certain, was the best practical remedy for existing conditions here. He had seen it work in Massachusetts and was convinced of its merits. The law there had resulted in making a very large majority of the towns no-license; the cities were about evenly divided, the failure of no-license to show a preponderant strength being due to the political power of foreigners, with wide-open predilections, among the inhabitants. In Massachusetts, the license question was presented on the ballots at every regular election. The speaker could not see why the law now being considered by the legislators should not make provision for the same thing, instead of ordering a special election, with its attendant bother and expense. The excellence of the provision for a petition of thirty per cent. of the voters as a necessary preliminary to the election was also to be questioned.

The speaker peculiarly attached to the local option idea, because it was thoroughly American. Moreover, America was the place to try sociological laws of that sort; the people were used to self-government, used to the necessity and the responsibility of thinking for themselves. Every citizen had a right to vote on the morals of his community, and he should be given every opportunity to exercise it.

Considering the objections to the possibility of local option here, the one great point to be combatted was the so-called money loss. The objectors would want to know how the city could stand the loss of $11,090 annually.

For himself, the speaker would like to see the city lose it; he considered it blood-money; but that was sentimental and the question was to be argued quite on business lines without sentiment. The lost $11,000 would not be comparable to the benefits to be derived from no license. The city would be incredibly bettered. The money that now went into twelve saloons would go into savings, into shoe stores, and groceries. The no-license community is always markedly thriftier than the other fellows had the right as citizens to protect them through the strength of the law. They recognized its right to pass laws governing the sale and use of nitro-glycerine and other explosives; they were dangerous to the well-being and safety of the citizenry. The case of liquor was exactly parallelli liquor was dangerous. No one had ever suggested that the use of business for the wheat business be checked—the difference in the general attitude toward such lines of trade was suggestive in itself. Ie was to be noted in this conection that liquor dealers were apparently readier to break the law than any other class of business men. A year in the saloon business seemed to have a tendency to make men bad, or, at any rate, worse than they had been.

There were three kinds of liquor laws that the speaker had in mind: prohibition, license law and local option. He was a prohibitionist personally, but he did not favor prohibition where it could not be enforced, and he did not believe it could be in this State. As for the license law, he did not believe in giving the power to create saloons to a small group of men, such as the Council. Bodies of that kind could not be trusted. There was more or less politics in the Council, which was perhaps natural, and men from certain districts would feel impelled to vote for license under the impression that they were pleasing the people who put them in office. If he was indifferent to the liquor evil —not even friendly to it—the chances were very much in favor of his voting for license. The speaker did not believe in giving any such power to one man, or any eleven men. As for the sentiments of the people represented by the councilmen today, urging the passage of the option law. Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, the pastor, seconded Mr. Millar's suggestion, and gave the names of the committee members in whose hands the bill rests, for those who might wish to write directly to them.

The meeting of the Men's Club was largely attended. Action on the local option bill was taken after addresses had been made by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, the pastor, E. L. Suffern, J. M. Whiton, Clarence B. La Rue, and John A. Powlison. A resolution emphatically approving it was passed unanimously, and it was voted to send a copy to H. S. Scovel, chairman of the Committee on Municipal Corporations.

Much interest was manifested in the action to be taken by the Common Council on the twenty-third, on the applications for liquor licenses, including new ones from Charles Schanz, near the trolley station on Watchung avenue; James Shea on West Third street, and John Goff, on West Front street, and a resolution was adopted to petition the Council against granting such licenses as unnecessary and subversion of the city's best interests. Similar action was taken against licenses outside the limits prescribed by the so-called Tyler ordinance, and especially against ever granting a license to Goff.

The other church clubs will be asked to take the same action on both questions.

PETITION FROM AUTOISTS

In the constitution provision is made for the appointment of a conduct committee, which will control the conduct of members on the road. Infractions of the speed laws or of the rules of the road will be penalized, and objectionable autoists will be frowned on. The members agreed that the reckless driven must be discouraged in his course, and that the rank and file of auto users cannot afford to remain indifferent to the excesses of the men who have brought criticism upon them.

A board of twelve trustees will govern the organization. Seven will be Plainfielders, chosen last night, and the rest, to be elected later, will represent other sections of the county. H. C. Suydam, J. P. Stevens, Richard Stevens, Dr. Perrine, W. H. Weyrauch, Dr. Mellor and Dr. P. J. Zeglio were the Plainfielders named. The president is an ex-officio member of the board.

Three classes will figure in the membership—Class A, composed of auto owners; Class B, those interested in the subject; and Class C, dealers or workers in automobiles. The last class will not have votes. The dues per year will be, Class A, $3; B, $2; C, $1. An initiation fee of $2 is provided, but the fee will be waived on the first 100 applications. Wednesday evening considerable addition to the membership last night. Twenty-four men attended the meeting, and all those who had not joined before, signed before leaving. Other applications are on hand.

Association members will fly a pennant which was adopted last night. The annual election will be held the first Saturday in April, after this year. Last night's election is to stand as the regular one for 1906. There will be one change, however. Allen B. Laing, the secretary, finding his business too binding to permit him to continue in office. The board of trustees will choose his successor.

The association will be represented at the hearing on the Frelinghuysen and Jackson bills, on February 20, by Charles A. Reed. A big delegation of members will accompany him.

The full list of officers is as follows: President, Dr. F. C. Ard; first vice president, Dr. P. J. Zeglio; second vice president, J. P. Stevens; treasurer, G. J. Tobin; secretary, A. B. Laing.

BIG PROVISIONAL GIFT FOR DREW SEMINARY.

Madison, Feb. 14.—At a recent meeting of the board of trustees of Drew Theological Seminary President Henry A. Butts announced that Samuel W. Bowne, president of the board, had offered to contribute $100,000 of an additional endowment fund if the board would authorize and undertake the work of securing $100,000 for that purpose.

It was also announced that the seminary had received the legacy of $10,000 bequeathed by the will of the late William H. Murphy, of Newark.

The faculty and students at Drew are highly pleased over Mr. Bowne's generous gift. Mr. Bowne is one of Drew's most generous wealthy friends, he also having with Mr. Hoyt built the Hoyt-Bowne dormitory.

Frelinghuysen's Resolution.

Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen has introduced a joint resolution in the Senate providing that a joint committee of the House and Senate visit the site of the tuberculosis sanatorium at Glen Gardner and report the condition and state of the work, apropos of the reported differences with the contractors.

SENATORIAL FIGHT IS ON

Contest This Year is Expected to Begin Earlier Than Usual.

METHOD OF CHOOSING

The battle for the United States Senatorship next year promises to begin pretty nearly a year ahead of time. The proposition to have the preference of the voters expressed not later than the primaries in next September renders it almost absolutely necessary for the candidates to get to work right away. There are two measures before the Legislature calling on the voters to give an idea of their choice long before the next session begins. As a matter of fact, there isn't much difference between the Colby and Hillery propositions on the subject. Colby requires the candidate to have petitions signed by at least eight hundred voters in the State for a certain candidate before his name is put on the tentative ticket. Hillery requires that one hundred voters in each county shall have a petition for their candidate filed with the county clerk in each county, verified by the affidavits of ten reputable citizens of the party referred to, in advance of the primaries, before the name shall be placed on the ticket at the primaries.

The object is the same and the result is practically the same. Under the Colby programme the eight hundred signers could have to be, or rather ought to be, one hundred petitioners from each county. The prominent aspirants would have no trouble in complying with either condition.

There is an impression, however, that there is more politics involved in the Hillery than in the Colby condition. While the Colby people are apparently opposed to Dryden, the object in obtaining an advance idea of the preference of the voters was independent of candidates. Of course, it is supposed by the Colby men that in both Essex and Hudson counties there would be a majority against Dryden, but that is not put out in any public way. Hillery, on the other hand, as the leader of the Senate and the spokesman, so to speak, of the administration, is believed to have the interests of Mr. Stokes at heart, and to presume, incredible though it may seem, that in a large majority of counties the Governor would lead in the popular vote for United States Senator.

Taking this view of the situation as correct, the surmise is easy that it is expected all the candidates will make their boats with much delay and go to work. It looks as though the Dryden supporters would favor the Colby proposition, for the reason that the conditions could be more readily complied with.

BOROUGH HEALTH BOARD REVOKES THREE LICENSES

TAKES DRASTIC MEASURES TO SECURE BETTER SCAVENGER WAGONS.

Responding to notices sent them recently, delegations of ash carters and scavengers appeared before the borough Board of Health last night to consider complaints made that the vehicles used by them in their work are unsightly and unclean. Several members expressed themselves as very much opposed to the disagreeable appearance of the wagons and maintained that something should be done at once or revoke the licenses as a safeguard for public benefit.

The scavengers at first insisted that it was impossible to keep thier wagons in better shape, but argument soon convinced them that a change could be brought about. The licenses of Morris Compton and C. B. Ingraham, scavengers, and Edward Adams, of Coontown, carter, were revoked. Their vehicles were asserted to be offensive weeks ago, and they were notified to appear before the board, but failed to do so. During the meeting it was remarked that one carter, Samuel Robinson, who has held a borough license for years, kept his wagons in a condition that could be copied by the other carters. This vehicle is used to attract no attention whatsoever and a complaint has never been registered against them.

One of the board members said this morning that it was the determination of the health officials to keep up the agitation for a better system and that men running ill-looking vehicles would be served as were the three last night.

Entered in Show Races.

Two four-oar crews from the Wanamassa Boat Club, this city, will take part in the races at the Sportsman's Show, Madison Square Garden, next month. The crews will be made up as follows: Fred Martin, G. Harold Whitney, Percy Phillips, and Stryker Hoagland; Walter Sampson, Howard Drake, A. Duncan and John McCullough.

Miss Harriett Goddard, of East Ninth street, will sail for Europe on the Celtic on Saturday. She will be abroad several months.

MILITARY BILL'S FLAWS

In Present Shape, It is Believed, Twill Cost State Additional $25,000 a Year.

FRELINGHUYSEN'S BILL

Weaknesses Pointed Out—Demands for Various Branches—Expenditures for Medals.

The new military bill, introduced in the Legislature last week by Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county, under which it is proposed to bring the National Guard within the provisions of the Dick Regular Army bill, has created much discussion among the National Guardsmen of the State. The bill is a lengthy one, and is in most respects a counterpart of the military bill of two years ago which failed of passage because of the opposition to some of the provisions which were claimed to be inimical to the usual military regulations with which it was supposed to conform, and because it was ungrammatical and improperly expressed. The commission which prepared the present measure has sought to overcome these defects, but among persons familiar with military matters it is pointed out that there still remains numerous inconsistencies which make the bill objectionable.

At the outset, the new bill increases the membership of the State Military Board by making the colonels of the regiments and heads of offices of the Naval Reserve members of the board, an increase of six members. This, it is pointed out, will mean an increased expense to the State, the members of the board being paid according to their grades for attendance upon meetings of the board in addition to their expenses. This increase in membership was made in answer to the demand of the men in the line to be represented.

The addition of a representative of the Naval Reserve has resulted in a demand for a representative and artillery for representation. The increase in the membership of the board will mean an added cost of more than $1,000 a year. The suggestion has been made that the general officers act as the executive committee of the board, in the matters of affecting the men in the line come up for consideration, the additional members provided for in the new bill be called in.

By reason of the increase in the staffs and because of the additional allowance for each one, $250 a year for mounted commissioned officers and $30 a year for other commissioned officers, it is claimed that the State's expense under the new bill will be increased about $18,000.

Another increased expense that is found in the new bill is that in relation to musical organizations, for which $500 is allowed to each regiment. All military band musicians are allowed $4 a day, instead of being graded as in the regular army and being paid according to grade. The present allowance is said to be sufficient for musical organizations. It is said, too, that the new enlistment regulations, by which a man may enlist for three years and renew his enlistment for one year thereafter, will result in an increase of cost to the State, because a uniform is counted upon to last a man about three years, and should he decide to re-enlist for one year he would need a new uniform which might be discarded by him should he not enlist again at the expiration of his one year re-enlistment.

The sections of the bill relating to the quartermaster-general's and adjutant-general's departments are criticised because the deputy adjutant-general is given the rank of colonel, while the deputy quartermaster-general has the rank of lieutenant-colonel. It is claimed that these two officers should have equal ranks. Another inconsistency is claimed to exist in this section of the bill in the fact that the quartermaster-general is authorized to employ such clerical services as he may desire, while no such provision is made for the adjutant-general's department, in which, it is claimed, the need for such services is equally as great.

Numerous inconsistencies are claimed to exist in the new measure in the matter of the make-up of different branches of the service as compared with similar branches of the regular army, these inconsistencies being especially glaring in cavalry troops and batteries of artillery. In the matter of the treatment of deserters, it is said the new bill is lenient to a degree that is uncalled for. If a man is convicted of a felony, or cannot be found after due diligence, he is merely to be dropped from the roll of the organization to which he belongs. Section 35 of the bill gives the inspector-general of rifle practise four assistants instead of three, as at present, and it is claimed, having proved entirely insufficient for this officer. In the matter of regimental formation the new bill calls for regimental paymasters, surgeons and adjutants, which is not according to the regulations of the ary.

The bill contains a clause authorizing the issuing of medals for proficiency in marksmanship, but it has been pointed out that the State is annually spending several thousand dollars for medals for attendance, service and other things for the cost of which there is no authority in any law. Those who have examined the new bill say that it should provide for the cost of medals of this class as well as for the marksmanship medals. Another deficiency which has been found in the bill is that it makes no provision for pensioning men who are disabled in service.

It has been estimated that the increases that have been made in the staffs, together with other items of expense above alluded to will mean an increased cost to the State as a result of the new bill, of about $25,000 a year.

Those who have made a careful study of the new bill say that the items cited above are only a few, but are the most important inconsistencies of the measure, and they assert that even if passed by the Legislature as it will not, unless amended when subjected to the scrutiny of the general staff at Washington, by which it will be carefully examined with reference to its conformity to the provisions of the Dick regular army bill.

Y. M. C. A. IS LAGGING

Secretary Smith Makes Blunt Statement to the Local Association.

NOT UP TO THE AVERAGE

Workers Must Throw Themselves Into Spiritual Work, He Says, or See Association Go Back Further.

Fred B. Smith, international secretary of the Y. M. C. A., gave the directors and members of the local association one of the plainest talkings-to they have ever received on their organization last night. He told them some blunt truths about their association without any apparent effort to soften them, declared the organization was spiritually weak, and not up to the acerage of other associations.

Mr. Smith was the guest of honor at a banquet. He has been speaking to large audiences on Y. M. C. A. work in big cities, and when the local association learned that he would come here for a conference the dinner was arranged in order to bring the directors and members in closer contact with him than would be possible at a general meeting of the usual kind. The banquet was attended by about fifty of the most active Y. M. C. A. workers, including practically all the directors, and a number of clergymen. Among the latter were Rev. A. C. McCrea, Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons, Rev. L. R. Howard, Rev. G. W. Mooney and Rev. Phil Parsons. The dinner was a very good one, and served perfectly. It was held in the upstairs hall, which wore a cosy, homelike look with softshaded lamps at the half-dozen small tables.

After the demi-tasse stage President J. W. Gavett introduced Mr. Smith. The latter began his speech with a strong declaration of the power of the association movement. He returned recently from a trip to Europe and Australia, and could speak of the world-wide force of the association idea at first hand. He pictured strong love for Christianity and the movement to evangelize the world everywhere. Even among the Sioux Indians of the Rosebud agency he found it, where he met a young Redman graduate of Carlisle School who had traveled forty miles every Sunday for a year to attend religious meetings. Mr. Smith told a story that young Indian to travel with h him merely to tell of his weekly journeys. He wanted that Indian, he said, to give his message "to weakhearted, gingerbread white men who had never learned to be faithful to any ideal or thing."

Everywhere in his journeys abroad he was struck by the strength and virility of the Y. M. C. A. movement. He told of impressive meetings in Paris, Rome and Switzerland. "I want you to know," he said, "that when you are working, praying and giving, you are striking a blow for the betterment of the whole world.

"We are engaged in a great work," he said, "and I am glad I am alive to take part in it. I am satisfied with the times in which it has pleased God to have me live. The twentieth century will be full of marvels, and the wise man does not attempt to prophesy what shall come to pass in it, but I am certain of this, that the mightiest movement of the century will be the taking of the world for God by the old church.

"The Y. M. C. A. has a great opportunity before it and one great danger. The danger lies not in a lack of money, not in a lack of buildings. No; the danger is that in one hour of affluence we may forget the fundamental principles that made us what we are. It is an awful test of spirituality to prosper in business. Only a very few men can prosper and remain true to God. It is an awful test for a church to prosper financially. Churches and men can build in stone and all architectural beauties outside, like cathedrals, that were in rags spiritually.

"I want to speak carefully tonight, but I cannot help thinking of some Y. M. C. A.'s that are impotent spiritually because of financial ease. We are getting popularity and praise. Men praise us today who scorned us ten years ago; we are popular with those who but recently had only contempt for us. Can we stand such praise and popularity and keep true? The issue before the Y. M. C. A. is this: Can we make the spirit dominant? Can we make it produce what we promised? We are under a double covenant to make and keep this a spiritual movement—under covenant with God and with the church. The power and strength of the Y. M. C. A. has come from only one source—the movement has reached its present strength because God has seen fit to give it His benediction.

"If I am certain of anything, it is that the one ordained institution for the salvation of the world is the church. We must keep our covenant with the church or lose her love. And the church is not in the business of running playhouses. She has a solemn purpose. Now, I am not one to overlook the value of any department of the Y. M. C. A., I believe in it from the roof to the last pin in the bowling alley. But I do not want to hear of social strength, of physical department triumphs, of strong educational classes; I want to hear of soul-winning power. Tell me, you men of Plainfield, of an increased power to draw men to God!

"Do you want to send Plainfield up a step spiritually? If I were to ask each of you here that question, calling you all by name, you would hasten to say 'yes;' that is what you are here for. Well, to do it, some of you must put your lives in the work. It takes men to save men.

"Let us face the truth; we are here to look at it squarely and not to conceal it. The Plainfield association is far from being what it should be spiritually. This association doesn't begin to measure up to the average association in other places. You are far behind the procession. Do you want to back still further? Well, attend the meetings about once a month. Then, when you meet Mr. Manning on Monday morning, and hear that yesterday's meeting was a good one (that is one of the things we always tell our workers to keep in mind—optimism—they must not appear dissatisfied or downcast), tell him how glad you are; then add that thrilling statement which I have heard so often: 'Well, I wasn't at the meeting myself, but I was with you in spirit.'

"We don't want your spirits. We want men. A gentleman who knows you well said to me today, 'In that Plainfield association they have the material, but it will be found anywhere in the world, a fine body of men. I can't understand why Plainfield is lagging so, spiritually.' God grant the Plainfield association will get men, and let us hear of the scores and scores of living men have been taught to love Jesus Christ through the efforts of the young men of this association."

The speech produced a strong impression. Mr. Smith is a forceful talker and his arraignment of the association, climaxing a brilliant address, sparkling at times with humor and wit of high order, caught his hearers in a spell that was not to be broken off. There was something subdued and hushed, as though the weakness of the association, made plain with no attempt to gloss it over, had shamed and grieved him, in President Gavett's tone and manner, when he said the few words of closing after Mr. Smith's address.

After the banquet, Mr. Smith met the directors in conference in the parlors.

AMERICAN BREVITIES.

There are more than a thousand paper mills in the United States, and their total product amounts to about 3,500,000 tons annually, valued at over $150,000,000.

S. T. Dodson, of Okalahoma, has named his ten children after as many States in the Union. The daughters are Virginia, Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Idaho and Jersey, while the boys are Missouri, Ohio, Tennessee and Texas.

Charles C. Hubbell recently hauled a peculiar load of lumber into Burlington, Vt. It was sawed in 1801 from old growth pine, having been stored in the town of Charlotte during all these years. The lumber gave no indication of its extreme age.

More people of Washington and Oregon spend their vacations under canvas than the residents of any other State in the Union, considering their small number. Thus is it that they keep the hair on their heads and their nerves from tingling at the wrong time.

Parties who have visited the summit of Mt. Washington within the past few days report the railway as clear from obstruction as in the month of August and the mountain entirely free from snow. The trip was made as quickly as is ordinarily done in June.

BAR ASSOCIATION HAS ANNUAL DINNER

PRESIDENT CRAIG A. MARSH ACTS AS TOASTMASTER.

The annual dinner of the Union County Bar Association, held at the Hotel Astor, New York Saturday night, was attended by several legal lights from this city, including Craig A. Marsh, president of the association; Charles A. Reed, William R. Codington, Samuel S. Swackhamer, William Newcorn, William G. De-Mers and Francis Blair. Former Judge B. Frank Coriell attended as a guest. In all there were forty present from all parts of the county. William A. Coddington, who was to have been one of the speakers, was detained by illness, and his partner, Mr. Reed, spoke for him on the toast, "Our Profession." Vice-Chancellor J. J. Bergen, who was to have spoken on "An Unreliable Master," was also unable to attend on account of illness.

Craig A. Marsh, as president of the association, was the toastmaster, and his introductory remarks were thoroughly enjoyed by all. The toasts were as follows:

"The State of New Jersey," Hon. Foster M. Voorhees; "The Judiciary," Judge F. J. Swayze; "The Law," Judge Wilbur A. Heisley; "Our Profession," Charles A. Reed; "Any Old Subject," Frank Bergen. The last named passed out bits on the toasts in a humorous manner.

In speaking on the toast "Our Profession," Mr. Reed maintained that it should be upheld on the highest plane. He cited the fact that seventy-five out of the four hundred legislators are lawyers and he urged that laws be enacted and enforced compelling every legal voter to cast his ballot at election time. He said that in some of the rural districts and in the cities as well there are many who will not vote unless a $5 bill is put in their hand, and in his opinion everyone entitled to a vote should be made to cast it, under the penalty of losing his right to do so. Mr. Reed also devoted his attention to other important features of the profession of a lawyer, presenting many interesting facts. He also referred to the growth of the Union County Bar Association and his remarks on this topic drew forth an ovation.

The committee having charge of the arrangements for dinner comprised Judge Edward D. Atwater, Elliott Bedell, chairman; William R. Codington, Plainfield; Paul O. Oliver, Westfield; J. A. Kiernan and Samuel Schleimer, Elizabeth.

J. P. MORGAN GETS CONTROL OF THE P.S.C.

PENNSYLVANIA AND THE U. G. I. ALSO INTERESTED IN THE DEAL.

A preliminary agreement was entered into Friday whereby a two-thirds interest in the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey passed into the hands of New York and Philadelphia capitalists, as stated in The Daily Press on Saturday. New Jersey legislation and the personnel of the company will probably figure on the New York Stock Exchange.

The financial control has been transferred from the Fidelity Trust Company, of Newark, to J. P. Morgan & Co., who represent the Pennsylvania Railroad and the United Gas Improvement Company.

The same influences which compelled the Public Service Company to surrender its high-speed plans to the Pennsylvania, it is said, are potent factors in the present deal. The Pennsylvania will probably control the transportation facilities of the company, while the various gas and lighting companies will be under the supervision of the United Gas Improvement Company.

The "treasury stock" of the company, amounting to $12,500,000, which has not been issued, will be disposed of by Morgan & Co. for cash, if the present plans are carried out, thereby raising the total of the stock issue to $25,000,000.

Part of the proceeds is to pay floating indebtedness and part is for extensions and development. It will be divided so that one-third will be controlled by Morgan & Co., while the balance will be in charge of Newark and Philadelphia capitalists.

Lodge Receives Applicants.

Martha Washington Council, No. 23, D. of A., at its meeting Saturday night received several propositions. Grandview Council, No. 55, of Mt. Bethel, and Golden Rod Council, of New Brunswick, with the State councillar, will be invited to attend the initiation February 21.

Inter-Association Basketball League.

Frank Marcley, of this city, physical director at the Summit Y. M. C. A., is now engaged in forming an inter-association basketball league. Four members of the first team of the Summit association are disqualified and cannot play with teams under the A. A. U rules. Rather than give up the game entirely Mr. Marcley will endeavor to secure the formation of several teams in a league, believing that it will increase the interest.

NEWARK FIVE DOES IT AGAIN; ROOTERS SORE

HISS VISITORS WHEN THEY PULL AWAY FROM LOCALS.

More real strenuousness than has come to the ken of basketball enthusiasts in this city for a long, long while marked the meeting between the Newark team and the local Y. M. C. A. quintet Saturday night. The Newark men got the decision, 18 to 10.

It was a sharp game all ways and all the time. Rooters added their quota to the excitement, and there were times when the air was surcharged with earnestness and other forms of peace disturbance. In the first half the contest was nip and tuck. Both teams played and passed well, and there wasn't a hair's breadth to choose between them. Plainfield was working to wipe out the sting of the last meeting with Newark, when the latter administered the only defeat of the season to the locals on their own field. Visions of vengeance were bright when the half ended with the score but one point in Newark's favor—9 to 8.

The vision faded in the next session. Newark began with redoubled speed, and Plainfield, cowed by the spirit, faltered, wavered, and fell down. The locals shot but one more goal, while Newark made superiority a matter of no doubt by scoring nine more points.

The Plainfield rooters took the weakening of their champions hard. They allowed notions of unfairness to take possession of their minds, and hissed the visitors. After a particularly forceful and loud exhibition of noisy geese from the gallery, Capt. Vreeland called his men from the field and signified, as clearly as his indignation permitted, that he was through playing. The Y. M. C. A. men managed to induce him to go on. Line up and summary:

MRS. TODD BURIED; A PASTOR'S DAUGHTER

HER FATHER WAS ONCE MINISTER OF THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Mrs. Margaret Drake Todd, who will be remembered by many as the daughter of the late Rev. Simeon J. Drake, third pastor of the First Baptist church, from 1839 to 1862, died at her home in West Fifty-ninth street, New York, on Thursday last, and the funeral services were held there yesterday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Sanders officiating.

During her girlhood days she was converted under the preaching of her father and became a member of the church. Then on the death of Pastor Drake the family moved to Brooklyn. Miss Drake became the wife of William James Todd, of New York, a merchant in an old established salt business. He died several years ago. Mrs. Todd was a boy pupil in 1837 at the "Plainfield Classical Institute," a thriving academy at that time. While here he became a member of the First Baptist church, in one of the largest revivals ever experienced in this community. Shortly afterward he transferred his membership to the First Baptist church of New York. Since Mr. Todd's death his wife and two daughters have lived the world around and lived abroad many years. Recently the family made its home in West Fifty-ninth street, facing Central Park.

Besides two daughters surviving, there remain to mourn Simeon J. Drake, of New York, and children of Mrs. Kate D. Varian, of Orange, and Mrs. Charity Newning, of Texas, all of whom were once residents of this city. Mrs. Todd's body was placed by the side of her husband in the family mausoleum in Green-wood cemetery. Her father, Rev. Simeon J. Drake, and mother, a sister, Anna, and a brother, Oliver, are buried in Evergreen cemetery, this city.

Natural Ice Company and J. H. Tier Started in Today.

Ice cutting was begun this morning in earnest by the Natural Ice Company and J. H. Tier. What the harvest will be is a question.

The dealers seemed very reluctant to answer it, even tentatively, this morning. The ice is over five inches thick, but Mr. Tier, when asked by a reporter, was even unwilling to hazard an opinion as to the thickness. He said he hadn't learned and didn't want to guess.

"As for the crop we'll get, it depends entirely on the weather. I have no means of calculating it now," he said.

DR. W. E. MATTISON DEAD

Expired While Seated in Chair at His Office on Somerset Street.

POLICE FIND BODY

Resided in North Plainfield Since 1879—Served As Surgeon During the Civil War.

Seated in a comfortable position in an arm chair as though he were enjoying a nap, the body of Dr. W. E. Mattison, one of the oldest and best known residents of the borough, was found in the rear of his store on Somerset street, this morning. He had evidently been stricken some time during the night just before his retiring hour as his bed, situated in an adjoining room, was undisturbed.

The first known that anything was wrong with the old doctor, who lived by himself, was when Lieutenant Campbell noticed that he was sitting an unusually long time in the one position. Campbell lives over the store and in ascending to his apartment by the rear stairs could see into the office. He notified Chief Weiss and the latter forced an entrance to the place. Dr. Buchanan was called and declared that death had occurred at least six hours before the body was found. He ascribed heart disease as the cause.

Dr. Mattison was born in Somerset county, near Millstone, eighty-two years ago and practiced medicine there for a long time. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted as a surgeon and was with the Third New Jersey. At the close of hostilities he returned to Millstone, but in 1879 moved to North Plainfield, where he conducted a drug store in connection with practicing as a physician. He was also justice of the peace for several terms, the last expiring last spring.

The doctor's only relatives are two daughters who live in North Carolina and a son, whose home is in New Brunswick. The latter has been informed of his father's death and Chief Weiss has made no disposition of the body pending his arrival. The daughters are well known as musicians and one of them sang for several years in the Vanderbilt church at Biltmore.

BREEM WAS EXCITED BY SLEIGHING PARTY

SEMI-MUTE DEAF MAN ON A WILD RAMPAGE.

Exhilarated by the wintry air and possibly some things taken to counteract its nipping effect, William Breem enjoyed a sleighing party Saturday night in a mood for excitement. He started to hunt for it as soon as he reached his father's home, 139 East Second street, shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Breem, who is deaf and almost mute, is sensitive to reproof, and felt hurt when his father tried to restrain him.

He showed how his feelings had been harrowed by mauling the old man and knocking down a stovepipe. He made such a row that Sergeant Frederickson, returning from a run, piled into the house in a body. They found the father preparing to defend himself with a scantling, and decided that the police were needed. In answer to a 'phone message, Sergeant Frederickson sent Officer Saffron around.

Breem heard of the cop's coming and bolted to the street. Saffron met him, and Breem turned the other way. There was some lively doubling and dodging before Saffron caught him.

At police headquarters, the officers say, a revolver was found in Breem's pocket. He will be arraigned before Judge Rugen this afternoon. He has been arrested before for the same sort of escapade.

Luncheon for Mr. Travis.

Councilman George P. Mellick, of East Seventh street, who is spending a week at the "Bon Air," Augusta, Ga., entertained Walter J. Travis, the golf champion, at luncheon at the Country Club of Augusta, on Friday last. Travis will remain at Augusta for several days, as he will participate in the tournament for the amateur golf championship of Southern Florida to be held at Palm Beach this week.

Death of Charles Mayer.

NEW GAS COMPANY INCORPORATED HERE

BETTER AND CHEAPER LIGHT PROMISED FOR PLAINFIELDERS.

The Sishe Gas Company, incorporated by citizens who are interested in securing cheaper and better light for Plainfield, has leased the property at 149 East Fourth street, and will employ thirty hands regularly. The company will be capitalized at $100,000, divided into one thousand shares of $100 each. Of this 500 shares will be set aside for obtaining the rights for the United States and Territories and to provide a charter.

The Sishe gas machine has displaced nearly all of the acetylene machines on the market during the past five years in the Dominion of Canada and received the highest award and gold medal at the National Exhibition held in Canada last year. The Sishe system does away entirely with the objectionable storage tank or gasometer, and the gas being made under very low pressure and in small quantities just as the lights demand it, and being cold, dry and clean when arriving at the burners, gives a soft, white brilliancy not found in any other artificial light.

William L. Perrin and L. Arnett, of this city, are representatives here for the incorporators, and further information can be obtained from them.

"CLANSMAN" NOT COMING.

Having extended the run of the play in New York for one week, Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger notified Manager Counihan today that "The Clansman" would not appear at the local theatre next Monday, as announced. It remains at the Liberty theatre until February 24, and the road tour will begin then. All the dates arranged for the week previous are accordingly postponed until spring, but it will positively play each of the cities as arranged.

The postponement is a disappointment to Plainfielders, as many playgoers had anticipated witnessing this interesting production. It is drawing big crowds nightly in the metropolis, and this fact will make it a still more potent drawing card.

"Larry" in Tolls Once More.

"Larry" Wallace, who is now waiting sentence in the Union County Jail, was arrested at Baroness Rapp's Hotel, Scotch Plains, to which he entered a plea of guilty, was arrested at Scotch Plains Saturday night for being drunk and disorderly. He was committed to the county jail for thirty days by Recorder Elizabeth this morning. It is not believed that his latest escapade will benefit him when arraigned for sentence on the larceny charge.

Mr. Gilbert a Speaker.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of this city, president of the Fulton Market Bank of New York, will be one of the speakers at the annual banquet of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Bank Clerks, to be held Thursday night at the Hotel Astor, New York. Among the other speakers will be Rev. Minot J. Savage, President Seaman, of Cornell University; John S. Wise, former Governor of Virginia, and W. A. Pendergast.

Company F Fair.

Company K's fair will last five days off, and already the society is assuming a bee-hive activity. Among some of the good things in store for the fair patrons is the great appearance in Plainfield of the popular song artists, Clifford J. Werner and Edward Meeker. Mr. Werner is an author and composer of songs and will sing some of his own compositions. They will appear Saturday night, February 17 and Monday night, February 19. The armory will be lighted by electricity.

Handsome New Front.

The handsome new front in "The White Store," is about completed, and is attracting considerable attention. The general change is a decided improvement, especially the new large prism glass which gives much additional light in the store. There will be but one main entrance to the store, the smaller door on the side being closed.

Plainfielders Meet in Egypt.

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Frost and niece, Miss Edith K. Weston, of Watchung avenue, who are at present in Egypt, met in Cairo Francis W. Frost and Mr. Woods, of Cincinnati, who had continued their journey around the world after having left Taft party in China. On January 27 the united party went up the Nile as far as Assouan. They returned to Naples February 10.

Murphy President's Guest.

Former Governor Murphy was one of the Republican National Committeemen of 1904 entertained by President Roosevelt on Saturday. On Saturday night a dinner was given at the White House in their honor.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAMME

Many Bills Passed in 5 Weeks of Work—Public Hearing on Important Measures.

NO SESSION TONIGHT

Not a Single Bill of Importance Has Been Made Into Law—301 Introduced and but Three Have Been Passed.

The sixth week of the Legislature will begin at the State House, Trenton, tomorrow morning. The usual Monday evening session will be omitted tonight because of Lincoln's Birthday. The five weeks of the session have produced 301 bills and joint resolutions, and but three of them have been passed by both houses. These have been the bill to correct the complication caused by combining the spring elections in boroughs and townships with the general fall elections, the joint resolution to honor Captain Casto and crew for rescuing the passengers from the wrecked steamer Cherokee at Atlantic City, and Senate bill No. 5, providing for an appropriation of $1,200 for clerical help in the comptroller's office to aid Deputy Clerk Daughten.

The Senate has passed 12 bills, and 11 have been gotten through the House. They have all been minor measures, however.

Not a single measure of State importance to date as yet been reported from committee, but this is due mainly to the fact that the committees have been busy with hearings on them, in order to learn the public desire with reference to them. This Legislature has been an improvement on most of its predecessors in the fact that it has begun hearings on the most important bills early in the session.

There will be another hearing Wednesday on Senator Jackson's bill to place all county officials upon a salary basis. There is not serious objection to this measure, except on the part of those whose interest is strictly personal. That the bill will be reported and passed by both houses of the Legislature seems almost certain.

The House last week passed without opposition the bill fixing the salary of the prosecutor of Passaic county at $7,500 a year. Prosecutors are not mentioned in Senator Jackson's bill. Gradually prosecutors have been transferred from a fee to a salary basis under a law passed a few years ago, until the Passaic prosecutor stands as the remaining official of that class receiving compensation in the shape of fees.

Tomorrow at 11 a. m. there will be a hearing before the Senate committee on municipal corporations on Senate bills Nos. 1, 10, 20 and 70, the Frank Jackson measures. Wednesday at 1 p. m. the hearing on the bill for the abandonment of the Morris canal will take place.

There has been considerable discussion concerning a bill presented in the House of Assembly last Wednesday by Assemblyman Burke, of Trenton, supplementing the act concerning the redistricting of second-class cities, and the question was asked what, if any, bearing it had on the ward lines of the city of Trenton.

The bill provides that when any second class cities are divided into wards under the act to which this bill is a supplement, it shall not be lawful to again make any other division of wards within a period of five years.

Mr. Burke, when asked about the bill yesterday, said that it had no direct bearing upon Trenton, but was a measure general in its nature and intended to complete the act of last winter concerning the redistricting of cities, which had been left incomplete by the omission of a limitation period.

The act passed last winter was for the especial benefit of the city of Paterson in order to correct certain ward lines. Under the provisions of Mr. Burke's supplement these lines cannot be again changed in five years, Mr. Burke said that his measure was a practical one and as fair for one party as for the other.

The interest continues to be in the Miller local option bill. There is a general opinion that the committee will report it, the members feeling that the full responsibility of disposing of the measure should not rest with them. It is believed, therefore, that they will put it up to the House to pass on the matter. There are those who believe that the bill will be reported and passed by the House, but will be promptly killed by the Senate.

M. B. Stutzman Surprised.

Martin B. Stutzman, of East Sixth street, was tendered a surprise party Friday night. About twenty-four young people were present. Progressive games were the feature of the affair, refreshments following. First ladies' prize was won by Miss Esther Whitney, second by Miss Marguerite Ostrom; first gentleman's prize was won by George Bentley, second by Stuart Freeman.

COLLEGE MEN UNANIMOUSLY FAVOR A CLUB

HAVE A JOLLY TIME

Mr. McCutchen Toastmaster—Humorous Speeches—Plenty to Eat and Drink—Committee is Appointed.

So successful was the college smoker held at the Casino Friday that steps were taken to form a college club here. The proposition, as presented by its originator, Owen H. Fleming, to whose efforts the success of the smoker was largely due, was received with great enthusiasm by every representative, and before the festivities were over a committee of ten was appointed to undertake the work at once and to devise ways and means for establishing a permanent organization.

In many respects the gathering last night was notable. It was the first time that representatives of so many colleges have been brought together here, and, as stated by Mr. Fleming, when it is realized that Plainfield has a larger proportion of college men, according to its population, than any other place in the State, there is every reason why a club should be organized. The higher institutions of learning have 415 graduates here, and 210 of these attended last night's meeting. Many others will join the movement at the next meeting.

From the start true college spirit was in evidence and continued until the last man left the place. Every man who rooped it up for his alma mater and that of his fellows, and one would have imagined that the entire assemblage was graduated from the same college, save for the good natured jollying that was a feature of the several speeches. Interspersing the talks the occasion was enlivened by the singing of college songs and lively airs by Van Eps Brothers' banjo orchestra. Frequently the college men would burst out in singing one of their favorite songs and all would join in the chorus.

In the decoration of the hall the arrangement of American and college flags was unique. Everyone of the fifty-six colleges represented had its colors displayed. Perhaps greater prominence was given to those of the "Big Four"—Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania and Harvard, while encircling the large room were the various flags of other institutions, surmounted by a broad band of gold embroidery. The entire front of the stage was covered with various colors, while the ceiling was attractively festooned with bunting.

Numerous round tables were placed about the room and the college men gathered about to enjoy their pipe and mug of liquid refreshments and prevaded. Later in the evening a buffet supper, consisting of salad, cocquettes and other good things, was served.

Samuel St. John McCutchen was toastmaster. He made a few pleasant remarks, in which he jollied Owen H. Fleming, chairman of the committee, explaining that he was "the whole show." Mr. Fleming was introduced, and explained his plan of forming a permanent organization among the college men. Everyone caught the idea and unanimously pledged his support to such a movement.

Harry L. Hall, Columbia, was introduced as the exponent of the "New Jerusalem." He hailed with delight Mr. Fleming's idea and hoped that such gatherings would find a permanent place in the calendar. He felt sure it "would result in the betterment of Plainfield and her winsome sister across the brook." Incidentally he remarked that college men are a factor in politics, citing the fact that a graduate of Amherst, now a member of the Common Council, is relieving the policemen by supplying them with rubber heels, so that they would not awaken each other.

In introducing City Judge William N. Runyon, Yale, Mr. McCutchen remarked that he does lose his records occasionally, but, believing that his memory is just as good, Mr. Reed would rather have his memory than the records.

Mr. Runyon paid his compliments to fair Harvard, and in referring to Columbia for her action in abolishing football said, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall inherit the earth." He was glad that Princeton had taken the initiative in the smoker, for he loved her as a proud possession of New Jersey. He said that Mr. Fleming had done his work well, and in speaking for Yale said that her graduates here would enthusiastically support the movement to form a club.

McCready Sykes, Princeton, addressed the gathering as the "fifty-seven varieties," and then in turn he passed out hits on Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Evarts Tracy, Harry L. Hall, Councilman W. S. Tyler. He corrected Judge Runyon's quotation of Scripture, adding that it is "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." Mr. Sykes gave a brief review of the founding of Yale and Princeton and concluded with an amusing story.

William L. Saunders, Pennsylvania, was introduced as a manufacturer of compressed air, and the former Mayor added that he represented that "weaker sister across the brook." He touched up Yale, saying that he would stand being called down by anyone but a man from New Haven. He said that somehow Yale men always have cold feet when they meet Pennsylvania. While Yale is noted for her preachers and lawyers, Pennsylvania is equally noted for her doctors and politicians. He remarked that Benjamin Franklin founded Pennsylvania in 1749, and that today she is fifth in seniority with a student body of 3,500 and a more varied list of studies than any other institution of learning. He also expressed pleasure at joining in the movement for a college club.

In introducing the next speaker, Charles A. Reed, of Rutgers, the toastmaster humorously remarked that it was a close between Mr. Marsh and Mr. Reed as to who should acquit Chief Kiely, but there was no question as to who got the stuff. Mr. Reed welcomed the idea of a college club, adding that it might be as good as the order of Elks and that he considered the best in the town. He thought such a club could accomplish much good and he hoped that all the college men would get together and do something.

At this time H. C. White made a motion that the chair appoint a committee of ten to consider a permanent organization and take such steps as it seems best in the matter. The motion was unanimously adopted and this committee was appointed: J. M. Sinsabaugh and Owen H. Fleming, Princeton; Charles A. Reed, Rutgers; Harry L. Hall, Columbia; William N. Runyon, S. St. J. McCutchen, Yale; Archibald Cox, Harvard; William L. Saunders, Pennsylvania; W. C. Kinney, Dartmouth; Dr. F. C. Ard, University of Maryland.

The college men present were as follows:

REV. DR. BRYAN DIES AFTER TWO HOURS ILLNESS

Well-Known Retired Minister Passes Away Suddenly—Active Preacher For Fifty-Three Years.

A TEMPERANCE WORKER

Had Served Many Congregations in Various Parts of the State—Leaves Wife, Two Daughters and Two Sons.

Rev. Dr. James R. Bryan, probably one of the best known Methodist ministers in New Jersey, died suddenly at his home in Albert street at 12:45 o'clock Tuesday morning. He had been suffering from a slight cold, but it did not cause especial alarm. About 10 o'clock last night he complained of great distress about his chest. The family physician, Dr. Jenkins, was summoned. The patient did not respond to treatment and death resulted from gradual filling up of the lungs.

Dr. Bryan was seventy-seven years old, a native of New Jersey, and resided in the State, with a few exceptions, throughout his entire life. Early in his career he showed a preference for the ministry and he prepared himself for his life work at Pennington Seminary. Afterward he took the conference theological course of study of four years. He joined the New Jersey conference in 1848 and entered upon his first charge that year at Salem. A remarkable fact in connection with his long ministry is that it was in every sense a successful one. He was a man of true worth, and of him Rev. Dr. G. H. Whitney, who knew him so well, says: "There was not a stain or blot of any kind on his character."

The complete list of Dr. Bryan's charges is, as follows: 1846, Salem; 1849-50, Medford; 1851-52, Beverly; 1853-54, May's Landing; 1855-56, Haddonfield; 1857-58, Pennington; 1859-60, joined Newark Conference and was pastor of Halsey Street church, Newark; 1861-62, Hedding Street church, Jersey City; 1863-64, St. James, New Brunswick; 1865-67, Quarry Street church, Newark; 1868-70, Hackettstown; 1871-72, First M. E. church, Plainfield; 1874-76, Hoboken; 1877-78, Orange; 1879-81, Haverstraw, N. Y.; 1882-84, Fulton Street, Elizabeth; 1885-87, First M. E. church, Phillipsburg; 1889-90, St. Paul's, Staten Island; 1891, Central Street, Newark; 1892-94, Washington; 1895-97, Summerfield, S. I.; 1898-01, Somerville. He then moved to this city, where he resided up to the time of his death.

While a pastor of the First M. E. church, this city, Dr. Bryan was an important factor in the crusade against the saloons, and it is said that he was largely instrumental in having them closed one year. This action so incensed John Laing, who proprietor of Laing's Hotel, that he not only closed his barroom, but built a fence about the hotel, and anyone calling there for accommodations was sent to the Methodist church parsonage across the street. This incident never worried Dr. Bryan very much, for he believed that he was doing right. Dr. Bryan was not only an earnest and devoted pastor, but an eloquent preacher. He was also a strong advocate of temperance, and never lost an opportunity to advance its interests.

Dr. Bryan attended services at the First M. E. church Sunday morning to hear Dr. C. W. Parsons. Yesterday Rev. A. C. McCrea, the pastor, called on Dr. Bryan at his home and found him enjoying his usual good health. Dr. Bryan was pastor of the Central church, Newark, while Dr. Parsons was at St. Paul's church, Newark, and the latter expressed his highest admiration of the departed minister, who he learned to love for his excellent Christian qualities and character.

Dr. Bryan is survived by a wife, two daughters and two sons. The daughters are Mrs. William Chandler, of Chicago, a sister of Mrs. O. L. Jenkins, and Mrs. Russell R. Dorr, of St. Paul. The sons are William H. Bryan, of New York, and Dr. Joseph Bryan, of Asbury Park. The notice of the funeral will be given later.

Danish Congregation.

A Danish Lutheran congregation has been organized among the people of that nationality in this city. Services are held in the W. C. T. U. rooms the second and fourth Wednesday nights of each month. There are a goodly number of Danes in this city and vicinity and a prosperous church organization is before the Lutheran worshippers.

DR. SCHENCK ON LINCOLN

WAS NOT AN ATHEIST

Contrasts Him to Washington—Sketches President's Life and Achievements.

Taking for his theme "Lincoln, the Emancipator," Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, addressed his congregation Sunday on the Christian virtue and manly characteristics of the Martyr-President. During his discourse the speaker rebutted the allegation that Lincoln was not a Christian. "He was no more of an atheist than I am," said he, in emphasizing the great President's love of God. "He depended on the Lord for help in every important act of his administration, particularly when he signed the Emancipation Proclamation," added the preacher.

After declaring that the man was undoubtedly born of God, Rev. Mr. Schenck compared Lincoln with Washington. He pointed out to his congregation the great differences in early beginnings, dispositions, advantages and characteristics of America's two greatest chief executives. Washington, he said, was born of wealthy parentage, was aristocratic, and had every opportunity to make himself great. On the other hand, Lincoln was born of humble parentage, and had to strike out in life for himself. Both were Christians, he said. Washington's part in the church was well known, but it was only recently learned that Lincoln had been at all active. It is said that the latter was once a Sunday school superintendent.

Rev. Mr. Schenck dwelt at some length on the life of Lincoln, telling of his birth in Kentucky and his boyhood days. He briefly sketched his rise to national prominence and his achievements as President.

Y.M.C.A. FIVE LOSES STILL ANOTHER GAME

THIRD DEFEAT OF SEASON ON THEIR OWN FLOOR.

For the third time this season, and the second time in succession, the Y. M. C. A. basketball team was defeated on its own floor yesterday afternoon. The St. Christopher Tigers, one of the fastest teams in the New York Church League, sliced off Plainfield's scalp, neatly and expeditiously, by the score of 26 to 17.

Plainfield had nothing but its own playing to blame. The locals were slow in passing, displayed about enough team work to pass muster in loosely played practice, and failed generally to come up to the opportunities of the game. St. Christopher played right around them. The New Yorkers hit all spots on the floor at once and held every man on the other team to a painfully narrow field of action.

In one respect the game was exactly like the other three games of the locals. They managed to stay in the running in the first half. The score for that period was 10 to 10. But the second session brought the usual helplessness, and the visitors waltzed away with the decision.

GOOD FOR BAIL PRACTICE.

Pitcher Lou Wiltse, whose domestic moments are spent in the New Madison flats, has not yet signed for the coming season. When he does tie up to a club, he expects to arrive early in the little things that make for comfort and peace of mind all in his favor. Wiltse has been keeping in the pink of condition at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, and will begin outdoor practice as soon as the weather warms up. The presence of the Jersey City team here on the day for practice would fit in with Wiltse's plans. He could work out here with them, just as well as in any other place, and have the additional advantage of being within sliding distance of his own fireside.

"I regard Plainfield, in April, as just as good a place to practice as any other section of the country. It is as mild and balmy here as one can wish, and the climate is as good as need be," said the twirler this morning.

William Breem Discharged.

William Breem, arrested for being disorderly at his father's home, West Second street, was arraigned in the city court this morning. Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

Mrs. Lester Harris, of Oak Tree, was arrested by Patrolman Overbaugh Saturday afternoon for drunkenness. She was released under suspended sentence.

LARGE AUDIENCE AT LINCOLN ENTERTAINMENT

Y. M. C. A. AFFAIR MUCH ENJOYED; STORIES BY S. S. SWACKHAMMER.

There was a very large crowd at the Lincoln entertainment arranged for last night by the Y. M. C. A. The programme was greatly enjoyed.

The Musical Stewart, a professional entertainer; the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, E. C. Martin, baritone, and S. S. Swackhamer filled the numbers. Stewart and the lawyer divided the high honors of the evening. The musican played tunes on all sorts of things, from legitimate instruments to tin cans and cigar boxes. He gave imitations that were little gems. Mr. Swackhamer spoke on "Lincoln, the Prince of Story Tellers." It was a subject especially congenial to the former Assemblyman. He is something of a story teller himself, and he wound up a delightful reel of Lincoln stories in a very delightful way. He paid an eloquent tribute to the martyr-president, with whom he has been compared often enough to get the sobriquet in certain sections of the State of the Abe Lincoln of the New Jersey Bar.

The orchestra selections and the solos of Mr. Martin were of a high order. They were warmly applauded all through the house.

MEN'S CLUB FAVORS LOCAL OPTION BILL

BAPTIST ORGANIZATION PASS RESOLUTION ADVOCATING A LAW.

The local option bill now pending before the State Legislature was presented at the meeting of the Men's Club of the First Baptist church last Monday. The pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, read the measure and recommended that the club endorse the bill. After a unanimous endorsement on the part of the members, a petition, addressed to th Seenate and Assembly, was signed by all present, asking that the bill be adopted as drafted.

Samuel St. John McCutchen, president of the club, presided at the meeting, which was in the nature of a general conference. The work of the organization, though reports from the various committees, showed increased usefulness and indicated deep earnestness in carrying forward the objects of the organization.

Helpful and interesting remarks were made regarding the work of the club by the president, Alexander Gilbert, Edward T. Wilson, William Connor, Charles W. McCutchen, George A. Chapman, J. Henry Crane, Reuben Knox, T. S. Armstrong, J. Herbert Case and the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss.

After the conference there was a social hour, during which refreshments were served by a committee.

STATE PAID HOMAGE TO LINCOLN'S MEMORY.

Flying from the head of the staff atop of the gilded dome of the Capitol at Trenton yesterday the star spangled banned fluttered a proclamation that the State of New Jersey was honoring the birthday of the immortal Lincoln. In observance of the holiday the business of state was entirely suspended and all the offices in the Capitol were closed.

Governor Stokes went to his home in Millville, Saturday, and remained over Sunday. In honor of the memory of Lincoln he remained at home until yesterday noon, when he went to Trenton. Governor Stokes has become noted as one of the busiest of all the Jersey chief executives and never remains from his desk very long at a time.

Silence in the legislative halls last evening proclaimed that the lawmakers were also honoring the natal day of the martyred president. Both houses of the Legislature will meet this morning and transact the business which was laid aside last night because of the holiday.

Though the State offices were closed yesterday the corridors of the museum and other places of public interest in the building were kept open, and John Connell, the Capitol foreman, was on hand all day to show people about.

RHUBARB IN CELLARS.

Farmers Hit on Novel Plan to Supply Early Markets.

Woodstown, Feb. 13.—Agriculturists in this vicinity have been experimenting this winter in raising rhubarb in cellars, forcing it with heat and stuff that will facilitate an early growth. Warren Sloan has fifteen hundred clumps growing in cellars and five hundred bunches have been shipped to Philadelphia and New York markets during the past week.

Farmers have never been successful in raising rhubarb in hot houses, but by planting in dark, damp cellars they seem to have hit upon a combination of circumstances favorable to its growth.

Suburban Architecture

By Thomas Tryon.

The surburban house should be instinct with the vitality and taste of the owner. It should suggest the hospitality of the host. The plan should be compact, as spacious as the money at hand will allow and the exterior should arise naturally from these conditions and express in terms of local material, and methods of construction, the arrangement of rooms.

Often the site is small and frequently there is no prospect along the street on which it is to be built. Therefore do not hesitate to put the living rooms at the back, if, on that side the sun will shine into the windows all day, for here you will have your garden as an attractive foreground.

If the house is low, and small houses should be low, set it close to the ground. Do not be deceived into thinking that the cellar will necessarily be ill ventilated. Many stupid errors are made in the name of the practical, and, as a result of not thinking out clearly all the conditions that must be met by obvious requirements, and great sacrifices are made of subtle but none the less real needs.

A surprising sense of spaciousness may be attained by carefully studied proportions in all the rooms, and, if the house is to be really small, put your best thought on the one room in which the family will live, making the other necessary apartments adjuncts to this living room. The coloring of the walls and wood work has a deal to do with the sense of spaciousness and hospitality and a vista from one room into another will give an inspiring sense of attraction to a by no means large house.

Building materials must be classed as costly or the reverse, and if one must count every dollar spent on a small house, and most of us have to do this disagreeable thing, the concrete house is both inexpensive in the end and excellent as a building material. The first cost of a single concrete house is more than that of a house of the same size built of wood, but, the life of the material is much longer and the necessary repairs are reduced to a minimum, so that in the end the cost is considerably less.

The charge that the concrete house is architecturally insincere can only apply when the concrete is made to imitate some other material, such as rough stone work or elaborate carving. This is rather an error of taste than a radical fault of the material, for the concrete can be easily moulded in one shape or another, and it at its best when allowed to look just what it is, or when the surface is coated with small stones or rough cast. The most inexpensive method of building house walls is that of using fireproof slabs, reinforced by slight iron rods and covered on the outside with rough cast and lathed and plastered within.

The bungalow, or one story type of house is the most inexpensive if one has the plot of ground on which to set it. The long, low eaves with the recessed porches for shade and the series of good sized rooms gives a pleasant result. That many of our suburban houses are unattractive is obvious, and much either in faulty lies in the desire for exterior display of ornament. Ornament is a dangerous plaything. One good bit placed so that its value is enhanced will distinguish a house far more than the same amount of cost and labor spread over a larger surface. The machine made ornament and meaningless detail are sins of commission that it is to be hoped will shortly disappear from the designs of an architect and the minds of the builders.

20,000 ATTENDED REVIVAL IN PHILADELPHIA SUNDAY.

Two Hundred Men and Women Converted at Torrey Services.

Two hundred men and women were converted Sunday afternoon and evening at the Torrey-Alexander mission, in Philadelphia, in the Second Regiment Armory.

Remarkable scenes were enacted at both services, that for women in the afternoon, when seventy-nine professed conversion, and that gathering of men in the evening, when 122 made stand for the cause of Christ.

The armory was crowded at both meetings, and enough persons were turned away to swell five overflow meetings in neighboring churches, and the Bijou Theatre. An aggregate of about 12,000 persons listened to the two evangelists in the armory alone. It was estimated that 20,000 or more attended the entire seven meetings which were connected with the mission.

TWO CONCERNS CUT FROM SEVEN-INCH ICE

NATURAL COMPANY AND UNION BEEF MEN GET LITTLE CROP.

Ice of a sort was harvested by two local concerns Monday. The Natural Ice Company and the Union Beef Company cut a passable kind of product, but J. H. Tier, who thought he was going to get some yesterday, was disappointed.

Mr. Tier was balked in his plans for cutting yesterday by the weakening of the crust. He had his crop marked out, but the ice was found to be too spongy to cut properly. The ice was over eight inches thick, and a day or two of freezing weather would put in fine condition for harvesting.

The Natural Ice Company fared much better. They had their men at work steadily Monday and got in a crop of seven-inch ice of fairly good quality. Things were liquifying this morning, however, and although the men kept on cutting there was no telling, at the office this morning, when the harvest would be checked by the sprouting thermometer.

The Union Beef Company, which has the ice privilege on Hyde's pond, gathered a crop of the same sort as the Ice Company Monday. They face the same possibilities of a check as the vendors.

COLORED MEN WIN SCHOOL VICTORY.

After a bitter fight lasting many months a settlement has been reached between the colored people of East Orange and the East Orange Board of Education, which a while ago organized "Jim Crow" classes in the public schools. The Board of Education held a long conference Saturday night with representatives of the colored people, and yesterday it was said that the negro children who have been out of the public schools since the trouble will return and be assigned to proper classes.

When the board started the "Jim Crow" classes the colored people were angry, and have been holding weekly mass meetings ever since. Their wrath was directed mainly against Vernon L. Davey, superintendent of the schools, who, they said, was mainly responsible for the formation of the classes. Supreme Court Justice J. Franklin Fort spoke and worked in their behalf, as did a number of white ministers and prominent lawyers. Former Assemblyman William A. Lord, of Orange, was also prominent in the fight and last week addressed one of their mass meetings.

The colored people were led by one of their number, James N. Vandervall, who is well educated. For a long time the board was unrelenting and, though the colored people appeared before them several times, no progress was made and the bitterness grew. Two weeks ago the board began to weaken and rescinded the obnoxious measures, adopting new resolutions, which at the time were looked upon as just as bad. The board, however, showed a disposition to talk it over with the colored people, and Saturday night Mr. Vandervall, Dr. J. A. Stillwell, the Rev. David D. Terpeau, the Rev. George W. Krygar and Robert Travis held a conference with the board which resulted in an agreement under which colored children are to be assigned to regular classes in accordance with their fitness. There was a great rejoicing yesterday among the colored people. Addresses of congratulatement were made in their churches.

FANWOOD OFFICER STOPPED P. O. BURGLARY

INTERRUPTED FOUR MEN AT WORK ON LOCK OF DOOR.

The police force of Fanwood blocked an attempt to burglarize the postoffice of that place Tuesday morning. The force, whose name is W. J. Logan, interrupted the burglars, four in number, at work, and frightened them into flight. They escaped.

Logan, patrolling near the postoffice at 2 o'clock, saw four roughly dressed men loitering close to the office in a suspicious manner. He walked toward them to ask a question or two, and the men started on a walk down North avenue. Logan quickened his pace; so did the quartet. The cop put on steam and the four men broke into a run that left no doubt as to their earnest desire to get as far away from the officer as their legs could carry them. Logan chased them hard, but the fugitives disappeared in the darkness.

Logan gave up the chase and went back to the postoffice to investigate. A glance at the door showed him how opportune his appearance had been. There were fresh marks around the lock, but the fugitives had been made by a chisel. The four men had evidently been hard at work when the footsteps of the officer checked them.

Four men answering the description of the quartet chased by Logan were seen hanging about the borough during the day by Tax Collector Charles Sheelen. The Fanwood postoffice was successfully robbed last year.

The German Reformed church, Duer street and Craig place, celebrated the eighteenth anniversary of its organization with a special service Monday. The service was followed by a sociable.

A feature of the service was a review of the church history by Rev. Mr. Koechli. He spoke interestingly of its organization. Pastor Schneegas, the present head of the congregation, and Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed church, which belongs to the same classis as the German church, offered a prayer.

After the service the members and their friends were entertained in the basement parlors. The sociable was under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

INJURED IN RUNAWAY.

B. T. Mumford Thrown From Sleigh and Cut About the Head.

A spirited horse owned by George Egel, the Somerset street butcher, and being driven by his son, Bernie Egel, ran away on Rockview terrace, the borough, yesterday afternoon, and both young Egel and a companion, B. T. Mumford, were thrown out of the sleigh, to which the animal was attached.

Egel escaped injury, but Mumford was considerably cut about the head and Dr. Pittis was summoned to fix him up. He was removed to his home, where he will probably remain for a few days. The horse ran from Rockview terrace to Harrison street, where he was finally caught and returned to Egel, who started out to hunt for him. The sleigh was but slightly damaged.

WATSON GIVEN TWENTY YEARS

Court Accepts Negro Preacher's Plea of Guilty of Murder in the Second Degree.

PRISONER UNMOVED

Proceedings Before Judge Garretson Brief—Watson Killed James Christopher in Quarrel in North Plainfield.

Within an hour after the defendant had entered the Somerset County Court room Tuesday the case of Rev. James A. Watson, the colored preacher, who killed James Christopher in a quarrel on Warren street, last fall, had been disposed of and the prisoner sentenced. A plea of guilty of murder in the second degree was accepted by Justice Abram Q. Garretson, and a penalty of twenty years at hard labor in the State prison was imposed. Watson merely nodded his head when the court ceased speaking and started for the jail corridor without waiting for Sheriff Cooper to tell him. He will be taken to Trenton tomorrow.

The acceptance of a second degree plea was agreed upon between Justice Garretson, Prosecutor Reger and Alvah A. Clark, counsel for the defendant, before court opened. When Reger moved that the proceedings be started, Mr. Clark made a long address, in which he stated that he fully realized that a life had been taken and that Watson was the slayer, but that there were extenuating circumstances. He described the quarrel and fight between the two men and asserted that if Watson had not drawn a razor to protect himself he would have been the victim.

He was followed by the prosecutor, who said the State realized that it could not prove premeditated murder, and for that reason the plea of guilty in the second degree had been decided upon. Mr. Clark's command Watson arose to his feet and gave his version of the affair. His statement was practically as has been given before, placing the blame for the quarrel upon Christopher. The preacher declared that they had an agreement as to the use of a stove in the house which they both occupied on Warren street, but his co-tenant generally kept away from it when he wanted to cook anything. It was Christopher, he said, who started the fight, because he brought some fish to be fried, and when several blows had been exchanged, grabbed up a razor. In self-defense he drew a similar weapon and slashed at him to save himself. The fight began in the house, but ended in the street, and Christopher died as he was being taken to the nospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Michaelson, of the borough, corroborated part of his testimony, and Dr. W. H. Long, of Somerville, described the nature of the wounds, otherwise there were no witnesses called.

With these few preliminaries over, Prosecutor Reger moved for sentence and the court ordered Watson to stand up. He was then informed that his case had been carefully considered and from the evidence it could not be construed as wilful murder. A defendant is always entitled to a reasonable doubt, he said, and although the law fixes thirty years as the penalty, Watson's actions did not warrant the full term. He accordingly made it twenty years.

Watson's home was in Virginia, and he had been in North Plainfield but six months when the murder occurred. He had no regular charge and went about leading meetings in this city and vicinity, depending upon the collections for pay.

LIVELY AUTO HEARING

Friends and Foes of Frelinghuysen's Bill Argue.

C. A. REED'S PROTEST

Attacks Drastic Legislation as the Representative of Local Association—Repartee Tilt With Farmers' Representative.

Automobilists of this city were strongly represented at the hearing on the Frelinghuysen and Jackson bills before the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, in the Assembly chamber at Trenton yesterday. Former Senator Charles A. Reed appeared before the committee to speak for for the Union County Automobile Association, and T. E. H. Curtis, Dr. F. C. Ard, Henry Suydam, A. B. Laing and Richard Stevens, who are members of the association, helped to swell the crowd. Mr. Reed is himself an enthusiastic autoist.

It was the most interesting hearing of the session. Early in the morning the corridors of the State House were filled by men and women wearing fur-lined coats and other apparel, indicating that they are automobilists. In front of the State House there were lined upon both sides cars of every description, from the $750 machine to the $15,000 car.

The foes of the bill were headed by Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., of Trenton, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey, who introduced Senator Reed, the first speaker. It was 12:30 o'clock when Senator Hillery announced that one and one-half hours would be allowed the opponents and one hour to those in favor of the measure.

Senator Reed, on behalf of the Plainfield club read a petition signed by the members opposing the bills, which were characterized as drastic, and declaring they were in favor of a law that would provide for the revocation of a license for violation. Summary arrest and conviction were denounced, and it was urged that trial for violation should be in no court of lower jurisdiction that the Court of Common Pleas. The present law, he said, was good enough, if properly enforced, which could be done if the numbers were placed on the front as well as the rear of the machine.

The speaker also agreed that no person should be permitted to use a machine unless licensed to do so. He referred to 1888, when employed as counsel for the League of American Wheelmen, it took him three days to find a Senator—Pfeifer, of Camden—willing to introduce the bill, and then only by request. The opposition then was the same as now, because it was new, and the speaker said when the flying machine came into general use he anticipated similar opposition for like reasons.

In conclusion, former Senator Reed said the fee charged should be a license fee, and not a fee to raise revenue, which would be illegal unless all classes of vehicles were included. Those objected to licensing only the professionals, who, he said, were responsible for most of the objections offered, and said the only true way of stopping the abuse was to make it known that a violator of the law would be barred from a license for all time.

Mr. Reed took the bill by sections and pointed out its many objections to users of automobiles, and said that what was needed was a law preventing a reckless driver from driving a machine at all. He asserted that automobiles do not damage roads as do wagons.

In reply to a question of Senator Wakelee if the proposed tax was not an occupation license, Senator Reed said that, in his judgment did not apply, for an occupation license was one which under the broad power of police militated against public health.

Senator Reed said that a law which would take hold of a reckless autoist good and hard for misdeeds was what the people wanted, and that taking away of all license to operate a machine was the true solution of the problem.

SOUGHT DOCTORS VAINLY.

Man With Smashed Finger Had Long Search for Relief.

George Ayers, an employe of Schwed Brothers, East Front street, didn't pull his hand from the jamb quickly enough as he stepped out of the doorway at closing time Monday night, and the heavy door, swung by a powerful spring, closed on the little finger. The finger was mashed to the bone.

Ayers had a hard time getting the injury dressed. He went to the offices of three doctors without finding one home, and in desperation, he went to Druggist B. J. Schreiner, Park avenue and Second street, for relief. He was suffering intensely, but the druggist could do nothing for him; the injury was too serious. Ayers went out on his pilgrimage for relief again. He was lucky enough to catch Dr. Long at home, and the finger was dressed. The delay in treatment will retard its healing, but it will be saved.

After Ash Wagon Drivers.

"LARRY" GETS HIS DUES

Judge Vail Sentences Wallace to Three Years in State's Prison.

IS AN OLD OFFENDER

Convicted of Breaking and Entering Rapp's Hotel in Scotch Plains —Others Sentenced Today.

One of the surprises in the Union County Court this morning when sentences were pronounced by Judge Vail was the one imposed upon "Larry" Wallace, convicted of the charge of breaking and entering Rapp's Hotel at Scotch Plains recently. He was sentenced to three years in State prison. Judge Vail remarked that the defendant had been before the court so many times on various charges that he considered that he had no good excuse to offer.

Since being convicted of the charge of entering Rapp's Hotel, Wallace was arrested at Scotch Plains for being drunk and disorderly and was sent to the county jail for thirty days. This sentence is not yet completed.

Frank H. Brown, colored, who pleaded guilty to stealing a watch from Charles Vermeule, a trolley car conductor, was put in charge of the probation officer.

Thomas Flaherty, of Elizabeth, found guilty of seduction, upon promise of marriage, was sentenced to five years in State prison. His counsel, James C. Connolly, of Elizabeth, announced that he would take this case up on a writ or error.

James O'Rourke, of Summit, guilty of breaking and entering a trunk belonging to Anthony Hubbard, and taking $300, was sent to the Reformatory, as was also Joseph R. Miller, a boy found guilty of indecent assault.

James M. Wilson, who was found guilty of forging a note for $25, upon which he realized $25 in cash, was given two months in the county jail, and Erick Olsson and Bernard Nelson, of Elizabeth, found guilty of assault and battery on Charles Curtis, also of Elizabeth, were fined $25 each. Michael Gast, alias George Miller, of Westfield, guilty of the charge of assault and battery on W. H. Barton, a liveryman of Westfield, was put in charge of the probation officer.

POLICE COMMISSION BILL

FOR 2ND CLASS CITIES

Applies to Elizabeth but Not to Plainfield—Mayor Buckle Still Firm for Bi-Partisan Board.

As forecasted some time ago, a new police commission bill has been introduced in the Legislature and will undoubtedly become a law. Assemblyman Randolph Perkins, of Westfield, leader for the "organization," is sponsor for the measure, which is said, was drawn by Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth. It covers only second class cities of over 50,000 people, and accordingly Plainfield will not fall under its provisions.

It is Assembly bill No. 252, and abolishes the present law under which police boards are now appointed in second class cities having a population over 50,000, and re-enacts the same with some changes.

When Mayor Buckle was seen today he said that he had not changed his mind regarding the value of a police commission, adding that if a law was passed enabling him to do so, he would take advantage of it. "I think it would be helpful to have a bi-partisan board. As the police department is conducted under the present system there is one very unsatisfactory feature. The council*manic committee only serves for a* brief term and as soon as it gains valuable experience it is succeeded by another committee. A commission would be more satisfactory."

HAS MITCHELL ARRESTED

Senior Deacon of the Calvary Baptist Church Sweats Out Warrant.

CHARGES DISTURBANCE

Deacon Says Dominie Fractured the Peace of the Church Sunday Night—Statement by Lawyer Murphy.

There was a new development in the Calvary church row this morning. Rev. J. W. Mitchell, who, as acting pastor, had Rev. P. T. Morris arrested in the pulpit Sunday night, was himself arrested this morning on a warrant sworn out by Mansfield Robinson, charging him with disturbing the peace. Robinson is senior deacon of Calvary, and the call to Rev. D. M. Bailey, who disputes the pastorate with Rev. Mr. Morris, is said to have been signed by him. Robinson charges Mitchell with disorder by loud talking and noisy demonstration before the arrest Sunday night.

The warrant was sworn out before Justice Hand. Constable Manley served it, and the justice bound over the prisoner in the care of the constable to appear when called for a hearing, date of which is to be set later.

Clarence L. Murphy, counsel for Morris, declared this morning that his client would pay no attention to the action of Justice Mosher in closing the case against him Monday afternoon.

"There was no decision that is binding on Mr. Morris or anyone else," he said. "The justice's declaration that he would put Mr. Morris under his own bond to keep the peace has no more weight than his fulmination against me. My client walked out of the court without the signing of any paper, and none will be signed. If he sees it he may go into the pulpit of Calvary church again, and any man who lays a hand on him will find himself facing an action for false imprisonment."

In connection with the case, Mr. Murphy made the following statement to Daily Press reporter:

The most convincing argument in favor of the abolition of the office of Justice of the Peace was made by the action of J. E. Mosher at Police Headquarters Monday afternoon during the "hearing" of the alleged charges against Rev. P. T. Morris.

After having issued a warrant for the arrest of a minister of the gospel upon an insufficient affidavit, Mosher, without giving the accused an opportunity to be heard in his own de*fense, and upon the testimony of but* one witness, attempted to pronounce a sentence upon the defendant.

This "hearing" was indeed a "farce" and a travesty of justice. But two persons have been wronged. First, the defendant, who was so unjustly accused, and whose good name has been smirched; and secondly, myself, who, acting as counsel for the accused was subjected to insult from Mosher, who attempted to charge me with a "breach of faith" as an attorney, contending that I had put the case before both sides and had "violated my oath of office." After the complaining witness had testified, the fact that there was no just case against the defendant and finally dawned upon Mosher, who gladly accepted as true, the absurd statement of one who was both the complainant) that I had advised the arrest of the defendant, as his excuse for ending the "hearing" without giving me any chance for explanation.

The trouble in the Calvary Baptist church arose out of a dispute between two factions, each contending for their several candidates as the rightful pastor. As I have been the attorney of the church ever since its incorporation the members come to me for legal advice on such matters. In this particular instance, be*fore any legal proceedings* were taken, and before there was any attempt to cause trouble by J. W. Mitchell, or any one else, I advised both factions to settle their dispute within the church and refrain from going to law, and I never advised the arrest of any one.

It is an outrage that this statement of a witness should have been accepted as true by Mosher and used by him as an excuse to end the proceedings and insult a member of the bar.

This matter is not ended. The Rev. P. T. Morris will prosecute his claim for damages against the offending parties, and a warrant has been issued for the arrest of J. W. Mitchell.

Mrs. Boice's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Eden Boice will be held from her late home on West Third street Friday morning at 11 o'clock. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

FINED $1,000 FOR RUNNING DISORDERLY HOUSE

PRISON FOR GALBRAITH

Given Three Years, Linzer, Ross and Holland Being Sentenced For Two.

OUTRAGES COMMITTED

Court Said that Galbraith Could Have Been Given Fifteen Years—Mattis' Trial Next.

Heavy sentences were pronounced in the Union County Court this morning by Judge Vail, and in nearly every case no mercy was shown by Judge Vail, despite the pleas made by counsel. John Galbraith, who with Peter Linzer, William Ross and Thomas Holland, the last named a colored man, were found guilty of a heinous offense in this city, was sentenced to three years in State prison, while Linzer, Ross and Holland received a sentence of two years in the same place.

Galbraith, who is seventy years of age, was the first one arraigned. Judge Vail referred to the fact that the defendant had stood trial and was found guilty of the charge. He said that while leniency had been sought in his case, he could have been sentenced to fifteen years in State prison. The judge declared that the case was one of the most outrageous that he ever had come before him.

Linzer, Ross and Holland were then arraigned and each were sentenced to two years in State prison. The trio, in preference to standing trial, changed their pleas to guilty, and this no doubt secured for them a lighter sentence than that given Galbraith.

Richard Mattis, who was arrested with the other four on a similar charge, was recently transferred to Somerville, where the case against him will be tried. It is said that his offense was committed in Somerset county. It is expected that Galbraith, Linzer, Ross and Holland will be taken to Trenton either tomorrow or Friday to begin the serving of their sentences.

GOVERNOR TO ATTEND AMERICAN BANQUET

UNLESS AFFAIRS OF STATE PREVENT, HE WILL RESPOND TO A TOAST.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, who went to Trenton yesterday to secure the acceptance of Governor Stokes to the invitation to attend the "Junior American banquet," to be held at the Casino Thursday night, March 1, says it is almost certain that the chief magistrate of the State will be here. The Governor informed Mr. Smalley that he was reserving the date and assured him that he would make every effort to come. Unless matters of State importance interfere, the Governor will be at the banquet and speak on the subject of "Our State." Senator Colby will be the principal speaker.

The tickets for the banquet are selling rapidly and those wishing to secure them should speak for them at once. It is expected that the sale will be stopped on Monday, so as to enable the committee to ascertain definitely how many to provide for. Tickets can be secured of Thomas E. Currin, at the First National Bank, or H. C. Runyon, in the bank building. Details of the affair are being perfected and it promises to be one of unusual interest not only to the members of Franklin and Benevolent councils, under whose auspices it is given, but citizens generally.

ENDEAVOR UNION FOR LOCAL OPTION BILL.

It Also Disapproves of Any Additional Licenses Here.

Under the auspices of the missionary committee of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union, a mass meeting will be held in Trinity Reformed church on Thursday night, March 15, when Rev. H. J. Scudder, a missionary from India, will give a stereopticon lecture. This was decided at a meeting of the executive committee of the union held last night.

A petition was drafted to be sent to the Common Council on Friday night. This petition opposes the granting of any liquor licenses and especially the granting of any new applications for the sale of intoxicating liquors during the coming year. A committee, comprising the president and treasurer, was also appointed to send a petition to the Assemblymen and Senator from this county, favoring the adoption of the local option bill.

John J. Goff Must Pay the Price of a Saloon License For His Second Offense.

NO CLEMENCY SHOWN

Only a Short Time Ago Goff Was Fined for Conducting a Speakeasy—His Counsel Pleads In Vain for Mercy.

John J. Goff, who was convicted of the charge of keeping a disorderly house at George Seeber's hotel in West Front street, was arraigned before Judge Vail in the Union County Court this morning for sentence. A fine of $1,000 was imposed. That is the fee for a retail liquor license in this city. Judge Vail in imposing the fine cited the fact that in October last Goff was fined $50 on practically the same charge, which was meant as a warning. He said that he had fully considered the plea made for mercy and leniency in behalf of Goff. He then imposed the fine, warning Goff not to repeat the offense. The defendant received his sentence calmly.

Prior to the arraignment of Goff his counsel, William R. Wilson, made a strong plea for his client, and presented a petition signed by a large number of friends, asking for leniency in pronouncing sentence. Mr. Wilson expressed sorrow for his client in that he had transgressed the law, and stated that Goff had withdrawn his application for a liquor license in this city, closed his place and declared to engage in some other kind of business. On this ground he asked the court to deal leniently with Goff.

Judge Vail evidently was not impressed greatly with the pleas made in behalf of Goff, believing that he should have heeded the warning of the court when a fine of $50 was imposed for illegal selling of liquor. After sentence was pronounced Goff held a consultation with his counsel, with a view to paying the fine. In default of this Goff would have to go to jail. It is believed that he will pay the fine.

Ever since Goff's Hotel was raided by Councilmen W. S. Tyler and former Councilman W. S. Bullock, he has been one of the most-talked-about men in the city. He was a conspicuous character at the trial of Chief Kiely on charges preferred by Messrs. Tyler and Bullock, which occurred after he was fined $50 in the Union County Court. Notwithstanding the fact that Goff was fined $50 for again violating the law at his hotel, and Chief Kiely secured enough evidence to convict him.

The weakness of his case was apparent to all who attended the trial. Goff appeared in the role of a steward of the West End Pinochle Social Club, receiving a salary of $5 a week, while the club was said to have paid him $10 a month rental for rooms at the hotel. Neither Judge Vail or the prosecution impressed with the plea of the defense, and it was expected that Goff would receive a heavy penalty.

A BISHOP'S EULOGY

Rev. Dr. Whitney, Rev. Dr. Butz and Others Tell of Real Worth of Departed Preacher—Services at First M. E.

Relatives, friends and a large representation of ministers from all parts of New Jersey, especially the Newark Conference, attended the obsequies of the Rev. Dr. James R. Bryan at the First M. E. church Friday afternoon. The departed minister the eldest member of the Newark Conference, having been in the active ministry from 1848 to 1902, and his fellow ministers gave touching tribute to his real worth as a pastor and preacher.

Bishop E. G. Andrews, New York; Rev. Dr. Daniel Halloran, presiding elder of the Elizabeth district; Rev. A. C. McCrea, Rev. Dr. H. A. Butz, president of Drew Seminary, and Rev. Dr. J. H. Whitney, president emeritus of Centenary Institute, Hackettstown, preceded the funeral cortege as it entered the church. Then these mourners followed and occupied seats reserved for them in

C. S. Ryman, of Paterson; Rev. Dr. W. S. McCowan, of Woodbridge; Rev. J. M. Meeker, of East Orange; Rev. Dr. W. C. Nelson, of Nutley; Rev. J. R. Wright, of Westfield; Rev. E. E. Rubeson, of Bound Brook; Rev. S. K. Doolittle, of Dunellen; Rev. Ralph Urmy, of Morristown; Rev. W. W. Walker, of Caldwell; Rev. T. H. Landon, of Bordentown; Rev. T. C. Maclam, of Rahway; Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of Perth Amboy; Rev. W. H. Trumbower, of Bergen Point; Henry Chamberlin, of Jersey City; Charles Warren, of New York; Rev. Perry Plumb, of Englewood; Rev. E. P. Boyd, Rev. Fred Bloom, Rev. John MacMurray, of Jersey City; Rev. Henry Little, of Hackensack; Rev. J. B. Rhodes, of Cranford; Rev. S. D. Decker, of Whitehouse; Rev. W. B. Fleming, of Maplewood; Rev. W. B. Richardson, of Dover; Rev. William Stout, of Mt. Horeb; Rev. Isaac Thomas, of Woodrow; Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons and Rev. George Mooney, of Plainfield. Rev. Dr. Butz, who represented the Plainfield Ministers' Association; Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, First Baptist church; Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, Trinity Reformed church; Rev. C. O. Flun, Park Avenue Baptist church, and Rev. George B. Shaw, Seventh-day Baptist church.

A quartette, comprising Miss Bertha van Nuis Willis, soprano; Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell, contralto; J. Edmund Skiff, tenor, and Carlos C. Hallup, bass, sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul." Miss Jessie Utter was the organist. Rev. A. C. McCrea read appropriate selections from the Scriptures, which was followed with a prayer by Rev. Dr. Halloran. Another selection by the quartette, "Servant of God, Well Done," preceded remarks by Rev. Dr. Butz, who referred to Dr. Bryan as "one of the leaders in Zion." He said that he first met Dr. Bryan when he entered the Newark Conference and the last meeting was a few weeks ago at a reunion of the members of his old church on Staten Island.

Continuing, Mr. Butz said: "He was the dearest friend and possessed the noblest character. He was my ideal of the minister of the Lord Jesus Christ. For fifty years he stood on the walls of Zion proclaiming the Gospel and went up and down the valleys of his native State doing good. In the first place, he was a well rounded man, gentle, yet firm as a rock. He was a most faithful and earnest member of the Newark Conference; he was a true friend, brother and a pastor. He was a master in the pulpit, yet never failed to feed the sheep in his pastoral work. He loved the whole Church of God.

"In the third place, he had a passion for men and their souls and a genius for friendship. His success in saving souls was remarkable, for he was given the rare privilege of sowing and reaping a large harvest. During his active ministry we have the record that he was instrumental in bringing to Christ 2,750 souls, an average of over one hundred in every charge he held and fifty every year. He was a good man, filled with the Holy Ghost, and the love of Christ was his inspiration."

Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney, who enjoyed a long acquaintance with Dr. Bryan, was the next speaker. He remarked that Dr. Bryan was born in Pemberton, N. J., December 23, 1828, and was converted at the age of eighteen years, and a year later was licensed to preach. He took a course of study at Pennington Seminary, and afterward the New Jersey Conference theological course of four years. He was admitted to the New Jersey Conference at the age of twenty-four years, and remained in active service until 1902, when he retired from his charge at Somerville.

Dr. Whitney referred to Dr. Bryan's attendance at church last Sunday morning, when he listened with deep interest to an eloquent sermon by Rev. Dr. C. W. Parsons on the text, "I shall be satisfied when I awake in His likeness." Dr. Whitney also bore testimony to the earnest and simple life of the departed. There was nothing showy about him. He was always the same, and in the words of Tennyson, "a strong son of God."

Bishop E. G. Andrews was the last speaker, and remarked that an incident of special interest to him was the fact that Dr. Bryan and himself were both admitted to their respective conferences in 1848. He spoke of the mysteries of life which are all about us, adding that those who love God shall be like Him when they see Him face to face. His remarks were brief and in consolation said that another devoted, earnest soul had entered the veil which separates the two worlds and that if all were faithful they too would be received into that glorious world. He urged all to renew their faith in Christ.

After a prayer by Rev. S. K. Doolittle, of Dunellen; Rev. W. B. Richardson, of Dover, presented resolutions of condolence on behalf of the board of trustees of the Mt. Tabor Camp Meeting Association, of which Dr. Bryan was vice-president and trustee. A copy will be spread on the minutes of the association and another copy sent to the bereaved family.

Following another selection by the quartette, "It Is Not Death to Die," the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. W. C. Nelson, formerly of the borough, but now of Nutley. An opportunity was then given all to view the remains. The interment was in Hillside cemetery.

There were many beautiful floral tributes from relatives and friends, as well as fellow workers with Dr. Bryan. The casket was covered with these evidences of esteem, while about the pulpit platform there was arranged a number of palms.

The pall bearers were Blanchard Randolph, Noble H. Briggs, L. G. Ayers and William Hardgrove.

The Elks' minstrel committee will meet Wednesday night and make a final report of the recent show. The total receipts were $1,075 and it is expected the profits will be about $450.

HARTRIDGE SCHOOL'S SPLENDID EXHIBITION

PUPILS' PROFICIENCY ADMIRED BY A LARGE CROWD AT THE CASINO.

An event of more than ordinary interest was the exhibition at the Casino of three branches of work at the Hartridge School this afternoon. The branches included singing, calisthenics and gymnasium work, and in each the pupils showed marked proficiency under the direction of Miss Hartridge, assisted by the teachers of the school. There was a large attendance of parents and friends of the school, all of whom were greatly interested in the exhibition. The pupils were accorded high praise for their work, while the teachers were also complimented for their efforts.

"O Country Great and Glorious," Schumann, academic and elementary departments; "To a Child," Bendel, academic and 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th elementary; "Mammy's Little Honey," Tracy, academic department; "Pilgrim Chorus from Tannhauser," Wagner, academic and elementary departments; "The Night," Raff, academic and 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th elementary; (a) "Swing Song," Nevin; (b) "A Dew Drop," Glichrist, 1st, 2d and 3d elementary; "When My Mother Sings," Dvorak, academic, 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th elementary; "The Angel," Rubinstein, academic department; "Lullaby," Brahms, academic and elementary departments.

Following the vocal programme, there was an exhibition of calisthenics, as follows:

March, second grade elementary, third and fourth grades elementary, fifth grade elementary, sixth and seventh grades elementary. The programme was then concluded with the gymnasium work, which included dumb-bells, rings, horse, dance—Highland fling and calisthenics.

In the calisthenics and gymnasium work the pupils did well and they received frequent applause as they went through the various drills.

The calisthenic and gymnasium work of the school is in charge of Miss Laura M. Kenilah, of the Gardner Gymnasium, New York, and the singing in charge of Miss Lillian Andrews, a pupil of Oscar Saenger. These teachers are members of the school faculty.

Manager Counihan has booked Mme. Lillian Blauvelt and her big company of seventy-three people for appearance at the New Plainfield next week. She will present her successful production, "Rose of the Alhambra," being seen this week at Philadelphia.

E. S. F. Randolph, of Grant avenue, who recently underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, is steadily improving.

JAGUAR AND ALLIGATOR.

Supposed to Be the Only Animal That Knows How to Attack the Saurian.

The most interesting thing about crocodiles and alligators, declares the author of "The Romance of the Animal World," is the way they get their food. This they do mostly, and by preference, in the water, but they have also a habit of lying in wait upon the mud of river banks until some animal approaches sufficiently near to be within their reach.

Lying sunk in the mud, and of the color of mud themselves, they may well be mistaken for a log. A wild pig or some other animal fond of rooting in the mud, sees the long, shapeless object, but is not disturbed by it as are roots happily among the reed beds. He looks up suddenly to find that the log has moved. One end of it, the longest, thinnest end, is gliding away in a curve; but like an arrow aimed, it flies true and meets the body of the pig with a tremendous sidewise blow and the poor pig falls in a heap.

With a sudden, swift rush the alligator is upon him, and seizing the body by its skin, which it holds put erect up between its front teeth, it shakes it furiously, as a terrier would a rat, and then half drags, half pushes it before it as it crawls through the mud to the water's edge.

There is only one wild animal, says the author, that will purposely attack an alligator, and that is the jaguar of South America. The jaguar springs on the back of the alligator and with all his might tears at the roots of the creature's tail. This, possibly, is with the idea of paralyzing that member and thus rendering it incapable of rendering those mighty sweeps from side to side which are more to be feared than even the great armed jaws.

The power of both these weapons may deter the Jaguar from clawing the throat of the saurian, for were he to be shaken off in the latter struggles, he would be more exposed to either than if he fell farther back.

Instances of the jaguar's success in destroying the alligator are given by various observers.

WAS FAST RESUSCITATION.

The Court Could Not Err, So the Claimant Was "Extinctus Defunctus."

In the days of the first settlers in the Chickasaw country, when Davy Crockett still frequented the Big Hatchie "Man Giddings" was a prosperous citizen of the Forked Deer settlement. One day he started on a trip to Arkansas, and thenceforth for several years Forked Deer knew him no more.

As travel in Arkansas was dangerous, and as nothing was heard of Giddings, he was officially declared dead by the court, and his estate divided among his heirs. A year or so later, however, he turned up and tried to get possession of his property. This was promptly seized and taken into court.

"What do you mean by coming round here, trying to take this property?" roared the court at him.

"It's my property," asserted Giddings. "Everybody knows it's mine."

"Not at all," replied the judge. "I'll admit your case seems a hard one, but it can't be helped now. This court has decided that you are extinctus defunctus which is Latin for dead. This court never errs. Find you are, if you want any property around here you must take another name and set to work to earn it. Mr. Sheriff, adjourn this court and we will all go and see that wrestling match you spoke of."

WHEN NATURE AWAKES.

Hour Between Midnight and Daybreak That Is a False Dawn.

There is one hour of the night between midnight and morning—two o'clock, to be accurate—when all nature is astir. The cowboys and the shepherds and the old country folk tell it about it. This hour is heralded by the rooster crowing, not this time to announce the hour of dawn, but as though he were a watchman speeding the course of night. Cowboys assert that the entire herd of cattle wake up and walk about and lie down and rest in a new lair. The sheep rouse themselves and crop the grass, the birds stir in their nests, the cowboys' horses and the shepherd's dog open their eyes to see that all is well. The shepherd and the cowboy open their eyes, too, to look at the moon and at the stars and become for the time birds, mere animals in nature's flock; yet there is no accounting for the inaudible summons, the gentle touch of nature that recalls all the sleepers to life at precisely the same hour. Even to those deepest read in these arcana this rhythmical nightly resurrection remains a mystery.

Zululand Opening.

The Natal government has decided to throw open a part of the Ngwavuma district in Zululand to European settlers willing to lease lands for the purpose of tapping the large numbers of rubber vines which abound in this hitherto unknown district. The rubber is of good quality, but unfortunately the natives in collecting it very often destroy the vines, one of the chiefs recently having felled over 2,000 trees to form a new stockade for his royal kraal.

IN THE U. S. GOLF ASSN.

Plainfield Country Club Made a Member of National Organization.

EVENTS ARE ARRANGED

Women's Championship to Take Place on Brae Burn Country Club Links.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the United States Golf Association in New York Thursday afternoon the Plainfield Country Club was admitted to the organization. It was decided to award the amateur championship to the Englewood Golf Club July 10-14. The women will play on the links of the Brae Burn Country Club, West Newton, Mass., October 8-13, while the open is slated for the Onwentsia Club, Lake Forest, Ill., June 28 and 29.

Golfers are surprised at the selection of Brae Burn for the women, as the Atlantic City Country Club was supposed to be the only applicant. It was stated that Brae Burn asked for the event after the annual meeting. This is only one of many "turndowns" the Atlantic City Club has received from the heads of this all-important executive committee.

The only applicants for the open were the Onwentsia and the Philadelphia Cricket Club, and in selecting the former the committee has made a fairly equal sectional division of the fixtures between New York, Boston and Chicago. The fact that Willie Anderson, the four-times open champion, will have charge of the Onwentsia green this season seems to make his chances of winning again all the brighter.

Five new associate members were elected at Thursday's executive session. They were the Columbia Golf Club, of Washington, D. C.; Midlothian Country Club, Blue Island, Ill.; Wykagyl Country Club, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Euclid Country Club, Cleveland, O.; Plainfield Country Club, Plainfield, N. J.

The Midlothian Club was elected to associate membership in 1906, but changed its mind and withdrew in 1907. This sudden influx of associate clubs shows the wisdom of reducing the dues from $100 to $50. Those at the meeting were Ransom, H. Thomas, Daniel Chauncey, W. Fellowes Morgan and Heyward G. Leavitt. They held the proxies of the absentees.

The Runaway Brook Golf Club, Clinton, Mass., was elected to allied membership, and the application of the Wyantenuck Golf Club accepted.

The East Jersey Golf League will continue during the season of 1906 with five clubs. At a meeting of the organization in New York yesterday afternoon the resignation of the Cranford Golf Club was accepted. In future teams will consist of five instead of four men, and the old penalty for a default will be one point. Formerly it was three points and, in the opinion of the delegates, too severe.

The old plan of scoring, a combination of the Nassau and college systems, was also abandoned. In future each individual win will count one point. The proposed medal play innovation for the team championships was voted down, the majority preferring the old way of home-and-home matches.

SCRIBNER ESTATE IS FINALLY SETTLED

JOHN R. VAN WINKLE'S ACCOUNT AS EXECUTOR IS PASSED.

In the Somerset County Orphans' Court at Somerville Friday, before Judge Schenck, the final accounts of John H. Van Winkle, surviving executor of the will of the late Isaac Scribner, of North Plainfield, came up on the exceptions filed by Mrs. Helena Randolph, a daughter of the decedent.

The court held that as to certain disputed items it had no jurisdiction to try and determine the matter, and that the other exceptions should be dismissed.

The real estate of the decedent has been sold under partition proceedings in the Court of Chancery, and the proceeds thereof paid into Chancery. The claimants against the estate will now be obliged to petition the Court of Chancery for the payment of the several claims out of the proceeds of said sale.

The final account was passed. An allowance made of $250 to Winfield S. Angleman, counsel for the executor, and an allowance of $50 was made to Clark & Cash, representing Sylvester B. Scribner, a son of the decedent.

"How Baxter Butted In" is a new domestic drama by Owen Davis. Of this play, which is a combination of brisk comedy and melodrama, Vance and Sullivan have made a very complete production and have engaged a splendid company of artists, headed by Sidney Toler, who is the part of Billy Baxter, the wide-awake drummer, presents a breezy and refreshing performance. It will be at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night.

TUBERCULOSIS CRUSADE

Plainfielders Chosen Director's in Newly Organized State Association.

TO FIGHT THE DISEASE

Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Dr. W. H. Murray and Hugh F. Fox to Be Active in the Association.

The formal organization of the New Jersey Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis has been effected as a result of the State Conference of Charities and Correction being held in Newark. Dr. David Magie, of Princeton, has been elected president, and among the directors chosen are Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Dr. William H. Murray and Hugh F. Fox, of this city.

The object of the association is to organize the fight against tuberculosis throughout the entire State, to agitate for better methods for the prevention of the spread of the disease and to educate the general public in the knowledge of the treatment of the disease and means for its prevention. The plan provides for the "encouragement of adequate provision for consumptives by the establishment of sanitariums, hospitals, dispensaries and otherwise."

Rev. James I. Vance, of Newark, presided at last night's session, the matter under consideration being "The Sanitary Condition and Administration." Among the many addresses on this subject was one by Dr. W. H. Murray on "Civic Sanitation and Hygiene as Affecting the Welfare of the Poor."

Dr. and Mrs. Maximilian P. E. Grossmann, of "Washington Crest," are among those who attended the conference. They were guests while in Newark of Dr. William Hayes Ward and his sisters, the Misses Ward, of Arlington avenue.

MR. AND MRS. DOBBINS FORTY-SEVEN YEARS WED

COUPLE CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY AT THE HOME OF THEIR SON.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Clark Dobbins, of Elmwood place, quietly observed the forty-seventh anniversary of their wedding Friday, and in the evening they were entertained at dinner at the home of their son, Walter Clinton Dobbins, of West End avenue. The affair was an informal one, just the immediate families and a few friends to the number of ten being present.

Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins were married at Caldwell, Essex county, forty-seven years ago yesterday. For a time they lived at Caldwell and in Newark. At the outbreak of the Civil War Mr. Dobbins helped to organize Company D, Twenty-sixth N. J. Vols., and he was elected captain of the company. After the war Mr. Dobbins held the position of internal revenue inspector for the Newark district and later the couple moved to this city, where they have resided for a quarter of a century.

The Hippodrome.

Forthcoming editions of dictionaries will contain a new word—Hippodromic—meaning something wonderful, beautiful, extraordinary, while conveying a sense of vastness and immensity. Responsibility for the coinage of the word rests with the New York Hippodrome and, especially, with the production of "A Society Circus," the greatest of all modern spectacles, now enjoying a phenomenal run at the nation's playhouse. Not one adverse criticism has been heard concerning this greatest of theatrical successes, everyone being unanimous in agreeing that its like has never been seen in the annals of the stage. The incidental circus tournament is the greatest ever witnessed. It includes Mlle. Leris, whose equestrianship has been a sensation in Paris; the Bonhair-Gregory troupe of acrobats, Europe's champions, appearing for the first time in America; Ralph Johnstone, whose exploits on the wheel are the limit of reckless daring, Claire Hello, remarkable exponent of feminine courage. She adds each week to the tricks displayed by her lions. Silvers and Marceline, clowns, have injected new lines of comedy throughout the performance.

Husband Arranges Surprise.

A surprise party arranged by her husband was tendered Mrs. George Scribner, East Sixth street, Wednesday night. About forty guests attended. Cards were the feature of the evening.

Evening Card Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Flynn, of Clinton avenue, entertained a number of friends at a card party Thursday night. Clinton Shannon won the prize. Refreshments followed the play.

Miss Lulu Randolph, of West Eighth street, has returned from a visit with friends out of town.

GULLICITY OF SHEEP.

Ewe That Has Lost Her Lamb Will Unhesitatingly Take to Strange Young One.

The utter stupidity of sheep is perhaps nowhere more strongly evidenced than in the perfect satisfaction with which a ewe that has lost her lamb will take to a strange lamb, around which has been fastened the skin of her dead offspring.

Considering that the skin of the dead lamb is often merely thrown loosely over the back of the living lamb, sometimes hanging almost to the ground off one side or the other, and making the lamb appear the quaintest kind of animal imaginable, the ewe's gullibility in this respect is remarkable. There can be no other explanation of her satisfaction than that she really thinks the muffled little stranger is her own progeny, otherwise she would give it no attention whatever.

Its appearance does not seem to count, nor even its voice. Its smell is something, which may be seen in any flock of ewes and lambs, for while the mothers certainly appear to know the bleating of their own children, the identification is always completed by the ewe sniffing the coat of her lamb.

I have been looking at two such quaint families in the lambing pens, says a writer in the London Express, and the picture of a sedate ewe placidly attending to the two weird little creatures which look as if they have been half-flayed was the most comical study of animal stupidity which could be imagined.

VIEWING MARINE WONDERS.

The aquarium is an unfailing source of astonishment and delight to all small children, and they make all sorts of odd remarks about the things they see there; such comments being very likely about things familiar enough to their elders, but new to them, says the New York Sun.

"My! what a long tongue!" said a small boy, as he gazed at a soft shell clam lying on the bottom of a tank, with its neck extended from its shell to the length of five or six inches.

A father and his very youthful son were looking in at the tank of cow fishes, those very curious fishes that have projecting from the top of the head two spines shaped like horns, while the portion of the fish's head helps the resemblance and gives to it, with the horns atop, the name of cow fish.

"Do they give milk?" asked this small boy.

"I don't know, son," said the father, and then the two passed on to the next tank of wonderful fishes from the tropics.

Chicken "Played Possum."

Here is a chicken that "played possum." A correspondent writes: "The cat of our household entered my room the other day, dragging a nearly full-grown chicken in its mouth. The chicken made no resistance and was quite motionless, and when I made the cat drop it the chicken lay apparently dead. I chased the cat from the room, and on my return to the chicken I was surprised to see it slowly open its eyes, raise itself up and look cautiously round. As soon as it felt sure of the disappearance of its enemy it got up and ran off as fast as it could."

High-Priced Snuff Box.

High prices continue to be paid in Paris for snuff-boxes of the eighteenth century. At the recent sale of a collection made by M. Guilhou, of Bayonne, one box in gold enamel, appraised by experts at $1,000, was sold for $4,000. One of the interesting items of the sale was a pair of candelabra once owned by Marie Antoinette, which went for $3,000, far less than was expected.

"Well, you see, it's this way," replied the circus man, "we run out of whetstones, nails and scrap iron, and I run across the street and bought a couple of apple pies from the restaurant to tide the ostrich over."—Kansas City Drovers Telegram.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 22.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Nineveh and missions in Japan. —Isa. i, 4-10.

In the last verse of the topical reference Isaiah, the prophet, asks the question: "Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voice of His servant, that walketh in darkness and hath no light? Let him trust in the name of the Lord and stay upon his God." Until a few years ago it could be said of Japan that she walked in darkness and had no light. The nation was properly classed among the heathen nations of the world. Her doors were closed to Christianity and to modern civilization. Buddhism, Confucianism, Taoism, religions of darkness, were the religions of the people, and what Japan needed was to know God, "to trust in the name of the Lord and stay upon his God." And the last half century has been marked by a marvelous advance from darkness into light, from ignorance into knowledge.

The war with Russia has especially resulted in giving Japan a high place among the nations of the world. A well known missionary recently said, "I thought I knew something about Japan, but I must confess that this war has revealed in her a wealth of power and resource beyond my most sanguine expectations." The great want of Japan at such a supreme moment is more knowledge of God and more implicit trust in God. That Christianity has had much to do in making the island empire what it is cannot be denied, and it will be true much more does Japan need Christ today to keep her from the pitfalls that always endanger a nation in its hour of greatest success. The clock has struck the hour in Japan. The Christian church should realize its opportunities and responsibilities and should rise to them with such power that Japan may soon be led into the complete light of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The greatest questions now arising concerning Japan are: "What development may be expected as a result of the war in the progress of the gospel? How will the work of foreign missionaries be affected? What will be the trend of events in the native churches?" In this connection it is most gratifying to record in the last missionary report of one of our great denominations: "In general the year has been full of encouragement. The war has not affected it unfavorably, but neither the contrary. Opportunities have multiplied." And with the multiplying of opportunities there must be a multiplying of resources. More missionaries must go to Japan. More prayers must be offered in her behalf. The missionaries there must have the more earnest and hearty support of the churches at home, as well as every encouragement and necessary equipment for the most vigorous prosecution of their work. They are the army in the field. We are the support of the army at home, and no army can win a victory without the prayers, sympathy and support of those who are at home. Let us therefore loyally support our missionaries in the field and supply them with everything they need for a most aggressive movement to win Japan for Christ at this most providential opportunity. Japan needs Christ and Christ needs Japan as a light to the orient. Let us make it our earnest prayer that Japan may be won, that to the other nations of the east she may be the Land of the Rising Sun of Righteousness, and may lead them to Him as their deliverer from ignorance and darkness.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. ii, 1-3; ix, 1-7; iii, 7; xxxv, 1-7; Matt. iv, 12-16; v, 14-16; Acts i, 1-12; ix, 1-8; Eph. v, 8, 14; Rev. xxi, 23, 24.

The Work With the Children.

Let me urge upon all our societies the importance of working with the Junior societies. The work with the little children is more important than words can convey. Their lives are to be shaped for the future. The continuance of the church depends largely upon the saving and training of the children. A scientist has recently said, "Children can't have much done for them after they are sixteen or seventeen years of age." What we do for them we must do soon, while they are young. Won't some of you who are capable lay aside some of your own selfish pleasures and sacrifice your time for the Juniors on Sunday afternoons this winter? The harvest is plenteous. The Junior superintendent says the Junior laborers are few. In the name of Christ, let me appeal to many a bright and winsome young Christian woman or young man to take up this very important work in your church if you have no such society now. —President King, of Ohio Union.

Eyes Wide Open.

Was there ever so perfect an organization as the Y. P. S. C. E.? It is no lifeless piece of machinery. It thinks, speaks and acts. It watches and works. It is human to the core, and there it is divine. The executive committee is its brains, the musical committee its voice, the prayer meeting committee its heart, the social committee its hand grasp, the flower committee its aesthetic faculty, the missionary committee its pocket and the lookout committee its eyes. There you have it—a man redeemed, intelligent, cordial, artistic, generous, wide awake! —Rev. W. H. G. Temple in Irish Endeavorer.

Prison Endeavor.

The three Endeavor societies in the Frankfort (Ky.) penitentiary recently conducted a successful Bible contest in which twenty-eight men took part, and each was given a handsome Bible. In all 11,153 verses were memorized. A second contest closed Thanksgiving. The prison Endeavorers prepared a Christmas tree.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 25: "A Pure Life"—Deut. xiv, 2; Ps. xxxii, 2; Isa. xxxv, 8; Matt. v, 8, 29, 30, 48; Rom. vi, 15-23; II Cor. vi, 14-17.

By REV. WALTER J. MATTS, D. D.

"The way of holiness." "Blessed are the pure in heart."

No principle is clearer in the Bible than that of the separation between the people who do right and those who do wickedly. From the first chapters of Genesis to the last of Revelation it is unmistakable that there is to ever be a distinction and the people who intend to obey God's commands are in some sort to be divided from the other men of their times. What is to be the nature of this division has been variously conceived at different times and by different authors.

Under the influence of the teaching of Jesus Christ it is coming to increasing recognition that it is not to be a life in isolated communities where only the godly are permitted to reside. The experiment in this direction have ever proved dismal failures.

We are to live in the world, but not to be of its spirit in unrighteousness. We are to develop our holiness as Christ grew in the midst of corruption. We are to be the salt which imparts its own savor to the surrounding mass.

Nor is our peculiarity to be so much one of distinctive dress and forms of speech. We are to be known among men as reliable in dealings, just in all transactions, gentle in intercourse, courteous in treatment of others. Whatever we desire from others and believe to be right and desirable that we are to do to other men. We are to be outwardly patterns of what all men should be.

But this is not holiness in its inner essence. It may not even be the mark of purity, but may arise from entirely different motives.

The real nature of holiness lies in the inner nature of soul purity. It is based on unwavering confidence in God and simple, loving obedience of heart to all His known will and sincere desire to know and do fully whatever He directs or wishes. It is unreserved committing all the ways to Him with out anxiety or doubt as to His guiding of the lesser will. It is delighting of the soul in watching the development of His plans and the unfolding of the truth.

It is soul rest, for the confidence in God removes fear and anxiety. Many other blessed and holy graces sometimes common to others are never thought of, for there is no place for them in such a life.

This kind of life is ever deeply interested in the well being of others and striving to benefit all possible. Its separation is not from the world, but only elevation of life and purpose.

This kind of life is not to be thought of as lonely and difficult. It is the richest in all good, fellowship and companionship. It is the distinctly happy life, and all should at once seek to know it. No other attraction can compensate for its absence and no consideration excuse one for neglect to obtain it.

You are called to purity of heart. Have you it?

When to Put on the Checkrein.

One of the besetting snares of these times is to try to grow rich rapidly. "Slow and sure" is out of fashion. In that direction lies peril to the soul. They who make haste to be rich fall into temptations and snares and many hurtful lusts that drown men in perdition. Greed for gold drains away the sweetest and holiest affections of the heart. It dries up Christian benevolence; it makes a fool of one. My long observation has been that when money flows in rapidly grace is apt to flow out, and as a christian mounts up as to his income he rarely rises in piety with it. There are some happy exceptions, but they are men who keep a checkrein on the grasping, greedy spirit of covetousness. My good brother, it is no easy thing to keep up a high tone of spiritual life amid all the atmospheric pressures that surround you. To do it you are running your daily life at too fast a rate for all these vital things, then, I entreat you in God's name to put on the checkrein!—Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler in Christian Work and Evangelist.

'GOVERNOR ON CHARITIES.

Governor Stokes made a remarkable speech before the State Charities and Corrections convention at Newark Thursday night. He spoke on the State penal and charitable institutions and said:

"A Roman emperor is quoted as saying that anything for the betterment of humanity was of interest to him. An organization that has as its leading motive the improvement and elevation of the weak and dependent members of society should be welcomed as a most useful adjunct to the State government. A hearty welcome should await the men and the women who give their time and their talents to the improving of the conditions of the dependents, of the sick, the poor, the erring. I felt so strongly the importance of the work of the State in this line that I recommended in my inaugural the creation of a State department to supervise the State's work in the way of charities and corrections, to systematize its various efforts and to bring the various agents engaged therein in closer association and intercourse.

"That department I have neither apology nor praise. Apology is unnecessary and praise would be a meager reward for the splendid results the new department has accomplished. The commissioner has so clearly demonstrated its great possibilities for usefulness and reform that I think the public will welcome an increase of the powers of the department commensurate with its possibilities for good.

"In the performance of this necessary duty, State jurisdiction should not be limited to its own institutions. Where it financially aids in the work of charities and correction, though that work may be directly under county control, as in the case of county asylums, the State has the right to know that its moneys are properly expended, and that these institutions maintain a certain standard of excellence. I would give the commissioner of charities and corrections the power to withhold payment of State funds from all local institutions which are not properly carrying on the work for which they are designed.

"County insane asylums have their proper place. I believe it would be wise to let them have the custody of incurable cases. The patients could there be comfortably housed, as in State institutions, and could be nearer their homes and their friends. The transfer of the cases of curing the acute cases to the State institution and the chronic cases to local institutions lies in the fact that the latter might degenerate into almshouses. Such a provision as I have suggested would prevent this danger, and would compel local institutions to maintain a proper standard.

"The State has already invested $12,000,000 in institutions for dependents and criminals, and expends $1,400,000 annually in this work, or thirty per cent. of the total outlay. It spends $30 for charities and corrections to $6.50 for education, $7 for militia, $6 for public roads, $5.50 for courts of justice, $2.50 for its veterans and $1.20 for agriculture. So, you see, we spend more for the dependent and wayward than for all these other things enumerated combined. Certainly no one can charge the State of New Jersey with inhumanity.

"Now, why does the State look so carefully after its epileptics, its blind, its insane, its wayward. The care of the dependents—the weak, the abnormal members of society—cannot be attained by municipalities, acting as each for itself. The State falls heir by social evolution to the care of dependents who have outgrown the limits of municipal control."

Besides selling all kinds of hardware of the best make, the H. E. Gayle Hardware Company is now handling a celebrated clothes washer, which is guaranteed to do a family washing in less time and with less effort than any other on the market. An inspection of this wonderful machine is invited.

For first class beef, veal and pork, as well as game and fish, go to Roth & Co.'s market on East Front street. This firm buys and sells only the best quality of meat, the kind of meat always to be depended upon, and the prices will be found much lower than elsewhere. Once you shop at this market you will continue to do so.

M. Weinberger, the West Front street clothier, is showing an exceptional stock of clothing for men and boys. These goods are made of the best material and guaranteed to give entire satisfaction. The prices are very reasonable. The line of men's furnishings is of superior quality and includes underwear, white shirts, collars, cuffs and neckties. Custom tailoring of a high grade is a feature.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dreier and family, of West Front street, visited relatives of the latter in New York yesterday.

Miss Mary Woolston, of Fairview avenue, who has been detained at home with an attack of the grip, is improving.

Patrick Harrington, of West Fourth street, has recovered from a week's illness due to blood poisoning in the hand.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1906.

It cannot be true that Senator Colby is going to have a newspaper of his own. Every honest journal in New Jersey is with him heart and soul now.

Few legislatures have faced such responsibilities as now confront the lawmakers in session at Trenton. Before the members of the Senate and House are such important and urgent measures as equal taxation, purification of the ballot, abolition of the fee system, abolition of corrupt practices, and jury reform. If only half of these questions are solved, the Legislature of 1906 will be one of hallowed memory.

BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Attendance Double What it Was a Year Ago.

The present year, it is said, has exceeded all previous ones in the history of the Plainfield Business College and Technical Institute. The attendance has been doubled and the prospects for the coming year are reported to be better than ever. The immediate results produced by thorough re-organization, new courses added, equipment and a large staff of able instructors, it is declared, have secured so firm a hold on the confidence of the people within a wide radius of Plainfield, that it is realized to be unnecessary to send young men and women to distant colleges to receive a business training.

It is possible to get a good business training at the institution. The telegraph department will soon have some young telegraphers ready for business. The excellent work of the mechanical drawing students, Samuel W. Fisk, instructor, is attracting the attention of machinists and others and the class is growing rapidly.

The business departments are running along with a large number of students, who are being taken the positions as fast as they can be prepared. The following have been placed in positions within the past two months: In New York—The Misses Ada M. Sharkey, Carolyn Koechlin, Catherine Wall, Lucy Herlich, Ida Rafferty, Mary Carney, Janet B. Carter; in Plainfield—The Misses Effie M. Bailey, Fanny B. Ayers and Clyde D. Burgess.

Prof. Herr, principal and owner, says he proposes to raise his school to the highest standard that time, experience, money and integrity produce.

GOOD REPORTS MADE IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL

TRINITY'S SCHOOL HAS A MEMBERSHIP OF EIGHT-HUNDRED AND SIX.

At the close of the Sunday-school session in Trinity Reformed church, Sunday afternoon, the annual reports of the secretary, E. H. Bird; treasurer, H. E. Gayle, and the librarian, H. C. VanEmburgh, were presented. These showed the school to be in a most flourishing condition and the work of the past year was gratifying to all.

The treasurer's report showed the receipts to be $799.26 and the expenditures $504.56, leaving a balance of $294.70. The building fund account showed the receipts to be $66.82.

Secretary Bird's report showed the present membership to be 806, an increase of forty-seven over last year, divided as follows: Officers and assistants, 14; teachers, 40; home department, 208; Bible classes, 169; main school, 126; junior department, 59; primary, 137; beginners' department, 53. The average attendance is as follows: Officers, 8; teachers, 32, Bible classes, 87; main department, 78; junior department, 47; primary and beginners' departments, 109; visitors, 5; total, 329. This surpasses the average attendance of last year by fourteen.

The largest attendance during the year was on Sunday, March 26, when the twenty-fifth anniversary of the school was observed. There were 471 persons present that day. The smallest attendance, 90, was on September 3, a very stormy Sunday. One gratifying feature is the fact that there is no debt, but a substantial balance in the treasury.

Explanation For Taxpayers.

County School Superintendent H. B. Willis, of New Brunswick, will address a public meeting at Dunellen February 26, to explain why the borough school board must give pupils who so desire a high school course four years long, and to approve the action of the board in arranging for the tuition of such pupils at the Plainfield High School. The meeting is designed to make the law plain to the taxpayers, some of whom do not understand it.

AMUSEMENTS.

Ticket takers at the door, ushers inside, even the dear little boys who carried the ice water up and down the aisles at the Garrick theatre Monday night, were all arrayed in suits of red hunting costumes that gave a horsey air and at once put the visitor en-train for David Gray's "Gallops," which started the new stock company off, if not very auspiciously, at least entertainingly. A lot of the Hempstead set, smartly gowned, were present and were lavish, if not always discriminate, in their applause, finally inducing the author to rise in his box and take his modest acknowledgments. The cast was admirable, the scenery and mounting all that could be asked, while the costumes left nothing to be desired. Even a horse in the last act did some bucking and kicking of a satisfactory nature, and everywhere were evidences of careful rehearsals and intelligent stage management. There was a sustained interest to the story which was pleasantly carried along by the delightful personalities of Charles Richman as the hero, Grace Filkins as a frisky and very fetching widow, in many really stunning gowns, and Frances Starr as a horse loving heroine. Nor must the rest of the company be left behind, and this included among others Grace Kimball, W. L. Abingdon, William F. Hawtrey and George Holland. There was a commendable smoothness about the performance, and it was well carried out, making even some of the most evident situations go with a certain conviction.

A shriekingly funny farce is R. C. Carton's "Mr. Hopkinson," which convulsed the audiences at the Savoy Monday. "Mr. Hopkinson" is intensely English. At times the plain American almost needs an interpreter to make clear the ways and wits of the smart set of the Britons. His lordship proposes to a girl thus: "Although I never deramed of doing such a thing, old girl, I'll marry you." And the girl, thinking the idea too good to be true cries: "You don't mean it! You're rotting!" Pretty expression for a sweet young thing in white chiffon and pink roses! As might be expected, there is more careful characterization in this farce than in the general run of made-by-machine-for-the-Palais Royal variety. The lines are bright and the situations less impossible than in most farces. The acting of Dallas Welford as Hopkinson is clever. He never for a moment gets out of his part, and his facial expressions remind one of the trained and disciplined French farceurs whose mobile countenances can suggest volumes without a word or a gesture. Annie Hughes was delightful as Lady Enid. Her part is slight, though cleverly acted. Ellinor Foster was an attractive and graceful duchess (what a part for Jessie Milward!), and Olive Temple was Lady Thrya. Frederick Robinson as the Duke, Charles Crawford as Otho, Howard Sturges as Lord Gawthorpe, the man who wasn't "rotting," and Herbert Druce as Fred Lewis, all deserve mention as members of a very well balanced cast. "Mr. Hopkinson" is one of the most amusing plays we have seen this season.

Harrison Grey Fiske, manager of the Manhattan, announces the production on February 19 of Rupert Hughes' latest play, "The Triangle," according to arrangements with Walter N. Lawrence, manager of that play. It is Mr. Fiske's policy to vary the attractions at the Manhattan, and these arrangements, long ago made, are in pursuit of that purpose. "The Triangle" is a comedy of today, dealing with a subject of social interest local to New York, and Mr. Lawrence has engaged an exceptionally able company to make this play first in the metropolis. In the organization will be Charlotte Walker, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Byron Douglas, William Bramwell, Colin Campbell, Walter Thomas, May Isabel Fiske, Lillian Albertson, Conuelo Bailey and others engaged with particular reference to the special abilities called for in the cast. But one matinee a week is given at the Manhattan, on Saturday; and those who cannot before witness "Before and After," this will afford a fast opportunity.

Broadway certainly likes young George M. Cohan—there is no denying it. New York likes his drawl, his phonographic singing, his way of saying "Ladies and gentlemen, I thank you—I thank you from the bottom of my heart—I thank you." There is something rather refreshing in seeing a star take his curtain calls without a glance at the audience. The songs and dances which were features of "Little Johnny Jones" are features of "George Washington, Jr." Instead of marching on the stage with measured tread and exaggerated "Florodora" bows at every step, Mr. Cohan's choruses run on, sing the songs with an enthusiasm and a spirit which are contagious, and skip off as if impressed with the facts that life is short and that action as a necessary ingredient of musical comedy amusement. The musical numbers—there are nine of them—are lively, tuneful, and typically Cohanesque. There is no one song which can be classed as quite the equal of "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy," but "The Grand Old Rag" comes near to it, despite the fact that there is an objectionably proprietary air about the comedian as he sings it which suggests that old Betsy Ross had Mr. Cohan in mind when she patched together the first national banner. His other song, "If Washington Came to Life," sang in the midst of a Rhode Island snowstorm, made a distinct hit last evening; it was encored at least eight times, and, being equipped with really good verses, was greeted with the maximum applause.

The biggest comedy hit of the year is New York is Fay Templeton in Geo. M. Cohan's music play, "45 Minutes from Broadway," at the New Amsterdam theatre, where she is now in her fourth week. Miss Templeton undoubtedly the cleverest comedienne on the American stage. Her versatility was never more strongly tested than in this play, wherein she has serious and emotional as well as broad comedy situations. Her work is particularly pleasing in women. She is a women's comedienne, always refined in all that she does and never resorting to the slightest suggestion of coarseness to make her comic points. Victor Moore, who plays the opposite role, "Kid" Burns, has made a hit second only to Miss Templeton's. Mr. Moore, too, belongs to the quiet, unctuous and refined school of comedy, and in him Miss Templeton finds a most able second, in full sympathy with her stage methods. It is a pleasure to witness the work of two of these really great artists, who make their points through refreshingly natural methods. As for the piece itself, it far surpasses expectation and any one who sees it cannot leave the theatre disappointed. It is a very effective conglomeration of different schools of theatrical entertainment into a powerful story of human interest, staged with novelty, variety and snap. "45 Minutes from Broadway" is quite the real thing in New York.

CAR STOVE OVERTURNED STRIKES WOMAN PASSENGER.

Causes Painful Contused Wound that Necessitates Her Removal to the Hospital.

While the last main line trolley car from this city to Elizabeth, leaving the Watchung avenue stand at 12:30 o'clock yesterday morning, was making the turn from East Fifth street to Richmond a sudden jolt loosened the fastenings which held the stove in position and pitched it bodily on the lap of Mrs. Mabel Havowell, who, with her husband, were passengers, en route from Philadelphia to New York. The heavy weight struck the woman's foot, inflicting a painful contused wound. The police patrol was summoned and Mrs. Havowell was removed to the hospital, where she is now under treatment. The injury is not serious, and it is said she will be able to leave the hospital in a few days.

An official of the company who is investicating the accident remarked that he was unable to explain what caused the stove to upset. He said that these stoves were usually secured by fastenings and could not fall over unless a car was overturned. It was considered remarkable that the fire remained in the stove.

REMEDIES FOR SALOONS

Clergymen of Union and other Counties to Hold Meeting at Newark Friday.

PLANS ARE OUTLINED

Vicar General Sheppard Argues in Favor of High License—The "Side Door" Evil Explained.

Catholic clergymen who are stirring up public sentiment throughout the State in favor of making radical changes in the excise laws will hold a meeting in the school hall of St. Patrick's Cathedral, in Newark, next Friday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock. All the rectors of the Roman Catholic churches in Essex, Hudson, Sussex, Morris, Passaic and Union counties will convene at the request of Bishop O'Connor, and other prominent clergymen of other denominations will be invited to attend by Bishop Lines, of the Episcopal Diocese of Newark.

Vicar General John A. Sheppard, when seen by a reporter at the rectory of St. Michael's Roman Catholic church, Jersey City, last night, said in relation to the proposed excise legislation: "Our bill has been prepared and will probably be introduced in the Senate on Monday or Tuesday. We think we have been fair and just with all. Clergymen of every denomination, citizens irrespective of parties, brewers and liquor dealers alike, admit that there are many abuses as the business is at present conducted. The only difficulty to contend with is how to better control it. We have asked for $500 a year license fee as a minimum because we find in larger cities of New Jersey we have more saloons per capita than in any part of the Union, which we pay the lowest license for. Jersey City, Newark and Trenton have a saloon to about every 200 population. That is one to every forty or fifty voters. Hoboken has one saloon to every thirty-five or forty voters."

"By raising the license we hope to diminish the number of saloons and so cut out some of the low resorts. We have asked that the property owners and the individuals carrying on business be licensed, so that the landlord may be interested in the character of the tenant who keeps the saloon or suffer the consequences of not seeing his property licensed for a year.

"There is no man who does not wish to see minors refrain from the drink habit and stop lounging around the corner wine shop; hence our insertion concerning those not of age, so that the youth of the State may be guarded and become good citizens.

"The greatest of our abuses is the side door and back rooms of the saloons. They have become, in many places, veritable feeders of the immoralities that call for houses of refuge. No one can tell how many a decent man's child has gone down the road to ruin from this cause alone.

"To take a drink is not criminal. Why, therefore, should any man who wishes to treat himself or his friends oppose the taking down of all curtains, screens, etc., that are obstructions to the view of passers-by?

"Today gaudy, flashy and sometimes indecent pictures are placed in the windows of saloons, that ought to be thrown into the fire. Decent saloonkeepers say that they do not object to the removal of these screens. They are not ashamed of their places of business. Why, then, not do away with them and prevent the degradation and the disgrace that have come to many an honorable family on this account?

"A few policy men may suffer and we do not believe any one, not excepting the patrons, will have much sympathy for them."

Vicar General Sheppard then announced that there will be another meeting of the clergymen who are working hard to secure the passage of the proposed excise bill, in the school hall of the Catholic Cathedral in Newark next Friday.

"We intend," he said, "to create public opinion by having meetings such as we had in Assembly district plan. The courts may eventually sustain the district plan and that would end the county boss system. The county boss rose as a political power when the district system gave way to that of county elections of Assemblymen. A bill which will not pass is that for primaries on the United States Senatorship. The Republican leaders will refuse to allow that to pass, you may be sure."

"What about his new Public Service Corporation deal?"

"I guess it will go through all right, and Newark may be glad to get rid of some of the big financial responsibility which it now has. The whole management should be made more acceptable to the public and can be without much trouble."

Tenadore VanCleef and daughter, Miss Edna VanCleef, of East Millstone, who have been visiting relatives here during the past two months, returned home yesterday.

RADICALS ARE IN THE SADDLE NOW

THAT IS WHAT FORMER SENATOR SMITH SAID TO FORMER PRES. CLEVELAND.

Former President of the United States Grover Cleveland, of Princeton, and former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., of Newark, met on a ferryboat on the way from New York to their respective homes a few days ago and the substance of some of their conversation has just become known. It concerned the condition of politics from a national standpoint.

"I told Mr. Cleveland," said Senator Smith, in discussing their little chat, "that there is no use for conservatism in these days. He knows, and I know, that this is a period of radicalism, and for the time being the man who has the most extreme measures to propose is likely to meet with the most political success.

"How about Jersey conditions?"

"Well, there is a queer Legislature in Trenton that is likely to do anything. Governor Stokes is a remarkably able man, and I fancy he will control the legislative work. An interesting feature will be the enactment of the new Assembly district plan. The courts may eventually sustain the district plan and that would end the county boss system. The county boss rose as a political power when the district system gave way to that of county elections of Assemblymen. A bill which will not pass is that for primaries on the United States Senatorship. The Republican leaders will refuse to allow that to pass, you may be sure."

WOOD IS REMEMBERING

Tells New Details of His Wanderings to S. S. Swackhamer.

JUNCTION, RED BANK

S. S. Swackhamer and George W. Bird visited George Wood, the murderer of George Williams, at the State prison in Trenton last week. Mr. Swackhamer, who was Wood's chief counsel, had a long talk with the convict about the murder.

Wood had some more recollections of his wanderings, before he came to himself after the crime. He remembered that the junction mentioned in the trial, the name of which he could not recollect at that time, where he and the mysterious Mac, Henry Wolff and the little black man left the train, was Red Bank. He says he walked from there along the road to some farmhouse, where he went, or was put to bed. Just before he lay down one of the men in the house passed his hand over the back of his spine and lost consciousness.

He recovered in a few hours, but the man passed his hand over the nape of his neck again, and unconsciousness returned, to last for a day and a night.

He now has a recollection of a sleighride on his wanderings. At the trial he could not remember anything about a sleigh. He now remembers, and which he places in point of time about the day he left farmhouse—he has no exact recollection of how he got away from that place—was not in a single-seated sleigh, behind a black horse, like the Williams rig, but in a double-seated sleigh, with a team of snow white horses. The driver was an elderly man in a high hat. The little black man rode beside him on the rear seat.

Wood looks much the same as he did at the trial. His health seems to be good, but he complains of worriment over his complete lack of memory as to the murder or anything connected with it.

"If I could only remember something about it," he told Mr. Swackhamer, "so as to feel convinced that I was not here for something I did not do I would be satisfied."

He insisted, with his old positiveness, that the little black man was not an imaginary creature.

"The little black man directed every step of my journey," he said, "and made all arrangements. And he managed things properly; there was nothing queer or foolish about his directions."

Dinner Both "Wet" and "Dry."

Recorder Lazarus, chairman of the Bayonne Board of Trade's annual dinner, yesterday announced that the dinner will be both "wet" and "dry." Those desiring wine may have them, and there will be ice water for the teetotalers. Several Prohibitionists in the board favored having nothing stronger than water.

Mrs. William L. Smalley, Sr., of Craig place, who is spending some time with her son, David C. Smalley, of East Front street, is improved from a recent illness.

ASK FOR LOCAL OPTION

Trinity Men's Association and First M. E. Brotherhood Endorse Bill.

PREPARING PETITIONS

Also Request Common Council Not to Increase Number of Liquor Shops—Approve Zone Ordinance.

Following the lead of the Men's Club of the Congregational church, *the Men's Association of Trinity Re*formed church put itself on record Sunday as strongly in favor of the local option bill, and as strongly opposed to a liquor license for John Doe or any other man who might want one outside of the saloon zone ordinance. Petitions to the legislative committee in charge of the option bill and to the Common Council will be prepared.

The meeting was held after the morning service. The secretary presented a communication from the Congregational church, in which cooperative action in favor of the option bill and against new saloon licenses was requested.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Scheack, the pastor, spoke in favor of the bill briefly. His one great point of superiority over the present law, he said, lay in the fact that it gave the people of any community the right to say whether liquor should or should not be sold. The present law put the power into the hands of excise commissioners, a council or a county judge.

The bill was read and a motion to endorse it was carried unanimously. By unanimous vote it was decided to prepare and send a petition requesting the passage of the measure to the committee in whose hands it rests. Another petition to the council, protesting against against a license for any place outside of the limits in the Tyler ordinance was also passed.

The petitions will be signed by all the members of the association. They number about eighty.

Following the morning service at the First M. E. church, Sunday, the Brotherhood met and voted to endorse the local option bill now before the Legislature and urge its passage. It also decided to petition the Common Council not increase the number of liquor licenses in this city and to have the "zone" ordinance, restricting saloons, remain in force.

A committee composed of Samuel Bingaman, William Symons and Fred Martin was appointed to draft the petitions and see that they are properly presented.

The Monroe Avenue M. E. church and the First Baptist church Men's clubs have already passed similar resolutions.

Colby Buys Observer.

It has been rumored during the past week that State Senator Everett Colby has purchased outright the Hoboken Observer, with the intention of conducting it as a straight reform paper. The owners of the paper, however, denied the rumor Saturday.

Planning Summer Cruise.

Howard V. Manning, of Grant avenue, is already making preparations for a week's cruise on Long Island during the coming summer. He expects to take a party of twelve West Enders. The trip will be made in a thirty foot sailing sloop.

INCUBATOR RESULTS.

Many incubator manufacturers guarantee their machines to be as represented, etc. We do all this and also guarantee results. So many inferior machines have been purchased by enthusiastic, earnest people, who desire to hatch chickens by the artificial method, that thousands and thousands of "would be" successful poultrymen fail and lose their courage on account of the inferiority of the incubator with which they started. To learn more about it, get our large catalogue of 228 pages, entitled "Poultry Raising Made Easy and Profitable," mailed free if you will name two friends who are interested in the poultry raising business and mention this paper.

Witnessed Championship Shoot.

Henry Vosseler, of the borough, has returned from a Western business trip in the interests of the Peters Cartridge Company. Mr. Vosseler, when in Grand Rapids, had the good fortune to see W. A. Tewes, the rifle expert of New York, win the championship of the United States by scoring 2,481 points out of a possible 2,500. Tewes was the winner of the Wimbleton cup at the State military match at Sea Girt last August, and is well known in this city.

Hugh Sweeney, of Liberty street, is slowly recovering from a severe attack of the grip.

ASSEMBLYMAN TUCKER'S BILL IS SUSPICIOUS

EDUCATIONAL MEASURE OF THE UNION MAN STIRS UP NEWARK OFFICIALS.

Assemblyman Everett, of Essex, has called the attention of the Newark Board of Education to a bill which was introduced in the House last Wednesday by Assemblyman Tucker, of Union. It is an amendment to the Colby school act, and, in the opinion of some, compels the Mayor to appoint a new Board of Education within sixty days of its passage without giving the people an opportunity to accept its provisions.

When the bill was introduced Mr. Tucker stated that it simply provided for the appointment by the Mayor of any city in the State which should accept the act at an election of a non-partisan board of eight members. Elizabeth, he said, was anxious to get rid of its present elective board of twelve members, which was too unwieldly and which did not give the satisfaction it was expected a smaller appointive body would. Earlier in the session he introduced a bill for an appointive board which was applicable only to cities of Elizabeth's class, but having received a hint from "higher up" that the measure was unconstitutional he had dropped it and put his new measure in its place.

The bill is so made up of amendments to different sections of the school law and applies to municipalities which have accepted the provisions of certain sections in such a complicated way that it requires a trained legal mind to unravel the tangle. It appears to some lawyers who have examined it that either it conceals an Ethopian in the woodpile or is very loosely drawn. For example, it is pointed out that the first section, which is an amendment to section thirty-eight of the law, provides that within sixty days of the passage of the act the Mayor or other executive officer of any city of the State shall appoint a non-partisan Board of Education, and proceeds to designate the terms for which the first board so appointed shall hold office.

The section ends with this provision: "Any such school district which now has or hereafter may have a Board of Education appointed as aforesaid, may accept the provisions of section thirty-nine of the act to which this is an amendment, in the manner prescribed for such acceptance in section forty of said act."

According to the lawyers there is nothing in this section to prevent that it shall not become operative until the people have accepted the provisions of the act, while it compels the Mayor to appoint a board within sixty days after its approval whether it has been accepted by a vote of the people or not.

The section which provides for the referendum reads:

"Amend section forty of said act that it shall read as follows:

"The acceptance of the provisions of either section thirty-eight or thirty-nine shall be submitted to the qualified voters of any municipality acting under the provisions of article four of the act to which this is an amendment, at a general or municipal election, or at a special election held therein for such purpose, provided, that such submission shall be had and such vote shall be taken whenever the Common Council, Board of Alderman or other legislative body of the municipality, or the Board of Education of any school district situate in such municipality shall have, by resolution, determined or whenever at least five per centum of the legal voters of such municipality as shown by the election returns of the last election in such municipality shall, by their petition, duly signed and delivered to the clerk of such municipality, have requested that such question shall be submitted; provided further, after the question of accepting the provisions of either section thirty-eight or thirty-nine shall have been submitted to the legal voters of any such municipality, the question of the acceptance of the provisions of such section shall not again be submitted until at least five years shall have elapsed."

As this makes no specific provision for a special election for the purpose of accepting or rejecting the act, it is claimed, it practically leaves the voting on the act to be done at the general election in November.

This, it is further claimed, leaves the absurd situation of the Mayor being obliged to appoint, within sixty days of the approval of the act, a non-partisan board of eight members, and then at the general election in November, months after the appointments have been made and the appointees have entered upon their duties, the voters shall solemnly proceed to declared by their ballots whether they want the new of the situation, the local authorities.

Whether this is the correct view believe there is enough in it to warrant them in requesting that the bill be held up until they can thoroughly examine into the matter and prepare the amendments necessary to remove all its ambiguity.

Mr. Everett is a member of the Committee on Education, to which the bill has been referred, and he intends to see that the interests of Newark are protected.

ALL READY TO ORGANIZE GAME FAST INCREASING

Plainfield Protective Association Will Be Formed Next Monday.

CONSUMERS FAVOR IT STOCKING OF WATERS

Anti-P. S. C. Sentiment Growing Rapidly, Says Organizer R. Henry Depew—110 Signers Secured.

The organization of the Plainfield Protective Association, designed to check the alleged greed of the Public Service Corporation in gas and electric light charges, will be completed at a meeting in the lecture room of Grace P. E. parish house, Sycamore and Sixth streets, on Monday night, February 26. The meeting will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

The campaign against the P. S. C. has drawn a lot of supporters. Over a hundred householders have signed the list of intending members. Many others are expected to join the association as soon as it is launched.

The meeting was to have been held at the Casino, but the auditorium could not be obtained for the twenty-sixth.

R. Henry Depew, who started the movement, is greatly pleased with the success that has attended his efforts to bring the consumers together.

"I am glad to say that the movement has met with a very hearty response and the list of members, numbering already about 110, is an exceptionally strong one," he said this morning.

"The success of this move, while practically assured, will depend for its complete fulfillment upon the firm and united action of the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield, and I trust that all those who can join will do so, and will induce others to become members, and that as many as possible will attend the first meeting."

BOROUGH YOUNG MAN SAVES SWEETHEART'S LIFE

BEAT OUT FLAMES WHICH CAME FROM HER BURNING DRESS.

What came near being a tragic climax to a joyous wedding celebration at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Blocher, of Hoboken, yesterday, was averted by the quick action of Frank Jellig, of the borough, who rescued his fiance, Miss Barbara Marmhilard, of Dunellen, from burning to death.

While the merrymakers were dancing, the young woman attempted to pass through the room and one of the couples knocked her against a stove, which ignited her skirt. No one noticed it at the time, and the dress continued to burn until the smell of smoke caused the dancers to stop.

They were just in time to see Miss Marmhilard become enveloped in flames, and several of the women fainted. Jellig was standing near and, springing to the side of the imperilled girl, wrapped his coat about her form in an effort to beat out the flames. The young woman swooned and both were burned before she was placed out of danger. She recovered during the evening and was able to return home. Jellig's presence of mind in springing to her side undoubtedly saved her life.

As a result of the accident the celebration came to an abrupt termination.

Boat Club's Dinner.

The members enjoyed vocal and instrumental selections and addresses during the evening. Among those in attendance from this city were G. Galbraith, Walter Sampson, John McCullough, Arthur Ashholm, Paul Collier and Messrs. Hillyer and Kershaw.

Churchmen to Discuss Saloons.

There will be a meeting of the clergymen of all denominations next Friday afternoon in the school hall of St. Patrick's Cathedral, at Newark, at which action concerning the proposed legislation to wipe out many of the saloons throughout the State will be taken. Every Catholic priest throughout the northern section of the State has been requested by Bishop John J. O'Connor, of the Newark Diocese, to be present, and a similar request has been made to all the clergymen in the Episcopal Church by Bishop Edwin S. Lines, of Newark.

A Stubborn Chimney Fire.

A chimney fire at the home of W. W. Martin, of Park avenue, near Ninth street, gave the firemen from headquarters an hour's hard work Saturday night. Three extinguishers were required to kill the blaze. A still alarm called the men to the place.

HOPE FOR A DEMOCRAT

According to Report of New Jersey Fish and Game Commissioners.

DIVISIONS MAPPED OUT

Eighty-three Deer Liberated in South Jersey—Prosecutions for Violations.

According to the annual report of the State Board of Fish and Game Commissioners, just out of the hands of the printer, game of all sorts is more plentiful in New Jersey than in many years, and steps have been taken to insure a steady increase. Game Warden Hawkins and his associates throughout the State have been very busy this fall and will not be through with their labors for two weeks to come.

The stocking of waters and fields has been engaged in to a somewhat larger extent than heretofore, and the game refuge experiment begun last year at Oradell, Bergen county, has proven a great success. Mongolian pheasants have been propagated with ease, and it is believed that enough of them can be obtained there to stock other parts of the State at a relatively small expense. Considering the results, the commissioners dee mthe refuges inexpensive and recommend the establishments of more in this State, the commissioners being authorized to lease or purchase tracts of land for the purpose.

Eighty-three deer have been liberated in nine of the southern counties, and the number is now increasing rapidly. Reports have been received that sixteen deer have recently been seen in one herd near Barnegat, Ocean county, and twenty were seen in a field in the same county. Numerous does with fawns have been sighted in other counties. The extension of the closed period for two years from next April, when the pres*ent closed season expires, is recom*mended in order to assure deer in plenty for the State. The commission holds that if such legislation is not secured there is danger that their work will have been in a great degree useless.

Over 8,000 quail purchased and liberated last spring have propagated well, and the birds are much more numerous than they have been for years.

The introduction of wall-eyed pike, channel catfish, calco bass and crappies has been successfully accomplished. Wall-eyed pike brought from Lake Erie several years ago have multiplied and appeared in large numbers in lakes in the northern part of the State. During the past summer large catches have been made at Greenwood Lake and Lake Hopatcong almost every day, the size being from two to four pounds. Some weighing six and a half pounds were taken.

Twenty-five thousand seven hundred and fifty brook trout were purchased and placed in the most suitable streams in the northern part of the State in the fall and winter of 1904-5, and the commission has been working to place 40,000 additional since last fall. When released the trout are four or five inches in length and in good healthy condition.

New Jersey has not fish hatcheries and must purchase its supply of game fish from other States or depend upon the Delaware and Raritan canal to stock the lakes within its borders.

Owing to the severe cold weather of the first three months of last year it was found impossible to get the usual supply of black bass from the Delaware and Raritan canal, that waterway having been frozen almost to the bottom from the day traffic was closed. Pickerel, perch and catfish were taken from ponds and streams, and several thousand catfish and bait fish were taken from old cranberry bogs in the southern part of the State. By this method 475 black bass, 3,675 perch, 2,490 pickerel, 25 crappies, 11,600 catfish, and 6,600 bait fish were secured and placed in the larger lakes and streams best adapted for them.

During the past year there were 294 prosecutions for violation of the fish and game laws, 286 convictions, 6 acquittals, one complaint withdrawn and one case still pending. The aggregate of fines imposed was $8,535.45. Of this sum $2,845.15 was received by the department, the balance being retained by the officers making the complaint and the witnesses furnishing evidence to secure a conviction.

A Surprise Party.

On Saturday, evening, the night students of the shorthand department of the Plainfield Business College gave Miss Virginia Grant, their teacher, a surprise party. The affair was held in the art studio of Miss A. C. Phelps, of the Babcock building. The evening was one of merriment from beginning to close. Messrs. Caleen and Gray were the committee.

PINNED UNDER BIG AUTO HELD CARNIVAL SITTING

Charles Woolston and Marcus Hoyt Injured In Wreck.

VOEHL'S CAR SMASHED

Sharp Turn Sends Heavy Rambler Against East Front Street Bank and Machine Turns Somersault.

George Voehl's big Rambler touring car was wrecked on Cole's hill, East Front street, Sunday afternoon. Charles Woolston and Marcus Hoyt, who, with Albert Allen and Voehl were in the car, had a remarkable escape from serious injury. They were painfully hurt, but Voehl and Allen got out of the wreck with a few bruises.

The party were returning from Summit, where Voehl had demonstrated the car to an intending purchaser. He was at the wheel, with Allen alongside of him. Hoyt and Woolston sat in the rear seat. A short distance outside of Scotch Plains, a big car came in the opposite direction drew near the auto. Voehl thought the carriage would turn out until the two vehicles were close together, when he found a quick turn was up to him. He twisted the wheel sharply. Voehl's car turns easily, and the two men in the car straight for the bank. He straightened the front wheels with another quick turn, and that led to the wreck.

The rear wheels skidded, and crashed into the sloping bank at the side of the road. The wheel that struck first was smashed and the car turned a complete somersault. Voehl and Allen were flung clear of the wreck, but Woolston and Hoyt, held by the sides of the tonneau as in a box, were dropped directly beneath the falling car.

Woolston was caught beneath the drip pan and Hoyt was planned under the smashed side. Neither one was under pressure enough to crush them, but Woolston suffered intense agony from the burning hot drip pan. The pan rested on his forehead, and he put his hands up to keep it from coming closer to his face. He called for help, and Hoyt joined in the cries. Voehl and Allen, assisted by three passersby, raised the car and released their two companions.

Woolston was in bad shape. His face and hands were burned and blistered, a finger of his right hand was all but gone, and the shock *half left him in a state of semi-con*sciousness. Hoyt was bruised, scratched and half-dazed. Voehl had a lamed shoulder and Allen was bruised and scratched. Woolston and Hoyt rallied quickly, and the party proceeded to this city, where Dr. Their injuries were dressed by Dr. Dundon. When the physician got through with Woolston, there was only about an inch and a quarter of his face and two and a half inches of hand uncovered by bandages or plaster.

The automobile was badly damaged. It was left where it smashed until this morning, when Henry Wierenga hauled it to a Newark repair shop behind one of his trucks.

BOROUGHITES IN RUNAWAY.

Horse Leaps Into Ditch—Five Occupants of Phacton Thrown Out.

While enjoying a drive near South Plainfield, yesterday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Martin and child, of Mountain avenue, Miss May Duckworth and Walter Emmons, of Jackson avenue, became involved in a runaway but fortunately escaped serious injury.

Two boys passing along the road swinging a pair of skates frightened the horse and it sprang into a ditch, causing both front wheels of the phaeton they were in to collapse. The occupants were pitched out in all directions and before either of the men could regain their feet the animal bolted and was beyond their reach. All five were more or less cut or bruised but they were quickly given assistance by nearby residents and then driven over to Park avenue, where they caught a trolley car home.

The runaway turned into Plainfield avenue near the mill pond and was caught before hurting itself. The phaeton was badly damaged.

Dinner-Dance at Casino.

There was a large attedance of members and friends at the dinner-dance given at the Casino Saturday night under the auspices of the Plainfield Country Club. This was the last event of this character prior to Lent and it was fully enjoyed. The music for dancing was a feature, while those not caring for this diversion spent the time playing bridge whist, billiards and in bowling. During the evening refreshments were served and shortly before midnight the festivities were brought to a close. The remaining dinner-dances of this series will be held at the Casino after Lent.

HOLD CARNIVAL SITTING

A VARIED PROGRAMME

Judges Called on Attendants for Contributions—Shadow Pictures Very Pleasing.

With a large gathering of members and friends in attendance, the Gesang and Turn Verein conducted its annual "Carnival sitting" in Saengerbund Hall Sunday. It was the most successful affair of this kind the organization has ever conducted and ranks as one of the pleasantest in re*cent years.*

According to the rules of the "sitting," the guests are seated in the auditorium until the arrival of Prince Carnival and his aids, and also the judges, bearing a "stage." The prince was supposed to arrive in an airship, and a cleverly arranged craft of this kind was sent across the stage while Otto Keller's voice, carried by a megaphone from the rear, added to the illusion. The judges were Mr. Keller, Walter Koeppel and Frank Heidig, who called upon people in the gathering to be placed in the "cage" and present some form of entertain*ment. Those called upon were es*corted forward by two policemen, Fritz Schmidt and John Retzer.

Among those who contributed to the programme in this way were August Wolf, recitations; Charles Dresselt and Henry Harrand, vocal selections; Miss Clara Weber and Herman Kilnsman, recitations; Otto Keller and Walter Koeppel, addresses.

In addition to these a series of shadow pictures were presented as follows: "Schiller's glove," August Melcher, Frank Neidig, Fritz Schmidt, John Retzer, Anton Stenzenberger and Masters Steuenberger and Wieda; "Spooning," Frank Neidig, Fritz Schmidt and Mrs. Melcher; "The Dental Parlors," Messrs. Neidig and Schmidt; "The Dancing Elephant," Mrs. Schmidt and Neidig. The Turn Verein Singing Section rendered several *selections, and instru*mental selections were furnished by B. A. Paroubek's Orchestra.

Another feature of the "sitting" was a side show, in which curiosities were exhibited. The most amusing was "The Siamese Triplets, imported by Otto Keller." Henry Luthmann and Rudolph Spiegel were placed either side of a dummy and a clever make-up enabled them to present a hideous imitation of the well known dime museum exhibit.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the affair consisted of Otto Keller, Frank Neidig, John Retzer, John Wirth, Fritz Schmidt and Charles Meyer, Sr.

ELKS' FIRST MINSTREL SHOW A BIG SUCCESS

Company Delights a Jammed House For Three Solid Hours With Fun and Melody.

CRACKS AT LOCAL MEN

Judge Runyon's Wit Searches Out C. J. Fisk and Other Well Known Plainfielders—Flowers for Some of the Troupe.

Mark up a new standard for amateur minstrel shows in Plainfield. The old Hope chapel shows were rated topnotch in recent years, but memories of the Y. M. A. faded away before the first annual show of the Elks Thursday. They gave a packed house three hours filled to overflowing with pure enjoyment. First part, olio and afterpiece were all good after their kind.

The first part was rich in local hits, and the shots all told. The topical song, written and sung by Judge Runyon, scored the great success expected of it. If the Judge hadn't bagged off in a plaintive verse he might be singing yet.

The show was well mounted. With Manager William Counihan himself at the helm, nothing else was to be expected. The first part ended with a striking electrical effect.

When the curtain went up on the opening chorus, a troupe more than fifty strong faced the audience. The circle was gorgeous in yellow, green, purple, red and magenta silk, with knee breeches and gold trimming effects. The other members of the troupe, in the regulation evening clothes, with purple ribbons across their shirt fronts, were ranged in tiers to the back of the stage. John A. O'Keefe was interlocutor, and the end men were W. J. Counihan, Thomas Muir, George O. Stevens, bones; Charles J. Ward, Herbert Brooks and William N. Runyon. The rest of the blackface troupe were Walter Agar, A. A. Bellis, Francis J. Blatz, John Bowman, A. F. Brokaw, Edward Brown, A. H. Bullard, John Campbell, John A. Conway, John H. Cose, Elmer D. Cutting, Frank Denckla, James Dodd, H. C. Dunbar, Charles H. Dunham, A. D. Findlay, J. E. Flannery, H. P. Greenwood, John J. Kenney, Edward A. Laing, Harry C. Leek, Horace J. Martin, Jr., Joseph C. Martin, Otto Mueck, Jr., Erwin T. Neighbour, entitled to sit back and approve of themselves last night. They worked hard in support of Chairman Counihan's able leadership, and made the show what it was. Especial credit is due to Mr. Counihan, who labored indefatigably to bring forth infinite resource, to bring troupe programme and show to the topnotch. Judge Runyon, although not a member of the committee, was one of Mr. Counihan's chief aides. Andrew G. Carpenter, the theatre orchestra leader, was the musical conductor.

Between $400 and $500 was cleared on the show. The money will be put into the charity fund of the lodge, to be used in Christmas tree entertainments for poor children and objects of that sort.

TOPICAL SONG, "I'VE CHANGED MY MIND," SUNG BY W. N. RUNYON AT THE ELKS MINSTRELS

[THE WORDS AND MUSIC WERE THE COMPOSITION OF JUDGE RUNYON HIMSELF.]

It's funny when I think of it, how since I was a kid,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind;
I'm very glad whene'er I think of foolish things I did,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
I used to believe in Santa Claus and hunt him everywhere,
I used to lie awake o' nights and nearly die of scare;
I used to think Newt. Smalley had a real good crop of hair,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.

[Chorus]
He's changed his mind—has another point of view,
We think he's right and feel it quite the proper thing to do.
When a man goes wrong, he will very shortly find,
That he's unwise unless he tries to change his mind.

I used to think Bill Tyler had a chance of being Mayor,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind;
I thought his schemes for great reform were strictly on the square,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
When Mr. English came to town we got the truth direct,
But since he told how Willie said was simply clever effect,
My confidence in Willie has been absolutely wrecked;
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.

I used to think that Robin Hood knew how to steal in style,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind;
The Life Insurance Companies have got him skinned a mile,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
Since Alexander, Jimmy McCrory and Mike Gall,
And even Chauncey M. Depew have made their little haul,
I don't think Captain Kidd was ever in the game at all,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.

Last year the Board of Muhlenberg thought Charlie Fisk insane,
They said: "Your darned old Canada thistle gives all of us a pain."
They've changed their minds—They've changed their minds.
It seemed like such a vulgar thing that ev'ry one looked glum;
They thought C. J. was putting them completely on the bum;
But when they saw that old five thousand dollars profit come,
They changed their minds—They changed their minds.

I used to think Nick Longworth was a simple sort of lad;
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind;
A chap who wasn't very good nor yet so very bad,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
But any man who has the nerve to court a lovely dame,
Weigh eighty million rubbernecks all looking at his game,
Deserves a place with Teddy Roosevelt in the Hall of Fame,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.

I used to like to visit the Get Together Club,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
To get my sarsaparilla and a little German grub,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
But since the Kiely trial brought us all in public view,
I think it's up to me to find some other thing to do;
I think it's safer traveling with the W. C. T. U.,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.

From Public Soakus robbers we have had the double cross,
We've changed our minds—We've changed our minds;
The reformers and Plainfield Votin' Club of them who is boss,
We've changed our minds—We've changed our minds.
The new association formed by Richard H. Depew
Will teach the Tom McCarter gang some things they cannot do.
We'll make the pirates honest, if we can, before we're thro',
We've changed our minds—We've changed our minds.

I used to hate to leave the jags all night in jail to pine,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
I used to telephone the Chief to let them out till nine,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
But Mr. Marsh has told me that I've not obeyed the laws,
So all of you Inebriates, it's time to stop and pause.
When next the cooler gets you, you will stay all night, because,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.

I thought the Tyler-Bullock crowd had Kiely on the brink,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
And had enough to give the Chief the Double Binky Dink,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
But when the job was over and the testimony through,
Tho' Farmer Jim did all he could with stories wierd, if true,
'Twas 23 for Tyler and for Bullock old Skidoo,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.

I never thought I'd have to use a stanza number 10,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
I said the folks without a doubt will be glad to hear when,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.
The time has really come, I feel, to take my little flight,
And while I've continued singing is of course my great delight,
And I should like immensely just to keep it up all night,
I've changed my mind—He's changed his mind.

LOVING CUP FOR RUNYON

Admiring Elks Make Present to the Judge as Token of Appreciation.

COACH FOR MINSTRELS

Recipient Taken By Surprise After the Show—Supper Follows the Ceremony.

Soon after the Elks' minstrel show was over Thursday, Judge William N. Runyon was invited by one of the members to hurry from the theatre to the lodge rooms above. He responded in a few minutes and was greatly surprised to find the entire troupe gathered in a circle awaiting his coming. Before he had time to ask what it was all about, John A. O'Keefe stepped forward and in behalf of the minstrels presented the Judge with a solid silver loving cup in recognition of his untiring efforts to make the show a success.

The gift bears the inscription "To William N. Runyon, from the first Elks' minstrel troupe, February 15, 1906." It is eighteen inches high and of a very handsome design. The recipient was greatly taken back when he realized what the artists had done but in thanking them he declared that everyone of the fifty members in the jubilee had acquitted himself with credit and all were entitled to recognition.

Following the presentation a supper was served and the minstrels sang their songs for an hour. The chief contributors to the programme were Judge Runyon, who presented his "famous piano monologue" and Arthur and Angelo Minion with vocal selections, accompanied by the mandolin and guitar.

VALENTINE SOCIAL AT GRACE PARISH HOUSE.

Under the auspices of the choir of Grace church, a delightful valentine social was held in the parish house, last night. There were about thirty members of the choir present to enjoy the programme arranged by a committee comprising Mrs. W. H. Freeman, organist; Mrs. A. B. Cliver, Mrs. Charles E. Steiner, Miss Helen Farland, Miss Emma Yeager and Miss Margaret Yeager.

A feature was a postoffice which was located in a small ante-room. This was in charge of Mrs. W. H. Freeman, as postmistress and Blanchard Fosgate as clerk. There was one or more letters for everyone and these contained a valentine. The exchange of pictures afforded much amusement for all. Games of all kinds were also enjoyed, followed with dancing. At 10:30 refreshments were served in the dining room. The table was appropriately decorated and at each place there was a souvenir bearing a name and a napkin ornamented with cupid and two little hearts. The refreshments consisted of chocolate, cake and sandwiches cut in heart shape. The rest of the time was spent in sociability and the playing of more games.

LITERARY.

The "New York House" is the title of an entertaining and well-illustrated article in the Architectural Record Magazine for February. A choice description and consideration of *"Parisian Doorways in the Eigh*teenth Century" is from the pen of Russell Sturgis. "Some Houses by Howard Shaw," of Chicago, is the topic of a critique, by A. C. David, and a pleasant notice of Naugatuck, Ct., entitled "An Architectural Oasis," is another prominent chapter in this number.

The February Sunset is on hand looking as attractive as ever, with a cover design by Allan Dunn—Midwinter flowering on California Coast Highways. The leading article is a poem by Bliss Carman; a description of mountain climbing in California in the San Gabriel range back of San Bernardino, which is beautiful in rhyme and rhythm, and sets the pace for verse making, which only John Vance Cheney, Alfred J. Waterhouse, Charles Warren Stoddard and George Sterling could follow. There are good stories about fishing and fashions, flowers, and some excellent fiction; the most notable being a story of the South Seas by Lloyd Osbourne, entitled, "Professor Yo." Sam Davis contributes a story of the Coast stock, with some amusing incidents of the early days, which is illustrated by reproductions of photographs of presidents and prominent people who have visited lower levels of this famous mine.

WATSON BEGINS TO SERVE A LONG TERM

TAKEN TO TRENTON TO UNDERGO TWENTY YEARS IMPRISONMENT.

Rev. James A. Watson, of North Plainfield, the negro minister who is to spend twenty years in State Prison for killing James Christopher in North Plainfield last October, is now safely confined for his long term. He was taken to Trenton Friday by Sheriff Speer and, if he behaves himself there, will probably be free again in about seventeen years.

Watson had very little to say on his way to the Capitol City. He still declares, however, that he slashed James Christopher to save his own life, but he is willing to serve the time, because his friends wished him to take the course he did and therefore avoid the excitement of a long trial and the possibility of a jury deciding against him.

The result of the case has caused general satisfaction at Somerville. It not only saved the expense of a trial but gave Watson, the general belief is, all that was coming to him.

The fatal affray took place in North Plainfield.

The theft of a picture of Mayor Mark M. Fagan from the Samuel D. Dickinson Association clubhouse, at Jersey avenue and Sixth street, Jersey City, is under police investigation. The picture, a crayon, hung in a gilt frame in the room set aside for Col. Dickinson, the Hudson county Republican leader and Secretary of State, at the side of a likeness of the colonel. The frame was left, and the colonel's picture was not disturbed.

The Mayor is a vice-president of the association, but he is on the outs politically with Col. Dickinson, and has not attended a meeting of the association since his recent re-election.

Followers of the Mayor have charged Col. Dickinson's adherents with voting for Archibald M. Henry, who was the Democratic candidate for Mayor, and some of the Dickinson men have shown bitter feeling against the Mayor at the county committee meetings and elsewhere.

BERGEN DEFENDS TRUSTS

Union County Lawyer Says Big Corporations are Result of Commercial Conditions.

NOT ALL MONOPOLIES

Much Easier to Denounce Than to Discriminate, Says Chief Counsel for the Public Service Corporation.

Frank Bergen, who is general counsel for the Public Service Corporation, talked about "trusts" in Trinity church parish house, Elizabeth, Thursday night. His subject was "A Good Word for the Trusts."

During the course of his remarks Mr. Bergen said:

"The trusts grew naturally out of conditions that had been coming into existence slowly for more than a century in the commercial countries of the world. Exploration and settlement of new territory, inventions that wonderfully facilitated manufacture, provided for the cheap and rapid transportation of passengers and merchandise, and the transmission of intelligence rendered the ancient methods of business altogether inadequate. Between the years 1760 and 1820 Watt improved the steam engine so that it became a most useful and powerful laborer, Hargreaves and Arkwright invented the spinning jenny, Whitney the cotton gin, Fulton built a boat that navigated the Hudson without rails, and Stephenson invented the railroad. Other inventions similar, but of minor importance, were made during the same ments were devised and improved so that it became possible to cultivate period, and later agricultural implelarge tracts of fertile land more successfully than in former years. These inventions have often been called labor saving machines, but they were more than that. They were devices by which it became possible for the first time to obtain raw material in large quantities; to transform it into useful and comfortable things and distribute them among the people over a wide extent of territory. The day of small things in business was drawing to a close.

"It was difficult for the courts to distinguish between a full grown trust and a real monopoly, and the hereditary odium of the term 'monopoly' made it easy to find reasons for holding the trusts to be inimical to the public, and therefore, unlawful. The trusts consequently were dissolved and it was supposed that the forces of competition were again set free to work for the public. But the so-called laws of trade proved to be stronger, if not wiser, than the fiats of Judges, and so in many, if not in all, cases the separated corporations either merged or consolidated their property and franchises and goodwill, thereby forming a new and larger corporation and dissolving the old ones, or they sold their property to a new corporation or to a new corporation formed for the purpose of purchasing. In a word, the corporations that had formerly been parties to the trust agreement disappeared and a new and much larger corporation appeared in their place which inherited the property and the unpopularity of its predecessors. These large corporations we also call trusts.

"A great deal has been said and written hastily about the trusts, and not always in good humor. It is much easier to denounce than to discriminate. When it is feared that anything may touch or threaten the pocket nerve we are apt to burst out suddenly in speech, and often the necessity or disposition to draw conclusions hastily from an incomplete collection of facts or from undigested information tends to pervert the judgment of us all; and the jewel of consistency sometimes perpetuates the error. Another thing that makes it difficult now and then to ascertain whether a new view is a true view or not is the necessity resting on those whom we appoint or permit to finesse our politics, to take new positions hastily and fortify them with a profusion of verbiage in order to exclude their adversaries, and there again consistency makes it painful to retreat. One of the elements of Lincoln's great strength was his freedom from pride of opinion and willingness to change his mind.

"There are too many factors in this trust problem, too much good to the greatest number to be expected, and too little harm to be feared from the trusts to make it safe to treat their infirmities with rashness. Dr. Lyman Abbott—a Yankee with a Greek intellect—gave wise counsel when he said, speaking of the trusts, 'Let there be light, not heat.' If the large corporations in their short career have done more good than harm, it is quite likely that under rational treatment the good they can do will increase and the harm they may do will diminish."

Single-end Cars.

The much talked of single-end cars have at last been put into service on this division by the P. S. C. Only two of them are running to the Dunellen terminal, but there is promise of more very soon. They are better for the public in the additional room on the rear platform. The chief advantage for the crew is the absence of necessity to cart a dusty fender back to the other end at the finish of a run. They save the company the cost of one motor box.

ANOTHER MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP ELECTION

Senator Ackerman Introduces Bill Which Aims to Correct Ambiguities in Present Laws on the Subject.

MR. MARSH'S ADVICE

Corporation Counsel Drafted Bill After He Advised Council Not to Proceed Under November Election for Public Ownership of Water Supply.

Acting upon the request of the Common Council, Mr. Marsh, with the assistance of Councilman Daniel, drew up the following bill, which received favorable commendation from legal lights in the Senate for its careful wording, conciseness and clearness:

"Sec. 16. That this act shall take effect immediately, but its provisions shall remain inoperative in any city in this State until assented to by a majority of those of the legal voters of such city who shall vote either for or against the adoption of its provisions as hereinunder provided, at an election to be held therein in such city at such time to be fixed by the Board of Aldermen, Council, or other legislative body of such city. If the time fixed for holding said election shall be the time for holding any general election, the former shall be consolidated with the latter, and be conducted in the manner required by law governing such general election. The city clerk of said city shall cause public notice of the time, place and purpose of holding the election to be given by advertisement signed by himself and set upat least eight days prior to and within thirty days next preceding the day of election, in at least five of the most publicplaces within such city, and published in one or more newspapers printed therein for at least six days previous to the day of such election, and the clerk whose duty it shall be by law to provide ballots for such election, whether he be the clerk of the city in which such election shall take place, or the clerk of the county in which such city is located, shall provide or cause to be provided for each voter voting at such election, ballots, upon which ballots (and beneath the list of candidates thereon, if any candidates are to be voted for at such election) shall be printed the following words: "For Against The adoption for this city of the provisions of an act entitled 'An act to enable cities to supply their inhabitants thereof with pure and wholesome water, approved April 21st, 1876,' and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto." If the word "For" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote against the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; if the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall be counted as a vote in favor of the adoption for said city of the provisions of said act; and in case neither the word "For" nor the word "Against" be marked off or defaced upon the ballot, it shall not be counted as a vote either for or against such proposition, nor shall the person depositing in the ballot box a ballot on which neither the said word "For" nor the said word "Against" is marked off be counted as a voter or as voting in respect of or upon the question or proposition submitted. If voting machines shall be used at any such election, all voting by means thereof shall be conducted in the manner specified by the statute in such case made and provided. The polls for such election shall be held at the usual places of holding the annual general election in such city, and shall open at six o'clock in the morning, and close at seven o'clock in the evening, and shall be kept open during the whole day of election between the hours aforesaid; provided the Board of Election may adjourn such election from one o'clock until two o'clock in the afternoon, or for such shorter time between those hours as they shall see fit; such election shall be conducted by the proper election officers of said city for the time then being, and in the manner as may then be prescribed by the ordinance of said city, regulating elections therein, and such officers shall return to the Board of Aldermen, Council, or other legislative body of such city, a true and correct statement in writing under their hands, of the result of said election, the same to be entered at large upon the minutes of said body.

The proposed law not only affects Plainfield, but is of importance to other cities in New Jersey where the municipal ownership scheme is being strongly urged at present. It defines a majority as being one obtained when the greater number of voters voting at that election for that proposition favor it and allows the special election to be merged with the general one, having the polls open during the same hours.

HIGH LICENSE IS BETTER

Some Arguments of Local Option Agitation Six Years Ago Recalled.

MR. REED'S OPPOSITION

In Letter to Some Advocates of Local Option at That Time, the Senator Gave Sound Reasons For His Position.

According to those "on the inside" at the State House, it is said that the local option bill now being strongly agitated by prelates and clergy about the State, will be defeated in the Legislature. The reasons for the lawmakers' opposition to the measure do not vary widely from those expounded by advocates of high license in the Legislature six years ago.

At that time former President of the Senate Charles A. Reed, then a member on the floor of the Upper House, was conspicuous among those unfavorable to any local option legislation. Strong efforts were made to convince him that his position was not well taken. Among the local option associations which desired to obtain his support was one at Tenafly, Bergen county. That organization formally requested, through Frederick L. Colver, that the Senator set forth his reasons for opposing their efforts. Mr. Reed's reply gives concise and lucid arguments, which will be of interest to those watching the trend of affairs regarding liquor law agitation, follows:

"Replying to your favor of November 15, asking me to support in the Senate the Local Option Bill relative to liquor licenses introduced by the committee to which you are chairman, permit me to say that your method of approaching the legislator is particularly well chosen and commands careful consideration of the views you express.

"My opposition to the notion is that your bill should not become a law, and for many reasons, among which I might mention the following:

"In the first place, the proposition of local option has already been submitted to the people of the State, and has been most emphatically condemned by them. No special pleading that it was submitted in the form of a county option, or the like, will, in my judgment, avoid the real issue, viz., that the great majority do not favor local option on the liquor license question.

"Second. There is at present a statute providing that the license fee can be fixed by an election in any township, town, borough, or city which should enable any such municipality to regulate within reason the licensing of liquor sellers in such municipality, and no municipality should be allowed to be unreasonable, even by a unanimous vote.

"Third. So long as human nature remains what it is at present, a large portion of every community will continue to use liquor as a beverage, and until such use can be shown to be productive of some against society at large, and therefore deserving to be absolutely prohibited everywhere, the citizen who indulges in a reasonable use of intoxicants should not be deprived, in certain localities only, of a right which is older than the New Testament.

"Fourth. From personal observation, I have been forced to a conclusion that prohibition is, as the world is at present constituted, an incentive to drink, and to violations of law. In 'no license' towns, people who practically never drink elsewhere indulge in the use of liquor merely because it is forbidden. It is the old story. Stolen fruits are sweeter. Much greater quantities of intoxicants came into Plainfield in one year when no licenses were granted, than in any other year. The records at the freight office show this to be a fact. There were also during that year some sixty-eight places in the city where intoxicants were sold, against about twenty in other years, and the fact is that when you enact a statute which the public sentiment of the State does not uphold, that statute will be habitually violated, and when a man habitually violates one statute, he soon loses respect for others.

"My intercourse with temperate people, and by that I mean people who do not go to extremes in any direction, convinces me that our present liquor laws meet the approbation of the great majority. Our statute recognizes that the sale of liquor is necessary, and provide that it shall be regulated by license. That no more places shall be license than are necessary and that the license fee shall be not less than a sum named in the statute, but may be as much more, in reason, as the court, or the people at an election shall fix. Sales to minors, and to persons who are intoxicated at the moment, or who are habitual drunkards, are prohibited, and severe penalties are fixed for violations of these provisions.

"I believe that if licenses are granted only at a price which will compel the holder to see that no unlicensed person competes with him, the number of licensed and illicit places will be greatly reduced, the character of the licenses will be improved, the laws will be better enforced, and the evils of intoxication greatly diminished. In other words, what high license is the practical solution of the liquor license question for this generation.

"In Plainfield, the license fee is seven hundred dollars per annum. The saloon must close at eleven p. m., and must be so arranged that a full view of the interior of the bar room can be had from the sidewalk from that hour until morning. In this city so-called temperance people were sufficiently strong to prevent any license one year, but the question was recently submitted a test vote at a municipal election, simply to ascertain the public sentiment, and the majority in favor of maintaining the present system of high license was emphatic.

"Many other reasons could be given, but I think I have gone sufficiently into detail to show my views, and that I have reason for them.

"In closing them, I will merely add in a thickly populated state, where one towns adjoins another so closely as in ours, a no-license community here and there could be productive of nothing but confusion."

NEGROES LIVE NUDE IN SOMERSET'S WOODS

A SPECIMEN OF WILDEST AFRICA FOUND IN BRANCHBURG HILLS.

A specimen of wildest Africa transplanted in a Jersey woods has been discovered by the Somerset county authorities in the shape of a family of eight negroes, entirely nude, living in a dugout in the Branchburg hills, eight miles from Somerville.

Constable Michael Corcoran and searching parties of four deputies discovered the negroes in the dugout in the woods near North Branchburg. Their habitation was a hole about ten feet square burrowed in an embankment, which was entered through a small opening large enough to admit the body of a man. The entrance to the dugout was covered with burlap bags.

When Constable Corcoran crawled through the entrance the sight which he beheld caused his eyes to bulge. Nestled on a bed of leaves on the bottom of the dugout were six naked negro children, ranging in age from 2 to 12 years, while the father and mother of the family, also nude, slumbered near them.

Constable Corcoran attempted to dislodge the negroes but was met by a stiff resistance on the part of the father and mother. The man fought like a demon and it required the combined efforts of the officers to subdue him. He was bound hand and foot and placed in a wagon. The remainder of the family was easily dragged and placed in the bottom of the wagon, which was covered with straw, and they were driven eight miles to the Bridgewater township poorhouse.

The negroes are known to have lived in the dugout all winter. The father of the family was formerly known to Branchburg people as "Jim Van Kirk." He was repeatedly dispossessed for failure to pay his rent, and took to the woods with his family. He shunned civilization and went further back in the hills, where he and his family have since lived like wild animals, subsisted in a measure on corn which they raised in the woods and fish which they caught through the ice.

The association will meet at the appointed time in March, when it is hoped to have an address by *George T. ANNUAL LIBRARY REPORT

Plainfield's Excellent Public Institution Mentioned in Statement to Governor.

COMMISSION AT WORK

Miss Askew, State Organizer, Visited Seventy-nine Libraries and Tells of Their Condition.

Plainfield's public library gets mention in the annual report of the New Jersey library commission, which has been submitted to Governor Stokes. The document covers the year 1905.

Briefly summarized, the report follows:

January 1, 1905, the commission engaged an organizer, Miss Sarah B. Askew, who was experienced in library work. During the ten months she has visited 79 of the public libraries in New Jersey, many of them several times, and has also visited 10 towns and villages that were without library facilities, in the effort to create interest in the subject of organizing a free public library or to explain the traveling library system.

To assist libraries already established has been the main object. Many of these are in charge of volunteers, and others are managed by librarians who are without technical training and unacquainted with the modern aids that make the work of library administration easier and more accurate and the institution more useful to the people whom it seeks to serve. Many suggested changes have been adopted and the organizer has given considerable of her time to assisting the librarians and aiding in the work of reorganization.

Sixteen of the libraries visited were uncatalogued, 13 had only printed lists of titles arranged alphabetically, 42 were either unclassified or with very imperfect classification, and 14 of these had the books arranged on the shelves as they had been bought, using the accession book as a catalogue. *Of the 79 li*braries visited 24 were under the old-fashioned ledger form of charging books, four had no charging system whatever, and 14 were using imperfect and time-consuming schemes.

Under the commission's direction six libraries have been assisted in the work of catalouging their books; the catalogues of two others have been revised and corrected, four have been given instruction in the work of preparing their books for circulation, soliciting has been taught to two others; assistance in making out lists of books to be bought has been given to six libraries and advice as to how and where to buy has been freely given at all times.

Lists of periodicals suitable for the needs of a small library have been made out for five, on request, and assistance in the buying of library furnishings given in two instances. The commission has advised on the plans for two new libraries, and for a considerable number has, on request, suggested rules and regulations for their government.

Two new libraries have been organized during the year and are now doing excellent work. One is at Gladstone, for the use of that town, Peapack and Far Hills, and the other is at North Summit. The aid of the commission was given to both of them.

There were added to the traveling libraries during the year, by purchase, 374 volumes and by gift from the Scientific American Institute 410. From some of the latter articles on important subjects were taken and rebound, making the increase 410 books. The total number accessioned into the traveling libraries is 3,836, of which about 3,400 are now available for use. In many years we have worn out many volumes, a few have been lost, while some that were donated are of classes that would make them more useful in a reference library.

In January the commission voted to reduce from 5 to $2 the annual fee for the use of the libraries. The only excuse for any charge is that it protects the state against imposition and is in a measure a guarantee that there is a demand for the books.

In seven of the towns visited by the organized addresses were delivered for the benefit of free public libraries and the advantages of having them under municipal control. That they were not without beneficial results is demonstrated by the fact that in one of the towns the subscriptions to the library amount to $220 more than they have ever been before, while another voted to make free a library that has hitherto been maintained by subscriptions.

In pursuance of the desire to advance the standard of librarianship in the towns and to give sufficient training to those in charge of the smaller libraries to better fit them for their work, the public library commission is preparing plans for a summer library school to be held at Asbury Park for the four weeks in June or July. The school will be under the direction of Miss Askew, the organizer, who, as instructor, will be assisted by several experienced librarians who have volunteered their services. The Asbury Park free public library will be the place of meeting.

No preliminary examination for entrance will be required, and all needed supplies will be furnished by the commission. The expense to the commission will be light, while that to the students will be the cost of board, for which reduced rate has been promised. The course will be elementary and designed for the benefit of the custodian of small libraries.

ANOTHER VICTORY ELUDES Y.M.C.A. FIVE

ATLANTIC BOAT CLUB WINS IN LAST MINUTES OF PLAY.

The Y. M. C. A. five made a gallant attempt to check their run of defeats Saturday night, but the effort was futile. The Atlantic Boat Club quintet wrenched the victory from Plainfield's grasp at the last moment, 30 to 27.

Fast work characterized the game on both sides. The teams were evenly matched, taking them by a large, and the struggle was close at every stage. The Boat Club men were inaccurate in shooting, but they made up for that in shiftiness. If they missed a shot they had speed enough to work around to another try at the basket. In individual work Haselman, of the victors, and Leary and Smith, of Plainfield, stand out. The Hobokenite was like lightning in flints and turns. Smith was spectacular in his speed, and Leary scored some pretty goals on snap shots.

The score was 14 to 15 in Y. M. C. A.'s favor at the end of the first half. Through the second Plainfield led by a narrow margin until the last five minutes of play. Then the visitors put on a spurt and shot two goals before the anxious Plainfielders could catch up to the gait.

Eighteen fouls were called, ten of them on the visitors, but there was no yellow playing. Some of the Hobokenites thought Umpire Morse didn't treat them right in one or two decisions, but there was no undue waiting. Line up:

AUDIENCE DELIGHTED BY MISS HEREFORD

WOMEN'S EXCHANGE ENTERTAINMENT AT THE CASINO LAST NIGHT.

Under the auspices of the Women's Exchange a delightful entertainment was given at the Casino last night before an audience that nearly filled the auditorium.

The stellar attraction was Miss Beatrice Hereford, who appeared in her original monologue. She was given a flattering reception and was recalled many times.

Assisting Miss Hereford was Miss Constance Prowbridge, soprano, who in two charming selections won the hearty applause of everyone. Dr. Charles Davis and Miss Tiny Hyatt also gave a violin duett which added greatly to the enjoyment of the programme.

The large patronage accorded will net a substantial sum for the Women's Exchange and materially assist it in carrying on its excellent work.

Man Struck by Train Will Recover.

Elizabeth, Feb. 17.—Joseph Mates, nineteen years old, was struck by a train near the Elizabethport station of the Jersey Central yesterday while walking the tracks. He was tossed twenty-five feet through the air and cut about the head and bruised about the body. He was picked up unconscious and taken to the Alexian Hospital, where he afterward revived, and it was said yesterday afternoon by the doctors there he would recover. He came here from Pennsylvania ten days ago.

Y.M.C.A. TEAM'S SLUMP SUSTAINS SCHOOL BOARD

Came at Close of Successful Basketball Season But May be Blessing in Disguise.

WORK OF THE PLAYERS

Scull and Smith Only Members of Last Year's Five—Letson, Leary and Thompson Regarded As Good Men.

After a remarkably successful season, the basketball five of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. took an unexpected slump in the last two games played at the local gymnasium. There didn't appear to be any particular reason for it unless it was the hoodoo which always appears to ride with the Newark Y. M. C. A. boys. It is likely, however, to have been a blessing in disguise and awake the local five up for its hard game Saturday night. The team from the Atlantic Boat Club is coming back and will give the Plainfielders a lively bustle. Plainfield won the first game when the teams met but it was only by a narrow margin and after the hottest kind of playing. The A. B. C. delegation is coming back determined to win and that means a splendid contest between two strong teams. While the visitors took first and last, there is a clean game and they made many friends on the occasion of their first appearance by their sportsmanlike conduct. As a result a good crowd is promised.

The season is now far enough advanced to *size up the work of the dif*ferent players who make up the local five and to compare them with the opposing teams they have encountered. The season was started with really only two of last season's five as a basis. Captain Harry Scull was at his old place at centre and Ray Smith appeared again as a forward. An injury kept Smith out of the game for several weeks and made it necessary to try out two new candidates-for the forward places. Edward Neal and Ettinger played part of the visitors' old place and experience has proved invaluable this year, although neither has been able to play regularly.

Fred Letsos has been criticised considerably for the style of game he plays, but his method of sticking to the ball and keeping it has resulted in occasional fouls for holding, has been effective. Leary, who has been tried at both forward and guard, generally the former, has been a valuable acquisition to the team. He is an aggressive player and is one of the most accurate in goal throwing. His experience as a member of the Colgate University five has made him very valuable to Plainfield. Although he has but little chance to practice, he has played a consistently good game.

Despite his handicap insize and weight, Ray Smith has been able to hold his own against some of the best players in the State. Of late Smith has not been as accurate in goal shooting as heretofore, but in this he has but kept pace with the rest.

Harry Thompson is a new player this year who has shown a distinct improvement since the season started. Thompson was the mainstay of the High School team last season and has played the same even game this year in the faster company. Ted Gavett is capable of good basketball and, with a little more experience, will develope into a strong player.

While team work is prominent in the winning qualities of the Plainfield five, the real power of strength is Harry Scull. Scull has been up against some of the finest players in the State and he has held his own wonderfully well. Probably his hardest task has been to take care of Vreeland, Newark's centre and crack player. It is interesting to know that in the last game with Newark, while Scull and Vreeland faced each other, the Newark man was unable to score a single basket from the field. That is a record of which few of Vreeland's opponents can boast.

If the Plainfield association five recovers from this slump it should be in good shape to play the most important games of the season which are scheduled for this month and next. The games with Orange and Montclair promise to be the best that the local management can offer. Their ability is known and they are two keen and lodging rivals in the fight for the championship of North Jersey. Next to them stand the Atlantic Boat Club's five, opponents of the local team for Saturday night's game, and the Maxwell House aggregation from Brooklyn, who are likely to play here again before the season closes.

—The capital stock of the Bound Brook Water Company has been increased from $45,000 to $150,000.

—There will be dancing Washington's Birthday afternoon and evening at the Empire Dancing Academy on West Front street. Music will be furnished by Hanemeyer's full orchestra, of Elizabeth, and a good time is assured all who attend.

Former Policeman James Totten and Captain George Felrine, of Hose Company, No. 3, of this city, visited a number of fire houses in the metropolis Saturday.

Judge W. A. Coddington's Contention Supported by State Superintendent and the Attorney-General.

New Market to Have a $12,500 School House; Election Favoring It.

END OF DISPUTE

The Board of Education of the Township of Piscataway, through William A. Coddington, its counsel, has been sustained in its appeal to State Superintendent of Schools C. J. Baxter and Attorney-General McCarter, regarding the vote taken at New Market on September 6 last and the bond issue. The board contended that the proposition to build a school at New Market at a cost not to exceed $12,500 was carried and also that the bond issue was authorized. The opposition maintained that the vote on the new school proposition was a tie, 98 for and 98 against, with one rejected ballot, and it was on this dispute that the appeal was taken. Mr. Coddington received the opinions of both Superintendent Baxter and Attorney-General McCarter today sustaining him in his contention.

On September 6 last there was a meeting of the legal voters at New Market, when a proposition was submitted to build a school house at that place on the site of the old building at a cost not to exceed $12,500. Another proposition was submitted to purchase an adjoining lot not to exceed a cost of $425.

At the meeting there were 197 votes cast and one ballot rejected. A report sent to County Superintendent H. B. Willis stated that the vote was a tie, 98 for and 98 against the proposition to build a school house and that the lot proposition was defeated by a majority of eleven votes.

The School Board investigated the report sent in by the secretary and tellers of the meeting and was satisfied that the vote was not a tie, that the school house proposition was carried by a majority of forty-three votes. The board then prepared a complete return of all the proceedings pertaining to the meeting. One copy was sent to the State Board of Education and the other to the Attorney-General as required by law.

The appeal was taken and an investigation was made by Superintendent C. J. Baxter. His report on the appeal sets forth, "that it is impossible for him to discover by what process of reason 197 ballots were counted and rejected one ballot, the result was a tie, 98 in favor and 98 against." He further says: "I am of the opinion that the proposition submitted to the legal voters of the school district of the Township of Piscataway on September 6, 1905, for the purchase of additional lands at New Market was defeated and the proposition submitted at the same meeting for the erection of a new school building at New Market was carried."

Copies of the investigation and recount the reports were annexed to that of Superintendent Baxter and submitted to the Attorney-General on the proceedings authorizing the bond issue. On Tuesday the Attorney-General approved all the proceedings authorizing the bond issue for the erection of a school building not to exceed in cost $12,500.

In the long continued fight made on behalf of the School Board of Piscataway Township, Mr. Coddington has won a signal victory and the school board is gratified in being sustained in its position. In the opinion that she tellers, Robert L. Pierce and P. W. Voorhees, as well as the secretary, F. O. Nelson, made a mistake in the count of the votes at the school meeting. The majority of the people interested are pleased that the matter has been settled and that New Market will now have a school house with adequate accommodations.

PRAISE FOR UNION COUNTY COURTHOUSE.

Delegation from Passaic County Inspects the Building at Elizabeth.

A delegation of officials from Passaic county, including Judge Zabriskie, ex-prosecutor of the Pleas Stagg and members of the Republican Association went to Elizabeth Friday afternoon to inspect the courthouse building, to obtain ideas for a like building in their own county.

The visitors, who were escorted through the courthouse by County Collector Wood and former Freeholder Farrell and Prosecutor Archer, were shown every part of the building. They declared that it was just what was wanted in Passaic. They were surprised at the moderate cost of the structure and declared that Passaic county would order the erection of its duplicate if it could be put up at a like price. They say that they had inspected several other courthouses, including the one recently erected at Paterson, and in their opinion the one in Elizabeth in its main points excelled them all.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jones, of this city, have returned from a visit with relatives at Bound Brook.

JUSTICE SCORES LAWYER

Mosher Says Murphy Advised Both Sides In the Church Case.

ENDS ACTION ABRUPTLY

Warns Finish to the Hearing of Calvary's Pastorate Dispute—"Proceedings Monstrous," Says Lawyer Indignantly.

Following a sharp rebuke to counsel for the defendant from the court, the hearing of Rev. P. T. Morris, colored, for alleged trespass at Calvary Baptist church Sunday night, came to an abrupt ending before Justice Mosher yesterday afternoon. The justice declared the lawyer had been advising both sides, in violation of his oath as an attorney, and refused to hear the case further. Morris was put under a $100 bond, under his own recognizance, to keep the peace for six months.

The case left both Lawyer Clarence L. Murphy, the defendant's counsel, and the justice very angry. The latter intimated that an attempt had been made to turn his court into a farce and the lawyer was outspoken in his opinion that the course pursued by the court was "monstrous."

Lack of cordiality between Mr. Murphy and the justice developed early in the hearing. Mr. Murphy made one or two objections that were not sustained, and plainly annoyed the justice by his persistence in pushing his arguments in support of his contentions. Mr. Murphy had all his objections and the justice's decisions noted by his stenographer, and forcefully declared, at one stage of the hearing, that the hearing was not being conducted according to the rules of evidence and law.

The charge, as told in yesterday's Daily Press, grew out of a dispute between two factions of the church as to the filling of the pastorate. D. W. Baily, it is alleged by one faction, headed by Rev. J. M. Mitchell, acting-pastor, was called by a majority vote at a regularly constituted meeting of the congregation. Rev. Mr. Morris, the choice of the other faction, claims the pulpit by virtue of a call from his supporters. He insisted on taking charge of the church Sunday against the protest of Mr. Mitchell, and the latter had him arrested on a warrant just as he was beginning the evening service.

There was a little mix-up of colored faces in the court room when the trial opened. Every member of the church who could get in, apparently, attended the hearing. The sudden ending of the case left them as much agape as the dramatic arrest. They are talking about it yet.

Mr. Murphy began his attack on the course of procedure against his client as soon as the court opened. He demurred to a dismissal of the action on the ground that the complainant's affidavit was too sweeping and general. He argued at length on that point, and looked amazed when the justice refused to dismiss.

"I take no objection noted by my stenographer," he said. Justice Mosher's eyes glinted.

"I want to know what statute you are proceeding under," continued Mr. Murphy. W. S. Angleman, counsel for the complainant, contended that the evidence would indicate the statute under which the justice could dispose of the case, but Mr. Murphy insisted, "in justice to his client," to know what the prosecution was for.

"The action is for breach of the peace," ruled the justice, after considering.

As the hearing proceeded Mr. Murphy's tilts with the court increased in sharpness, until the final clash, brought on by the evidence of Deacon Lewis Booker, witness for the complainant. Under examination by Mr. Angleman, Booker testified that Mr. Murphy had advised a committee, of which he, Booker, was a member, to call in the police to keep the undesired minister from the pulpit. In his opening argument Mr. Murphy had claimed that the presence of the police was unwarranted and uncalled for. He protested against allowing Booker to present such testimony, on the ground that it was irrelevant and immaterial. The justice ruled that it was permissible.

"There is just one thing I want to bring out," said Mr. Murphy after the witness was turned over to him for cross-examination, "and that is the exact truth as to what I did advise. As long as the court has seen fit to allow the admission of testimony to go in, I want the truth of it told. Didn't I tell you," he said, turning to the witness, "to get the deacons of the church together Sunday morning and decide on the man to occupy the pulpit that day?"

"No, you didn't," replied Booker. "You told us to write a letter."

Patrick Reed, another member of the pacification committee, was called, and Mr. Murphy attempted to continue his cross-examination on the advice he gave. Mr. Angleman objected to further examination on that line, and the court sustained him. Mr. Murphy protested.

"You permitted the other side to examine into that matter," he said. "What is the difference?"

"It makes a difference if you are mixed up in the case," said Justice Mosher, sharply. "You have been working for both sides; you have violated your own oath. I will draw this thing to a close before it goes any further. I will hear no more of this. I hold the defendant under $100 bond to keep the peace for six months."

"State the statute under which you proceed," demanded Mr. Murphy. The court refused.

"You have carried things on without any regard to law or rules," said Mr. Murphy indignantly," and I don't intend to permit it. Note the court's refusal in detail," he ordered the stenographer."

"That won't go across the mountain," commented Justice Mosher, disgustedly. "I will not have this turned into a farce court."

Mr. Murphy expressed his indignation over the court's proceeding very freely after the hearing.

"The whole procedure was monstrous," he said. "My advice to the committee had no bearing on the case whatever. It was not truthfully presented, to begin with, and when it was given proceedings had not been started."

No witnesses for the defense were on the stand at the hearing, and only three for the complainant. The court's sudden ruling brought the examination up very short.

Rev. J. M. Mitchell, Deacon Scipio Wendleton and Deacon Booker were the witnesses examined. Their testimony was to the effect that Mr. Mitchell was the regularly appointed pastor in charge, that Mr. Bailey had been ruled by a regularly constituted majority of the congregation, and that the arrest of Mr. Morris was nec*essary to prevent* a possible riotous disturbance between the two factions. Feeling ran pretty high among the partisans Sunday morning, according to the witnesses.

In cross-examining, Mr. Murphy attacked the credibility of Rev. Mr. Mitchell. He said he was an inveterate trouble-maker.

"He split the Olive church," declared the lawyer, "and wrecked the Filmore church, and now he has come to Calvary church to wreck that."

LA MONTE A CLEVER CROOK, POLICE LEARN

MAN WHO STOLE FROM MACHINISTS WANTED IN PENNSYLVANNIA.

Frank La Monte, arrested at Wilkesbarre by Scranton detectives, for the police here, has a long criminal record. His history was furnished to Chief Kiely today in a letter from the Scranton officers.

La Monte is the man's alias. His real name is Frank Koterba, and he hails from Louisberg, Pa. He is under indictment now for the theft of two bicycles, and is supposed to have stolen at least fifteen other wheels within a year. He has served six months for horse-stealing in the Lackawanna county jail and eighteen months for impersonating an officer in the Huntington reformatory.

When arrested in Wilkesbarre last week he had a detective's badge in his clothes. La Monte is wanted here for stealing an overcoat and a suit of clothes from Karl Avery and a set of machinist's tools from Dennis McMahon, whose confidence he gained after coming to this city in the guise of a machinist. The tools and clothes were found on him in Wilkesbarre and he acknowledged their theft from McMahon and Avery.

The chief of police in Wilkesbarre wants Koterba more than Chief Kiely does, and the latter, satisfied to recover the tools and clothes, will let the Pennsylvania officers give the crook what is coming to him.

BIG ESTATE FOR THEM

Adam Fritz, Mrs. Angerbauer and John Wendell Heir to $700,000.

AN UNCLE'S BEQUEST

Billinger Struck It Rich As a "Forty-Niner"—Came From Germany and Located in North Plainfield.

Adam Fritz, of Somerset street, has just received a letter informing him that he is one of three relatives heir to an estate of $700,000 located in Los Angeles, California, which was left by his uncle, Adam Billinger, a former resident of Mt. Bethel, and he will at once take steps to get possession of the estate. The other two heirs are John Wendell, of Mt. Bethel, and Mrs. Joseph Angerbauer, of East Third street.

Adam Billinger, who was a native of Germany, came to this country when a young man and located in North Plainfield, where he married a sister of Gotlieb Fritz, father of Adam Fritz. During the gold fever craze in 1849, the couple went to California and acquired considerable property and money. When he died several years ago, he left a will amply providing for his wife, and directing that upon her death the estate should be divided among the three mentioned heirs.

Mrs. Billinger died recently at Los Angeles and in the due course of time the will was offered for probate. This was followed by the letter written to Adam Fritz informing him of the provisions of the will. Mr. and Mrs. Billinger had no children and the three mentioned heirs are the nearest relatives.

Mr. Fritz has informed both Mrs. Angerbauer and John Wendell concerning the letter from the surrogate in California and legal steps will now be taken to prove their right to the property left by Mr. Billinger. The property in the estate is said to include some of the finest in Los Angeles and during the past few years has greatly enhanced in value.

CHARLEY WILLIAMS BECOMES A BAD MAN

MILD OLD SOAK GETS RAMBUNCTIOUS AND THUMPS COP.

Charley Williams, dean of the drunk corps, whose record for arrests stretches back to 1879 and touches five score as to number, developed a new jag trait yesterday afternoon. Charley has been regarded as a docile soak, addicted to periodical pinching, but yesterday he thumped the cop that pulled him in. The occurrence was so unusual that Judge Runyon thought the officer was joking when he testified to it.

Officer Overbaugh was the victim of Charley's misguided energy. Charley turned on the cop as he was locking him in a cell, and banged him on the mouth. The blow drew blood. Charley took much satisfaction out of the biff, and caroled joyously in the coop after the door clanged on him.

"What do you think you ought to get this time?" asked Judge Runyon. "This is a serious matter. A peaceable and quiet drunk is one thing, but a wild, insane and homicidal one is a gross matter of another kind." The judge thought the story of Charley's assault was a joke at that time. He didn't learn until later that he really did split Overbaugh's lip.

Charley considered his own case carefully.

"About forty days will do me," he hasarded.

"Forty will satisfy you, eh? If I give you thirty will be no kick coming, will there? Thirty it is."

"All right," said Charley, resignedly, and started on his hundred and third trip to Elizabeth.

The vault is one of the largest ever erected by the local factory and is said to have cost between $50,000 and $75,000.

Exile to Make Address.

Vladiner Gelesshoff, who will address the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. hall on Sunday afternoon, is a Russian of noble family and an exile for his faith. He is now delivering a series of lectures in the Marble Collegiate church, of New York city. Charles L. Lewis, baritone of the Lotus Glee Club and Martin A. Korff, violinist, will furnish special music.

Resigns a Newark Pulpit.

IT NEVER PAID TAXES

Has Never Turned Over One Penny to the City or State—Capitalized for $25,000,000.

It was learned yesterday that the Public Service Corporation, which controls all trolley lines and lighting plants in Northern New Jersey, and which was lately reported taken over by the United Gas Improvement Company, of Philadelphia, since its organization, nearly three years ago, has not paid a cent of taxes to either city or State. The company has an authorized capital of $25,000,000, of which half has been issued and is outstanding, while the other half is about to be issued.

This condition is due to the fact that a doubt exists in the State Board of Assessors as to whether public service should be assessed as a public utility corporation, using the streets and subject to the franchise tax law on its gross receipts, or simply as a corporation subject only to a tax on its capital stock issued and outstanding under the Corporation Tax act of 1884. The city taxing officers say they know of no law which permits of the taxing of the known value of Public Service stock as bank stock is now taxed. The corporation says that it operates but does not own in this State, and therefore is not liable to a franchise tax, so long as the tax is paid on the individual franchises.

These facts were brought to light in Newark yesterday, when Joseph Maguire, secretary of the board, admitted that the corporation had never paid one cent of taxes as a separate corporation. Public Service is not taxed as a unit in Newark, its birthplace, because the properties which it holds under lease or ownership are taxed as they exist.

The East Jersey Traction Company, a concern held under a perpetual lease as a constituent of one of the Public Service subsidiary companies, with $500,000 5 per cent. forty year gold bonds issued by it, the principal and interest of which are guaranteed by the Public Service, is another concern which receives similar favor from the assessors. According to a report of the East Jersey company, filed with the State Board of Assessors in April, 1904, the $500,000 bonds were issued. In report filed December, 1903, no property on which the bonds might have been based appears. The last report recites that the company's capital stock issue is $30,000, of which $25,000 was paid in.

In reply to the questions concerning the cost of road or equipment, operation, source of dividends, number of miles of track, location of track and the income, the answer is "None." Frank Bergen, as president, signed the report, and Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service, swore him in as Master in Chancery.

Chapter 9 of the Laws of 1901 was called to the attention of the assessors, with reference to Public Service, since there is a doubt as to how to classify it. This act was enacted at the suggestion of the assessors to prevent the shirking of taxes by corporations. It reads in part:

"All corporations incorporated under the laws of this State, other than those which are subject to the payment of a State franchise tax assessed upon the basis of gross receipts, shall make annual return of the amount of capital stock issued and outstanding at a graduated rate, according to the amount of capital ranging from one-tenth of 1 per cent. to $50 on each $1,000,000 capital."

It is argued that the Public Service Corporation should pay a license fee on its stock issued. On that basis the corporation would now be $8,700 in arrears, and it would necessarily be liable in the 1,200 corporations, the charters of which Governor Stokes recently declared forfeited because of non-payment of taxes.

The resolution with reference to the status of Public Service, coming as it does just at a time when a big financial deal is in the air, with Public Service behind it, there is considerable anxiety and guessing at present, particularly in Newark financial circles.—Newark News.

LOCAL OPTION FALLACY

Records Show That the Scheme Does Not Work Well Elsewhere.

The Newark Advertiser says editorially:

"Local option obtains in parts of New England, with the result of a constant changing by municipalities from license to prohibition and from prohibition to license, at the annual elections. One year it is a statutory offense to sell beer from kegs or bottles in a town, and the next year the act is perfectly legal, and vice versa. This seesaw makes a constant confusion in the public mind, property rights are created and destroyed and the liquor question is always uppermost. All other public questions are subordinate, and to the manifest injury of public interests.

"That is one of the most serious aspects of local option. Other forms of regulation serve to take the liquor question out of politics. Local option perpetuates it. Men vote for candidates and on important local issues having no relation to the saloon, according to their views on the license question, and good, bad and indifferent candidates and measures succeed or fail according to that test alone.

"It was gratifyingly said of the Werts liquor law, enacted in New Jersey after the local option act of 1888 had been repudiated, that it removed the liquor question out of politics. And it did for a long period of years. The immediate effect of *the local option law had been to in*flame the whole State on the question. It was evidence of dominance of that issue over all other State questions in the November election in 1888 that the Legislature was powerless and that men got elected as legislators who could never have *hoped for election on any other is*sue.

"Local option, therefore, means perpetual turmoil over the liquor question and the subordination of all other questions and issues, local and otherwise, to this one question in the municipal and county elections in New Jersey. Apart from the consideration of personal rights and liberty which is involved in local option, the effect of the principle is sufficient to condemn it as bad policy. It is illogical in that it makes law in one locality and lawlessness in another immediately adjoining that locality, and then by a majority vote exactly reverses these conditions.

"Does local option prohibit? Does it license drinking in a town? Is it a temperance measure? Is it a system that is permanent? The answers to these queries are emphatically in the negative.

"Portland, Maine, is a prohibition city. The police records of Portland show that there is vastly more intemperance in that city than there is in Newark. Comparisons of New Jersey communities with New England communities in which prohibition, with or without local option, is the law is very much in favor of the New Jersey communities. As Judge Skinner truthfully put this matter before the legislative committee last week, the man who is accustomed to malt or other beverages, when he is shut out of local public places, resorts to the bottle, and the bottle contains whiskey.

"Local option does not prohibit the stocking of dwellings with liquor, and one of the results of that is the female intemperance which was recently deplored in a public meeting in New York as coming to be common among American women. People who can have their private bars at home are indifferent to the local option for their localities. It doesn't interfere with their personal liberties and it gives the place, if a suburb, a tone of exclusiveness.

"But the one fatal defect of local option is that it settles nothing. On the contrary, it unsettles everything. It injures good government because it is always a disturbing and demoralizing factor in elections. The moral right, also, of one man who is in the majority to dictate what another man, who is in the minority, shall buy or shall not buy in his own *vicinage may well be doubted in prin*ciple. The great majority sentiment in New Jersey rejected local option after a trial, and did it with such emphasis that the question was lost sight of for eighteen years. It pops up now as a disturbing factor, perhaps to compromise the enactment of some of the highly important bills pending in the Legislature."

The New Jersey Review of Charities and Corrections has this to say editorially:

"Let us see if we can not throw some light on the subject by the application of a little plain, ordinary common sense. In the first place, local option is not a moral question. Questions of morals are not debatable. They are for all people, and all time, and may be found in all religious creeds. The local option question belongs to the department of administration. Sometimes it works well; more often it doesn't. Its merit depends very largely upon local conditions. Take, for instance, the State of Massachusetts, and especially the city of Boston. There is no disputing the fact that the application of local option to the suburban municipalities with which Boston is surrounded has largely increased drunkenness in the city of Boston. There are more arrests for drunkenness in Boston than in any other city of the same class in the United States. Sixty per cent. of these arrests are people from out of town, and, of course, a large proportion of them are arrested on Saturday night and Sunday, in spite of Sunday closing. The Saturday night trains on the Boston and Maine and some of the other roads have to run several extra smoking cars to take care of the "drunks." The prevated and street car lines are constantly appealing for extra police to enable them to handle their unsteady patrons on Saturday nights. Boston has the largest sale of bottled liquors in the country. Many of the jobbers in whiskey have started express wagons of their own, under assumed names, which deliver the stuff to local option towns within a radius of five miles. This enormous express business has been built up in this manner, and many instances are cited of such dealers "standing in" with the local police authorities and selectmen in prohibition communities. The fact is that an excessive sale of whiskey within the city of Boston, both for local and out of town purposes, for the Sunday trade. The elections in Massachusetts on the license question occur annually, and the consideration of the question has undoubtedly had the effect in many communities of dragging the whole liquor business into politics deeper than before. Moreover, the uncertainty as to whether a license will be continued or not has brought a peculiar class of men into the retail business, who buy the cheapest and poorest goods, and are naturally anxious to make every possible cent that can be squeezed out of the business during their precarious tenure.

"The fact is that local option is very popular in the fashionable suburbs, where the residents prefer and can afford to buy their beverages by the case, and would not patronize a saloon, even if it was adjacent to their premises at all."

"Whether local option is a 'moral question,' as so many of the clergy seem to believe, remains to be demonstrated. To some it seems also to be bad political immorality as any scheme yet devised, since it embarrasses popular government with a question which is filled with bitterness, and leaves to the vot of small communities the decision of a question which mere majority rule should not be permitted to decide. When majority rule becomes tyrannical, it is just as bad as any other tyranny, and men rebel at it the moment they have the power to take away its rights. The plea that local option is a 'moral question' depends upon whether any and every use of liquor is immoral. Obviously the attack is not made against excesses, for the effect of the act itself is felt by the most moderate drinker. Men are found to believe that drinking is not in itself a sin, and if not, how can its prohibition by the majority vote of a small community be regarded by them as a moral question? Of the injurious effect of such a policy there is room for frequent consideration in political discussion and elections, there is no doubt. With the intemperate Prohibitionists on one side and the hater of public control of personal matters on the other, there is ample opportunity for such consideration of other questions of government as require attention.

"The local option scheme has been and found wanting too often in testing its discussion before we write, and the present agitation does not seem as sincere as it should be, considering that it is limited principally to the churches. What the agitators really want is Prohibition, absolute and forever. They call local option 'a step in the right direction,' and the end is to justify the means!"

SCHOOL HEAD ISSUES LETTER.

Superintendent Calls Attention to Evil of Student Secret Societies.

An open letter to the parents of the Montclair High School pupils has been issued by Randall Spaulding, superintendent of schools in that town, requesting their co-operation in preventing secret societies from fastening on the public school system. The circular refers to the agitation about a year ago on this same question, at which time a committee of five was named to consider the subject of secret organizations in the High School, and goes on to relate how they reported that the best interests of the school would be served if the societies were wiped out of existence.

Continuing, Dr. Spaulding says that while this recommendation was agreed to with one or two exceptions, the editor of the secret bodies did not agree with other provisions of the committee's report and hence, in his opinion, the suggestion will probably go unheeded.

"It will certainly be a disaster to our country," Dr. Spaulding declared, "if a feeling of genuine democracy cannot be instilled in the minds of the young people.

"The parents are herewith earnestly requested to use their influence, their authority and every legitimate means in their power to prevent the secret societies from fastening on our public school system."

Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Hyde left on Monday for California, where they will remain for a couple of months. Upon their return they expect to occupy their new home on the mountain.

HOSPITAL RELIEF MEASURE

Drawn By Corporation Counsel Marsh and Introduced In the Legislature.

NOW IN COMMITTEE

Introduced by Senator E. R. Ackerman—Complete Text of the Measure.

Senator Ernest R. Ackerman introduced the "hospital bill" in the Legislature last night. It was drafted by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, and is said to be intended for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital. The measure is known as "Senate bill No. 122," and has been referred to the judiciary committee.

Following is the text of the bill:

"An act for the relief of associations or corporations heretofore organized under the act entitled 'An act to provide for the incorporation of associations for the erection and maintenance of hospitals, infirmaries, orphanages, asylums and other charitable institutions,' approved March 9th, A. D. 1877, and acts amendatory thereto.

"Whereas, by the act whose title is cited in the title to this act, it was, among other things, directed that certificates of incorporation therein referred to be recorded in the office of the clerk of the county where the principal purposes of such association are to be carried out, and after being so recorded, be filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and it is the intention of this act to validate the incorporation or attempted incorporation of any such associations heretofore made or attempted to be made under of by virtue of said act, or acts amendatory thereof or supplemental thereto, notwithstanding any defect, irregularity, or omission in the matter of the recording or filing of such certificates of incorporation, in any or all of the offices in which such certificates were required to be recorded or filed, upon such associations first complying with the provisions of this act; therefore

"One—That it shall and may be lawful for any association or corporation organized or which it was attempted to organize or incorporate under and in pursuance of any act of the Legislature referred to in the title to this act, at any time within three months from the date of such approval or final passage of this act, to cause its original certificate of incorporation or attempted incorporation, as the same may have been recorded in the county clerk's office of any county in this State, or a copy thereof bearing the date of such record and certified to be a true copy under the hand and seal of the county clerk of such county, to be recorded in the office or offices of the clerks of the county or counties in this State where the principal purposes of such corporation or attempted corporation are to be carried out, and after being so recorded, to be filed in the office of the Secretary of State; and that upon the recording and filing of such original certificate or certified copy thereof, and the recording and filing of which is hereinabove authorized, duly certified by the Secretary of State, shall be evidence in all courts and places.

"Two—That this act shall take effect immediately."

JOHN BROWN BADLY HURT

Sustains Broken Shoulder Blade and Other Injuries in Fall Through Trap Door.

PASSED A BAD NIGHT

Severe Contusions Prevent a Complete Examination—Dr. Endicott In Attendance.

From an accident that befell him in J. J. Heideloff's plumbing shop on Soemrset street yesterday, John B. Brown, one of Plainfield's oldest and best known citizens, is confined to his home on Park avenue with severe injuries. He has a broken shoulder blade and his body is a mass of severe contusions that prevent an examination to learn if he has been hurt internally. He passed a very bad night, and his condition has not materially improved today.

Mr. Brown has been enjoying unusually good health of late and despite his eighty-three years has been out a great deal. While walking about yesterday he went into Mr. Heideloff's place on a business matter and started to go to the rear of the shop, as had been his custom. Coming from the light into the semi-darkness, he failed to notice an open trap door in the floor. Some one had been excavating beneath and had temporarily left it unguarded, and no one saw him in time to warn him.

He fell directly into the opening and landed heavily about six feet below. Had he fallen just a trifle in another direction he would have taken a drop nearly twice the distance. When employes of the place rushed to his assistance they found him helpless and suffering great pain. He was gotten out of the excavation with much difficulty and was then taken to his home in a carriage.

The nature of his hurts makes it impossible for hi mto lie down, and he is compelled to remain in a chair. Medical attention was furnished by Dr. Endicott, and though he has made the patient as comfortable as possible, he is still in doubt as to the outcome of the injuries. Because of his advanced age the broken shoulder blade may not mend for many months.

It is a coincidence that the shop where Mr. Brown was hurt is the same place where he conducted a carriage business for a great many years.

P. S. C. IS NEGLECTED.

Freeholders to Go Ahead With Structure.

The Freeholders' joint bridge committee of Essex and Hudson counties have ordered their engineers to proceed with the plans for the construction of a new bridge across the Passaic River. The Public Service Corporation at present runs a line of cars over the old structure, and recently refused to pay $6,000 a year for the privilege to use the new bridge.

Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation, sent word that his company would not pay more than $4,000, the present price. In authorizing its engineers, the joint committee decided to build the new structure without any provisions for trolley cars, and this means a big loss to the Public Service.

Strengthening Case.

On a motion made by F. J. Blatz, counsel for the plaintiff, the action for $200 damages brought by Nathan Sachs against F. C. Bolking, the Westfield automobilist whose machine smashed his buggy on West Front street recently, was discontinued by Justice Hand this morning. The move was made by the plaintiff to strengthen the case technically.

Death of Frederic A. Smith.

Frederic A. Smith, father of J. Augustus and F. E. Smith, of this city, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. A. Logreen, of South Bound Brook. He was sixty-nine years old and was well known in this section. The funeral will be held from his late home Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Frank Brown, of this city, and Miss M. E. Everett, of Worcester, Mass.

FREEDOM CASTLE NOW IN ITS SIXTH YEAR

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED BY SOCIAL AND ENTERTAINMENT.

In celebration of the fifth anniversary of its organization, Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, entertained a large gathering of friends in the Castle Hall, Babcock building, last night. The programme was made up of professional and amateur numbers and was greatly enjoyed by the gathering.

Past Grand Chief Dr. J. H. Buchanan was in charge and at the conclusion of a selection from an orchestra of eight pieces, made an address of welcome. It was in his characteristic vein and placed the audience in a pleasant frame of mind for what was to follow. The succeeding numbers were baritone solos by Carl Haynes; impersonations and stories by C. E. Hayten; piano duet, Dr. Buchanan and Vincent F. Sokol; address, A. L. Lyttle, of Pennsylvania, supreme master of records; feats of magic, W. H. Rankin. At the close, the orchestra rendered selections and a short time was spent in a social way.

The committee which had the affair in charge comprised Fred Treuhan, chairman; Dr. Buchanan, William Trenmain, George Ayers, John Gaub and C. H. Lowerie.

DURLACH SHACKS ARE TO COME DOWN

ESTATE TO COMPLY WITH BOARD OF [illegible] HEALTH'S WISHES.

Henry J. Durlach, executor for the Durlach estate, appeared at a hearing of the Board of Health yesterday afternoon to answer a complaint regarding the unfit and unsanitary condition of the property Nos. 336 to 44 Watchung avenue, near Front street, and voluntarily consented to remove the shacks. Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow made the complaint, and the board took action at once. After the authorities explained the situation to him, Mr. Durlach promised that the undesirable dwellings would be torn down by May 1.

Mr. Durlach agreed that the dwellings complained of are not only an eye-sore to the neighborhood, but from a sanitary standpoint are unfit for habitation.

It is reported that the Durlach estate will improve the property by the erection of modern buildings. That was said to have been the intention of the estate some time ago, but the plans were abandoned. Subsequently there was some talk of the city purchasing the property as a site for a city hall, but nothing came of it.

The board may proceed to take up other similar complaints in the west end of the city, where the health officer has found dwellings to be unsanitary.

OPERA CLUB THE NEWEST THING HERE

AMATEUR VOCALISTS ONLY TO COMPOSE THE ORGANIZATION.

The success which attended the production of "The Pirates of Penzance," at the New Plainfield theatre last night, has increased the interest and enthusiasm in the formation of a permanent operatic organization here. The suggestion was made at a recent rehearsal for the "Pirate" by Judge W. N. Runyon. The idea was well received and since then signatures have been secured which will make the proposition a certainty. One object will be to give three operas each year.

Lively interest is manifested in the organization by Charles J. Fisk, and it is more than likely that he will be chosen president. William Holmes will be manager. Mr. Holmes has had unusual success in giving these amateur productions and especially in the one of last night, when he had a chorus of 100 voices.

March Meeting of Common Council.

The March meeting of the Common Council will be held on Monday night, when the usual budget of business will be considered. It is quite likely that an ordinance will be introduced at that time by Councilman Mellick, of the fire committee, abolishing the office of second assistant chief of the fire department. The appointment by Mayor Buckle of John Coe to that position was returned to the fire committee, it being understood that Mr. Buckle would be persuaded to withdraw it and thus allow the Common Council to abolish the office.

L. V. AGAINST BOROUGH

Is Afraid South Plainfield Would Tax It High

HEARING ON MEASURE

Agent of Railroad Spoke Frankly In Opposition to the Separation—Hints at Storage Plant's Removal.

Assemblyman Drake's bill for the creation of South Plainfield borough was vigorously debated by its friends and opponents at a hearing before the legislative committee at Trenton yesterday. The Lehigh Valley Railroad took part in the opposition. The road infers that the South Plainfielders are counting on the coal storage plant to bear the burden of taxation in the proposed borough, and the company is afraid the coal pile will be taxed to the limit.

The two delegations were not matched as to strength in numbers. Fully thirty men were on hand to support the bill and only the Lehigh Valley representatives and five members of the committee appointed at a meeting in New Market, S. D. Drake, C. E. Kelly, Eugene Veghte, L. D. Walker and William Fitz Randolph, were lined up against the measure.

Judge Steel and Judge Theodore D. Booraem, of New Brunswick, counsel for the South Plainfield borough committee, were the principal speakers, and they were supported by eldorous arguments from Archie Stengrafe, Jr., Peter McDonogh, Charles Maltby, Rev. J. A. Cubberley, Col. John I. Holly and R. B. Manning. In substance the boroughites based their demand for separation on the ground that South Plainfield was unable to get its share of public improvements under the township government. It was contended that South Plainfield bears the brunt of township taxation and gor next to nothing from the Township Committee.

J. T. Schaperkotier, of New York, spoke for the railroad. He argued that if the borough was incorporated his company would pay half the taxes of the municipality, which meant a large increase in its taxes. The road, he said, emphatically was against the incorporation. He intimated that South Plainfield was leaning on a slender reed when it counted on the coal storage. It was there one day, but it might be gone the next.

S. D. Drake made the main speech for the anti-boroughites. The incorporation was unnecessary, he contended, and did not assure any greater prosperity than a township government. He cited Cranford and Somerville, which are under town government, as examples of places where the simpler form of government was successful. He told the committee that he and other leading citizens of Lincoln had threshed out the borough question a year ago, and became convinced that it was an unwise step. If it was not good for Lincoln, it was not good for South Plainfield. He begged the South Plainfielders to remain content with their present estate for the sake of lower taxes. He had proved himself the friend of South Plainfield by supporting and advising the people of that place in their fight against a $25,000 school in New Market, and he asked them to regard his advice now. He asked the legislative committee to hold off the bill for a year at least, to force the South Plainfielders to back up their threat of exposing an alleged "man higher up" in the township government.

C. E. Kelly also spoke. He denied that South Plainfield had been discriminated against in the matter of public improvements. The separation would take too big a slice of taxes from the township, which, outside of New Market and South Plainfield, is wholly a farming community.

First of Lenten Recitals.

The first of a series of organ recitals will be given at Holy Cross (Episcopal) church, afternoon at 4 o'clock, by the organist, Mr. Lee, assisted by Mr. Loder, baritone. These recitals will be given on Saturday afternoons during Lent. The programme for this week will be as follows: Offertoire, No. 3, Wely; "It Is Enough, Saviour," Mendelssohn; "Andante," Merkel; "The Lord Is My Light," Allitson; "Fantasia and Fugue," (C. Minor) Bach; "Processional March," Scotson Clark.

Annual Church Reception.

The women of the First Baptist church are planning to hold the annual church reception on Tuesday evening, March 20, in the lecture room. This will be in the nature of a pastor's reception, to which all members of the church and congregation are invited. There will also be an informal programme.

Police Board Will Meet.

The Plainfield Board of Police will meet in the Mayor's office on Friday night to consider several matters of interest to the department.

SOCIETY'S NEXT EVENT

Masquerade Ball to Be Given at the Casino Monday Night, April 16.

PATRONESSES NAMED

Two Orchestras for the Occasion—A Supper at Midnight to Be a Feature.

A society event second only in importance to the charity ball given for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital will be a masquerade ball now in course of preparation by society, to be held at the Casino Easter Monday night, April 16. The affair will be the most elaborate of the kind ever held here by society people and will eclipse all previous efforts.

Mrs. John B. Dupont, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies, Mrs. Orville T. Waring, Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart and Mrs. Henry McGee are the patronesses, and the general committee in charge comprises Lewis G. Timpson, Dr. F. C. Ard, Thomas R. Van Boskerck and Owen H. Fleming.

It is proposed to carry out the masquerade idea in every particular and the various costumes are expected to be gorgeous. Every country and well known character will be included in the representations. There will be continuous music by two orchestras.

Special attention will be directed toward the decorations of the auditorium, something novel being promised by the committee. The affair will also include a supper and at midnight the guests will unmask.

ORDER'S OFFICERS TO ATTEND BANQUET

LIST OF SPEAKS FOR THE AFFAIR IS ANNOUNCED.

The committee in charge of the "Junior American banquet" to be held at the Casino tomorrow night, when Governor Edward C. Stokes and Senator Everett Colby will be the principal speakers, met last night to complete the details for the affair. It was reported that acceptances had been received from the State councilor, vice-councilor and other State Council officers, as well as from the scheduled speakers.

There has been a rearrangement of the toasts, although it has been planned not to consume much more time in speechmaking. The affair is called for 8:30 o'clock sharp. Mayor Newton B. Smalley will be the toastmaster and the toasts will be as follows:

Governor Edward C. Stokes, "Our State;" Everett Colby, "Patriotism;" Wilson Saunders, "Plainfield;" Henry H. Drake, Elizabeth, "Our Country;" Assemblyman Everard Tucker, Elizabeth, "Our Flag;" State Council Secretary W. H. Meier, "Our Order."

France-Prussian Vet There.

Town Committeeman Theodore Bruchman, of Fanwood, attended the celebration held at Sulzer Harlem River Park, New York, last night, in honor of the silver wedding anniversary of the Emperor and Empress of Germany. The elaborate affair was given under the auspices of the German-American Kriegerbund. Mr. Bruchman is a German veteran, having been a lieutenant in the First Uhanen Regiment, Calvary, during the Franco-Prussian War. In that conflict he won honorable mention from the Kaiser for heroic services.

White Club Entertained.

Miss Lillian A. Force, of Duer street, entertained the whist club of which she is a member, at her home last night, it being the last meeting of the club for the year. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dunbar, who substituted for other members, received the two prizes, one for the men and the other for the women. After the play, refreshments were served and the club enjoyed a delightful social hour.

Attended Anniversary Meeting.

A large delegation from the Grove Street Mission attended the fourteenth anniversary of the Elizabethport Mission held in the Second Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, last night. Howard Schleker, as superintendent of this mission, has had remarkable success and the anniversary was the occasion of much rejoicing.

Mrs. Cuthbert Robbed.

Mrs. Rose Cuthbert's house, at 123 East Ninth street, was robbed last week by second story men. Entrance was gained through an open window, while the family were out, at night. A woman's watch and some small pieces of jewelry are on the list of missing articles furnished to the police.

THIEF MADE RICH HAUL

BOOTY WORTH $500

While the family were at dinner, thieves robbed the house of H. E. Titus, 900 Madison avenue, last Friday night of valuables worth $500. Pursuant to their usual policy of silence in cases of robbery, the police did not give the case out, and it was only by accident that a Daily Press reporter discovered that one of the most daring and successful bits of second story work ever turned in this city was worrying the officers.

The robbery occurred between 6:30 and 7 o'clock. At the former hour, when the family sat down to dinner, the valuables were in their places. Shortly after 7 o'clock one of the young women of the family went upstairs to the floor on which the bedrooms are. Evidences of the thief's hasty work were in plain view. The top of Mrs. Titus' bureau had been swept clean of everything worth taking away, the haul including watches and jewelry belonging to various members of the family.

No trace of the thief was found in in the house. An open kitchen door gave the clue to his probable mode of entrance. He must have done his work within fifteen minutes.

The police were notified, and they are tracing the man down.

Congressman Howell Through?

It is reported in State political circles that Representative Howell, of the Third Congressional District, will not seek a renomination when his present term expires. This announcement has caused many aspirants for the office to start laying wires already for the nomination. It is said that Robert Prickett, editor and owner of the New Brunswick Daily Press and former chairman of the Middlesex Republican Executive Committee, has his eyes set on the prize. It will be remembered that Prickett was ousted from the county committee three years ago by Theodore Strong and his friends.

He reviewed briefly some of the treasured associations of the old High School building, and said that he was sure they would never be forgotten.

COMIC OPERA FOR BENEFIT OF THE DAY NURSERY

100 IN THE CHORUS

William N. Runyon in the Role of the "Pirate King"—Mrs. F. M. Ward as "Ruth"—Society Attends.

Representatives of society in the city and borough, particularly those who are prominently identified in charity, circles, as well as many others, gave their hearty support to a fine production of Gilbert and Sullivan's comic opera, "The Pirates of Penzance," at the New Plainfield theatre last night by local talent for the benefit of the Day Nursery. The performance was a distinct success financially and from the viewpoint of amateur theatricals, for which Plainfield is becoming noted. William Holmes, who coached and managed the entire affair, secured some flattering praise for his work, while the entire cast and the large chorus came in for a generous share of approval for the efficient manner in which the opera was presented.

The opera was given at the Casino three years ago with great success by a company of fifty. Last night the organization comprised an even hundred, while an orchestra of sixteen pieces assisted largely in making the production the success that it was.

As to the work of the cast, it is difficult to make comparisons. Each one performed his or her part exceedingly well. William N. Runyon made a typical "Richard," the pirate chief. His singing and acting called forth frequent bursts of laughter and applause. He was right at home in the difficult role and interpreted the lines perfectly. From start to finish he had the audience with him.

Miss Caroline H. Dawes, who took the part of "Mabel," General Stanley's youngest daughter, scored a decided hit in this her first appearance in theatricals. Her sweet, soprano voice was just suited to the role, and she acted her part with grace and ease. In part first the wide range of her voice was heard to the best advantage, where in one instance she reached high C. Her work throughout won warm praise from the entire audience.

"Ruth," a piratical "maid-of-all-work," was the part assigned to Mrs. Fernando M. Ward, and her conception of it showed that no mistake was made in the selection. Her rich contralto voice was never heard to better advantage, while her acting was a feature. William J. Tallamy made a capital "Frederic," a pirate apprentice, and not only his solo parts, but in the duo selections with Miss Dawes, he enthused the audience.

Joseph C. Martin, as "Edward," a sergeant of police, was very amusing and provoked hearty laughter. He was in good voice and his appearance with the police won genuine applause. Special mention is due R. Maxwell Honeyman, who assumed the role of "Major General Stanley," of the British army. Although his voice was not strong, it possessed a tone that was pleasing. This was also true of Frederick J. Pope, who had the part of "Samuel," lieutenant to the pirate chief. Miss E. Nellie Tabb, Miss Leila Druse and Miss Ada M. Dunham, as General Stanley's daughters, each performed her part well.

Too much praise cannot be given the work of the chorus, comprising 100 well trained voices. It was exceptionally well balanced, and in several instances had the opportunity of displaying its real strength and harmony. Frequent encores were given and generously responded to. The great care in selecting the company and the fine staging of the opera occasioned favorable comment from all. Those taking the leading parts were each the recipient of flowers, gifts and admiration of the audience. Mr. Holmes, as stage manager, was ably assisted by Fred T. Dickerson and Clifford A. Braider.

The cast and chorus follows:

Cast.

Richard, a Pirate Chief, William N. Runyon
Samuel, his Lieutenant, Frederick J. Pope
Frederic, a Pirate Apprentice, William J. Tallamy
Major General Stanley, of the British Army, E. Maxwell Honeyman

Mabel, General Stanley's youngest

PUBLIC MEETING TO DISCUSS SEWER PROJECT

BOROUGH COUNCIL WILL FIX DATE AT FRIDAY NIGHT'S SESSION.

The recent agitation for preliminary work to bring about a sewer system for the borough, is beginning to bear fruit. The Common Council and the Board of Health are of one mind on the subject and the two organizations will join forces in attaining their end. Both have had the matter under advisement and the conclusion has been reached that the matter should properly be left to the citizens.

For this reason, at the regular meeting of the Council Friday night, a date will be agreed upon for holding a public session. A general invitation will be extended taxpayers to attend and present their views, either for or against a project. The special committee appointed a short time ago showed that nearly everyone is anxious for a change from the present unsanitary state of affairs and it is believed an open discussion will result in much good for all concerned.

The members of the Council, who have been investigating plans for installation of a system and method of disposal, have secured some interesting information that will be imparted. It is also Mayor Smalley's plan to have an expert on sewage matters in attendance in order to answer questions that might arise.

SIMPLE SERVICE OVER PAUL TAYLOR BROWN

LARGE GATHERING OF FRIENDS AND BUSINESS ASSOCIATES IN ATTENDANCE

Attended by a representative body of citizens and former business associates, the funeral of Paul Taylor Brown, who died at Nassau, B. I., last week, was held from his late home on Belvidere avenue yesterday afternoon. The residence was barely able to accommodate the gathering of mourners who came to pay their last respects, every society and organization with which he had been connected sending a delegation. Among them were members of the Plainfield Country Club, Riding and Driving Club, Muhlenberg Hospital Board of Governors and the Paul Taylor Brown Company, of New York.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, was in charge of the service and in his discourse spoke feelingly of the departed's religious and charitable work. Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar" was rendered by Charles L. Lewis. The wealth of floral tributes extended has seldom been equalled at a local funeral, the set pieces being particularly noticeable. They came from Plainfield organizations, from New York business men and from friends.

The interment was made in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being J. N. Walbridge, R. L. Walbridge, F. K. Walbridge and C. C. Walbridge, of New York, brothers of Mrs. Brown; D. M. Torrey, of Brooklyn, and Dr. F. C. Ard, Howard Williams and A. Jenkins of this city.

THE ALUMNI RECEPTION

Hundreds of Old High School Graduates Entertained at the New Building.

SPEECHES A FEATURE

Mrs. Shelland, Senator Ackerman and Dr. Maxson Among the Contributors—Association to Be Permanent.

As a fitting climax to the day's programme marking the dedication of the Plainfield High School, the Plainfield Alumni Association conducted a reception in the building Thursday. Hundreds of students of other days were in attendance and men and women who parted as boys and girls at graduation time, renewed acquaintance and spent several hours in a delightful way. Music, addresses, dancing and refreshments were among the features and it was well after midnight before anyone thought of leaving.

A. McClean Parker, '74, who has been one of the leading members of the association, had charge of the programme and introduced the speakers. As an introductory he spoke of the opening of the new building and expressed himself in behalf of his fellow members as being greatly pleased with it. He extended congratulations to all those instrumental in its erection, specifying the Board of Education, Dr. Maxson, Principal Trayell, the faculty and students.

The first speaker announced was Arthur L. Titsworth, of this city, a graduate of the class of 1870, the first one in the old High School. Mr. Parker said that the one thing he had remembered most about Mr. Titsworth was he was always on the roll of honor. The latter's subject was, "Early Days in the Old School" and many of his remarks brought back memories to those in front of him.

"It seems impossible," said Mr. Titsworth, "that thirty-six years have elapsed since the class graduated after being given a standard of scholarship which the school has ever since been endeavoring to attain."

He paid a tribute to the memory of Dr. C. H. Stillman, who he said was responsible for the high standard of efficiency in Plainfield schools and then showed a programme of the 1870 commencement exercises, also his class pin which he wore at the time. Of the eight graduates, he said, seven were living, five of whom were in the gathering.

With Mr. Titsworth's retirement from the platform, Mr. Parker announced the next speaker would be "Miss Julia Bulkley." No one responded and then Mrs. James Shelland, of Minneapolis, arose and said she didn't know Miss Bulkley good but had forgotten the name. Mr. Parker acknowledged his error and as Mrs. Shelland stepped forward she was greeted with round after round of applause, while the High School orchestra played with a swing "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." Mrs. Shelland was visibly affected and after thanking her former pupils said she had nothing further to say beyond her address of the afternoon.

"There is no time to be wasted," she said, "when there are a senator, lawyers and statesmen present to speak—and (with a significant smile) I trained them." As she turned to resume her seat she exclaimed with fervor, "May God bless you."

An original short story, "A very little sketch of a very little girl," was read by Mrs. Comstock, of Brooklyn, who was Miss Hattie Smith, a graduate of the class of 1878. She has been engaged in literary work and her contribution revealed her ability, as a writer. She was followed by Dr. Maxson, who spoke on the subject, "The Present and Future of the New High School." He said in part:

"The Plainfield High School stands in the same relative position today as when the members of these various classes graduated, that is, in the very front of the educational ranks. This city is looked upon by educators all over the country as possessing an ideal school system and the fact was recognized by the judges at the St. Louis Exposition—Plainfield getting one of the three gold medals awarded New Jersey for excellence in educational learning. The facilities provided the pupils are a great advantage to them in their pursuit of knowledge and with the new High School their benefits will be greater than ever. The dedication of this building has been the realization of one of my fondest dreams and the outlook for good work is very bright."

William D. Murray, '75, was next introduced as president of the Alumni Association and chairman of the finance committee. At the outset he said he had a hazy recollection of the last meeting twelve years ago and the election of officers, but that was about all there was to it. Now that it would be possible to have a permanent gathering place in the new building he said more interest should be shown. At a suggestion from Edward J. Patterson, Franklin H. Smith, '80, was elected secretary and treasurer and the graduates seem dto think a great deal had been accomplished.

Continuing his address, Mr. Murray said the burden of the association work has fallen upon the shoulders of a few volunteers and that if the organization had been properly erected at the beginning, a new High School would have been a reality some years ago. He then suggested that the alumni display its interest in the school in some substantial way and said that it had already been proposed to raise a fund of perhaps $5,000, to be placed in the hands of the school trustees—this to be expended in connection with the school as the association agreed. He stated that one man had already given $250 and that smaller amounts had been pledged. Afterward blanks for membership in the association and for contributions to this fund were distributed among the graduates.

Acting on a suggestion from E. J. Patterson, a committee of three composed of himself, Franklin S. Smith, '80, and Champlain L. Riley, '94, was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws for the association to be presented at a meeting in June.

Principal Ira W. Travell, of the High School, spoke on "The Present School," dwelling particularly on the need of athletics and an athletic field. As he concluded Senator Ernest R. Ackerman arose and the applause accorded him resounded through the building. His subject was "The Effect of Schools on the Community" and he treated it in a broad way. Another vigorous period of hand clapping followed his remark that the future would increase and the duties of women teachers. Statistics, he declared, were dry at the most, but he quoted a few to show the extent of the school system in the State. There are 1953 public school buildings in New Jersey with a total value of $20,000,000. The teachers number 8,700, of whom 7,700 are women. Those in Plainfield, the Senator said, had served as long and faithfully as any in the State and he expressed the hope that those who had erected the new building would see their way clear to put the salaries of the faculty and those of the other buildings on a footing with East Orange, Englewood, Hoboken, Jersey City and Montclair.

Mrs. John Ulrich, who was Miss Bessie Kenyon, recited an original ode to the Alumni Association and the last speaker was Stuart H. Freeman, who, in behalf of the class of 1906, promised to uphold the good name of the Plainfield High School. In conclusion the entire gathering sang "America," after which refreshments were served and the floor was cleared for dancing.

The committee which had charge of the entertainment consisted of Walter M. McGee, chairman, Mrs. E. J. Patterson, Miss Edith L. Gilbert, Miss Ruth Hubbard and Champlain L. Riley. The finance committee was composed of William D. Murray, chairman, David M. Runyon, treasurer, Edward J. Patterson, William M. Stillman and Miss S. Lena Bass.

Those on the reception committee were Franklin S. Smith, chairman; Rev. Charles E. Dunn, Walter M McGee, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, Mrs. C. W. Faster, Lucius L. Gilbert, Edward J. Patterson, Mrs. E. D. Wilcox, William C. Hubbard, Edward J. Patterson, Miss Edith L. Gilbert, Mrs. Henry S. Fullerton, Miss Edna Burr, Francis K. Anderson, William M. Stillman, Miss Louise B. Egan, Champlain L. Riley.

The class representatives were as follows: Arthur L. Titsworth, '70; William M. Stillman, '72; George S. Smith, '73; A. McC. Parker, '74; William D. Murray, '75; Frank Runyon, '76; Townsend Rushmore, '77; Howard Runyon, '78; Mrs. C. F. French, '79; Franklin S. Smith, '80; Mrs. Eugene H. COLUMBUS KNIGHTS

Music, jollity and plenty of good things to eat and smoke marked a smoker held by Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, Wednesday night. There was a big attendance, and everything was on a large scale.

Mayor Buckle, City Judge Runyon, Mayor Smalley and Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed were among the guests. The judge sang and the other distinguished visitors spoke. Delegations were present from Bailey Council, Elizabeth, and Newark Council, Newark.

The programme was a blend of local, out-of-town and professional talent. The local entertainers were Joseph O'Keefe and H. P. Greenwood, who sang. There were songs by members of Bailey and Newark councils, and W. V. Waters, the lyceum humorist, uncorked a new jar of preserved jests.

JAIL FAMILIAR TO HIM

"Larry" Wallace Has Served Twenty-Two Terms in Fifteen Years.

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER

Altogether He Has Spent 901 Days in the Union County Jail—Also Knows Somerset County's Jail.

Lawrence Wallace, whom Judge Vail, in the Union County Court, sentenced to three years in State prison on Wednesday, has the most notorious record for his age of any prisoner ever incarcerated in the Union County Jail. Although but thirty-two years old, he has in the past fifteen years served twenty terms in the county jail for various offenses. The total number of days he put in there was 901. Besides this he was three times arrested on suspicion of being an incendiary. A number of mysterious night fires several years ago, in Fanwood and Scotch Plains, greatly alarmed the inhabitants of these places. When the fires occurred, no matter at what hour of the night, "Larry" Wallace was always the first one to discover them and give the alarm.

He belonged at that time to the Hook and Ladder Fire Company of Scotch Plains, and after awhile suspicion became directed against him, but the State, although feeling confident that he was the guilty party, could not obtain evidence sufficient to secure his conviction. The police story was that Wallace made a fun for seeing a blaze and have the firemen at work subduing it. Most of the offenses for which he spent terms in jail, were drunkenness, fighting and larceny. His last crime for which he was indicted was breaking into Rapp's hotel at Fanwood. He was caught in the hotel bar-room drinking whiskey at 3 o'clock in the morning.

Besides all the time he served in Union, Wallace put in two terms in the Somerset County Jail. Judge Vail, in imposing sentence, told Wallace it was plainly evident to the court that it was useless, from his past record of crime, to show him any more leniency or give him any more chances to reform his life, so the State prison now gets him. Wallace has an aged and respectable mother. The poor woman is heartbroken and has spent nearly all her money trying to get him out of his numerous scrapes, she having heavily mortgaged all her property to do so.—Newark News.

FELL DEAD FROM APOPLECTIC STROKE

JOHN C. MEEKER DIED SUDDENLY ON WEDNESDAY

John C. Meeker, a prominent resident of this city for many years, was fatally stricken with apoplexy while at his home on East Front street, Wednesday afternoon. The attack came without any previous warning and he dropped to the floor lifeless.

Mr. Meeker was the son of the late Corra O. Meeker and was born at Short Hills seventy years ago. His father's farm extended to the Netherwood section and the Netherwood hotel was built upon part of it. The entire tract was afterward sold by the elder Meeker and he and his son embarked in the hardware and tin business on East Front street in the building now occupied by Roth & Co. They sold out a comparatively few years ago.

Mr. Meeker married Miss Raymond, daughter of the late John Raymond, of East Front street, after whom Raymond avenue is named. She died in 1877, leaving three children who survive the father. They are C. M. Meeker, of this city; Harry Meeker, of Jersey City, and Mrs. Elliott Collins, of Brooklyn. Robert A. Meeker, State supervisor of roads, is a half brother and during his term as city street commissioner, John Meeker acted as foreman. He afterward retained the position under succeeding officials.

The funeral was held from his late residence Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

DUKES MAY AGREE.

Report That Divorce Suit Will Be Withdrawn.

Negotiations are now almost completed which may prevent a trial of the divorce suit between James B. Duke and his wife Lillian. Both are said to be anxious for a reconciliation and settlement, but neither wishes to make the first advance.

Vice-Chancellor Pitney, in Newark, ordered the trial to be held between April 26 and May 2. Long before that, it is expected, the original suit brought by the president of the American Tobacco Company and his wife's cross-bill will be withdrawn.

William Jukes, of East Second street, who was recently taken to Muhlenberg Hospital suffering from an injured knee cap, will be able to leave the institution in a few days.

WESTFIELD BALL CLUB
HOLDS ANNUAL ELECTION.

Assemblyman Randolph Perkins Again Chosen a Trustee of the Organization.

The annual meeting of the Westfield Baseball Association was held at the office of the Standard, Westfield, Thursday. There was a discussion of last season's events and some talk as to the coming year. No decision was reached as to plans for this summer, the matter being left in charge of the trustees. Assemblyman Randolph Perkins and Frank A. Smith were re-elected to their position. The other trustees are Charles H. Denman, H. H. Downs, C. E. Pearsall, H. C. Piker, William Littlefield and A. Dow. George Mallen, captain of last year's team, attended the meeting.

Mr. Denman, who has been the manager for the team heretofore, in speaking of the baseball situation, said no doubt this year's team would be the same as that of last season and an effort would be made to engage the same players. He also said that the report that Manager Daub would bring his team to Westfield was more or less "dope," and that there was very little possibility of it. He freely expressed the opinion that such a policy would not pay and he was against the importation of a whole team into a town to furnish baseball.

ELKS GET THEIR LICENSE.

BACK PAY FOR THE VETERANS OF '98

THOSE SOLDIERS WHO ARE ENTITLED ARE TO RECEIVE IT.

Quartermaster-General C. Edward Murray has announced that only those members of the First, Second and Third National Guard Regiments who were mustered into the United States service on or before May 12, 1898, will receive back pay for services at Camp Voorhees, Sea Girt, from the date of rendezvous at the camp until mustered into the United States army for the war with Spain. This announcement comes in answer to a letter of inquiry from Captain Robert L. Patterson, who wrote for information in behalf of the members of the Third Regiment, New Jersey Volunteer Infantry.

The letter from the paymaster-general is as follows:

"Trenton, N. J., Feb. 17, 1906.

"Respectfully returned to Capt. Patterson, only members of the National Guard (Third Regiment,) who went to Sea Girt, May 2, 1898, and were mustered into United States service on or before May 12, 1898, are entitled to this pay.

"Recruits mustered after May 12, 1898, are not entitled to this pay.

"By order of Paymaster-General,

"SAMUEL S. ARMSTRONG,

"Major and Paymaster."

Quartermaster-General C. Edward Murray, who is also paymaster-general, was ready last week to pay to the First, Second and Third Regiments, National Guard Volunteers, the amounts due them for State pay for service at Camp Voorhees, Sea Girt, from the date of rendezvous at camp until mustered into the United States Army for the war with Spain in 1898. The circular issued by General Murray was printed in full. There being some doubt in the minds of the members of the Third Regiment, New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, as to the date from which payment would be expected, Captain Patterson wrote to General Murray asking for information.

WEAK SPOTS IN AVIS TAX BILL

AN EFFECTIVE COUNTY BOARD MUST BE WELL PAID.

Those in favor of a more effective method of supervising the work of the local boards of assessors throughout the country than the one now in operation, under which the State Board of Equalization of Taxation is, for the taxpayer, the court of last resort, are looking hopefully for the passage this week of the Avis bill, the principal points of which have been published in The Press and which calls for the appointment of county boards of assessors by the governor. The bill has been the subject of wide discussion during the past week and out of it all comes the pretty generally accepted idea that the business, and in order to secure the services of such men larger salaries than those provided for in Senate bill No. 3 must be offered.

On Wednesday night the Board of Trade will hold a special meeting, at which the provisions of this bill will, with other bills affecting this city, receive special consideration. The board is in favor of some such legislation as the Avis bill provides, and if the necessary amendments are made before the Board's meeting on Wednesday night, it is likely that resolutions endorsing it will be passed. From opinions expressed on the subject of the salaries it is thought that when finally presented the salary for the members of boards in counties of the first class, will be $2,000; counties of the second class, $1,500; cities of the third class, $1,200, and probably $1,000 for cities of the fourth class. In the last two classes the figures may not be raised, as the work is not to be compared with that expected from boards in cities of the first and second classes.

The salaries provided by the Avis bill are: For counties of the first class, $1,500; second class, $1,200; third class, $1,000; fourth class, $800.

One source of trouble for the local Board of Assessors heretofore has been the unwillingness of property owners when seeking a reduction of their assessment to name the property of a neighbor whose assessment has caused their dissatisfaction. Because of this and the great difference in assessments on property, in many instances in the same neighborhood, it is held by those who have reason to know that a county board will have to reassess every piece of property in the city if it would start its work on a correct basis and save trouble and additional expense.

Another amendment that is considered absolutely necessary is one providing for clerk hire by the different boards. In this city it is thought that two clerks, one of whom would be a stenographer, could do all the work and at the same time make it possible to keep the office of the board open all day and the tax lists always at the disposal of property owners who may wish to make comparisons.

KING'S DAUGHTERS FETE

"The Grim Truth," a Clever Play By Miss Louise Saunders Scores a Success.

A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR

Moving Pictures and Sale of Articles Attract Large Crowd—Proceeds for City Nurse.

A "colonial fete," held at the Casino, Thursday afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Cup Bearers' Circle, King's Daughters, was a great success. Liberal patronage was accorded, there being a gratifying sale of useful and fancy articles, candies, flowers, lemonade and ice cream. The spirit of the day was carried out, the members of the circle wearing the colonial costume. The auditorium was decorated in patriotic colors, a picture of George Washington occupying a prominent place over the stage. The arrangement of beautiful flowers, including potted plants and roses, was very attractive.

The feature of the afternoon and evening was the presentation of a clever one-act play, "The Grim Truth," written by Miss Louise Saunders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Saunders. The play is filled with bright lines, the comedy being excellent. Miss Saunders, who took the part of "Pearl," a colored servant, gave a fine interpretation. She displayed exceptionally good. The other parts were taken by Miss Hope Ivins, Miss Marion Hall and Miss Helen Stevens. Miss Ivins was the landlady of the house where Miss Hall and Miss Stevens, medical students, occupied a room. Money was missed from their pursed and "Pearl" was suspected and later confessed when confronted with a skeleton which she thought was "abraham." The young women presenting the play were given hearty applause and at the close received gifts of flowers.

Another feature of the afternoon was moving pictures, which were very good and delighted all, especially the little folks who were out in large numbers. In the evening in addition to the play, Miss Hyatt gave several violin solos.

Mrs. Harry L. Hall, as president of the circle, was in charge of the affair, assisted by Mrs. Frederick W. Butler. The members of the circle presided at the various tables as follows:

Japanese—Miss Alice Titus, Miss Lucy Maddock, Miss May Parker, Miss Bessie Flander, Miss Constance Wilcox. Fancy table—Miss Susan Wharton, Miss Marion Hall, Miss Helen Timpson. Flowers—Miss Louise Saunders and Miss Helen Stevens. Useful table—Miss Mollie Perkins, Miss Dorothy Averill, Miss Marion Brown. Candy—Miss Endora Sullivant, Miss Anna Garrigues, Miss Carolyn Martin, Miss Catherine Titus. Candy—Miss Florence Stewart, Miss Hope Ivins, Miss Charlotte Finch, Miss Ethel Moe. Lemonade —Miss Catherine McCutcheon and Miss Verna Mutchler. Harry L. Hall and Frederick W. Butler took charge of the door and sealed looked after the receipts.

A Japanese artist attracted considerable attention. He was very clever with the brush and paint and had no trouble selling the pictures as fast as he made them.

Surprise Birthday Party.

Marcus Clawson Waldron celebrated the eleventh anniversary of his birthday on Wednesday afternoon by one of the event his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Waldron, of Codington avenue, gave him a surprise party in the afternoon, inviting a large number of his young friends. All kinds of games and plays were supported. Following this pleasant time, after which refreshments were served, The young man received a number of gifts from his friends.

Patriotic Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry K. Lister, of Grove street, entertained a number of friends at a Washington's Birthday reception Wednesday night. The decorations were all in red, white and blue, and the favors of the supper table were tiny hatchets. The centerpiece was a miniature cherry tree bearing a large cluster of traditions.

Mrs. Mall Elected Treasurer.

Mrs. Pierre Mall, of New York, whose summer home is on East Front street, was elected treasurer of the Washington Square Auxiliary of Stony Wold Sanatorium, at the annual meeting this week in New York.

Montclair Cancelled.

The game scheduled between the Plainfield and Montclair High School basketball teams on Saturday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. was cancelled by Montclair almost at the last minute.

Enamel Fires Woman's Clothing.

A patent enamel which Mrs. John Huyler, of West Front street, was using on her kitchen stove Wednesday, exploded with a sheet of flame that set her dress on fire. She was enveloped in an instant, but retaining her presence of mind smothered the flames by wrapping a rug about her. She was severely burned before they were fully extinguished, and Dr. Murray had to be called to give treatment.

A GOOD CITIZEN GONE

Paul Taylor Brown Succumbs to Bright's Disease in the Bahamas.

CHARITY CONTRIBUTOR

Identified With Muhlenberg Hospital, Country Club and Riding and Driving Club—Funeral Announcement Later.

Paul Taylor Brown, of Belvidere avenue, a well known citizen here for several years, died February 20 at Nassau, Bahamas, from Bright's disease. Last year Mr. Brown made a trip to Nassau, remaining a short time. His health became such that his physician advised him to return to Nassau, which he did about Christmas time. The change was not as beneficial as anticipated, and it was planned to bring him home a few week ago. In the meantime Mrs. Brown went to Nassau, and it was learned that he could not be removed. A year ago he underwent a serious operation, which gave him only temporary relief.

Mr. Brown was the only son of John W. and the late Lydia Taylor Brown, of New York, and prior to coming to this city resided in New York, where he was married to Miss Walbridge, a member of a very prominent New York family. He was president of the Paul Taylor Brown Company, 76 Hudson street, New York, dealers in dried fruits and apples. The company owned a large plantation and factories in Porto Rico, and its business was a very extensive one, goods being snipped to all parts of the world.

Mr. Brown was prominently identified with religious and charitable enterprises here and a large contributor to both. He was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, where he was very active in the various departments of work. Recently he was elected secretary and treasurer of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club and was made a member of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital. He was also a member of the Plainfield Country Club.

Surviving Mr. Brown is a wife and two daughters. Mrs. Brown and the youngest daughter are at Nassau and the other daughter is in this city. While no particulars have been received, it is believed that the remains will be brought to Plainfield.

TWO ALLEGED COAL THIEVES COMMITTED.

John Newberger and Winfield Smalley Must Answer to Grand Jury.

Winfield Smalley and John Newberger, two of the five men accused of stealing coal in large quantities from Lehigh Valley trains at New Market, were held by the Grand Jury by Justice Von Minden in Dunellen Wednesday, under $200 bonds. William Pernell, charged under the same complaint, was discharged for lack of evidence. Melvin Smalley will be heard next week, and Moody Pernell, the fifth man, has been declared a fugitive from justice. The New Market constable has been looking in vain for Moody Pernell ever since the warrants were sworn out a week ago.

Jeremiah Hedley, a railroad detective, gave the evidence that resulted in the committal of Smalley and Newberger. He identified them as two of five men he had seen shoveling coal from a train on January 28, after the coaler had been stopped by false signals. Special Officer Hedley noticed a wagon loaded with coal coming from the track.

Nelson Y. Dungan prosecuted the men for the railroad. Frederick Pope, of Somerville, and Robert Clark, of Newark, were counsel for Pernell, Smalley and Newberger.

200 at F. O. E. BALL.

Plainfield Aerie's First Annual Affair Proves a Big Success.

Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., held its first annual ball in Saengerbund Hall Wednesday night, entertaining 150 couples from this city and other places. The hall was handsomely decorated and the members worked hard to make the affair a success. Past Worthy President and Mrs. Rudolph Kampf led the grand march, followed by William Waglow and Miss Theresa Fay. Music was furnished by O'Reilly's full orchestra.

The committee of arrangements consisted of Rudolph Kampf, chairman; William Waglow, floor manager; Thomas Kane, secretary, and Hugh Reilly, treasurer.

N. P. H. S. Five Defeated.

The X-Scholastic basketball team defeated the North Plainfield High School quintet by a narrow margin and a hard tussle, at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The score was 16 to 12. North Plainfield was weak in team work. The lineup: North Plainfield High School—Peacock, A. Van Arsdale, forwards; Webster, centre; M. Van Arsdale, Burtis, guards. X-Scholastic—Hanron, Coddingsworth, forwards; Jacoi, centre; Meuck, Lolseaux, guards.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Humes, formerly of this city, but now of White Plains, are parents of a son born to them a few days ago.

LITERARY NOTES.

Two articles of kindred interest in the March Century are Sylvester Baxter's plea for "Art in the Street" and Charles de Kay's description of "The New York Custom-house." In the evolution of this great building architects and sculptors are working to secure the maximum of utility and beauty. The numerous pictures seem to prove that civic art has made a long step ahead—the civic art having for its chief end to make utility the vehicle of beauty, which Mr. Baxter urges in his article on "Art in the Street." Pictures of Jules Guerin and Malcolm Fraser of results already accomplished add to the live interest of Mr. Baxter's treatment of the subject. Recent death touches with pathetic interest two features of the March Century, the first of William Sharp's "Route-notes in Sicily," and Joseph Buckin Bishop's memories of his friendship with John Hay. In the latter Mr. Bishop reveals sympathetically something of the qualities that made John Hay so loved and honored by all whose lives touched his. Some of the last work William Sharp did was this record of the island where he lately passed away. The first of the two papers, entitled "The Garden of the Sun," is illustrated with pictures by Jay Hambridge, one in tint. An enlightening sketch is a brief contribution on "The Jews in Roumania," by Carmen Sylva, as she is known in letters, while in her proper person she is Roumania's charming queen.

The American Magazine, which for thirty years was Leslie's Monthly, has two especially interesting articles in the March number. One, "The Eden Makers," by Julian Heilburn, tells of the remarkable things the United States Reclamation Service is doing; how it is making fit for cultivation a desert area of 1,909,000 acres. Under the caption "The Case of Mabel Parker," Arthur Train, of the New York District Attorney's office, tells the story of a slip of a girl who stole thousands of dollars through free-hand forgeries, of her audacious defense in court, and how her husband swore that he was the guilty person in a vain attempt to save her. From the photographic side this number is well up to the standard which the American Magazine has been setting. There is a series of portraits of birds taken in their natural haunts.

There is a good deal in the March McClure's that you don't want to miss. Miss Ida M. Tarbell's "Commercial Machiavellianism" brings home the lax morals that have built up great corporations and business houses, showing how the axioms of Machiavelli's "Prince," although pretty strong even for the days of the Medici, form the catechism of the modern captain of industry. Ray Stannard Baker continues his veil-lifting series, "The Railroads on Trial," depoting the current number to the formation of public opinion by the law-breaking railroads and shippers; this he does in neat and clever and complicated a piece of underhanded machinery as ever you heard of. Carl Schurz's "Reminiscences of a Long Life" furnishes by far the most exciting chapter we have yet had, "The Escape from Rastatt," which recounts the story of how Schurz with two companions, on the surrender of the fortress to the Prussians, hid in a barn where the enemy's cavalry were bivouaced, and finally escaped through a deserted sewer.

The Popular Science Monthly for March contains the following articles: "The Physiography of the Adirondacks," by Professor James Furman Kemp; "The Black Locust Tree, and Its Despoliation," by Dr. Charles A. Weigle; "A Contribution to the Theory of Science," by Professor Wilhelm Ostwald; "The Jewsharp," by the late Dr. H. Carrington Bolton; "Geological History of Cockroaches," by Dr. S. E. H. Sallards; "How Rooting Aquatic Plants Influence the Nutrition of the Food Fishes of Our Great Lakes," by Professor Raymond Pond; "Urban and Rural Life," by Frank T. Carlton; "Newspaper Football," by Professor Edwin G. Dexter; "Submarine Navigation," by Sir William H. White; "Trial and Error as a Factor in Evolution," by Professor W. B. Pillsbury; The Rewards of Scientific Research; The Work of the Carnegie Institution; Professor Adolf von Baeyer.

THE "GOLD PLANT."

Grows on Rocky Wastes of Yucatan Where No Other Vegetation Will Exist.

On the sandy and rocky wastes of Yucatan, where nothing else in the vegetation line will grow, the henequin plant, or Mexican sisal, as it is commonly known, finds congenial soil, and grows its great leaves, from which is produced a fiber used in the making of rope and twine. The first cousin to the century plant, thriving on soil which could not be used for any other purpose, has been dubbed the "gold plant" by the native planters, because it is one of the chief sources of wealth of the peninsula. It grows luxuriantly under the most adverse circumstances, and thrives in a marvelous way when given the assistance of modern cultivation. It is a plant that was worshiped as divine by the ignorant natives there many generations ago, because it was able to grow in soil where no other vegetation would thrive and often was found solidly established and thriving on a pile of stones or gravel. To the ignorant mind of the original native, the development of the towering plant from a pile of stone was proof positive of its divine origin, and even now there are many henequin worshipers there.

MEXICAN SISAL.
Plant Which Grows Where No Other Vegetation Will.

The plant is a cousin to the aloe or century plant. It grows a large number of thick, broad and heavy leaves which are a mass of stout fibers laid parallel, like the fibers in a stalk of celery, only much closer, much longer and stronger. The profit from the plant is made by extracting these fibers, drying them and manufacturing them into twine, this production taking the place of manila hemp in the manufacture of everything in the twine class, from the ordinary twine used on the American harvesters to the stout hawser on board the harbor tugs and the ocean liners. No other plant yet found produces such large quantities of the fiber.

The cultivation of the plant is not a new industry, the bales of the fiber being imported to this country as far back as 1860. In that year the importation amounted to 1,983 bales. The demand for twine and cordage and rope since that time has given a great stimulus to the importation and the records of the revenue office show that for the year 1903 this country imported 569,212 bales.

STATE'S FIRST PUBLIC BELL

Historic Bell, Presented to Town of Vandalia, Ill., Is Still Preserved.

Vandalia, Ill.—There is in this historic old town, the property of the Presbyterian church, the first bell to call together a Protestant congregation in Illinois.

It was hung in the first church edifice built in Vandalia, known as "the House of Divine Worship," which was erected by munificence of the state in the twenties. The bell bears the following inscription: "Illinois Riggs, to the Presbyterian congregation of Vandalia, 1830."

HISTORIC OLD BELL.
(It Called Together First Illinois Protestant Congregations.)

The Illinois Monthly Magazine, conducted by James Hall, and published in Vandalia, under date of December, 1830, has this to say of the bell:

"During the last month the town of Vandalia received a valuable acquisition in the donation of a fine-toned bell for the cupola of the meeting-house. The bell was presented to the Presbyterian congregation of Vandalia, by Romulus Riggs, a merchant of Philadelphia, in the name of his daughter, Miss Illinois Riggs. This bell was hung November 5, 1830, and announced its own arrival in joyous tone. This event is interesting inasmuch as it is the first public bell introduced into the state by America's inhabitants. The French had one or more bells in their villages on the Mississippi, but the public buildings erected by the American settlers have been entirely destitute of this useful appendage."

For several years the bell has been used by the Fall Methodist church of this city, but recently has been taken down and mounted on a frame and placed in a gallery of the Presbyterian church.

Topics and Readings for the Week Beginning March 4.

March 4—"A Life of Unselfish Ministration"—Matt. xx, 27, 28; II Cor. viii, 9; Rom. xiv, 7, 8; I Cor. x, 24; Gal. vi, 2; John iv, 34.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

"And this commandment have we from Him, that he who loveth God love his brother also."

In all ways the highest and purest life this earth has seen lived was that of Jesus of Nazareth. It was altogether admirable and blameless and such that if every man would make his like it would soon transform this world and make it an earthly kingdom of God.

The clew to that life was unselfish devotion and ministration to others. His own interests were not neglected in this care for others. His own life grew richer in experience and enjoyment of the spiritual qualities of existence the more He gave His time and effort to assisting others. Nor was it of such a kind that other men cannot in great measure model theirs by it. In essential principle it was based, as all other lives should be, on supreme love of God and sincere regard for the well being of one's fellow men.

When we come to believe that God was Creator of all men and is the preserver and governor of the world, of things and of men it becomes utterly inconceivable how we can worship Him without having real interest in the welfare of our fellows. To love God and not love men is utterly impossible and a spiritual absurdity.

Nor can love to God and men live where it is not exercised semiocasionally. Life, to continue, must be ever active in its manifestations or it ceases to be. No inner power can abide unless it has constant outward expression in deeds.

Each grows by the use of the other. Inner spirit life becomes ever stronger and fuller the more it is expressed in outward deed of good and word of kindness, and the deeper becomes the devotion of soul in the secret heart depths the more it overflows into speech and act.

He who comes to have the God life abiding in him feels a yearning of soul to bring others to the same condition of mind and heart. He cannot rest in his own possession of rich experiences. He has found treasure with which he is dissatisfied until he has shared with another and still others. His circle of sympathy is ever widening and his scope of desire deepening to take in all possible in all ways ministerial.

This is the secret of the Christian life. It is a burning desire to give and to bless. It is in its essence pure love. It delights to bear burdens of others and cannot help weeping with the afflicted, because their woe is his own sorrow and he feels the hurt in himself. The happiness of others makes him sing, for he feels it all as if it was his own case. He gives because the need of the other man is felt as keenly as if it was himself. There is no forcing of spirit in all this. It is as natural as breathing and it is not of self.

When all other impulses fail and interest in things of the world would die and life itself would not seem worth the exertion of breathing, this is the impulse that rescues life from utter failure and worthlessness. Forget self and get interest in one else for awhile and see what a different world this will become. Folks will not seem half so mean nor the trials of your own life nearly so heavy. Your own lot will be almost forgotten and the sting of your privations unthought of in the absorbing interest in another's relief. Living comes to mean greater and deeper things. Wider prospects open, and new power comes to one never known to be possessed. The earnestness of conscience opens with greater emphasis, and one lives more intensely and more rapidly. Hours are not long enough for the work. No ennui depresses the soul, but real burdens press on the shoulders, and strength is sought from the great burden bearer and welcomed to be all wise One until we grow wise. Feeding the hungry, we are fed; ministering to others, we receive service full and rich.

1 Prayer.

My heart needs Thee, O Lord; my heart needs Thee! No part of my being needs Thee like my heart. All else within me can be filled by Thy gifts. My hunger can be satisfied by daily bread; my thirst can be allayed by earthly waters; my cold can be removed by household fires; my weariness can be relieved by outward rest, but no outward thing can make my heart pure. This world has not provided for my heart. It has provided for my eye; it has provided for my ear; it has provided for my taste; it has provided for my sense of beauty, but it has not provided for my heart. Provide for my heart, O Lord! Be Thou the strength of my heart. Be Thou its fortress in temptation, its shield in remorse, its covert in the storm, its stay in the night, its voice in the solitude. Guide it in its gloom; help it in its heat; direct it in its doubt; calm it in its conflict; fan it in its faintness; prompt it in its perplexity; lead it through its labyrinths; raise it from its ruins. Rule and rule this heart of mine. Keep it under the shadow of Thine own wings.—Rev. George Matheson, D. D., in Christian Endeavor World.

Minor Moralities.

There are no minor moralities. Every real question is a question of right or wrong. And where principle is involved the great issue of life appears. For right and wrong are not questions of size, but of moral quality. A little lie is wrong, just as truly as a great lie. Things are great or small apart from moral principle, according to their consequences, but they are right or wrong according to their nature.—Sunday School Times.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic for the Week Beginning March 4.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic—What is true happiness? The worldly idea; the Christian idea.—Luke vi, 20-26; I John ii, 12-17; II Cor. vi, 10; Phil. iv, 4-8 (Consecration meeting.)

Horace Bushnell has defined happiness as "that which happens or comes to one by chance—that is, by an outward befalling or favorable condition. Some good is conceived, out of the soul, which comes to it as a happy visitation. Hence in this sense it is a pleasant excitement." And happiness in some form or another is the desire and ambition of every human life. The sentiment of hope will be universally corroborated by his exclamation, "O happiness, our being's end and aim." But men seek it in many things in various ways. One who desires to gain riches remains quietly at home and through business methods attempts to realize his ambitious, while another, possessing the same desire, hurries to a distant land for that, if possible, he may accumulate wealth there. Millions want to gain an entrance into heaven, yet how many different ways they appear to be traveling to reach the same destination! So it is with happiness. All men want it, but they have vastly different conceptions of what it is and travel on many different roads to reach it. It is little wonder therefore that men have always considered the questions as to the nature of true happiness and the best way to attain to it. And even the Christian Endeavorers these questions are worthy of serious and prayerful consideration.

The topic suggests the consideration of two ideals of happiness—the world's ideal and the Christian's ideal, between which there has been a conflict through all the Christian centuries. It may be said that the world has two ideals of happiness—the physical and the mental, pleasurable physical excitement and pleasurable mental excitement the lowest ideal of happiness is without question the physical, the gratification of the physical senses. Yet it must be confessed that to many this is the idea of happiness. To them it is what money yields or will buy—dress, equipage, fashion, delights of the table or the gratification of the baser human passions. The second idea of the world is mental. It is the possession of mental equipment or of the desires of the heart that are gratified by the cultivated mind and the human impulse for men), admiration, glory, honor, * * * rank, political standing, victory, power." The Christian's ideal of happiness is spiritual rather than physical or mental. It consists in contentment of soul, together with the right control of physical appetites and passions and the proper direction of the mind in its relation to life, to God and to the life to come, undoubtedly the truest and divinest conception of happiness. It is joy in the Lord instead of outside of Him. It is pleasure in what we are rather than in what we have, whether it be rank, wealth or achieved success. It is the subordination of body and mind to the soul. It is the harmony of the whole. It is true and lasting happiness be found.

The superiority of Christian happiness over worldly happiness must be conceded, no matter which our personal ideal may be. Christian happiness grows and expands and becomes richer while worldly happiness declines as we advance in years. Soul joy does not decrease the soul's possibilities for joy, but increases them, while all know that with worldly pleasures the opposite is true. Body and mind become satiated with excessive indulgence and lose their powers of producing the effects desired. The possibilities of spiritual enjoyment, on the other hand, increase with exercise. "I never knew what it was to be happy until I became a Christian," declared one who had sought happiness in the world. Moreover, Christian joys are eternal, while worldly pleasures are but temporal. Passion, wealth, rank, all power die when we die, but "godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come."

BIBLE READINGS.

How to Warm Up.

The English Christian Endeavor Times gives the following excellent rules for starting a fire in a cold Christian Endeavor society:

First.—Let the social committee get all the sticks together—i. e., have the seats upside down at the back of the meeting room, allowing those who come in at the front as the members come in.

Second.—Let the prayer meeting committee bring a box of matches—i. e., provide opportunities for every one to take part; and let them go down on their knees to kindle the fire.

Third.—Let the sunshine committee use the poker judiciously. "Provoke unto love and good works."

Fourth.—Let the lookout committee blow the bellows. Look up and seek to infuse a divine glow into lukewarm members.

Fifth.—Let the evangelistic committee take "a live coal from off the altar." Burning lips fire Endeavorers to "pluck brands from the burning."

Above all, let every member stir up the gift within him to a flame; so shall others be set on fire, and it will be seen how great a matter a little fire kindleth.

A Strenuous Officer.

Tell Endeavorers everywhere that Treasurer William Shaw is a strenuous worker. He spent two weeks in New York city, traveled 2,500 miles, made twenty-five addresses in eighteen cities and sat at the town table for turkey on Thanksgiving day as optimistically happy as though no such record breaking achievement stood to his credit.—Empire State Notes.

DRYNESS OF ATMOSPHERE.

Health Endangered by Lack of Moisture in the Air of Many Houses.

Indoor humidity has again been discussed by a member of the medical profession, who takes the stand also that the excessively dry air of houses during the heated season is injurious to the human organization, because the dry air in passing over the membranes of the respiratory passages and the skin calls for an enormous output of the fluid elements of these tissues, says the Engineering Record.

This physician, Dr. Henry Mitchell Smith of Brooklyn, N. Y., holds that this leads to glandular overactivity and its consequent evils, but he does not offer the specific proofs which, it has been asserted, are lacking to show that direct deleterious effects are thus produced. In his contribution, which was made to the Brooklyn Medical society, he mentions, however, some tests he had conducted with a radiator having an experimental moistening apparatus attached, and he obtained results which concur with general beliefs as to the relation of the humidity and temperature.

He found that with a relative humidity never below 50 per cent, nor above 70 per cent, 70 degrees Fahr. was uncomfortably hot, 68 degrees was warm and 65 degrees comfortable. It was determined by repeated experiments that a temperature of 65 to 68 degrees and a relative humidity of 60 per cent. produced the most comfortable conditions, which were in marked contrast to a temperature of 73 degrees, with a relative humidity of 30 per cent. The former felt warm and balmy, he said, and the latter, notwithstanding the higher temperature, chilly and dry and apt to leave the impression of draftiness. He did not describe the moistening apparatus, but said that the mechanism was such that the control of the temperature and of the moisture was independent.

HE STOPPED THE PAPER.

That Is His Copy of It, But the Metropolitan Lady Continued Publication.

An acquaintance met Horace Greeley one day, and said: "Mr. Greeley, I've stopped your paper."

"Have you?" said the editor. "Well, that's too bad." And he went his way.

The next morning Mr. Greeley met his subscriber again, and said: "I thought you had stopped the Tribune."

"So I did."

"Then there must be some mistake," said Mr. Greeley, "for I just came from the office and the presses were running, the clerks were as busy as ever, the compositors were hard at work, and the business was going on the same as yesterday and the day before."

"Oh," ejaculated the subscribed, "I didn't mean that I had stopped the paper; I stopped only my copy of it, because I like to read the Tribune."

"Pshaw!" retorted Mr. Greeley. "It wasn't worth taking up my time to tell me such a trifle as that. My dear sir, if you expect to control the utterances of the Tribune by the purchase of one copy a day, or if you think to dictate to any newspaper or magazine in reading that will never express convictions at right angles with your own, you are doomed to disappointment."

AS TOLD BY THE SAILOR.

Changes in Ways of Steamship Passengers in the Last Few Years.

"Throughout the last ten years," said one of the oldest steamship passenger agents the other day, "there have been many changes, but one that seems to have been wholly overlooked.

"Now you may observe," continued this gray beard, as he produced a bundle of old passenger lists of the early nineties and spread them out before him, "that in all of these there is only here and there a sprinkling of folks who go and come with maids or valets as attendants and on the Mauretania and Lusitania trips two months ten years ago, relates the New York Herald.

Another thing: these old-time lists show that Americans when they went abroad most always inscribed their names as John Smith, William Jones and so on. Now you will find a great majority of the outgoers, and for that matter the homecomers, simply Mr. Smith or Mr. Jones."

All of which seems to prove something though just what is not quite clear.

Oyster Imbedded in False Teeth.

The directors of the Smithsonian institution received a novel addition to their collection of curios the other day. It was presented by the foreman of one of the Potomac river oyster boats. As one of the big scoops unloaded its quota of oysters from the deck of the boat the foreman's eye caught something glistening white in the darkbrown mass. He leaned over curiously and poked it with a stick, and out rolled a set of false teeth. Imbedded between the opened jaws was a young oyster. The bivalve in its odd house was sent to the Smithsonian institution, where the teeth were cleaned and the whole thing mounted on a little stand. One of the curators put this tag one it: "Ostrich Virginica, growing on artificial teeth. Dredged off Point Lookout, Maryland."

Proud Moment.

Pat—Oi won't say it wor a proud moment when Oi heard th' sintince, Oi sorry!

"What's th' reason av that?"

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, MARCH 1, 1906.

"Poor Bateman."

Evidently young Mr. Mizner tried to emulate Count Boni.

Daniel, Hibbard, Mellick And Tyler —more strength to them!

What did Lawyer Wilson mean by telling the court that Goff had withdrawn his liquor license application?

In the death of Paul Taylor Brown, Plainfield has lost one of its best citizens. His purse was always open to the many charitable institutions and enterprises for which this city is noted, and his time and advice were always at the disposal of those to whom he could be of benefit.

The new High School formally dedicated yesterday is a building of which any city many times the size of Plainfield might well be proud. In architectural beauty and general arrangement it is probably unsurpassed anywhere in the State, and certainly there is nothing to compare with it in this section.

When Mayor Buckle declared that he would make no appointments in the police department without the advice of Chief Sicly he made a very good resolution, and one we suppose he will not confine to that branch of the municipal government. But has he consulted Chief Doane as to who should be appointed second assistant chief of the fire department?

Money will buy for a man more consideration in England than in any other place on earth, says the New Brunswick Times, in discussing the case of William Waldorf Astor. Well, if the "Almighty Dollar" can buy any more over there than it does here, we, A. ought to come pretty near run the country.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert spoke right to the point when he declared before an assemblage in New York the other day: "The worst feature of our modern social and business life today is that we are too easily reconciled to exhibitions of moral turpitude in high places." That was but one of many platitudes to be found in the speech as reproduced in an another column of this issue.

In the light of recent events, how could Councilmen F. Randolph, Buxton, Gloak and Tolles consistently vote to grant a hotel permit to John J. Goff? That man has been fined twice in the last few months, once for selling liquor without a license and once for running a disorderly house, and those four councilmen went on record as considering him a fit individual to conduct a hotel.

"So far as I am concerned I do not favor renewing the Eastern Bottling Company's license. Unless some very good argument is presented why I should change my mind, I shall vote *to refuse the Eastern Bottling Com*pany's permit."—Councilman Francis W. Montgomery, Friday, Feb. 9.

Two weeks later Councilman Francis W. Montgomery, as chairman of the license committee, recommends that the concern's license be renewed.

"I've changed my mind; he's changed his mind."

Atlantic Highland's Board of Trade is no "half dead and alive" combination, but a progressive body bent on carrying out the real objects of such an organization. At least that is the construction to be taken from the way it is going about its work. One of the best ideas that has been adopted by the board is a plan to advertise the town for all it is worth. Space is to be taken in all the New York papers, and other sensible methods are to be used in making Atlantic Highlands known as a particularly desirable place of residence.

IF YOU'RE LISTED
YOU WON'T GET COAL

DEALERS ASSOCIATION DECIDES ON SCHEME TO GET RID OF "BEATS."

The Coal Merchants' Credit Association, which is composed of all dealers in that line, has decided to complete a list of all delinquent debtors to be distributed among its members. Unless the accounts outstanding are settled within a few days the names will appear on the list and the dealers say they will "act accordingly."

Efforts were made some time ago to get up such a list, but some opposition was made to this on the part of a few dealers. They claimed that many of their good customers would have to be listed. The rule of the organization now is that a consumer owing a bill to more than one dealer must settle before securing coal from anyone else.

AMUSEMENTS.

Sensational, extraordinary and artistic circus acts are being presented for the first time in this country at the New York Hippodrome in conjunction with "A Society Circus," the most wonderful production ever witnessed on any stage. These acts include the Bonhair-Gregory troupe, the champion acrobats of the world; Ralph Johnstone, in his thrilling bicycle specialties; Woodward's trained seals; Mlle. Loris, equestrienne; Wolff's leaping Dalmatians, and many others, each an arenic wonder. The dazzling ballet of the flowers and the beautiful Court of the Gold Fountains, continue to be the main features of the greatest programme ever offered to amusement seekers. Matinees are given daily.

Harrison Grey Fiske, manager of the Manhattan, is producing Rupert Hughes' latest play, "The Triangle," according to arrangements with Walter N. Lawrence, manager of that play. It is Mr. Fiske's policy to vary the attractions at the Manhattan, and these arrangements, long ago made, are in pursuit of that purpose. "The Triangle" is a comedy of today, dealing with a subject of social interest local to New York, and Mr. Lawrence has engaged an exceptionally able company to make this play first known in the metropolis. In the organization will be Charlotte Walker, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Byron Douglas, William Bramwell, Colin Campbell, Walter Thomas, May Isabel Fisk, Lillian Albertson, Consuelo Bailey and others engaged with particular reference to the special abilities called for in the cast. But one matinee a week is given at the Manhattan, on Saturday; and those who have seen it before witness "Before and After," this will afford a last opportunity.

Broadway certainly likes young *George M. Cohan—there is no deny*ing it. New York likes his drawl, his phonographic singing, his way of saying "Ladies and gentlemen, I thank you"—there is from the bottom of my heart—I thank you." There is something rather refreshing in seeing a star take his curtain calls without a glance at the audience. The snap and dash which were features of "Little Johnny Jones" are reproduced in "George Washington, Jr." Instead of marching on the stage with measured tread and ex*aggerated "Florodora"* bows at every step, Mr. Cohan's choruses run on, sing his songs with an enthusiasm and a spirit which are contagious, and skip off as if impressed with the facts that life is short and that action as a necessary ingredient of musical comedy amusement. The musical numbers—there are nine of them—are lively, tuneful, and typically Cohanesque. There is no one song which can be classed as quite the equal of "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy," but "The Grand Old Rag" comes near to it, despite the fact that there is an objectionally proprietary air about the comedian as he sings it which suggests that old Betsy Ross had Mr. Cohan in mind when she patched together the first national banner. His other song, "If Washington Came to Life," sung in the midst of a Rhode Island snowstorm, made a distinct hit last evening; it was encored at least eight times, and, being equipped with really good verses, was greeted with the maximum applause.

The biggest comedy hit of the year in New York is Fay Templeton in Quincy M. Cohan's musical play, "Fifty Minutes from Broadway," at the New Amsterdam theatre, where she is now in her fourth week. Miss Templeton is undoubtedly the cleverest comedienne on the American stage. Her versatility was never more strongly tested than in this play, wherein she has serious and emotional as well as broad comedy situations. Her work is particularly pleasing to women. She is a women's comedienne, always refined in all that she does and never resorting to the slightest suggestion of coarseness to make her comic points. Victor Moore, who plays the opposite role, "Kid" Burns, has made a hit second only to that of the star. Mr. Moore, too, belongs to the quiet, unctuous and refined school of comedy, and in him Miss Templeton finds a most able second, in full sympathy with her stage methods. It is a pleasure to witness the situations between these really great artists, who make their points through refreshingly natural methods. As for the piece itself, it far surpasses expectation and any one who sees it cannot leave the theatre disappointed. It is a very effective conglomeration of different schools of theatrical entertainment into a powerful story of human interest, staged with novelty, variety and snap. "55 Minutes from Broadway" is quite the real thing in New York.

A Remodelled Theatre.

The New Brunswick Opera House Company is pushing its plans for having its theatre on Liberty street in that city remodelled. Not only has the date for closing the present season with the Elks' benefit minstrel performance, about the middle of April, been selected, but it has been decided what will be the attraction at the reopening early in September when the theatre remodelled and rebuilt will be practically new. This will be a gala occasion here, with George M. Cohan, the famous comedian, appearing in his great comedy, "Little Johnny Jones."

SCOTCH PLAINS CRUSADE

Tis Said That a Law and Order League is to Be Organized.

SUNDAY VIOLATIONS

Effort to be Made to Put a Stop to Selling Liquor on Sabbath Day —To Get Aid from Elizabeth.

A well known resident of Scotch Plains said Monday that the respectable citizens of that community are about to take concerted action and organize a Law and Order League for the purpose of putting a stop to Sunday liquor selling as well as the other disgraceful results from the practice. He said that the manner a which the law is now openly violated is a blot upon Christianity as well as an eye-sore to all respectable citizens.

In the effort to accomplish this result he hinted that the county au*thorities would be appealed to.* He alleged that vain appeals have been made to members of the Township Committee, who invariably reply, "Get your evidence and take it to Elizabeth."

This same citizen said the township is compelled to pay two police officers for Sunday to preserve order and to protect people from the insulting remarks made by the large number of drunks who infest the community on the Sabbath day. "If there was no liquor sold," he declared, "there would be no need of this item of expense which the taxpayers are obliged to foot, just because the laws are not enforced. These same officers, he said, stand on the corner and know that liquor is being sold. They see men going in sober and come out drunk, yet they do not seem to do anything to enforce the law.

It has been suggested that the proposed organization station men in front of the saloons and secure the names of the persons who frequent them and furnish the list to the Grand Jury. The court's recent attitude on the illegal sale of liquor, he said, was plainly shown in the Goff case last week, and there is no doubt that similar justice would be dealt out to township offenders.

LOVING CUP FOR PRIEST

Catholic Young Men's Diocesan Union Plans to Honor Father Bogan.

RALLY ON MARCH 13

Bishop Invited to Attend Affair at Newark—Father Carroll to Make Presentation Speech.

The Catholic Young Men's Diocesan Union has decided to tender a rally at Institute Hall, Newark, on Tuesday, March 13, to Rev. Bernard M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, of this city.

He was spiritual director of the organization for six years, but because of parish duties found it necessary to decline a renomination. A special committee of the union held a meeting at Institute Hall Saturday night and decided upon the arrangements.

All of the societies connected with the union, numbering more than a score in Newark and other cities, will send representatives. There will be a presentation of a loving cup, the formal address to be made by Rev. Father Carroll, pastor of St. Patrick's church, Jersey City. Bishop O'Connor will be invited to attend. There will also be a musical programme.

Father Bogan was for two terms head of the Catholic Young Men's Association.

A Convenient Time Table.

The Plainfield Trust Company is presenting its patrons with a neat and useful device in the form of a New Jersey Central time table. It specifies the trains between Plainfield and New York both ways, noting the ex*press trains which stop to let off* passengers and which are not scheduled on the regular form issued by the company. The table has been corrected to date and will prove of great convenience to the traveling public.

Suit for Missing Mails.

Dr. George A. Soden, of 82 New street, was put under $1,000 bail in Newark to await the action of the United States Grand Jury, following his arrest by a postoffice inspector on a charge of sending threatening and defamatory postal cards through the mails. He declares that if he is guilty of any offense it was purely technical.

All He Wanted.

"I want to put a personal in the paper to recover a horse and buggy I lost," said the man.

"Ah!" said the clerk, "you mean an ad. for the 'Lost and Found' column."

"No. I want to say: 'If the man who stole my horse and buggy to elope with my wife will return said horse and buggy suitable reward will be paid.'"—Philadelphia Press.

DASHING VICTORY FOR Y.M.C.A. FIVE

REJUVENATED QUINTET TURNS OFF A THRILLING RALLY.

By a great second-half rally, the Y. M. C. A. five wrested victory from the jaws of defeat Saturday night and broke the losing streak that seemed to have bound them to the *bluest finish with which an associa*tion team ever closed a season. They won from the Maxwell House quintet, of Brooklyn, by 24 to 22.

It looked like the old story in the first half. Plainfield played hard, but got up to Maxwell House. For the first few minutes neither team could score, but the Brooklynites hit up their pace and began a smothering assault on the basket. Three goals were shot one after the other, in great style, and Plainfield, forced on the defensive played a poor game all through the half. It was a stubborn defense they put up, but only a defense for all that, and the loyal rooters felt their hearts sink as the half progressed. They sighed resignedly when the half closed with the Maxwell House five leading, 15 to 7.

There was a change in the line-up when the second half opened, Leary and Smith going in. Within three minutes the team followers woke up to the fact that something had happened to the combination. Maxwell House was being rushed by a swift and steady series of plays as the ingenuity of five expert basketball players, working in perfect unity, could devise. The whole Y. M. C. A. team was putting up a remarkably brilliant game. The ball went down into the enemy's territory in series after series of long passes, and time after time the leather shot into the basket as if driven along an invisible runway. Point by point the home team cut down the visitors' lead, caught them, held them and passed them. One point, but it looked as big as a million to the tense and the winners had no scale by which to measure its import.

As a game pure and simple, the contest was the real thing. Both teams gave the spectators a brand of basketball that it only found in the triple X class. In that heart-thumping second half the home five played the best game it has ever evolved. Leary shone like the Milky Way in his shooting, and Scull, Thompson, Smith and Letson turned off some bright starry twinkles of their own.

After the game the Maxwell House contingent had handshakes and other consoling things with the victors.

The line-up and summary:

Plainfield.	Maxwell House.
Thompson	Coakefair
Neal, Smith	Foley
	forwards.
Scull	Bennett
	centre.
Letson	Caro
Uzzinger, Leary	Hayden
	guards.

Goals from field—Thompson, Neal, Scull, 3; Leary, Leary, 5; Coakefair, 5; Foley, 2; Carol, Hayden, 2. Goals from fouls—Thompson, 2; Coakefair, 3. Fouls—Plainfield, 8; Max*well House, 4. Umpire—Hyman.* Referee — Morse. Timers — Percy Phillips and V. B. Miner.

Varying Prices of Gas.

Milwaukee is making a good profit in the sale of gas at 80 cents for the first 10,000 feet per month, 70 cents for the next 10,000 feet, and 60 cents for all in excess of that amount. Cleveland is selling gas at 75 cents and paying back 5 cents per thousand to the city as a special franchise tax. Cincinnati is selling it for fuel for 50 cents. Toronto is selling all her gas for 80 cents. Lowell, Lynn and Boston, Mass., have recently reduced the price to 90 cents, and it is certain that before long 80-cent and 90-cent gas will be as common as $1 gas is now.—(Good Housekeeping.) Gas in Plainfield is $1.25 for 1,000 feet.

Montclair Elks' Fair.

The closing day of the Montclair Elks' fair Saturday was a record breaker, both for attendance and for the amount of money taken in. Fully two thousand persons visited the hall, where the bazaar has been in progress for the last week, and over $700 was taken in. The proceeds for the week will amount to over $5,000.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. J. Stone, of Brooklyn, announces the engagement of her youngest daughter, Miss Jane Earle Stone, to Lucius Lovell Gilbert, of Crescent avenue.

PARK COMEDY CLUB GIVES CLEVER PLAYLET

"MY LORD IN LIVERY" PLEASES A LARGE AUDIENCE.

One of the most successful amateur theatrical pernormances at the Park Club was given Saturday night by the Park Comedy Club, when S. Theyre Smith's clever comedy, "My Lord in Livery," was presented. The large audience was pleased with the finished production and each member of the cast was well received and given hearty applause. While each one acted well, special praise is due Miss Margaret McCutchen, who took the part of "Sybil Amberley," daughter of "Sir Charles Amberley;" Charles H. Lyman, as "Spiggott," the butler, and Miss Sarah Mae Howell, as "Rose."

Miss Howell, in giving a representation of a woman in hysterics, won great applause for her fine work, while C. E. Murray, as "Lord Thirlmere," carried out his part perfectly. Mrs. C. E. Murray as "Laura," who with "Rose," was a visitor at the home of "Sybil Amberley," was equally good with the rest of the cast. The plot of the one-act play is filled with amusing situations and misunderstandings and the whole performance showed great care in preparation. H. O. White, as manager for the club, coached the members of the cast, and to him is due much credit for the excellent results. A minuet dance by Miss McCutcheon and C. E. Murray was deserving of special mention. The costumes, especially those of the women, were very attractive and favorably commented upon. This was the cast:

"Lord Thirlmere," C. E. Murray; "Spiggott," a butler, Charles H. Lyman; "Hopkins," a footman, Harry McGee; "Robert," a page, Roy McCutchen; "Sybil Amberley," daughter of "Sir Charles Amberley," Miss Margaret McCutchen; "Laura" and *"Rose," her friends, Mrs. C. E. Mur*ray and Miss Sarah Mae Howell.

The club is now planning to give another play at the Park Club on April 19, and as soon as the selection is made it will be announced. This will probably take the place of the Easter dance. Following the play Saturday night a majority of those present remained for the dance which was continued until nearly 12 o'clock.

Wedding Anniversary.

A celebration of the first anniversary of their marriage by Mr. and Mrs. Ogden E. Meeker, of New Market, was a charming affair. It was *largely attended, a number of Plain*fielders being among those present. The house was prettily decorated. The bridal couple received the guests under a flowered arch in the parlor. Green and white, red and white, and red and green were the color schemes used in decorating the rooms. A feature of the affair was a homily by Rev. C. E. Herring, of this city, pastor of Mrs. Meeker, to the celebrants. Refreshments were served.

INCUBATOR RESULTS.

Many incubator manufacturers guarantee their machines to be as represented, etc. We do all this and also guarantee results. So many inferior machines have been purchased by enthusiastic, earnest people, who desire to hatch chickens by the artificial method, that thousands and thousands of "would be" successful poultrymen fail and lose their courage on account of the inferiority of the incubator with which they started. "PROF" BASKETBALL FOR PLAINFIELD MAYBE

M'TEAGUE HAS HIS EYE ON THIS CITY FOR SPORTING VENTURE.

Local sports may see semi-professional basketball played in Plainfield in the near future if the plans of John McTeague, sporting man and basketball expert, go through. Mr. Mc*Teague has entertained the idea for* several years that basketball played on this basis will prove popular as well as a paying venture in this city. During the past season the sport has become popular in towns where it has been but recently introduced, and there seems no reason why it should not also prove popular in Plainfield.

Mr. McTeague will visit Plainfield this week for the purpose of trying to make arrangements to play the games in Reform Hall, which he considers is a most available place. If he is successful in his negotiations with Captain Smith, he will secure a team and start off this season.

Should Mr. McTeague locate here he will bring a strong combination with him. Owing to his connection with the sport in Newark newspaper work he will be able to align the crack players of that city. He will also book games with the strongest teams in Jersey. Mr. McTeague is not a stranger to Plainfield, but became acquainted here when he officiated as a referee in the City Basketball League three years ago, which was organized and fostered by Charles Burdette Morse.

If Mr. McTeague meets with success in his plans two games will be played every night, the preliminary contest to be between local teams.

Charles E. Ball Here.

Charles E. Ball, superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Company, has been detained at home several days with a sprained tendon of the right leg and is now obliged to use a crutch to get about. He was walking through a hallway at his home when his foot slipped on a small rug and he was thrown heavily. His knee was wrenched and the tendon sprained. Mr. Ball was able to be at his office today for the first.

WORSHIP WAS PEACEFUL

Quiet at Calvary Church Yesterday With Deacons Regnant.

COUNCIL IS CALLED

Deacon Conway Says the "Schismatism Is To Be Eradicated by Separating Truth from Error and Law from Gospel."

Worship at the Calvary Baptist church, colored, was carried on Sunday without the presence of a policeman. Neither of the rival claimants to the pastorate were allowed to preach by the deacons, who arranged two special services of a character not calculated to stretch the congregational schism.

The board of deacons notified Revs. D. M. Bailey and P. T. Morris, the claimants, that neither one would be allowed to preach until the court had decided the question between them or some settlement was effected by the congregation. Mr. Bailey, whose supporters had Rev. P. T. Morris arrested in the pulpit last week, sent a Rev. Mr. Brown to represent him, but the deacons told Brother Brown that they would take care of the services themselves. Rev. Brown bowed to the will of the board, and withdrew.

In the morning Deacon Spencer Conway led a prayer and praise meeting. He begged the congregation to remain calm in the dispute and allow the spirit of Christianity and peace to take possession of their hearts. In the evening a preacher from North Carolina, Rev. Mr. Shay, preached. He represented no faction, and the two parties in the congregation listened to him without pausing for a warrant and the count of twenty-three.

"We must remain calm and prayerful until this schismatism is eradicated," said Deacon Conway this morning. Deacon Conway and his associates on the governing board of the church called Rev. Mr. Morris to the charge. "I am interested in keeping peace, because everything I got is involved in that church. When they was going to sell the church on a mortgage I mortgaged my house and put $1,000 in the church to keep it up. Deacon Mansfield Robinson and Miss Abbie Holmes put their money in, too. We was the ones that saved the church, and we is interested in keeping it in peace and quietude."

The deacon said the board had called Mr. Morris because the action of the congregation in calling Mr. Bailey was rendered illegal by ballot-box stuffing at the meeting. A large number of illegal votes were cast, he said, and the deacons only decided to abrogate the call when this was discovered.

The whole trouble may be settled Thursday afternoon. At that time a council of the church members, called by the deacons, will be held.

"We hopes to settle up this matter at that meeting," said Deacon Conway. "It is our aim to separate Truth from Error and Law from the Gospel."

On Wednesday night Rev. J. W. Mitchell, leader of the Bailey forces will be arraigned before Justice Hand on a warrant sworn out by Deacon Robinson, charging disorderly conduct.

John Larkins, a member of Plainfield Aerie, is at the head of the organizers and there are 100 prominent New Brunswickers on the charter list. The Plainfield contingent will leave the Watchung avenue terminus by special trolley at 6:30 and will be accompanied by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps.

That Goff Application.

Councilman Montgomery, chairman of the license committee, says that it was Goff's intention to have his application for a license withdrawn and that he had sent him a letter to that effect through John Keely. He says, however, that Mr. Keely forgot to deliver the letter until after the Common Council meeting. It was not filed with the city clerk.

CONDEMNS OUR POSTERS

Criticism By Divine at the First Presbyterian Church.

ASIDE IN A LECTURE

"Nothing Could Be Worse Than Your Billboards," Dr. Halsey Declares, As African Natives Appear on Screen.

Rev. Dr. A. Woodruff Halsey, secretary of the Home Department of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, gave an illustrated lecture Sunday on African tribes at the First Presbyterian church. One of the pictures showed a group of natives in various stages of the national costume, which is mostly nothing.

"I hesitated about showing you this picture," said Dr. Halsey, "but after seeing some of your billboards I don't think anything could be worse."

The congregation tittered. Dr. Halsey said nothing more about the billboards, but the incident was commented on almost as much as the lecture itself.

Dr. Halsey's talk was on mission lines. He travelled extensively over the mission field on the west coast of the Dark Continent last year, and his impressions, still fresh, were very graphically imparted to his hearers.

The lecture was lavishly illustrated, and practically all the views were taken by Mrs. Halsey, who accompanied the Doctor over the whole journey. The lecture covered all the tribal types about the Kamerun and Gaboon, and the customs they practice.

Various villages were shown.

"It is remarkable how quickly one can tell from the appearance of a village whether or not it is under Christian influence," said Dr. Halsey. "The Gospel is a tremendous force for cleanliness, decency and thrift. Oh, don't you ever allow yourself to receive an impression of mission work from the globe-trotter and the other people who look at things from surface. Listen to the men who go into the subject and see and know just what the work is."

HOME MISSION WORK

SUBJECT OF LECTURE

MRS. BASS SPEAKS AT THE MONROE AVENUE M. E. CHURH.

Mrs. N. W. Bass, of Syracuse, national organizer for the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist church, gave an interesting and instructive talk last Sunday at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church before the Women's Home Missionary Society. Her remarks were of a general character, but she mentioned political and patriotic reasons why home mission work should be carried forward.

Mrs. Bass referred to her recent visits to home for immigrants in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, telling of the good work being done there. Her reference to the work being accomplished among the colored people and the poor whites of the South and among the Mormons was of particular interest. During the service special selections were rendered by a male quartette.

Among the speakers at the district meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society at Woodbridge today will be Mrs. Bass. She will also address the society of the First M. E. church on Wednesday night.

PRISONER WAS HIS WIFE: TRACED BY A CLIPPING.

Man Who Called on Elizabeth Police Also Says He Will Seek a Divorce.

A man called at police headquarters at Elizabeth Friday and showed Desk Sergeant Keiper a clipping from a newspaper which told of the arrest on Broadway, 19 of a woman who gave her name as Lizzie Doyle, twenty-six years old and her residence as East Orange. She, in company with two young men, was discovered at 7:30 o'clock that morning in the city armory, which is located in the City Hall, directly over police headquarters. The trio, the police say, were intoxicated, and doing a cakewalk. The woman and one of the men were committed to the county jail for thirty days, each of each paying a fine of $10 and costs. The other man paid the fine and was discharged.

Sergeant Keiper was asked by the man who called on him for a description of the woman, which was promptly given. "That's she sure enough," remarked the man. "That woman is my wife, and has been away from home for some time. I shall now institute proceedings for a divorce."

The visitor then walked out of the police station. At the county jail a reporter was informed that on February 26, the day after the woman was committed, a man called at the jail and paid her fine and costs, $14.25. The couple then left the institution together.

OAKLEY CASE DECISION

Supreme Court Declares $3,000 Verdict Against Gill Estate to be Excessive.

NEW TRIAL ORDERED

Application of Samuel W. Rushmore for Another Hearing in William Addis' Action is Denied.

On the ground that the verdict is excessive, the Supreme Court, in session, at Trenton, Monday morning set aside the award of $3,000 made by the Union County Court in the case of Mrs. Armitage T. Oakley against John P. Emmons, executor of the estate of Mrs. Ellen Gill. The decision was made on appeal from the defendant, and in rendering it a new trial was ordered.

Mrs. Oakley resides on West Fourth street, next door to the house occupied by the late Mrs. Gill. During the latter's illness previous to her death, she was alone the greater part of th etime with the exception of visits from Mrs. Oakley. This was done for a long time day and night, Mrs. Oakley receiving no compensation whatever.

She was not mentioned in Mrs. Gill's will, and when the estate was settled by Executor John P. Emmons she brought suit for services and for medicines and supplies furnished. The case was heard before a jury in the County Court and the $3,000 verdict was reached after long deliberation.

The Supreme Court Monday also denied the application of Samuel W. Rushmore for a new trial in the suit brought against him by William Addis, Jr. Rushmore's auto ran down Addis and he secured damages in an action brought in the County Court.

TOOK PRINCIPAL'S TROUSERS AND 30 CTS

DUNELLEN EDUCATOR NOT ENTIRELY SUCCESSFUL IN SCARING BURGLAR.

Lester Meseroll, supervising principal of the Dunellen schools, was awakened by a noise at his bedside, late Sunday night. He saw a man bending over his clothes on a chair.

"Get out of here," ejaculated Mr. Meseroll.

The man seized the principal's trousers and fled. Mr. Meseroll gave fruitless chase.

The trousers had thirty cents and the school keys in them. Mr. Meseroll was not put out by the loss of the thirty cents, but he would like his trousers and the keys back. The thief lost $30 by not taking the vest instead of the trousers.

It was learned after the Meseroll robbery was reported that thieves had entered F. H. Glse's house nearby. They were frightened off before securing any plunder.

The robberies are regarded as the first fruits of the regular spring epidemic of bobo visitations. "The mild weather has started the "floater" exodus from New York and Philadelphia earlier than usual.

Cross and Vail.

Judge Cross, of the United States District Court, and Judge Vail, of the Circuit Court, Common Pleas, have been in Newark together occasionally of late on business, and are both as interested as ever in State affairs, although they are no longer in politics. Judge Vail was an Assemblyman from Union in 1876, when Chancellor Magie was the Senator from the county. John W. Griggs was then also serving his first year, and so were Vice-Chancellor Bergen, Judge Rogert, John J. Toffey and other notable men. The Legislature that year was remarkable for its ability throughout. Judge Vail entered the Senate in 1879 and served six years. Judge Cross was Assemblyman in 1884 and 1905. Both men filled the presidency of the Senate, and Mr. Cross was also speaker. Talking with a newspaper man the other day, it was remarked that neither had had any quarrels with the newspapers. both men were independent and entered to nobody, and the newspapers gave them that hearty support which is seldom denied men of ability and courtesy.—Newark Call.

Theatre Rumor Killed.

Rumors that a New York theatrical man was negotiating for the purchase of the old Music Hall, to be used as a playhouse, were quashed by William M. Stillman this morning. Mr. Stillman quite emphatically that nobody had even broached the subject of the hall's purchase. He announced in connection with the denial that the five-and-ten-cent store concern had just signed a five-year lease, to begin in April. The store takes up the Music Hall entrance. The Rowley drug store has a nine-year lease.

John Wherley, formerly captain of Co. M. of Somerville, was among the guests at Co. K's dinner Monday night. Although he has retired from the command of his company he still has a lively interest in military affairs.

BIDS FOR COURT HOUSE

Somerset County Commission Ready To Let Contract For New Building.

PLANS ARE INSPECTED

Ground to be Broken Early in April —Court Will Be Held in Somerset Hall.

Thomas E. Gibson, Richard W. Hoagland and William J. Logan, the commission of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders having charge of the erection of the new Court House at Somerville, met in the offices of former Congressman Alvah A. Clark Saturday afternoon to inspect the final plans for the new structure. After going over the matter it was decided to advertise for bids within two weeks.

Ground for the new building will be broken early in April, by which time the contracts for the work will be awarded. While the construction of the new Court House is under way sessions of the court will be held in Somerset Hall, which has been leased for that purpose.

The new county jail is almost completed, and Sheriff Cooper's quarters will be fitted up in that building before the old Court House is torn down. Tracy & Swartout, of New York, architects for the new Court House, have completed such changes as were desired by the Board of Freeholders and other interested in the structure, and it is now believed that it will in every way meet the requirements of the court officials.

PET 'COON INFLICTS SOME UGLY WOUNDS

LITTLE ANIMAL SAVAGELY ATTACKS RICHARD C. MEEKER.

Richard C. Meeker, of West Front street, is suffering from severe injuries inflicted upon him by a raccoon which he captured recently and of which he had made a pet.

While leading the animal from its kennel a few days ago, Meeker accidentally stepped on its foot, and with a snarl it sprang upon his back. Before he had fully recovered from his surprise the 'coon grabbed his right hand and sank its teeth in the flesh to the bone. Meeker managed to fling it from him against the barn with full force. The infuriated pet quickly returned and attacked him again. This time it caught its owner's left wrist and repeated the chewing operation, inflicting several bad wounds before it was shaken off.

Meeker managed to make his way to the house and the family physician, Dr. M. J. Whitford, of New Market, was summoned. He found the young man suffering great pain and very weak, but prompt treatment probably prevented blood poisoning. He has not yet fully recovered from the shock.

The 'coon took refuge beneath the barn after its tantrum, but was hauled out and shot by Roundsman Flynn. It weighed eighteen and a half pounds and was captured near New Market.

Gift for Choirmaster.

Prior to the evening service at Trinity Reformed church, yesterday, the choir met in the parlors of the church edifice, where Horace J. Marth, on behalf of the singers presented Arthur L. Titsworth, organist and choirmaster, with a handsome clothes brush, with a solid silver back. The gift was in recognition of Mr. Titsworth's birthday anniversary which occurs today, and in reply he thanked all for the remembrance. Mr. Titsworth has been organist at Trinity Reformed church over twenty years and his continued faithful services are fully appreciated by the members of the church and congregation. Mr. Titsworth's name, and the date of his anniversary, "February 26, 1906," was engraved on the back of the brush.

ELOPEMENT SPOILED; SHE SHOT HERSELF

USED PISTOL IN ROOM IN WHICH BROTHER LOCKED HER AND DIED.

Because her brother interfered with her love affairs Filomena Capiello, eighteen years old, of Bound Brook, shot herself twice in the *breast Monday and died in the Som*erset Hospital at Somerville.

Miss Capiello was in love with Frank Delie, a young shoemaker, of Bound Brook. The girl's brother, Michael, objected to the attentions paid her by Delie. The young shoemaker was in love with the girl, and they planned an elopement and marriage, which were to have occurred last Tuesday.

Michael Capiello discovered the plans of the lovers in time to prevent the elopement by locking the girl in her room before he went to his work in the Bound Brook woolen mill that morning.

He had been at work only an hour when he was hastily summoned home to his sister's bedside by the sister's room. Other members of the family had heard two reports of a revolver *in the room, and the girl was moan*ing as if in great pain. When the door was opened Miss Capiello was found on the floor with a revolver, which she had taken from a bureau drawer still in her hand.

A Timely Question.

With the return of the shooting season, there is one question many a father will have to face: "Papa, may I have a gun this year?"

One father will say, "Yes;" another, "Wait till you're twelve;" another, perhaps; fourteen.

For our part we would say, "Let him have it when he's ten; or, if he has developed ahead of his age, perhaps a little earlier."

There are careless men today who began to shoot about as soon as they had strength enough to raise a gun to their shoulders. Almost without exception such are men of quick decisions, action and assurance. The gun has a great deal to do with fostering these precious qualities, and we say begin it early.

This is no new theory; the readers of this paper have had it very ably presented in the announcements of the J. Stevens Arms and Tool Company, Chicopee Falls, Mass. The company is conducting a very laudable and, we are glad to say, most successful campaign in introducing a light, practical rifle to our young lads all over the country. Young eyes are being trained, young arms strengthened and young nerves steadied, which should be the better able to frame the destiny of our country a few years hence.

We wish the J. Stevens Arms and Tool Company the best of success in carrying out their splendid work, and we recommend most heartily to every one their catalog. Just issued, on the rifle and shotgun, with most interesting information on the care and selection of firearms, ammunition, target shooting, etc. This book of reference has 140 pages and is sent free to any one sending four cents to cover postage.

MAYOR'S APPOINTMENT IS AGAIN TURNED DOWN

Nomination of Cose Stigmatized as an Attempt to Pay a Political Debt.

MELLICK OPPOSES IT

For the Second Time Fire Department Appointment Is Blocked and Mayor Will Be Asked To Withdraw It.

Mellick's appointment of John Cose as second assistant chief of the fire department to succeed Andrew Jennings, now first assistant chief, was taken from the table at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, Friday, on a motion made by Mr. Mellick, chairman of the fire committee. In the discussion which followed there was such an overwhelming opinion against it and in favor of abolishing the office of second assistant chief, that the appointment was referred to the fire committee, for the purpose of having it withdrawn by the Mayor and thus allowing time to have an ordinance presented to abolish the office.

Mr. Mellick, who said that he was obliged to be absent from the last meeting, remarked that he was glad of the opportunity to speak on the matter at this time. He then stated that at a meeting of the fire committee the appointment was discussed at great length and he was strong in his conviction that the affairs of the fire department at present and future depend upon the faithful services and honest lives of the men who comprise the paid department, that they can be rewarded with positions higher up when vacancies occur. If appointments are to be made from outside regardless of how well a regular man performs his work such action will result in discouragement and demoralization of the department.

"Here is a senior captain who has served sixteen years faithfully in the department," continued Mr. Mellick, "and is worthy of promotion. The call-men, of which Mr. Cose is one, give all honor to them, but it is the paid department upon which we must lean. It is not a question as to whether Mr. Cose or Captain Townley is eligible. The appointment of Mr. Cose is the payment of a political debt, which is a very serious matter, one which we cannot get away from. It is so serious a matter that I would rather see the office of second assistant chief abolished than cause any discouragement or dissention in the department."

Mr. Gloak, who was impressed with Mr. Mellick's remarks, said that he had talked with many taxpayers about the appointment and a majority favored the abolishment of the office, and he added that he would be willing to make such a motion or present an ordinance which would accomplish this.

Mr. Mellick said that would be agreeable to him to have the appointment laid over so that he might see Mayor Buckie and have him withdraw it and allow time to have such an ordinance as Mr. Gloak suggested introduced and passed.

Mr. Daniel then moved to amend the motion that the appointment be referred to the fire committee for further consideration and this was adopted.

GRACE M. E. FAIR.

Receipts Will Reach a Very High Figure..

The patriotic fair of the Ladies' Aid Society of Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield, closed last night, a most successful affair. The attendance was very large, and the receipts were on the same plane as the night before. The programme was quite as enjoyable.

The sum netted by the society, when all the ticket reports are in, will reach a total beyond the figure hoped for by the most sanguine of the managers.

In the entertainment, the topsy-turvy drill was taken out, and the sunflower drill substituted.

YALE CLUB HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

VOTES TO INCREASE THE PRIZES OFFERED PLAINFIELD BOYS.

At the annual meeting of the Plainfield Yale Club at the Casino Friday the members voted to increase the prize it offers to a Plainfield boy passing the best entrance examination to the academic department and the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale from $15 to $25 each. In this way it is hoped to increase interest in the plans of the organization.

The meeting was called to order by President S. St. John McCutchen, and the following officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, T. M. Day; vice-president, E. A. Stevenson; secretary and treasurer, L. A. Williams; executive committee, Harry L. Lovell, Carroll T. Runyon and William B. Tyler. The members were enthusiastic over the success of recent collegiate social affairs and it was planned to hold a dinner in the near future. The executive committee was empowered to make all arrangements, with the Casino as the specified place of assemblage.

The club has also become interested in baseball and it is hoped to arrange a series of games during the coming season between the Yale and Princeton clubs of Plainfield. The subject was thoroughly discussed and Arthur Lovell was appointed a committee of one to take the matter in charge.

200 MINISTERS ARE FOR CLEAN SALOON.

Clergy in Session in Newark Indorse Pending Senate Bills.

More than two hundred clergymen, half of whom were Roman Catholic priests, gathered in Newark Saturday to discuss matters pending in the Legislature pertaining to the regulation of the liquor traffic and the establishment of license fees.

Resolutions were adopted and plans made whereby the subject under consideration by the clergymen will be kept before the public around until some action is taken. Bishop O'Connor called the meeting to order, and the Rev. Charles J. Kelly, of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, Hoboken, was chosen as chairman.

The Rev. Thos. A. Byrne, of St. Bridget's church, Jersey City, was secretary. Father Kelly explained that the object of the conference was the furtherance of two bills now pending in Trenton with reference to the saloon question.

Bishop O'Connor then laid before the conferees the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That in the name of religion and country, in the name of morality and law, we request the executive and legislative bodies now in session in Trenton to grant us the enactment of a law for the conducting of the liquor business, as any other traffic, in an open manner by removing all screens. In furtherance of this we therefore ask for the enactment into laws of Senate bills Nos. 136 and 137.

"Resolved, That the pastors of the churches of all denominations in the State, on Sunday, March 4, fully explain to their congregations the nature of bills Nos. 136 and 137, now before the Senate at Trenton.

"Resolved, That the pastors request all voters of their respective parishes to communicate by letter or telegram with their representatives, urging them to vote for these bills.

"Resolved, That a copy of the bills be sent to every pastor in the State.

"Resolved, That a standing committee of not less than fifteen, representing every denomination in the State, be appointed by the chair to keep this matter before the public, should the present Legislature fail to pass these bills.

AFTER POSTMASTERSHIP

Senator Reed Says Bateman is Evidently Trying to Scare Senator Frelinghuysen.

EDITOR'S GREAT FIND

He and His Friends Discover a New Political Combination—Tale of a Patronage Agreement.

Weird and wild tales of a new political triumvirate in Somerset county with Senator Charles A. Reed as one of its members have been going the rounds through the heroic efforts of the friends of Charles H. Bateman, who aspires to be Somerville's postmaster. Bateman is not after the job for which Joseph Gaston is backed by the majority of people in that town and it is supposed that he is attempting to frighten County Chairman Joseph Frelinghuysen into supporting him. Congressman Wood has the say as to who shall get the plum and he has announced that he will recommend the candidate selected by the regular party organization's chairman.

A dispatch from Washington contains a neatly arranged story picturing Senator Reed as a member of the alleged combine in Somerset county, the other two members being Congressman Clark and Senator Frelinghuysen. As the tale is unfolded, Mr. Reed is made to pledge his support in the last campaign to Frelinghuysen in return for recognition in all matters of patronage.

The story shows the clipping former Senator Reed was very much amused. He said, "Poor Bateman is evidently trying to scare Senator Frelinghuysen into making him postmaster. So far as I ever knew Bateman has no personal following in Somerville, but I am quite an expert at discovering mares-nests. He works his position as editor of the Republican organ of the town for all it is worth when it comes to helping him get any pap. I made him my private secretary when I was President of the Senate and while he fully appreciated the salary, he never evinced any gratitude after it reached his pocket. His story of a combination between Senator Frelinghuysen, ex-Congressman Clark and me to control appointments in the county is news to me. If such a combination was made I never knew it. It is true that three years ago I did not support Senator Frelinghuysen, while last fall I did support him and he won out by over 1,000 majority. Three years ago Bateman was his friend, although I supported Frelinghuysen. Last fall their support was to say the best of it, lukewarm.

"I am taking no part whatever in the Somerville postoffice fight but my information leads me to believe that the appointment of Gaston, who is a capable and popular business man, would give general satisfaction, while if Bateman should win it would be generally regarded as an appointment made for purely political purposes and without regard to the fitness of the candidate."

CHEAPER LIGHT OFFERED.

Proposition to Illuminate Streets of Harrison at $85 Per Lamp.

Councilman Van Deren presented a proposition at the meeting of the Harrison Town Council last week from the Second Ward Electric Light Company, offering to light the streets of the town for a period of five years for the sum of $85 per light per year, each light to be of 2,000 candlepower. This is a reduction of $15 a light from the contract which expires December 1, 1905. If the new contract is entered into it will date from January 1 of this year.

Mr. Van Deren, in presenting the offer, read a list of cities and towns, with the amounts they paid for 2,000 candlepower lights. Bayonne, Guttenberg, Hoboken, North Bergen, East Newark, West Hoboken and West New York, it was stated, all paid $100 a light. Elizabeth paid $92.50, according to Mr. Van Deren, Jersey City $91.50, this city, $95, Orange $85, Passaic $85, Camden $109.50 and Trenton $92.75. Under the new offer, Mr. Van Deren thought, the town would save between $6,000 and $7,000 during the term of the contract.

WILL SOON OPEN UP READING SHORT CUT.

Railroad Between Wayne Junction and Neshaming Falls to Be Completed Soon.

The Reading's New York short line or railroad will be ready for traffic in April. The Reading freight trains bound to and from New York and points along the division will then be run over the new line. After the roadway has had time to settle and traffic is running smoothly in May, it is the purpose of the company to also operate passenger trains.

Designed to reduce grades and distance between Wayne Junction and Neshaminy Falls and intended primarily as a freight line, it will prove of material benefit to the Reading. Not only will it reduce the distance between Newtown Junction and Neshaminy Falls over two miles, but the saving of grade between it and the present Bethlehem branch will be great.

FEBRUARY SOCIAL SOMEWHAT UNIQUE

BIRTHDAYS OF WASHINGTON AND LINCOLN AND VALENTINE'S DAY FEATURED.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-day Baptist church a "February social" was held in the parlors of the church on Wednesday night. The programme carried out the spirit of Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays and Valentine's day, and was introduced with a flag drill by Celia Cottrell, Helen Shaw, Hannah Shaw, Dorothy Hubbard, Laura Stillman, Ruth Morris, Mary Hunting and Florence Moffett. This was concluded with the singing of "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

A unique feature was a patriotic scrap book, containing a collection of pictures appropriate to the birthdays of Lincoln and Washington and Valentine's day. Mrs. J. E. Kimball had charge of this large book, showing the pictures and explaining them. The pictures were as follows:

"George Washington" and "Martha Washington," Charles Neagle and Miss Bessie Dunham; "Mrs. W. S. Hancock," Miss Marie Rogers; "Abraham Lincoln, his wife and Tad," Rollin Williams, Mrs. David R. Titsworth and Elmer Shaw; "Benjamin Franklin," Arthur Spicer; "A Valentine," Miss Eva Rogers; "Spanish Girl," Miss Helen Rogers; "Ruth," Miss Mildred Green; "Mrs. J. K. Polk," Mrs. Sarah Wardner; "Puritan Maiden," Miss Ida Spicer; "Charlotte Bronte," Miss Mary St. John; "Uncle Sam," James E. Kimball.

In addition to the above entertainment, the Y. M. C. A. orchestra of eight pieces rendered several selections. The supper, served from 6 to 8:30 o'clock, also carried out the spirit of the occasion, the menu cards being in the shape of hatchets made out of cardboard, and one of the favorite dishes was "cherry pie."

Another feature was an exhibition of pictures of the women of the church taken between the ages of one and six years. This was styled "The Gallery of Has-Beens," and beneath each picture the name of the little person and visitors were supposed to guess their present names. Rev. George B. Shaw had charge of the gallery.

The committee in charge of the affair acted as follows: Social, Miss Ruth Maxson, Miss Lucie Dunham, Mrs. Nathan E. Lewis, Nathan Wardner; lookout committee, Mrs. Charles H. Dunham, Dr. Martha Stillman and Mrs. William Mosher. The proceeds will go to the benefit of the Endeavor Society treasury and a good sum was realized.

RAILROADS FLAYED BY LYMAN ABBOTT

MUST SERVE THE PUBLIC, HE SAYS OR PEOPLE WILL FIND RUT REASON.

In Lafayette Hall, Morristown, on the historic grounds of Washington's Headquarters, members of the Washington Association of New Jersey, many well known men gathered with large financial affair, listened attentively on Washington's Birthday to an address by Dr. Lyman Abbott, who assailed in strong terms principles upon which corporations and various industries are doing business today. Although his message poured red hot on men and corporations who are concentrating and lending money, the association at the close of his address, rose to a man and cheered him until Lafayette Hall echoed.

"We have a duty to society," said Dr. Abbott, "which must be performed. We are face to face with the principle enumerated by Abraham Lincoln, a government of the people and for the people. That means democracy, and industrial and religious democracy we must have. The time has gone by when men believe in the doctrine of election. We are not here to select a few persons and tell them they are picked from a bad crowd and will be wafted to heaven. We want a religion of the people and for the people. The same way we must have an industrial condition which is of the people and for the people.

"We are experiencing a civic awakening in many of our States. We are finding that wealth is being concentrated rather than distributed. Railroads, we learn, are being managed so the directors may obtain big profits. The railroad, as the shipper is told, is a public highway, although to the director it is private property.

"I want to say to you that unless the railroads serve the public in such a way as to give advantage to the public the public is going to find out the reason why. When a railroad corporation tends not to the distribution of wealth but to concentration, it ceases to be of public benefit."

The Washington Association is one of the strongest historical societies in the country. Jonathan W. Roberts has been its president for twenty years. In appreciation of his labors resolutions were passed. Although present he asked County Judge Mills to preside.

Thomas Foshre, of West Sixth street, whose right leg was recently amputated by physicians at Muhlenberg Hospital, has recovered from the operation and is doing nicely.

MR. GILBERT'S ADVICE

Former Mayor Addresses Bank Clerks on Things Worth Considering.

ON EVILS OF THE DAY

People Too Easily Reconciled to Exhibitions of Moral Turpitude in High Places, Says He.

Before the members of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Bank Clerks at their fifth annual banquet at the Hotel Astor, former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, president of the Market and Fulton Bank, of New York, delivered an address which is well worth reproduction. He referred to the things worth considering today and gave some sagely advice to the men gathered about him on the occasion.

Mr. Gilbert said in part:

"George Washington" and "Martha Washington," Charles Neagle and Miss Bessie Dunham; "Mrs. W. S. Hancock," Miss Marie Rogers; "Abraham Lincoln, his wife and Tad," Rollin Williams, Mrs. David R. Titsworth and Elmer Shaw; "Benjamin Franklin," Arthur Spicer; "A Valentine," Miss Eva Rogers; "Spanish Girl," Miss Helen Rogers; "Ruth," Miss Mildred Green; "Mrs. J. K. Polk," Mrs. Sarah Wardner; "Puritan Maiden," Miss Ida Spicer; "Charlotte Bronte," Miss Mary St. John; "Uncle Sam," James E. Kimball.

In addition to the above entertainment, the Y. M. C. A. orchestra of eight pieces rendered several selections. The supper, served from 6 to 8:30 o'clock, also carried out the spirit of the occasion, the menu cards being in the shape of hatchets made out of cardboard, and one of the favorite dishes was "cherry pie."

Another feature was an exhibition of pictures of the women of the church taken between the ages of one and six years. This was styled "The Gallery of Has-Beens," and beneath each picture the name of the little person and visitors were supposed to guess their present names. Rev. George B. Shaw had charge of the gallery.

The committee in charge of the affair acted as follows: Social, Miss Ruth Maxson, Miss Lucie Dunham, Mrs. Nathan E. Lewis, Nathan Wardner; lookout committee, Mrs. Charles H. Dunham, Dr. Martha Stillman and Mrs. William Mosher. The proceeds will go to the benefit of the Endeavor Society treasury and a good sum was realized.

"There is no more irregular, so much that was absolutely irregular, so much that was absolutely wrong and dishonest, is sufficient to justify the desire that exists for still further investigation.

"The worst feature of our modern business and social life today is that we are too easily reconciled to exhibitions of moral turpitude in high places. We fail to take a very serious view of them. At the worst, we seldom regard them as anything worse than irregularities, and not as the outgrowth of regularity. They are crimes, and their worst effect is not upon the institutions that suffer loss; but upon the character of young men of the country who are holding positions of trust.

"I am not here to throw stones at men who are already standing in the pillory of public opinion, but to emphasize in your mind the idea that character and business probity are still things of priceless value, and more than anything else in life worth striving for. The world is chat now in high places who already possess more money than they can legitimately use, are willing to sacrifice character, position and every noble impulse and high ideal to get more.

"We are too much influenced by the standards of the ancient pagan days. While it is a most useful invention, the knowledge it disseminates is about as unsettling an influence in our business life as any other that exists. Wherever you find a ticker, there you will find a group of men of all ages gathered about eagerly scanning its quotations feverishly debating in their own minds whether to take a chance or not. To those who can afford to lose, the danger lies only in the cultivation of the gambling habit; to those who cannot, must one pay the penalty for the law of loss, not only of money, but in too many cases of character, position and happiness.

"I am not going to try to cure an incurable evil, but I wish it were in my power to correct practices which have grown up in our midst by which professionals have it in their power to rig the market and create fictitious values, and at the psychological moment unload on the public. While the stock exchange is a very useful part of our business system, this one paramount purpose 'to unload on the public' makes it a standing menace to our money market and our credit system. Values are worked up to dizzy heights for the sole purpose of being smashed at the proper time. These are the processes by which panics are created.

"Do not permit the flare and glare of wealth or of big institutions or the continuous buzz of the stock ticker to unsettle the old-fashioned notions of honesty and fair dealings that were implanted in your minds in the days of childhood. Be assured that character and reputation still have a higher value than money, and that no man can use trust funds for his own benefit and be honest. Neither can an officer or director of any institution participate in profits which arise from the use of its funds and be worthy the confidence of his fellow men.

"We hear a good deal of talk about the need of more money and an emergency currency, but it is my opinion that we can get along very well without either. I will not say that our currency could not be improved, but what we need more than anything else is to get back to the old-fashioned idea of conversatism in the banking system and to find some way to check the speculative spirit which is so largely taking possession of our people."

CITY FATHERS GRANT NO NEW LIQUOR LICENSES

FRACTIOUS HORSE CRACKED HIS RIB

PAINFUL RESULT OF NAYLOR'S BIT OF PLUCK AND PERSEVERANCE.

In attempting to quiet a fractious horse, William Naylor, of West Front street, was kicked on the side and painfully injured Friday morning on Grant avenue.

The horse, attached to a runabout owned by George Wheeler, and driven by a boy in his employ, became frightened at a passing train, under the railroad bridge, and scared Naylor ran out from the sidewalk and sprang up to seize the horse's bridle. The horse kicked out with his front feet, and one of the hoofs struck Naylor in the side. He stuckily returned to the task, and succeeded in grasping the bridle and holding the horse in check.

When he walked toward the sidewalk after the train had passed and the horse was under the boy's control, he felt a sharp pain in his side. He stopped in Dr. Cregar's office, on Grant avenue, and asked him to investigate. The doctor found one rib cracked and some painful but not severe bruises. A slightly discouraged state. Naylor will have acute reminders of the incident for some weeks.

THROUGH TEARING DOWN, SAYS COLBY.

He Wants Young Men Now to Help Him Build Up the State Structure.

Senator Everett Colby told the men of the St. Cloud Presbyterian Club, West Orange, Tuesday, that his organization had finished tearing things down in New Jersey and had hit the lower portion of the State structure where the walls were plumb. He asked support in rebuilding and urged both Republicans and Democrats to get to work in their organization.

He did not favor men standing as "independents" and said they do not accomplish successful results. He stated there was only one lawyer who could be had to go to Trenton to advocate measures for the people, Sheriff Frank H. Sommer.

The Public Service Corporation, said Mr. Colby, controls the carding power and practically the living of one person out of every thirty-five in the State. Although the New York insurance investigation had showed that the removal of the lobbyists from Legislatures was necessary, his bill to oust the Trenton lobby had been in committee for a year and the members admitted they had not even read it. He declared the Prudential Insurance Company, with its control of $10,000,000 of surplus, put the money with the Fidelity Trust Company, which it controlled.

Mr. Colby concluded by asking for young men who would stand and profit by criticism and not get mad to help him in fighting for absolute civil liberty.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY ELECTS.

Miss Fountain President of First Baptist Organization.

Election of officers was the principal business at the annual meeting of the Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon. There was also a paper presented by Miss Pauline Denton on "The Gospel in State." It was expected that the annual reports would be presented, but for several reasons they could not be completed in time.

These officers were elected: President, Miss Ada Fountain; first vice president, Miss Mary Cooke; second vice president, Miss Pauline Denton; treasurer, Mrs. John Cooke Reynolds; secretary, Miss Helen Robins. Miss Fountain will appoint her committees in time for the next regular meeting.

During the year the society has raised considerable money both for foreign and home missions and there will be an equal division between the two objects.

The Twelve Renewed, Bottling Concern Only Meeting With Opposition.

AT LIVELY SESSION

Some Members Attempt to Get a Hotel License for Convicted Disorderly House Proprietor.

Twelve renewals of liquor licenses, the number now in force, were granted at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council Friday. Charles Schanz and James Shay, two new applicants, withdrew their petitions, and the only division of votes was on the application of the Eastern Bottling Company and Frank Linke, for wholesale licenses, and on the application of John J. Goff for a license to keep a hotel, without the privilege of selling liquor.

The application of the Eastern Bottling Company was the first presented by Chairman W. E. Montgomery, of the license committee, who moved that it be granted. Only a few days ago Mr. Montgomery announced his opposition to renewing this license. Mr. Tyler said that he desired to state that the company supplied liquor to "our mutual friend Goff," in fact, he said that one-third of the sales at Goff's hotel was liquor furnished by that company, and the sales were made on a commission basis, showing that Goff was employed as an agent for the company, which he understood was practically the Ballentine Brewery Company. He further said that as a matter of decency and warning he thought the application should be refused. On those grounds, he declared, he would vote against it, and he asked every other member to do likewise.

The vote was then taken, Councilmen Burton, Ginna, Gloak, Montgomery, Charles O. Randolph, F. Frank Randolph and President Tolles voting for the application, and Councilmen Daniel, Hibbard, Mellick and Tyler against it. All of the members, excepting Councilman Frank Randolph, voted for Frank Linke's application for a wholesale license.

While it was generally understood that John J. Goff had withdrawn his application for a license, and it was so stated in the Union County Court the day he was fined $1,000 for keeping a disorderly house, the application appeared last night with the others. It was Mr. Montgomery's wish that it be refused, but before it was accomplished the members got into all sorts of entanglements.

Mr. Hibbard said that he did not see what right the members had to consider the application in view of the provisions of the "zone" ordinance. President Tolles informed him that so far as the application for a hotel license was concerned he could not see that the ordinance had any bearing, which was finally conceded, but when it came to voting on his application to sell liquor the members were not quite sure of their position.

Mr. Hibbard offered two amendments, which practically provided that the city clerk inform Mr. Goff that the Common Council had no jurisdiction in his case owing to the provisions of the ordinance. He thought action on the application was in the nature of discrediting the ordinance, and he desired to see the ordinance lived up to instead.

Mr. Tyler said that inasmuch as the ordinance was before the members it would have to be considered. Mr. Montgomery declared that he was of the same opinion, feeling that the Common Council was duty bound to consider Goff's application. Mr. Daniel said he thought the easiest and quickest way to dispose of the application was to refuse it, and this was finally done. On Goff's application for a hotel license all voted against it except Councilmen Burton, Gloak, Frank Randolph and President Tolles, but on his application to sell liquor all voted in negative.

The other applications were granted, all of the members voting in the affirmative. Those granted are as follows:

Eastern Bottling Company, Frank Linke, wholesale; J. A. Staats, Jerome W. Leary, Jacob Blimm, Michael F. Ward, Joseph Henry, Henry F. Windham, John and Frank Clark, hotels; Christian Gloeckler, John Rafferty, A. D. Findlay, saloons.

HIGH SCHOOL IS DEDICATED

Exercises in the Handsome New Structure For Which $125,000 Has Been Expended.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

C. F. Abbott Makes Presentation Speech—Dr. Probasco Accepts It—Speaker, A. L. Blair.

With ceremonies of a simple but attractive nature, the New Plainfield High School, recently completed at a cost of $125,000, was formally dedicated Thursday afternoon and accepted by the Board of Education in behalf of the city. The exercises were held in the chapel of the building beginning at 3 o'clock, and were attended by a gathering that occupied every available seat. Admittance had been limited by ticket, but so great was the interest manifested that hundreds of people visited the structure during the day and spent several hours inspecting the rooms.

The dedicatory programme had been arranged by Superintendent Henry M. Maxson and was in charge of Dr. J. B. Probasco, president of the Board of Education. On the platform were Leander N. Lovell, vice president of the board; Charles F. Abbott, chairman of the building committee; Secretary Floyd T. Woodhull and Eugene M. Cave; Dr. Maxson, Principal I. W. Travell and members of the High School faculty; President James H. Jeffers of the old Plainfield Board of Education; Mayor James F. Buckle and members of the Common Council; Mrs. James Shelland, of Minneapolis, Minn., for twenty years supervisor of the city school; Louis Bevier, State inspector of High Schools; Prof. H. C. Krebs, principal of the North Plainfield schools and superintendent for Somerset county; A. B. Meredith, of Nutley, superintendent of the Essex county schools, and J. C. Kirkner, ex-president of the Board of Education. In the audience were scores of men and women who had graduated from the present High School and they seemingly enjoyed the proceedings more than the students awaiting the call to begin lessons in the beautiful building.

Previous to the opening number, the High School orchestra, in charge of S. B. Howe, Jr., faculty director, rendered several selections that earned deserved applause. The invocation was offered by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, former pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and was followed by the rendition of the dedicatory hymn by the High School orchestra and glee club. The hymn was written by Miss Mary Lock, a graduate of the class of 1900 and now a member of the High School teaching corps.

The formal presentation of the building had been allotted Mr. Abbott, and in so doing he gave a brief sketch of the work that the Board of Education had incurred in accomplishing the task. The first appropriation he said, was for $100,000 and was made six years ago. After its authorization by the Common Council delays of a legal nature prevented the actual work of commencement for two years and then when everything was in readiness it was found that more money would be needed. The sum was increased to $125,000, but even then, the speaker said, was not sufficient for what had been planned and when the architects' designs were submitted they had to be altered in order to bring the cost within the funds. This was done by cutting off four class rooms and eliminating much of the ornamenting, so that the completed building does not represent the original intentions. Despite these drawbacks, Mr. Abbott declared, there is not a handsomer or better equipped structure of the kind in the State. The building committee had watched the progress, he said, but he wished it understood that the entire board had shared in the work and that credit was due every member. In conclusion, he announced the dedication, naming the structure, "The Plainfield High School," and made the presentation. It was accepted by Dr. Probasco in behalf of the board.

Charles L. Lewis, teacher of music in the city schools, rendered a vocal selection, "The Two Grenadiers," and responded to an encore, after which Albert Lyndes Blair, A. M., of New York, was introduced by Dr. Probasco as the speaker of the day. Mr. Blair is experienced in platform work and his address was delivered with an easy presence in a well modulated tone. It dealt with "The Educational System," and by presenting it in simple language everyone of his auditors followed him closely.

At the outset he remarked that the people of Plainfield were to be congratulated upon possessing such a splendid building as a home for its advanced students and remarked that its facilities and equipment were not lacking in a single respect. He contrasted it with the little log school houses of a generation ago and referred in particular to the one in Central New York State where he had learned his first lessons. He pictured the interior in such detail that the audience could almost see the box stove, inadequate desks and tumbled-down blackboards.

"It was primitive and inconvenient to the last degree," asserted the speaker, "but this one and others like it have turned out hundreds and thousands of men who have made their mark in the world. It is not the fine building that provides boys and girls with knowledge, neither is it the humble structure of the rural districts. The difference is made on the pupil; it matters not what has been provided for him or what his surroundings, if his mind is not upon the task placed before him nothing is gained.

"In my day, educators attached but little importance upon the individual as a unit of learning. Teachers saw to it that pupils were given plenty of Greek and Latin and ancient history, but lost sight of the fact that what they needed was good American history. I might ask now, how many of you can consistently sit down and tell of the causes of the American Revolution? The chances are it would puzzle a great many, but as improvement has been made in the school systems I am sure American history is taught in the Plainfield schools; if not, why not? The new building is not the secondary matter—the education lies with the teacher and the system and at the present time both are all that could be asked."

Mr. Blair here described the career of Abraham Lincoln as an instance of what pluck and perseverance would do and advised that pupils be given more of physiology, metaphysics and geology earlier in life. He finished with the statement that though the people of America agree upon some points they are unanimous in the belief that young Americans should be given every advantage during their school days and education is being daily conducted on more broader lines.

Though she had not been allotted a place on the programme as presented in printed form, the next speaker called upon was Mrs. Shelland, better known to Plainfielders as Miss Bulkley, Dr. Maxson's predecessor as superintendent of schools. When she was introduced by Dr. Probasco the outburst of applause was little short of an ovation lasting nearly a minute. Mrs. Shelland left Plainfield in 1890 and at that time the subject of a new High School had been under discussion for several years but nothing definite had been reached. After a few preliminary remarks she said:

"This is the proudest moment of my life. Never have I been from Plainfield this building was a bud; I have returned to find it in full bloom. It is a handsome structure and one that every citizen can justly feel proud of.

"Recalling the early talk of the new school leads me to become reminiscent of other days in Plainfield and I can hardly believe it was so many years ago when I first came here to teach. It was Dr. Stillman who brought me to Plainfield and only those of us who were here then know how much credit is due him for the city's school system. It was his one constant thought and his record as president of the Board of Education will ever linger in the memory of the people."

Mrs. Shelland related several instances of Dr. Stillman's watchfulness over the schools and also paid tribute to the memory of George H. Babcock and to Miss Carrie B. Runyon, the latter a teacher in the High School for thirty-five years. Continuing, she spoke highly of the work of J. C. Kirkner, who was president of the Board of Education for twenty years and the present incumbent, Dr. Probasco.

The succeeding number on the programme was the presentation of gifts to the school. Among them was a handsome flag from the three local Jr. O. U. A. M. councils, Franklin, Somerset and Independence. Rev. E. E. Roberson, of Bound Brook, made the presentation address in a few appropriate remarks. "The other gifts and the speakers were as follows: From senior class, statue of Lorenzo de Medici, Joseph W. Gavett, Jr.; Somerset and Independence, models of Santa Maria Caravel, William Douglass; sophomore class, photograph of Goldsmith reading, "She Stoops to Conquer," Miss Elizabeth M. Pound; freshman class, photograph of "Andromache Captive," Gulon Founaine; girls' athletic association, a panel of six photographs of mural paintings in the Congressional Library, Miss Louise M. Klein.

A presentation of added importance was made by J. C. Kirkner in behalf of the heirs of George H. Opdyke. It is a scholarship at Rutgers College and is to be competed for by pupils of the High School. Mr. Kirkner also spoke briefly, telling of the early history of the Board of Education and bestowing praise upon the members responsible for the erection of the new edifice. The gifts were accepted by Leander N. Lovell, who thank the donors in behalf of Plainfield's citizens.

The dedicatory ode, written by VanWyck Brooks, '04, was rendered by the High School orchestra and glee club and the exercises concluded with the dedicatory prayer and benediction by Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church.

P. S. C. LOWERS ITS ELECTRIC LIGHT RATE

CONNECTION BETWEEN THIS CITY AND METUCHEON PLANT THE REASON.

The P. S. C. announced a reduction in the electric lighting rate in Plainfield Friday. The reduction applies to minimum service charge per month, as well as the running consumption rate.

The minimum charge per month will be a dollar. The current rate will be fifteen cents for the first fifty K. W. hours consumed each month, thirteen cents for the second fifty K. W. hours, and twelve cents for the current consumed in excess of 100 K. W. hours per month.

The reduction will take effect as if ordered for January 1.

The completion of the transmission lines connecting the local plant with the generating station at Metuchen is given as the cause of the drop.

In connection with the reduction announcement the company declares it is reinforcing and rebuilding certain circuits, which work, when completed, in connection with the new service from Metuchen, result in material improvement in the service here.

LITERARY.

Trap shooting has made America a land of straight shooters, and no country in the world can compare with the United States in shooting. Gun clubs in America are directly responsible for that reputation which is second to no study or sport. By constant practice at inanimate targets the American unconsciously prepares himself for his country's call to arms. Gun clubs are really the outcome of the abundance of live game in America. The average business man knows to travel and wood is scarce of live game, but usually his time to go on these hunting trips is limited to perhaps once a year, and during the interval he has lost his "shooting eye." He needed practice to keep his eye keyed up properly, and in order to get practice at home during spare moments, he organized the gun club, where between hours he could get all the practice he needed.—Ralph Trimble in Recreation for February.

What writes the books and plays anyway? Is the author powerless? Is it some unseen irresistible power? In the March issue of Appleton's Booklovers Magazine, Jesse Lynch Williams has an article on J. M. Barrie, in which he says: "In 'The Little Minister' the author made up his characters and then left them to write book. All went well for a while, but presently his characters began to run away with him. He tells in one of his other introductions of their willful behavior. 'Come back,' I cry. 'You're off the road.' 'We prefer this way,' they reply. I try. 'This line. You are only people in a book!' I shout, and it's my book and I can do what I like with you, so come back.' But they seldom come, and it ends in my plodding after them. Unless I yield, they and I do not become good friends.' 'Yield to it a book.' Nevertheless, in 'The Little Minister' he braved them, having set out on a pleasant sentimental journey—with a set smile. And this brought him the famous literary spanking from his older brother-Scot in the Speaker's Seat: 'The Little Minister' ought to have ended badly; we all know it did; and are infinitely grateful to you for the grace and good feeling with which you lied about it. If you had told the truth, I for one could not have forgiven you.'"

If Thomas W. Lawson is the one man in America directly responsible for the recent insurance upheavals, what this fearless commentator has to say on the present insurance situation ought to make good reading. In a relentlessly outspoken article, "The Black Flag on the Big Tree," in the March number of Everybody's, Mr. Lawson points out, in his strikingly convincing fashion, that the insurance companies are as corrupt as ever, and indicates the steps that must precede their real "purification." The March issue is particularly rich in readable articles. The current instalment of Charles Edward Russell's "Soldiers of the Common Good" is full of timely facts and anecdotes relative to the railroad situations in France, Italy, and Great Britain. The French railroads, it seems, are government controls without ownings, and which are obliged to conduct themselves circumspectly under penalty of forfeiting their franchises, are the subject of a particularly enlightening chapter. Some reasons for the progress of Italy and the poverty of Ireland are explained in vivid detail. Marshall Field, perhaps the greatest commercial genius of his day, is the subThompson and Eugene Wood. Science has authorized ghosts, says Mr. Thompson in "The Invisible World" [illegible] a brilliant illustrated article, based on intimate knowledge, by John Dennis, Jr. An illuminating contrast between the religion of today and that of a generation ago may be found in two articles by Vance —it has approved telepathy and clairvoyance; it has run a thousand psychic mysteries to earth.

When the Rev. Frank Ritchie, of St. Ignatius' church in New York, was rector of the Church of the Ascension in Chicago, he was most unpopular with his bishop because of his extremely high church ritualism and was known as "the black sheep of the diocese." At a general gathering of the clergy, Father Ritchie was paired off with the only colored rector in the bishop's jurisdiction. The clerical wits joked about it.

"The two black sheep of the diocese walked together," remarked one of them. The colored brother, a broad churchman, happened to overhear the remark.

"I should like to know what I have done?" he demanded with rancor.

It was not long afterward that Father Ritchie went to preach in this same colored rector's church, and he was introduced in this manner:

"Father Ritchie will preach this evening. Before the sermon we will sing the hymn beginning: 'My soul, be on thy guard.'"—Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree," in Everybody's Magazine for March.

Southwestward the course of empire is taking its way. The region's expansion since 1890 is more than it was prior thereto. Not only are Texas and its two territorial neighbors on the north keeping up their old gait, but Arkansas and New Mexico are showing an increase not previously touched. From the Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and New Orleans gateways, by way of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, the St. Louis and San Francisco, the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, the Iron Mountain, the St. Louis South western (Cotton Belt), the Missouri Pacific, the Kansas City Southern, the Southern Pacific (Sunset Route), the Houston and Texas Central, and the Texas and Pacific, all of which roads are extending their operations either by lengthening their main lines or by anexing branches running in all directions, there is a vast inrush of people these days into the section between Missouri's and Kansas' southerly border and the Gulf of Mexico, and between the Mississippi and the Rocky Mountains and the Rio Grande.—The March Metropolitan Magazine.

Frederick Palmer has recently made a trip to Panama for the sole purpose of reporting the true conditions in the situation down there. These interesting and valuable reports are appearing in Collier's, the first of the series being published in Collier's for February 24.

DEMOCRATS ARE TO HAVE BIG TIME.

Elizabeth Committee Prepares for Its Tenth Outing at College Point.

The Democratic City Committee of Elizabeth has arranged for its annual outing, which is always attend by Plainfielders. A special committee, consisting of Andrew P. Hughes, Frederick Zlor and J. H. R. Corbet, repaired to the Jersey Coast resort last week to confer with the committee in charge of the tenth annual outing, which will be held on Wednesday, August 22, at Donnelly's Grove, College Point, Long Island. The steamer Cepheus, owned by the Consolidated Iron Steamboat Company, has been chartered. Last year the committee had about 500 on the annual excursion, and on the occasion of rounding out a decade of activity in this direction next summer an attempt will be made to eclipse by far anything yet attempted in the way of political jollification. The committee was discharged with a vote of thanks.

Pond Nine Waking Up.

The Pond Machine Tool Company nine is reorganizing for the coming season. Practically the same line-up as met the Singer team in a lively series last year will be used. Another series with the Singer combination is being arranged. Tommy Keefe, the old St. Mary's pitcher, will play right field.

After Lawn Wreckers.

In response to complaints made by residents, the Plainfield police have placed a band on "tag" playing by boys on front lawns. The practice has become a great nuisance because of the tearing up of the ground and Chief Weiss has instructed his men to arrest youngsters caught doing it.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis will preach in church on March 6, under the auspices of the Young People's Association, it has become necessary to make other arrangements for this entertainment. In place of Mr. Riis, the association has secured Jerome K. Jerome and Charles Battell Loomis, the latter of Fanwood, to give a joint entertainment in the Sunday-school room of the church on Tuesday night, March 13, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Riis has been obliged to cancel all his engagements for February and March.

A PLAINFIELD BOY'S SCHOOL ADVANTAGES FOR 1846.

Written for The Daily Press by O. B. Leonard.

Eighteen hundred and forty-six was a year earlier than the town had its political birth. Previously we were known as of Westfield Township, Essex County, and our fathers then had to go to Scotch Plains to vote. It was not till the spring of 1847 that Plainfield Township was created and the following year a Public School was organized. Small private schools in various neighborhoods furnished the youth of Plainfield with means of mental culture during 1846 and a few years preceding. There were four or five such juvenile schools in town at that time, but no public schools directly in the village. On the outskirts there were two "District Schools." One was located in the Short Hill section to the East and known as "Jackson School." Another was in the southern part, called the "Samptown" district. Fifty-seven children of school age lived within these two outlying sections.

The public feeling in regard to Common Schools as existing under State law was very dormant prior to 1848. The new Constitution of our little State, adopted in 1844, awakened some interest on the subject. But generally there was a decided apathy for the system, as it provided almost exclusively for the poorer classes only. The idea prevailed everywhere that public schooling was entirely an act of charity. Most parents at first refused to send their children to such poorly furnished and promiscuously attended schools. It was on account of the indifference of a majority of the citizens to the provisions of the Common School law that not even a Public School house had been built in the town up to this date. Only the two little outlying "District Schools" referred to, furnished "educational advantages" to any of the Plainfield children under the Common School law up to 1847-8.

This state of things has particular reference to the years 1840-48. In each decade immediately preceding and even to the elaborate efforts made in the town for general education. For instance in 1811 a "Plainfield Academy" was chartered and survived twenty-four years. In 1825 the "Plainfield Seminary" was started and maintained a precarious existence. In 1835 the village was distinguished for its "Plainfield Classical Institute," which was well sustained for ten years.

The town in 1846 contained some 300 dwelling houses and had a population of 1,585 men, women and children. Of this number about 450 were of school age, 5-16 years. But not half of these boys and girls attended any school. Possibly two hundred children were pupils in the half dozen little elementary schools scattered through the village.

The teachers in these private select schools are remembered as Jacob A. Wright, Miss Thomas, Thomas Wallace, William Davidson, Isaac Newning, David Lenox, Mr. Martin, Mr. Allen, Miss Van Nostrand, Mrs. Margaret Shotwell, Mrs. Martin Giles, Mrs. Olmstead. They kept school in their respective dwellings, but two of the schools were especially built for the purpose.

The "scope" of instruction was very simple and limited. The curriculum was almost exclusively confined to the "three Rs." Most of the school boys were under fourteen years of age and the girls were even younger. If the pupils mastered "Readin, Ritin and Rithmetic" with a fair degree of accuracy in spelling, they were thought to have a respectable foundation.

The public school was sometimes regular, oftener irregular, but generally defective. There were no established rules of procedure. Every teacher had his own rule of treatment and some of the scholars experienced the force of this rule every day. Indeed it is remembered that some of the boys were so unruly that it seemed necessary in the judgment of the teacher to apply his particular rule frequently. Once in a while a lively boy would get "off the hooks" and for diversion from mental strain [illegible] would make some occasion for corporal punishment the following day if the lad turned up so soon. What was schooling without the perquisites of the rod, rattan and rule. Many parents regarded the frequent application of such appliances necessary for sure progress and certain development in their children.

The school sessions opened at 9 o'clock and closed at 4 p. m., with an hour noon spell and short recesses both in the forenoon and afternoon. Studying was done mostly in the school room. The seats and desks were very primitive and rudely constructed. The benches were backless and so high that the legs of most boys dangled in mid-air. Children were never known to run to school in those days from fear of being late or getting demerit marks. Our mothers started us off with clean hands and washed face and the school room was reached about on time.

The money value of education was not so great then as now. Whereas it may cost property owners at present as much as $50 to $60 each pupil per year. In by-gone days the outlay in cash was not more than $6 to $8 for each child.

At the time preliminary preparation was making for starting our Free School in 1847-8 different local teachers were interviewed as to the probable charges for running a school. The select school teacher asked "for $12 per week to furnish suitable instruction to what pupils might attend (say 200) and find the firewood, pens and ink, provided a proper place of meeting was furnished at the expense of parents."

Cost what it may in dollars and cents at the present day, what vastly superior advantages does the pupil of 1906 enjoy over and above that offered to the scholar of 1846. Contemplated from every point of view whatsoever, we may justly take pride in our free public schools of the twentieth century with their complete appointments, the fruit of the national intelligence and the birthright of every child in the country.

CHANGES PROPOSED IN CAB ORDINANCE

MONTGOMERY'S IDEAS FOR BETTERMENT OF THE SERVICE.

In response to a request from the cab drivers of the city, Councilman F. L. Montgomery, chairman of the license committee, has drawn amendments to the present ordinance at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night. These amendments were read for information only and are intended to correct some of the irregularities and alleged hardships of which the drivers complain.

The ordinance as amended, provides that license numbers not less than an inch and a half in size shall be displayed on the side of each lamp on the carriage where it can be plainly seen during the day and at night when the lights are lighted, that the cabmen is permitted to wear in the lapel of their coats a button one and a half inches in diameter, with a black background and bearing the cabman's number in white figures, that a folder be placed in the cab containing the rules, which it can be plainly seen by passengers. The penalty for violating these provisions is $10.

The amendments further provide that for one passenger a fare of twenty-five cents shall be asked within the city limits and that fifty cents shall be asked for two or three passengers taken from the same place to one address and that between the hours of 11 o'clock at night and 5 o'clock in the morning these fares be doubled, except where a carriage is engaged by the night

OFFICERS ARE NAMED

R. H. Depew, President; William L. Saunders, Vice President-Messrs. Fisk, McCutchen, Kinsman and Atterbury on Committee.

Permanent organization was effected Monday by representative men, who, under the leadership of R. Henry Depew, started the movement to hold the P. S. C. to an accounting for the prices and service in the illumination departments of the corporation in force in this city.

The organization was accomplished at a meeting in the parish house of Grace Episcopal church. Over seventy-five men were at the meeting. The gathering, for the most part, was very much on the order what might be seen at a meeting of the Country Club, or some important civic organization. But few of those present were not men of substantial means and of high standing in the city. Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk was there, and so was former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph. Two councilmen, W. S. Tyler and H. D. Hibbard, were among those who gave earnest attention to the proceedings and manifested great sympathy with the movement.

The organization's name was fixed as the Plainfield Protective Association, and very early in the meeting it was made manifest that its objects were as broad as its title. It is in the minds of those leading the movement to make the P. P. A. the guardian and defender of every civic right of Plainfield's citizenry.

Officers were chosen by acclamation. R. Henry Depew is president; W. L. Saunders, vice president; H. C. White, secretary, and J. Herbert Case, treasurer. An executive committee was formed as follows: A. H. Atterbury, C. J. Fisk, R. L. Hall, F. E. Kinsman, Charles W. McCutchen, George A. Rogers, Floyd T. Woodhull and Dr. Leonard Waldo.

Mr. Depew called the meeting to order. He was greeted with applause as he stepped to the front of the lecture room.

Mr. Depew recapitulated the conditions that have led to the movement. He had suffered from inexplicable jumps in his bills, and found that in the company profounded no satisfaction. The only move that promised any remedy was a protective organization. He thought such an association was plainly needed, and could do a great deal of good.

The service, he said, was exceedingly poor; the officials of the corporation had themselves admitted irregularity in electric service. They admitted, for one thing, that the voltage was apt to vary. They said the voltage drop meant a drop in the bill, but Mr. Depew had asked an expert about that, and discovered that to get a four per cent. drop in his bill he had to lose forty per cent. of his light.

It was pretty generally understood, Mr. Depew continued, that the public ought to get the same things for the same price. The P. S. C. worked on a different plan; it had two systems of charging. One rate, lower than the other, was not generally allowed. Mr. Depew could not see why all the consumers should not have the low rate. As for the question of the meter reading, Mr. Depew didn't know if they were correct, or if they did not tally with the bills. He would admit for the sake of argument having no knowledge to the contrary—that they were strictly accurate. But why did the average man, using only the average number of lights, get bills of $11, $10, and $14, while men in big houses, burning more lights, should be charged no more? The general February advance, too, called for explanation; he had sought but could discover no cause for it.

Mr. Depew wanted to know about the difference in rate between Plainfield and Somerville and Staten Island. The two last named places had rates much lower than in this city. Staten Island was lower than Somerville. If the company could sell at a profit at these lower rates why didn't Plainfield have the benefit of them?

He was not making any charges, Mr. Depew concluded, and he didn't think the association was. The one purpose of the movement was for investigation. They proposed to find out whether or not conditions were as they seemed. They did not attack the P. S. C. because it was a corporation; that was not the thing at all; they would question any individual or set of men under the same circumstances. They simply wanted to find out the "why" of the things that vexed them.

Mr. Depew was roundly applauded when he finished, and handclapping frequently marked the progress of his talk. At one stage of his address he said the organization was not intended to rest merely with the investigation of the light question, but would, later, broaden its scope to touch on the other problems of the public, and the statement evoked a particularly warm salve.

L. V. F. Randolph was chosen as temporary chairman. In taking the chair, Mr. Randolph spoke briefly in endorsement of all that Mr. Depew had said. He was vigorous in his support of the purpose to widen the field of the association. The one purpose of protecting the public interests in the lighting matter was enough to merit the hearty co-operation of all the people, but there were other evils from which the public needed protection. The members would miss an opportunity for great public good if they confined themselves to one thing. They should make the protective association, be held, as broad and useful as they could.

Enthusiastic applause greeted Mr. Randolph and marked the close of his speech. The permanent officers and the committee were chosen with machine-like rapidity, and Mr. Depew and Secretary White took their places to the cheering rat-tat-tat-tat of friendly hands.

Former Councilman J. M. Whiton opened the general discussion with a whole-souled philippic against the whole P. S. C. service. He recalled to the members the fact that the P. S. C. was furnishing gas as well as electricity. It was a very poor sort of gas, he said. Experts had told him that the gas was not sufficiently enriched; and it was so poor it compelled the consumer to burn a lot of it to get a very ordinary degree of illumination. When he was in the Council, and chairman of the committee on lights and trees, he had noted a law setting a certain standard for the gas, and providing for a test burner showing exactly the sort of product furnished. He didn't know whether such a law was still in force, but it was manifest that its objects were as broad as its title. It is in the minds of those leading the movement to make the P. P. A. the guardian and defender of every civic right of Plainfield's citizenry.

He is an electrical expert and his partner in business has just passed through much the same fight as faces the P. P. A. Dr. Waldo's name was added to the committee at thespecial suggestion of Councilman Tyler.

A constitution for the association will be prepared by a committee of five composed of L. V. F. Randolph, H. L. Hall, H. D. Hibbard, C. J. Fisk and F. E. Kinsman. They will draft provisions for bringing the people who haven't $10 to spend on a membership fee into the organization.

Supt. Campbell, head of the P. S. C. distribution department, and W. C. Causebrook, head of the department that makes out the bills, were present at the meeting. So were two of their clerks. None of them spoke. They must have been recognized by a number of the members, but nobody hinted that they were within a hundred miles.

A reporter asked Mr. Campbell what he thought of the meeting.

"It was all right," he said with a lifelike imitation of heartiness. "That's the thing for people with a grievance to do—get together and talk it over."

Mr. Campbell said he hadn't come to the meeting to speak. If anybody had asked a question he would have answered it—if it had been a question he could answer. Of course, there were things he was not in a position to speak on with authority. He was not entrusted with the duty of speaking for the corporation powers.

Several more signers were brought into the fold after the meeting. The membership of the association now totals somewhere around 40, and signs of a healthy and rapid growth are plenty.

BOROUGH SCHOOL BUDGET

Altogether $33,617 Will be Needed for Maintenance During Coming Year.

PART FROM THE STATE

North Plainfield Citizens Will Be Asked to Vote $19,135 At Annual School Meeting.

According to a preliminary estimate submitted by the finance committee at the regular meeting of the borough Board of Education Monday night, $31,645 will be required for the maintenance of the schools during the coming year. This is exclusive of the manual training expense, which will aggregate an additional $1,982.50. Anticipating $12,500 from the State, as was received last year, the citizens will probably be asked to vote for $19,135 at the school election next month. The amount appropriated last year was $17,800.

The sums needed for various purposes and which may undergo cutting later on are as follows: Teachers, $20,000; manual training, $2,500; janitors, $1,700; clerk, 200; repairs, $600; furniture, $500; fuel, $1,250; interest and insurance, $200; books and supplies, $1,900; incidentals, $900. The largest single increase is in the teachers' account, which is $1,500 more than last year. This was explained as being due to the fact that three new teachers are to be added. The item of $600 for repairs will probably stand, but there is possibility that at the election a special figure of about $1,450 will be specified for this purpose. The Somerset street building is in need of painting and the cost is estimated by Dr. Leonard at $1,100. The interior of the Watchung building also needs overhauling and this will bring the figure $350 higher.

As stated at the beginning, these sums are still purely tentative, as the different items are submitted to committees and are to be gone over by the entire board before being totalled for popular vote. The board had anticipated a much larger increase because of the new building, but by practicing economy the rise was not so great.

In the regular order of business the board received a communication from Henry Hansen, admitting his inability to finish his carpentering contract in the vestibule and interior and giving his consent for the building committee to have it done and the expense deducted from the money due him. Claims have been filed against the sum held by the Somerset Lumber and Hardware dealers and Counsellor Isaac P. Runyon appeared at the meeting to represent them. An agreement had been prepared by attorneys to be signed by Hansen and President Joy, acknowledging the board's right to complete the work and make whatever deductions were necessary, and on motion a resolution was passed to have warrants drawn and the papers and check held and designated by Counsellor Charles A. Reed.

A warrant for $572.85 was ordered drawn for Architect A. L. C. Marsh as final payment for services in connection with the building of the new school. E. A. Lowe was appointed a member of the building committee to succeed Mr. Needham, and it was decided to hold a special meeting on March 26 for reorganization.

Manitonomoh Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., will hold its annual "ladies' night" in the Scheuer building, Tuesday, March 13. An entertainment and dance will be among the features.

CO. K'S ANNUAL FEAST

Col. Collins, Rev. Dr. Glazebrook and James E. Martine Among the Speakers.

AT THE TRUELL INN.

Capt. Martin Toastmaster—Service Medals Awarded—Mayors of City and Borough Speak.

The completion of the first five years of the organization of Company K, Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., was appropriately observed Monday night when the annual banquet was held at Truell Inn. The militia was honored with Mayor James F. Buckle, Mayor Newton B. Smalley, Col. D. F. Collins, Rev. Dr. Glazebrook, James E. Martine and others as invited guests, who spoke the praises of the company and predicted even greater things during the next five years. The occasion was also noteworthy by reason of the fact that the terms of enlistment of nineteen members terminated and they received their discharge papers, while three members, Lieutenant John M. Lewis, Corporals Alfred Tranchand and James L. Niles, received service medals for not having missed a single drill during the five years. The medals were presented by Col. Collins.

Prior to the banquet, the company met at the armory, where there was a short drill. The banquet at Truell Inn, which was considered the best in the history of the company, was excellent.

After the feast, Captain William B. Martin, who acted as toastmaster, introduced Sergeant Pearsall, the historian, who presented a few facts concerning the company's growth. He stated that it was organized and mustered into service on February 27, 1896, and its record was one of the best of any company in the State. He referred to the various affairs, both local and State, in which the organization had taken part and of it encampments at Sea Girt, where for five years excellent work was performed on the rifle range. In figure of merit the following percentages were recorded: 1902, 72 per cent.; 1903, 76 per cent.; 1904.; 86.7 per cent.; 1905, 87.2 per cent. For two years the company has qualified on the State range, and in some years 100 per cent. was attained by the company in rifle practice. In 1903 Sergeant Albert I. Littell won the famous Bell medal, and in the same year Corporal Alfred Collins won the medal. The report showed that the National Guard officers complimented the local company for its fine showing and tribute was paid to Col. Collins, to whom is largely due the credit for the existence of the organization. Col. Gilmour mustered the company in at I. C. T. Hall, and ever since there has been a steady growth. In conclusion, Sergeant Pearsall referred to the need of an armory building here and urged that the State appropriate $20,000 or $25,000 a year for the purpose of giving the companies in New Jersey suitable quarters.

Col. Collins presented discharge papers to the following members, whose terms of enlistment had ended: First Lieutenant John M. Lewis, Second Lieutenant Harry B. Kitchell, First Sergeant Charles A. Peterson, Quartermaster Sergeant Albert I. Littell, Sergeants Asa F. Randolph, Oliver B. Pearson, Jr., George L. Agar; Corporals Alfred Tranchand, James L. Niles, Robert E. Goldsack, Clarence H. Bilyeu, and Privates LeRoy DeCamp, Eugene Dorman, John Judson, William Mosher, Archie G. Niles, Nelson R. Peterson, Walter Sampson, Percy W. Vail. All but William Mosher and Asa F. Randolph have re-enlisted for one year. The 100 per cent. medals presented to the three members, Lieut. John M. Lewis, Corporals Alfred Tranchand and James L. Niles, are suitably inscribed and highly prized by the recipients, representing as they do faithful services.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley in a few words congratulated the company for its fine showing. He expressed interest in its record and predicted that if at any time he could be of service to the organization he would gladly do all in his power to advance its welfare. Freeholder Westphal followed with a short speech.

Assemblyman William Newcom said that while he regretted his inability to secure an armory for Plainfield while in the Legislature he stood ready at all times to do all in his power to have such a building located here. He thought the State could use its funds to better advantage by erecting armories than in loaning them to banks at a low rate of interest.

Mayor James F. Buckle declared that the gathering reminded him somewhat of the days when he was a member of the National Guard. He mentioned the fact that during the Civil War, he was not old enough to enlist, but he was able to sell newspapers to the soldiers. He saw the soldiers go to war and then return and he said that he had always prided himself on a spirit of patriotism. If there was anyone he honored more than another it was the man who fought for his country. "I don't care to shine in the limelight," continued the Mayor, "for I am only a plain and simple citizen, but as Mayor I am proud of you boys. In times of trouble we know that you will stand shoulder to shoulder for you all have that great and strong love for this country whether he be Democrat, Republican, Northerner or Southerner."

Captain Martin introduced Col. Collins as the "father of Co. K," and the genial colonel in responding said that he was glad to be with his five-year-old child. After paying a compliment to Captain Martin for his efficient services, he reviewed the history of Co. K briefly and then commented upon the wisdom of the Legislature passing the Dick bill, which would give the militia of the State an encampment every year, a reasonable allowance for uniforms and a nominal sum for time spent in performing service for the State. He said of those who criticise the National Guard the most are those who know the least about it. He thought that next year would be ripe for Co. K to make a strike for an armory and in conclusion congratulated the members and wished them continued success.

Councilman E. P. T. Smith, of North Plainfield, responded briefly, thanking the company for its courtesy and wishing it success in maintaining its fine record.

Dr. W. K. Browning, who was the first captain of Co. K, gave bits of history concerning the organization. He said that when the members reached that point where they knew as much as their captain he resigned and Captain Martin was wisely chosen to succeed him.

James E. Martine expressed the hope that Co. K would soon have a home of its own. In speaking of military affairs, he remarked that he was not a military man, but he always had a natural pride in the National Guard and believed that it should be maintained in the most efficient plane. He referred to the Perkins bill, recently introduced, which would mean an increased revenue of more than $3,000,000 from corporation and another bill which proposes a plan for the distribution of the revenue. He thought that some of this money might well be spent to erect armories in the State.

In conclusion Mr. Martine paid a glowing tribute to "this great and glorious country," adding that all as American citizens should be ready at the shortest notice to die down-trodden and uphold the flag of the Nation.

Dr. Charles W. Leonard, an honorary member of the company, who has offered a gold medal for handicap competition among the members, made a few remarks in which he urged that every member unite for the good and welfare of the organization.

The last speaker of the evening was Dr. Glazebrook, of Elizabeth, who has been chaplain of the Second Regiment for many years, and has been an interested friend. He is always a favorite with the militia and last night he received a great reception. Dr. Glazebrook spoke especially on the fact that the members of the company had entered upon a great heritage of liberties. He then referred briefly upon the wars since the Revolution, showing how the American people have steadily advanced the cause of righteousness. He thought the inheritance of the American soldier was something of which he might justly feel proud. He expressed the opinion that the time had come when America cannot be an idle spectator, in view of the important things happening beyond the seas and he urged that all be ready for future military emergency, and in closing his remarks the speaker said that his message to everyone was that they acquire knowledge and learn obedience.

After Dr. Glazebrook's stirring remarks three rousing cheers were given for the chaplain.

LITERARY NOTES.

"During 1905," writes George R. Metcalfe, M. E., in the March Technical World Magazine, "the railroads of the United States ordered new locomotives to the number of 6,300, together with 3,300 passenger cars and 340,000 freight cars. These last figures give a good idea of the relative importance of passenger and freight traffic to a large railroad. The rail mills started the new year with orders for 2,500,000 tons on their books. In spite of these great orders and in spite of the best efforts of the railroad managers, pile after pile of thousands of bushels of corn has been heaped up on the ground in Iowa, Kansas, and Nebraska, for want of storage room or transportation facilities; while in North Dakota alone over a million bushels of wheat has rotted on the ground for want of freight cars to move it."

Salaries for Judges.

Senator Freilinghuysen, of Somerset county, has introduced a bill fixing the annual salary of common pleas judges as follows: $7,500 in counties of over 200,000 inhabitants; $6,500 in counties of over 150,000; $5,000 in counties of over 100,000; $4,000 in counties of over 70,000; $3,000 in counties of over 35,000; $1,800 in counties of over 20,000; and $1,200 in smaller counties, these salaries to be in lieu of all fees.

Young Girls Committed.

Four of the five young girls implicated in the assault cases for which four Plainfielders were sent to State prison last week, have been placed in the House of the Good Shepherd at Newark by Chief Kiely. They will be kept there until they attain their majority.

GAY COSTUMES GALORE

Scores of Masked Dancers at Gesang and Turn Verein's Annual Ball.

AFFAIR A BIG SUCCESS

"Ballet Girl" Causes a Sensation—150 Dancers Participate in Grand March Led by Charles F. Meyer, Sr.

Marked by one of the most congenial gatherings that has ever assembled in Saengerbund Hall, the seventeenth annual ball of the Gesang and Turn Verein passed off Monday. In point of attendance and general success it went far beyond everyone of its sixteen predecessors. From early in the evening until nearly daylight this morning, the dancing floor was crowded, presenting a brilliant picture to spectators through the great variety of gay costumes adopted by the merry-makers.

The grand march was held at 10:15 and 150 men and women with faces hidden beneath masks and all manner of grotesque attire, took part. There were clowns and harlequins, Happy Hooligans and other members of the tramp fraternity, colored minstrels, negro mammies, girls, queens, sailors, dairy girls and others in one ever-changing array. Charles F. Meyer, Sr., the veteran of a hundred similar affairs, led the way about the hall and in making this followers form balanced figures was assisted by the other members of the committee, Mrs. John Retzer and Mrs. John Soukup. Four had costumes of one line and four another, contrasting with the attire of the committeemen who adopted French court dress.

While many of the suits worn kept the crowd "guessing," by the end of the evening was made by Walter Chandler, of Spring avenue. He appeared on the floor in a ballet girl's costume of flaming red, with low neck and a dizzy blonde wig. The older women who came to look on uttered sharp "ah's" and then consulted with one another as to which one of their sisters had braved criticism to the extent of some six inches or less of it. The men were also completely deceived and those who sought the favor of a dance with the mysterious young woman were answered in a squeaky voice that convinced them more than ever that it was not a man. Even after Mr. Chandler had removed his mask, newcomers were fooled as his face has been cleverly powdered and painted in a show girl.

Among the other costumes noted were the following: Queen Elizabeth, Mrs. Frank Hayland; "Three Little Girls in Blue," the Misses Lillie Stenzenberger, Gretchen and Josefie Giebeler; sailor boys, Mrs. Albert Perry, Mrs. George Gronbeck, Miss Eva Perry, Miss Mary Perry, Miss Eva Dekune and Miss Nettie Dean; school girls, Mrs. J. NAME HOUSE PHYSICIAN

Muhlenberg's Governors Select Dr. William H. Anthony For the Place.

A GRADUATE OF PENN

Resolutions on Death of Paul Taylor Brown—Members to Attend His Funeral This Afternoon.

By the action of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital at a special meeting in the Castro, last Monday, the institution is to have a house physician, or interne for the first time in its history. Dr. William H. Anthony, of Catawissa, Penn., has been appointed to that position, his term of service being until October 1 next. By the arrangement, during the summer another physician will be selected for the position to succeed Dr. Anthony, when his time expires.

Dr. Anthony was graduated from the medical department of the University of Pennsylvania, Class '02, and he comes to Plainfield highly recommended. He will report to enter upon his duties at once. The appointment of a house physician will not make any material changes at the hospital, as some have supposed. Miss Wildey will continue as matron, as will also other arrangements. The only difference is that there will be a physician on duty there to attend to emergency and other cases needing his attention.

The board also passed a set of resolutions on the death of Paul Taylor Brown, a late member, who died a week ago at Nassau, Bahamas, and a copy was ordered sent to Mr. Brown's family. A majority of the board attended the funeral services of Mr. Brown, held from the home in Netherwood, this afternoon.

H. E. NEEDHAM RESIGNS AS SCHOOL TRUSTEE

SUCCESSOR TO BE NAMED AT REGULAR ELECTION NEXT MONTH.

At its regular meeting Monday the North Plainfield Board of Education received a letter and communication from H. E. Needham tendering his resignation as a member of the body. In it he stated that a pressure of business matters and his enforced absence from the borough made it impossible on his part to attend to the duties devolving upon the office. The resignation was accepted with regret and a resolution was passed conveying to Mr. Needham the thanks of the board for the efficient services rendered during his term.

According to the State law, the school trustees are permitted to name the successor in an instance of this kind, but as the regular election is to be held March 20, the matter was deferred until then. Last night's session practically marked the expiration of the terms of three other members, Messrs. Townsend, Woodruff and Miller. Mr. Miller was elected to fill the unexpired term of the late John Willard, while three others have served three years. Mr. Needham's successor will be elected for one year, as his term ended in March, 1907.

BUILDING TO OVERLOOK FAMOUS BATTLE SCENE

JERSEY COMMISSION GETS CREAM OF SITES FOR LOCATION OF BUILDING.

Governor Stokes and the members of the New Jersey commission to the Jamestown Exposition have returned from Norfolk after having selected the site for the New Jersey building and made a general inspection of the grounds of the projected exposition. The fair will take place next year and will mark the terminal of the settlement of Jamestown.

The commission unanimously selected Colonel Lewis T. Bryant, of Atlantic City, the chief of the department of factory and workshops, as secretary and executive officer of the commission. Colonel Bryant held a similar position with the St. Louis Exposition commission, and was very successful. His salary will probably be $2,500 a year, and the work will extend over a greater part of two years.

A special committee, consisting of Clarence E. Breckenridge, Wallace M. Scudder, Harry W. Leeds and E. L. Stevenson, was named to prepare for the Legislature a statement showing just what kind of exhibits ought to be made by the State and the probable cost of each. It is anticipated that about $35,000 will be asked for, in addition to the $25,000 already appropriated by the State.

All the members of the commission are enthusiastic over the site given to New Jersey for its State building. The site is fronted by a park, with great lawns, extending to the water's edge, and almost immediately facing the spot where the battle between the "Monitor" and "Merrimac" was fought.

REFORM WORK IMPEDED

Rahway Reformatory Chaplain Says Legislators are Prejudiced Against Institution.

AN ASSURED SUCCESS

Lecturer Declares Drink Is Responsible for Downfall of Eighty Per Cent. of the Criminals.

Some conception of the work done by the Rahway Reformatory, and of the hardships and impediments suffered by those who carry it on, was given to the members of the Men's Club of the Congregational church by a talk on the institution by Rev. Charles L. Cooder, its chaplain, last night. Informal and discussive in tone, the address was marked by a degree of interest even higher than that which naturally centers about the subject of criminology.

Mr. Cooder dwelt at some length on the difficulties besetting the management of the reformatory. For one thing, there is a serious lack of room; 200 of the 400 inmates must sleep in the corridors outside the cells. The Legislature does not appear to be ready to enlarge the structure, and Mr. Cooder laid the reluctance to political prejudice. The southern end of the State and Mercer county hoped to get the reformatory when it was planned, and the legislators from those counties are not very enthusiastic over its advancement. Mr. Cooder said a campaign against this indifference, through the medium of talks in churches, was to be carried on.

Of the 400 inmates, about 100 are "trusties"—men who are allowed to do pretty much as they please. The trusties are on the last stretch toward parole and freedom. They are trusted absolutely. Men wearing the neat pink-striped uniform of the trusty are common sights on Rahway's streets, driving reformatory carts or doing reformatory errands. They repay the trust by standing as a barrier between the moody, unruly, vicious inmates of the lower type, who are always on the verge of rebellion. Outbreaks are frequently planned by the desperate class, and it is the trusties who hold the mass of prisoners in check.

Mr. Cooder gave the ratio of religious denominations in the first 500 inmates registered. The Roman Catholics numbered 177; Methodists, 116; Baptists, 63; Presbyterian, 51; Episcopalians, 40; Lutheran, 30; Hebrews, 15; no religion, 6; Reformed, 5; Russian Catholics, 2; Unitarians, 1.

"Why, there doesn't seem to be any Congregationalists," said Mr. Cooder, looking up suddenly, and the club broke into applause.

"Maybe the Congregationalists are concealed under 'no religion,'" suggested one of the members humorously.

Mr. Cooder explained that the unreligious six were mostly Russian Anarchists.

"How do the Russian Anarchists turn out?" queried Alexander Millar.

"One of them turned out a while ago and we haven't been able to get him back yet," answered Mr. Cooder drily. "He has been up around here," he continued when the laughter subsided. "Dutch Ides—you have heard of him. Ides is not his real name; he is a thorough-going Russian Anarchist."

Mr. Cooder said the reformatory idea was undeniably successful. Eighty per cent. of the inmates went out and stayed out, cured of criminal habits. The reformatory management advised all departing trusties to conceal nothing of their past.

"We advise them to tell all," said Mr. Cooder, "and those who follow the advice come to no grief. All those sent back to us so far have been men who changed their names and tried to conceal their past."

Speaking on this line, Mr. Cooder declared that society had a great responsibility in deciding its attitude toward the reformatory graduate. How society received him, what it did for him and to him, make or unmake him.

A number of uniforms were shown. Among them was a light red one, in which recaptured fugitives are dressed.

Refreshments were served after the lecture. In the course of a talk with a group of members during supper, Mr. Cooder declared that between seventy-five and eighty per cent. of the men sent to Rahway owed their downfall directly to drink.

Trolley Car Takes a Mud Bath.

Trolley car 1365, of the main line, jumped the track at East Second street and Leland avenue, yesterday afternoon, and the front end sank in the soft ground almost to the platform. It took the emergency crew an hour to get it back in place.

Sesame Club Meeting.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the residence of Mrs. H. P. B. Chase, 916 Putnam avenue.

GIFT IN APPRECIATION OF MASON'S SACRIFICES

WILSON FREDERICK TO MAKE A PRESENT TO ANCHOR LODGE FRIDAY NIGHT.

Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., will have a gala time Friday night and all members of the craft have received invitations to attend the communication. Grand Master Workman Wakefield and other grand officers of the State will be in attendance.

The chief feature of the communication will be some presentations. One in particular will be a gift to be made to the lodge by Wilson Frederick, of Dunellen, in recognition of the sacrifices made by his brethren three years ago to save his life. Mr. Frederick was one of the victims of the Westfield wreck, he having been frightfully scalded in that disaster. Members of Anchor Lodge and others furnished the cuticle necessary for skin grafting operations on three-quarters of his body, whereby his life was saved.

What gift Mr. Frederick intends to make to the lodge is not known but he has informed Worshipful Master W. N. Runyon that he has something to present as a remembrance of the lodge's noble work when he was apparently dying.

All surviving charter members have received special invitations to attend the communication. After the addresses, refreshments will be served.

GOWNS FOR PHYSICIANS IN CONTAGIOUS CASES

PRECAUTION GENERALLY FOLLOWED, BUT HEALTH BOARD ISSUES REQUEST.

Health Officer Leon Thurlow has been instructed by the Board of Health to call the attention of physicians to the necessity of their wearing gowns when attending patients afflicted with contagious diseases. The object is to prevent the germs being carried to others. This action is in line with many other precautions adopted by the Board to stay the spreading of contagion.

According to the health officer, as a rule physicians in Plainfield already comply with this requirement, but there are a few who possibly have been a little lax in the matter. The gown is taken by the physician to the house of the patient when he is called on attendance. It is kept there and when the doctor's services are ended the gown is disinfected together with other things in the house.

The Board's action was taken at the regular meeting yesterday afternoon. Mr. Thurlow will communicate with all doctors in the city and borough respecting the matter within a few days.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY ENJOYS PROSPERITY.

First M. E. Organization Makes Excellent Reports.

Officers were elected and reports presented at the annual meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First M. E. church in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon. The reports were gratifying, showing the receipts during the year to be $379 and the disbursements $262.55. While the six new members received yesterday, the society has a total membership of fifty, of which twenty-one are life members. All of the reports show the society to have had one of the most prosperous years in its history.

The officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Mrs. E. Clark, Jr.; first vice president, Mrs. George H. Whitney; second vice president, Mrs. E. A. Edgar; third vice president, Mrs. George Rittenhouse; treasurer, Mrs. James W. Jackson; recording secretary, Mrs. J. Sperry Doane; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Nelson A. Miller; Reading Circle secretary, Mrs. John McNaughton; mite box secretary, Mrs. Samuel Bingaman.

After the business, there was a social hour and tea was served, while the members recounted their success of the year in mission work.

New Style Cars.

The Public Service Corporation has decided to use a new style of car on the main line during the summer. One side of the car will be of the closed type and the other open. This arrangement with the single-end motor style will make it possible to handle large crowds better and will be an advantage in rainy weather.

Robert Goldsack, one of the mailing clerks at the postoffice, is detained at home by illness.

WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Health Board Issues Circular For Consumptives and Those Living With Them.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

Dread Disease, It Says, Chiefly Caused by Spitting—Preventable and Curable—General Information.

A circular setting forth in detail valuable hints for consumptives and those living with them has been issued by the Board of Health. It will be distributed among all known to be afflicted with the disease and in order to carry out the plan physicians will be asked to supply Health Officer Thurlow with the names of patients suffering with the contagion.

It is stated first and foremost that consumption is a preventable and curable disease and that it is chiefly caused by the filthy habit of spitting.

The circular follows:

"Consumption is a disease of the lungs which is taken from others, and is not caused by colds, although a cold makes it easier to take the disease. It is caused by the Bacillus of Tuberculosis, a particular form of germ. This germ grows in the lungs of the consumptive patient in enormous numbers and the material (called sputum or spit) coughed up by the patient contains a great many of them. When this sputum is allowed to dry, it may become powdered and be blown about in the air. Any person breathing this air may take the germs into his lungs and after a time become consumptive.

"Consumption can frequently be cured if its nature is recognized early and if proper means are taken for its treatment. In a great many cases it is not a fatal disease.

"It is not dangerous to live with a consumptive if the matter coughed up by him be promptly destroyed. This matter should not be spit upon the floor, carpet, stove, wall or sidewalk, but always in a cup kept for that purpose. The cup should contain carbolic acid in a five per cent. water solution (six teaspoons full in a pint of water). This solution kills the germs. The cup should be emptied into the water closet at least twice a day and carefully washed with boiling water. If paper or pasteboard cups are used, the cup with its contents, should be burned and a new one substituted. The paper or pasteboard cup is the better plan. Handkerchiefs used by the patient should, each day, be boiled by themselves in water for half an hour and then washed. It is far better, however, to use worthless cloths and burn them instead of boiling and washing. When away from home, if paper or pasteboard cups are not used, the patient should spit into handkerchiefs or cloths. These should not be carried loose in the pocket but in a tobacco pouch or other waterproof receptacle. On returning home, the handkerchiefs should be boiled or the cloths burned, and the pouch carefully washed with carbolic acid and water.

"Great care should be taken by the patient to prevent the hands, face and clothing from becoming soiled with sputum. The lips are particularly apt to become smeared with the sputum, and the hands, also, when handkerchiefs are used. Both face and hands should be frequently washed with hot water and soap. The kissing of consumptive patients is very dangerous, especially to children. Male patients should not wear beard or mustache but should be clean shaven.

"When coughing, sneezing, etc., a fine spray is thrown off by the patient from the mouth, so that the consumptive should always hold a piece of cloth or handkerchief before the mouth during these acts.

"A consumptive should have his own bed and if possible, his own room. The room should be light, airy, and as large as possible. Carpets, curtains and upholstery should not be used. If already in use, they should be removed and disinfected. A window should always be open day and night.

"The patient should keep out of doors the greater part of the day; if warmly wrapped, it is a good plan to sleep on some protected part of the porch during the resting hours.

"The patient should have nourishing food, especially an abundance of good, pure milk and eggs. He should have plenty of fresh air and light and the position suited to the general character of the disease. The patient should avoid swallowing the sputum and should abstain from excesses of all kinds, alcoholic, etc.

"The patient's clothing, night robes, sheets, pillow slips, etc., may be disinfected and rendered harmless by boiling in water for half an hour.

TO RID STATE OF PEST

Board of Health Approves Expenditure of $350,000 to Kill the Mosquito.

PASSES RESOLUTION

Skeeter Thrives in One-third of State and Affects Three-fourths of the Population.

Plainfield's Board of Health has set itself on record as favoring such expense on the part of the State as will effectually rid New Jersey of the mosquito. A resolution to that effect was adopted at a meeting of the Board yesterday, and copies will be sent to Governor Stokes and the Legislature.

It is estimated that $350,000 will be required for the purpose. According to the Board the mosquito affects one-third of the State's area and three-fourths of its population.

The resolution as signed by all the members of the Board follows.

"Whereas, It has been indisputably established by scientific observation that the great bulk of the mosquitoes which breed in standing water on salt marshes migrate long distances, even exceeding twenty miles, and effect over one-third of the State; and

"Whereas, Said salt marsh mosquitoes are a nuisance, a menace to health, a factor adversely affecting the value of lands, and a source of great annoyance to laborers working out of doors; and

"Whereas, It has been undisputably established by scientific observation that the great bulk of mosquitoes which breed in standing fresh water travel short distances, and hardly enter houses, thereby making a nuisance, a menace to health and a factor for depressing the value of lands; and

"Whereas, It has been estimated that the cost of draining or filling the salt marsh areas within the State is comparatively insignificant, and that the sum of $350,000 is ample to abolish practically all such breeding places in the State of New Jersey; and

"Whereas, It has been established that the portions of the coast of New Jersey where the most numerous breeding places are most numerous have the smallest number of inhabitants; therefore it is

"Resolved, That the financial aid of the State is necessary to affect the abolishment of these breeding places; and it is further

"Resolved, That we hereby urge the Honorable Governor of the State and Honorable Senators and the Honorable Representatives to pass such laws and appropriate such sums of money as will most quickly and most effectually remove the nuisance which affects more than three-fourths of the whole State's population; and be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Senator and Representative of this district and to both local papers."

ENDORSE COLORED MAN FOR FEDERAL JOB

CITY COMMITTEE WANTS JESSE LAWSON APPOINTED RECORDER.

There was a small attendance of members at the meeting of the Republican City Executive Committee, last night, and in consequence little business was considered. The committee in giving its endorsement of Jesse Lawson, formerly of Plainfield, for the positon of Recorder in Washington, now held by a colored man from North Carolina, wrote to Senators and Congressmen urging their support in this matter.

Last night replies were received from these Senators and Congressmen acknowledging the endorsement and promising to do all in their power to secure for Mr. Lawson the appointment. It is understood that President Roosevelt is quite favorable to Mr. Lawson, having heard of his excellent work in the Pension Department, where he has been for many years.

The committee also endorsed Elias H. Bird for re-appointment as postmaster and this has been forwarded to Washington. It was reported that the list of additional members of the committee is not yet complete, but will probably be presented at the next meeting for action. In the absence of President Charles J. Flak, Mayor James F. Buckle presided at the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dunbar, of Craig place, will entertain the whist club of which they are members, at their home Friday evening.

TUCKER BILL IS ALL BAD

Corporation Counsel Marsh Contends It is Unconstitutional and Harmful.

HIS LEGAL OBJECTIONS

Passage of Bill Would Be Detrimental to Plainfield—Senator Ackerman Asked to Oppose It.

The legal objections to and bad features of the bi-partisan school board bill introduced in the Legislature by Assemblyman Tucker, of Elizabeth, which would seriously affect the local schools as told exclusively in The Daily Press, are summoned up in the following communication of Corporation Counsel Marsh to Senator Ackerman. Mr. Marsh acted on behalf of the Plainfield Board of Education.

Mr. Marsh' brief against the bill follows:

"On behalf of the Board of Education of the city of Plainfield, I desire to present the following objections to Assembly bill No. 209:

"It is plainly unconstitutional. Section 38 of the school law of 1903, which the bill proposes to amend, now applies to all cities in the State. The proposed amendment will make it apply to some of them only. The basis of exclusion is not population, or, indeed, any natural characteristic. The cities excluded are those cities which have heretofore done something, viz.: accepted the provisions of another section of the act, and thereby established appointive boards of none members. The bill therefore provides for bi-partisan boards of eight members in some cities, and leaves other cities with boards of nine members, who may be all of one political party or otherwise.

"The bill proposes to make its provisions mandatory in some cities and to provide that in the other cities it shall not be mandatory, but shall be operative only after the qualified voters so authorize it. The test whether the bill will apply in any given city is whether prior to the passage of the bill, that city has or has not voted to accept the provisions of Section 39 of the original act. Such cities shall have then already voted to accept the provisions of Section 39 are excluded from the provisions of the bill unless they voluntarily thereafter vote to accept the provisions of the bill. This privilege is limited to cities conditioned at the date of the approval of the act, and other cities cannot in any manner acquire such a privilege. The language of the bill in this connection is:

"The provisions of Section 1 of this act shall not apply to any school district which has heretofore accepted the provisions of Section 39 of this act.' This is plainly in violation of Article IV, Section 7, Part II, of the Constitution of the State. State vs Nealon 62 Atl. 182; Tetrault vs. Orange 26 Vr. 99; Murphy vs. Long Branch 61 Atl. 593; DeHart vs. Atlantic City 34 Vr. 223.

"The bill had its origin in the same political consideration which led to the adoption of the Police Commission Bill in 1902, p. 155, which the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional in the case first above cited.

"The bill would destroy the symmetry of the system of government of public schools which was established at the special session of the Legislature in 1903, after years of the most mature consideration and painstaking efforts of experienced educators and eminent counsel, and which system is now working admirably and to the satisfaction of all who are not influenced by political considerations.

"Many of the alleged benefits to be conferred by the bill are illusory. For example, it is not true that the bill establishes uniformity in the method of selecting and in the number of members of the Boards of Education in the different municipalities of the State, if the bill becomes a law and is held to be constitutional. Some cities will have eight members, and others nine. Some cities will have bi-partisan boards, and others will not have them. In some cities the terms of office will be three years, and in others the terms will be four years. In some, a vacancy in the board is required to be filled by a member of the same political party as his predecessor; and in other cities the best man may be chosen, regardless of political considerations.

"The bill will not divorce politics from the control and management of our public school system, but will introduce politics into the public school system. Now, Boards of Education are as free from political consideration as the courts themselves. As well require a bi-partisan Supreme Court or Court of Chancery as a bi-partisan Board of Education.

"None of the alleged benefits would enure to Plainfield, for here it is conceded that politics has never affected any public school question, and the personnel of the Boards of

M'ALL AUXILIARY'S PROSPEROUS YEAR

MRS. FREDERICK S. MEAD IS RELECTED PRESIDENT.

Interesting reports of the past year's work and election of officers comprised the business transacted at the annual meeting of the McAll Auxiliary at the Public Library this morning. In the absence of Mrs. Frederick Goodnow Mead, president, the chair was occupied by Mrs. Isaac L. Miller.

The reports showed the finances to be in excellent condition, there being a slight advance in the contributions over those of the previous year. The receipts for the year were over $1,000 from a membership of nearly 325. The local auxiliary supports entirely the McAll work at Limoges, France, and helpful letters were received and read from those in charge of the work there, affording much encouragement for greater effort on the part of the local members.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Lund; vice-president, Mrs. Lawrence Myers; secretary, Mrs. Augustus V. Healy; treasurer, Mrs. John Gray Foster. These representatives from the churches were also chosen: Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, Mrs. C. E. Zeller; Grace, Mrs. Frank O. Herring; Congregational, Mrs. William B. Wadsworth; Trinity Reformed, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck; First Baptist, Mrs. Walter M. McGee; First Presbyterian, Miss Addie Dietrich.

MISS UHLER THE BRIDE OF FRANK E. FAULKS

CEREMONY PERFORMED IN PRESENCE OF MANY GUESTS.

In the presence of a large gathering of guests, Miss C. Maude Uhler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Uhler, of South Plainfield, and Frank E. Faulks, of South Plainfield, were married at 7 o'clock last night. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home by Rev. James Buckley Faulks, D. D., of Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, uncle of the groom. The parlors and other rooms were very prettily decorated.

Miss Uhler's gown was of white silk mulle, trimmed with Duchess lace. She wore a bridal veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried white roses. The maid of honor was Miss Beadie Schlosser, of Boston. Miss Uhler, the bride, who wore white Paris muslin with pink trimmings. Miss Lillian Meeker, of this city, and Miss Emma C. Faulks, of South Plainfield, were bridesmaids. They carried bouquets of pink carnations.

The groom was attended by Harry G. Uhler, Jr., the bride's brother, as best man, and the ushers were William A. Reynolds, of this city; Harry Manning, of South Plainfield, and Earl C. Meyer, of Newark. The party assembled while the Lohengrin wedding march was played by Miss Hazel Meyer, of Newark.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held, during which both Mr. and Mrs. Faulks were showered with congratulations. They left later in the evening on a wedding trip and on returning will make their home at South Plainfield. The guests present were from Elizabeth, Newark, New York, Newton, Phillipsburg, Madison, South Plainfield, New Market, Oakland, Cal., Easton and Reading, Pa., and this city.

THEIR REQUEST GRANTED

City School Board Will Permit Dunellen Students to Enter Local High School.

ON ONE STIPULATION

Plan Will Be Continued Only So Long As Seating Accommodations Prove Adequate.

With the stipulation that the plan be continued only so long as it does not interfere with the city students, the local Board of Education has granted the request of the Dunellen authorities to permit its grammar school graduates to enter the Plainfield High School at regular tuition rates.

The request was made by President Wilson Frederick, of the Dunellen board, which decided that it could not possibly provide the high school education demanded by the State law. Plainfield has all the facilities and being within easy access a system of co-operation was decided upon. The action of the Dunellen board, in arriving at this conclusion, was indorsed by the citizens and negotiations were at once commenced. Superintendent Maxson carefully studied the question from all sides, and on his recommendation the city authorities voted in the affirmative. Dr. Maxson's report in detail was as follows:

"The question of admitting to our High School pupils from out of town is chiefly one of seating accommodations. If they can be admitted without in any way depriving Plainfield children of opportunities it will be an advantage to our own pupils to admit out-of-town pupils. In many ways a large High School is of much more advantage to a city than a small one. With the large school there is a larger number of teachers, so we can offer the public a much larger number of subjects to choose from and the chief subjects will have several divisions or classes, so that it will be possible to fit each pupil's needs more easily and exactly. In the small school some subjects have to be omitted because not enough pupils desire them to make it wise to form a class. If only two or three pupils wish trigonometry, for instance, it is expensive to form a class, but if twenty-five wish it, it is just as easy to teach trigonometry as any other subject, and if they are not put into trigonometry some other subject must be given to them.

"The outside pupils that we have received hitherto have been so distributed between the four classes that they have not required the appointment of an additional teacher, and their tuition money is nearly all gain; but the addition of twenty-five at a time might require an added teacher. Even in this case, however, the tuition money would more than meet this additional expense. (It would cost just as much for heating and ventilating, etc., without the additional pupils as it does with them.)

"Looking at the matter in a general way, I feel that while we are under no legal obligation to aid the children of our less fortunate neighbors just beyond the city limits, we are under moral obligation to aid them all we can without materially increasing the burden of our own city. The opportunities our own High School offers are far greater than any that Dunellen can ever offer, and by admitting their pupils to our school we shall confer a great boon upon their boys and girls without any increase in our expenses. The State is making a general effort to give every child within its borders an opportunity to secure a high school education and in many cases the only way to secure this is by sum such plan as this now proposed by Dunellen. By acceding to their request we do our part in aiding the State Board to carry out its plans for the good of the whole State.

"As to accommodations, after considering the matter with the High School principal, I am prepared to say that at present I think we can receive them without undue crowding our own pupils."

The Dunellen Board of Education, at its March meeting, last night, received a communication from Dr. Maxson, telling of the Plainfield Board's decision. It was formally accepted and plans will be made at once for the transfer of the pupils, Dunellen paying the required tuition fees.

Gardener Gets Right Dose.

Cortland B. Gardner, of Elizabeth, who was convicted over a year ago on an indictment of keeping a disorderly house, and who has since been able to delay the sentence of the court through appeals, was arraigned this morning and sentenced to three years in State prison and to pay a fine of $1,000. His case was particularly aggravating to the court, especially when he was ordered to appear and failed to do so.

DISMISSED COMPLAINTS

No Case Against Rev. J. W. Mitchell Justice Decides.

23 WITNESSES CALLED

Hearing Before a Large Crowd, Lasted Three Hours—Judge Advises a Love-Feast of Factions.

After a three-hour hearing, in which twenty-two witnesses were examined, the charge of disorderly conduct made against Rev. J. W. Mitchell, by Deacon Mansfield Robinson, as a counter-move to the Calvary church row, was dismissed by Justice Hand Wednesday. The case was dismissed on the ground that the act on which the charge was based, ordering the arrest of Rev. P. T. Morris in the pulpit, on warrant, did not constitute disorder.

"I cannot bring myself to see that this of itself constitutes a breach of the peace," says Justice Hand in the written decision, handed down this morning. "Were it otherwise, no one would be safe in swearing out a warrant and having an arrest made. The correspondence in the 'testimony,' the decision says further on, "was to the effect that the arrest was made in a very quiet and orderly manner. From other testimony it appears that the defendant was following the advice of his lawyer in pursuing the course he did."

In concluding the decision, Justice Hand says: "I would advise all concerned to get together in a love-feast, and settle their dispute without appealing to the criminal courts."

The court room was crowded to the doors a quarter of an hour before the time set for the opening. Judge Hand came in later and by the time the hearing opened there was no room at all inside the doors and very little in the hall. The audience was of all hues, with very little white in the variety. The supporters of the two sides followed the testimony with interest so deep that the collapse of the building would hardly have ruffled it. Encouraging exclamations came from different groups, as the witnesses gave testimony that appealed to them.

Former Justice F. J. Huff, who is now practicing law, sat on the bench with Justice Hand in the role of associate judge.

W. S. Angleman, counsel for the defense, made the usual motion to dismiss. Answering his query, Clarence L. Murphy, counsel for the prosecution, said he was proceeding under the law covering breaches of the peace, and Mr. Angleman asked for a dismissal on the ground that the complaint failed to show any breach of the peace. The court ordered the case on.

Deacon Mansfield Robinson, the complainant, was the first witness for the prosecution. He testified that the service at which Mr. Mitchell was alleged to have committed the disorder was a "sisters' meeting," and not in charge of Rev. P. T. Morris, whose claim to the pulpit Mitchell disputed on behalf of Rev. Mr. Bailey. Deacon Robinson said Mitchell brought on a lot of disorder, noise and hubbub by having Mr. Morris arrested. He described the arrest and the fuss that followed. The witness swore he was head deacon and had charge of all keys to the church property. He told how the trustees of the church had called Morris to the pastorate. He said the trustees did the calling under the church law.

In cross-examining the witness, Lawyer Angleman brought down on himself a sharp rebuke from the court. Justice Hand said the lawyer was handling the witness with undue severity, and he didn't intend to have anything like that in his court.

Rev. Mr. Morris took the stand and told his view of the occurrence and of the pastorate tangle. He is an unusually intelligent man, with practically no trace of dialect in his speech, and his testimony was presented in a strong, precise language.

He threw a little confusion into the prosecution's camp early in his testimony by bringing out the fact that Mr. Angleman had been present at the "sisters' meeting." Mr. Angleman looked a trifle tired as the statement was made.

Morris told how a committee of trustees had waited on him with the call to the pastorate on February 7. He admitted that the vote was 84 to 47 for Bailey at the congregational meeting, but said the trustees had found evidence of alleged illegal voting by Morris supporters. He understood that his forty-seven votes were all of undoubted regularity. A letter from the board of trustees, calling him to the pastorate at $40 a month was shown. Mr. Morris testified that the meeting at which he was arrested was in charge of a sister of the church, and that he was not in the position of one conducting the service at the time.

James H. Boding, Bertha Good and Rosa Morris, a daughter of the preacher, testified to the disturbance occasioned by Mitchell's action.

Deacon Spencer Conway, a founder of the church and Deacon Robinson's chief aide in the campaign for Morris, testified as to the call extended by the trustees, and showed a letter in which Morris accepted the charge. He said Bailey's majority in the congregational meeting was "a majority of falsehood."

Mr. Angleman asked the witness if Mitchell wasn't notified that he was no longer in charge as acting pastor after the arrest, the lawyer's intention being to show that Mitchell had been, on the Sunday night in question, the head of the church. Conway denied that Mitchell was the acting-pastor. He had merely filled the pulpit when the church could get no one else.

Rev. J. W. Mitchell was the first of the eight witnesses sworn by the defense. He told of the arrest, and denied that there was any disorder. He claimed to have been regularly in charge of the church, and was still its head.

Five of the seven deacons, Ransom, Barnes, Touzey, Mallon and Hurley, testified that there was no disorder at the meeting. Mrs. Brinkley, the "sister" in charge of the meeting, swore that it was one of the most prayerful and uplifting she had ever attended. There was no disorder, she said, "and Jesus was at the helm."

Rev. Mr. Bailey was sworn and testified to the call received after the congregational meeting. He said he would take up the Lord's work as soon as the trouble ended.

The question of who is who in the pastorate will be threshed out at a general council to be held at the church this afternoon.

DUNLAP ROW TO BE CHANGED IN CHARACTER

NEGRO FAMILIES WILL GO OUT; HOUSES RENOVATED.

The row of shanties on East Sixth street near Richmond, owned by the Abram Dunlap estate, is to be renovated and improved. The improvement of the property will change the character of the tenantry from black to white.

There are twelve houses in the row and the twenty families in them are all colored, but one, which is Italian. Over one hundred negroes, old and young, live there.

The improvement of the row was considered some time ago. It was realized that the Italian would make the houses the natural location for the men of the Scott shop, and the move was definitely announced yesterday. This morning dispossess notices were served on the tenants, giving them until April 1 to get out.

As soon as the tenants leave work on the houses will begin. They will be completely overhauled and put in first class modern shape. They will be all but rebuilt.

MAY ABOLISH PEW RENTS AT FIRST BAPTIST.

Suggested that Envelope System Be Substituted as Source of Revenue.

For the purpose of increasing the revenue from the weekly envelope system, the Men's Club of the First Baptist church has appointed a committee of twenty to make a canvass of the membership. This system of supporting the church expenses other than through the pew rents, has been in force but a few years and out of a membership of between 900 and 1,000 there are about 200 contributors by the weekly envelope system.

Another change that has been suggested by the Men's Association to be considered by the trustees of the church is that of abolishing pew rents entirely and depend upon the envelope system for its revenue. If a sufficient number of members agree to contribute to the church by this system, it would be difficult to give up the rentals obtained from the pews, for the revenue would be larger through the other system.

WILL GIVE AWAY LIQUOR.

Asbury Park Bonifacc Has a Plan to Beat Excise Law.

Col. Bly, of the Plaza Hotel, Asbury Park, believes he has hit upon a plan to serve liquors to his summer patrons without breaking the law. He will place a sign bearing the words, "Plaza Bar—Drinks Free to Patrons; No Liquor Sold."

Over the bar in his hotel patrons will get liquor free, whether they order only a sandwich or a full dinner. Women unescorted will not be served. Col. Bly says he has obtained legal advice that he is within the law so long as he does not accept any money or its equivalent for the liquor dispensed.

His Leg Amputated at 87.

At eighty-seven years, Watson Wilson, of 24 State street, East Orange, has undergone the operation of amputation of his right leg. Though he is in a critical condition, the old man has rallied from the operation and is making a gallant fight for his life. Everything has been under treatment for a long time for an embolism which formed in one of the large veins in his leg. The passage of the blood was obstructed and remedies applied with a view to dissolving the clot failed to accomplish the desired result and gangrene supervened. It then became necessary to resort to amputation.

A Close Call.

"You never bought a gold brick, did you?" asked the admiring friend.

"Not exactly," answered Mr. Cumrox. "But I once came mighty near having a French count for a son-in-law."—Washington Star.

GASTON IS POSTMASTER

President Roosevelt Appoints Senators Reed's Friend to Somerville Berth.

HE SUCCEEDS COOPER

Charles H. Bateman Defeated Candidate—Frelinghuysen Recommended Gaston.

President Roosevelt has nominated John G. Gaston, acting postmaster of Somerville, to be the postmaster at that place. This settles the matter as far as Charles A. Bateman, present editor of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette, who was an active candidate for the post, is concerned.

Senator Frelinghuysen, chairman of the Somerset County Republican Committee, had agreed on Gaston for the post. Gaston is a friend of former Senator Charles A. Reed, who, as counsel for former Postmaster Cooper's bondsmen, had him appointed to the position temporarily. The differences between Senator Frelinghuysen and Senator Reed were settled at the outset of the last campaign.

Congressman Wood said that he was out of it and would recommend for appointment the man whom Senator Frelinghuysen selected. The matter terminated yesterday when Gaston was nominated by the President.

MISSIONARY WORKER ON MOUNTAIN WHITES

MRS. BASS TALKS ON DEPLORABLE CONDITIONS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Mrs. N. W. Bass, National organizer for the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, who has been working among the local home mission societies, addressed the society of the First M. E. church in Vincent chapel, last night. Mrs. E. Clark, president of the church, was in charge of the meeting and after a song service, conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea, and a solo, "Just For Today," by Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell, Mrs. Bass was introduced.

She told of the work of the home missionary society, presenting the many problems confronting it, especially in the large cities where there is a large influx of foreigners who must be looked after. The work among the colored people of the South was described, and especially interesting was her story of the mountain whites of the South. She related incidents of extreme poverty and ignorance among these people. She said that they lack religious instruction and great numbers do not even know what the Bible is and are unable to read. The are located in the mountains of North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky and Alabama. In closing her remarks, Mrs. Bass touched briefly on the work among the New Mexicans.

After the meeting an invitation was given those not members to join the society, and a number did so.

SIX SENTENCES

Prisoners Arraigned in the Court of Quarter Sessions Yesterday.

In the Court of Quarter Sessions at Elizabeth, Wednesday, before Judge Vail, several persons were arraigned and sentenced.

Frederick Hand, recently convicted of the larceny of chickens, was sentenced to pay a fine of $10.

Thomas Brady, who pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with breaking and entering, was placed in the hands of the probation officer.

Harry Inman, who recently pleaded guilty to an assault and battery, was sentenced to one day in jail. He has already been confined in jail thirty-one days.

Joseph Schulze, charged with destroying telephone wire, was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $100 to appear for trial at the May term of oyer and terminer.

Stanislau Mercovage, indicted for assault and battery, was admitted to $200 bail to appear for trial at the next term of court.

Annual Auto Parade.

With the increased number of automobiles in Plainfield and vicinity, the annual auto parade to be held in June will undoubtedly be an interesting event. Although no steps have been taken as yet to arrange for the event, a meeting will probably be held within a few weeks for that purpose. Not only has the number of machines increased, but the style of them will make it possible to have a parade that will be well worth seeing.

Grant Family Dinner.

Miss F. May Grant, of East Seventh street, sang several selections at the Grant family dinner given at the St. Denis Hotel, New York, on Tuesday, February 27. The speakers of the evening were Major General Frederick Dent Grant, Congressman T. E. Burton, Rev. Dr. N. Mcgee Waters and Judge Ralph M. Grant.

P. H. S. GRADUATE'S ODE TO THE ALUMNI

MRS. B. K. ULRICH'S POEM READ AT DEDICATION EXERCISES.

Mrs. Bessie Kenyon Ulrich, of the class of 1878, wrote the "Ode to the Alumni" for the High School dedication exercises and as it attracted much favorable comment it is here with reproduced:

Old Time may hang up his sickle;
We'll give him the laugh to his face,
For we've tied him fast by the forelock
And he'll not get into this place.

So make no mistakes in your greetings;
Counting up years since we met;
Don't talk about centuries and cycles,
For we all know each other yet.

You will find no gray hairs nor wrinkles,
Keep those honors out of sight,
For we're always young as graduates,
And we'll have our fling tonight.

Of course we can't help thinking
Of a certain Commencement night,
You boys in your first real dress suit,
And we girls in long dresses of white.

Do you think that with our best effort,
We could conjure up the delight,
Of the wisdom and glory and honor,
We felt that eventful night?

How those poor old Greeks and Romans
In their grave-clothes rose each year
To give to the seniors a seance,
For the public's patient ear.

Those were wonderful essays,
Wrought in the sweat of the brow,
But 'twould tax our wits to the utmost,
To comprehend them now.

But all this is retrospection,
It's too much of yesterday—
Old Time will break loose from his fetter
And will claim the right of way.

Yet, old things are the choice things,
Where memory clings so strong,
And the dear haunts are the old haunts,
That we have remembered so long.

So tonight we'll burn a taper,
At the shrine of the dear old High,
For to us her walls were sacred,
In the years that have gone by.

With hearts that are just as loyal,
We turn to this grand new High,
And in letters of radiant sunrise,
We read her true destiny.

Those walls so noble and spotless,
Shall be decked with the laurels of fame,
And the youths who pass through her portals
Shall win her a wonderful name.

And we'll give a hand to these seniors
The first to greet the new High;
We'll quaff them a toast to their future,
In the tanks of this Alumni.

And here's to our Alma Mater,
And here's to the faculty,
And here's to all these graduates
And those who are yet to be.

And here's to our City Fathers,—
Through them these foundations lie,
And we'll drain our cup to the last red drop
To the Board of the Plainfield High.

FROM HER OWN MOUTH.

The cleverest of lawyers occasionally find their match when engaged in their favorite occupation of breaking down an opponent's witness; and this frequently applies to the case of "hornet" individuals.

The following wordy contest between a hostler and a counsel is one of the most amusing specimens of the kind:

"Now, I ask you, sir, under what authority you are prepared to swear to the mare's age?"

"Under what authority?" said the hostler interrogatively.

"You are to reply, and not repeat the question put to you."

"I don't consider a man's bound to answer a question afore he's time to turn it in his mind."

"Nothing can be more simple, sir, than the question put, and I repeat it. Under what authority do you swear to the animal's age?"

"The best authority," said the witness gruffly.

"Then why such evasion? Why not state it at once?"

"Well, then, if you must have it"—

"Must! I will have it!" thundered the counsel, interrupting the witness.

"Well, if you must and will have it," rejoined the hostler, with imperturbable gravity, "why, then, I had it myself from the mare's own mouth!"—Chicago Journal.

FANS HERE ARE ASLEEP

Unless Daab is Assured of Support, Plainfield Will Have no Team.

A MEETING SUGGESTED

Hoboken Manager Will Not Accept Offer From Denman—May Go to Morristown, However.

While fandom throughout the country is awakening from its winter lethargy local baseball fans have failed to take any steps toward having a first class team here this season. Everyone is waiting for some one to take the initiative and in consequence nothing is being done. One thing is sure, speedy action must be taken or the days of baseball prescribed here last year will not be witnessed on the local diamond.

Manager Philip Daab, of Hoboken, who gave Plainfield the best baseball in its history during 1905, is willing to assume his share of the responsibility and manage the team, providing there are others who will take the rest of the responsibility and support him. For him to finance and manage the team is out of the question and he will not do it. Several leading baseball enthusiasts have been approached on the subject, but as yet they have failed to interest the fans.

It is now suggested that a meeting be held soon and that all persons interested in having a team here this season be invited to attend. It is further suggested that Mr. Daab be asked to attend the meeting and give his views on the subject. In this way the ball could be started, and no doubt an organization formed that would support a strong team such as represented this city in 1905. It is conceded by the merchants that the team last year was a good advertisement for Plainfield and was instrumental in bringing many people to town. In a city the size of Plainfield it should not be difficult to support such a team, and it is believed that it can be done.

Mr. Daab lost money in Plainfield last year through a chain of circumstances that likely will occur again, but he believes that with an organization properly formed it would be possible to declare a dividend at the end of the season. He is perfectly willing to co-operate with the fans in any way that is satisfactory and practical. His team is well known as the strongest semi-professional aggregation in this part of the country and capable of playing the best ball. With proper support it can be brought here again.

There is much truth in a report that Manager Daab considered going to Westfield, but this arrangement is now off for good. Mr. Daab received a flattering offer from Manager Denman, and he was invited to meet the fans of Westfield and size it over. Mr. Daab informed the Westfield manager that he would not consider his proposition at all until the Plainfield matter was disposed of, but in view of other happenings he has now decided that he will not entertain any proposition from Westfield. He has received another offer to represent the Morristown-Chatham Club, but as yet has not given it much thought.

An effort will be made within a few days to fix a date for a meeting of the fans when Mr. Daab can be present. It has been suggested that a Saturday afternoon or night would be the best time and as soon as arrangements are completed the date will be announced.

Reports from the Westfield Standard indicate that baseball will be dead in that town this season. If this is true a team here would be sure to attract many lovers of the game.

A TOBACCO-USING NATION.

Three Hundred Thousand Tons of the Weed Smoked Last Year.

This country smoked 300,000 tons of tobacco last year. We smoked 7,689,377,000 cigars, an increase of 185,000,000 over last year. The cigarette consumption was 3,368,212,000, an increase of over 141,126,000 over last year, says the Nashville American. The snuff output was 21,131,000 pounds, an increase of nearly 1,000,000 pounds over the previous year. The production of smoking and chewing tobacco was 334,489,000 pounds, an increase of 3 per cent. These are the figures of The Tobacco Leaf.

The total value of the tobacco consumption in 1900 was $263,377,000, cigars and cigarettes costing over $160,000,000. The increase in the tobacco industry is shown by the figures of the last twenty years. In 1880 the value of the total product was, in round numbers, $116,000,000, in 1890 it was $195,000,000; in 1900 it was $263,000,000. Last year it was probably $300,000,000. Last year there exported $27,000,000 worth of tobacco and imported $22,000,000 worth in its various forms.

This is a tobacco-using nation. So many people smoke it is not difficult to imagine what becomes of 3,000,000,000 cigarettes, but what is done with 21,000,000 pounds of snuff? Who uses it? There is still considerable demand for snuff in the "back-woods" districts, and it is still used by women in the more remote rural regions and mountain sections of the South, but this would amount for only a small part of 21,000,000 pounds. Where are the snuff-dippers?

P.H.S. FIVE DEFEATS LEAL'S SCHOOL TEAM

PUBLIC SCHOOL LADS WIN FINAL GAME IN INTERESTED SERIES.

The Plainfield High School basketball five met the team from Leal's School at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon, in the second and last game of a series for the latter's city championship. Although P. H. S. was handicapped by the loss of the services of Collier and Smith, who were not permitted to play owing to scholarship requirements, the cleverly outclassed Leal's again and won by the score of 32 to 18.

Leal's started in hopefully, and for awhile it looked as though the teams were evenly matched, but the High School representatives steadily forged ahead and at the end of the first half they led by a score of 11 to 8. Both teams were encouraged at their showing in the first period of play and went into the game with even more spirit during the second half. Realizing that they were doomed to defeat, Leal's players began to use rough tactics, but this was of no avail, P. H. S. winning by a score of 33 to 18.

The best work for the High School boys was done by Caldwell, who did some accurate shooting, while Howard and Stuart Freeman accomplished some fine team work. Line, of P. H. S., although handicapped by size, played a steady game. For the private school boys, Captain Howard and Endicott did very creditable work. With this game decided the city scholastic league championship, the result being that P. H. S. City champion, having won all four games played. Leal's team is second with two victories and two defeats, while N. P. H. S. brings up the rear with four defeats and no victories. The lineup and score:

P. H. S.		Leal's.
Line	right guard	Lyman
H Freeman	left guard	Broxaw
S. Freeman	center	Endicott
Caldwell	right forward	Howard

Summary—Field goals—S. Freeman, 2; H. Freeman, 3; Caldwell, 7; Line, 2; Gavett, 2; Howard, 3; Endicott, 3; Alpaugh, 2; Broxaw, 1. Foul goals—H. Freeman, 1 out of 2. First half, P. H. S., 11; Leal's, 8; second half, P. H. S., 22; Leal's, 10. Final score—P. H. S., 33; Leal's, 18. Referee—Dr. W. Kempton Browning. Scorer—Kenneth Robbins. Timer—Arthur Reed.

Following the above game there was another contest between the first and second teams of these schools. P. H. S. again won, by the score of 16 to 2. Captain Leggett and Morris did the best work for the winning team. Dallas excelled for Leal's. This game also ends the junior scholastic league, P. H. S. winning this championship with three victories and one defeat. Leal's school and N. P. H. S. follow in order. The lineup:

P. H. S. 2d.		Leal's 2d.

A Notable Woman.

Mrs. Fanny Bullock Workman lately lectured before a large and enthusiastic audience at the Royal Geographical Society of London on Himalayan exploration. Sir George Goldie, the president, said in introducing her, that a paper by a woman was so infrequent as to merit some comment. He could remember only the single instance of Mrs. Bishop's having read before the society. It was a matter for congratulation to the society and the geographic world when a woman like Mrs. Workman was able to put before them a valuable record of exploration. Mrs. Workman was received with cheers. Her subject was the first exploration of the Hot Gunga and Sosbon glaciers, Baltistan, and at the close of her lecture, which was illustrated by magnificent views, Sir Frank E. Younghusband, of Thibet fame, opened the discussion. At the close a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Workman for her able paper.

Basketball Schedule.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball five, first team, has an exceptionally strong schedule for this month, beginning with the third and deciding game with the Atlantic City Y. M. C. A. Saturday night. Each team has won a game by a close score, and today's contest will be of great interest. Other contests arranged for March include the last game with Newark Y. M. C. A., at Newark; two with Montclair, one here and one at Montclair, and one game with Orange Y. M. C. A., on the local floors. All of these teams are well-known in the basketball world and they will make the locals hustle to win.

NEW CIVIC ASSOCIATION

Formally Organized Last Night In the Interest of Good Government.

A NON-PARTISAN BODY

Officers Are Chosen—Association Favors Mayor Smalley's Sewer System Proposition.

The Plainfield Civic Association was formally organized Friday. It is non-partisan in politics and the announcement is made that it proposes to strike at any existing evil regardless of who is hit. The association's principal objects are set forth in a paragraph of the constitution adopted last night:

"To promote and foster the prosperity of the city of Plainfield and the State of New Jersey. To devote its efforts to the interests of good government irrespective of politics. To crystallize public opinion in the matter of regulating taxation, thereby becoming a body of recognized authority."

The officers elected were William Jeffery, president; Francis E. Bodin, first vice-president; N. Douglas Drake, second vice-president; William B. Granzatt, Jr., secretary, and William H. Rogers, treasurer.

The subject of sewerage in the borough was discussed during the evening, and the following resolution unanimously adopted was proposed by Mr. Drake, chairman of the committee on public improvement:

"Wherefore, deeming it to the best interests of the citizens of North Plainfield for the future benefit and betterment of the borough that a proper sewerage system should be had and maintained;

"Now, therefore, we, members of the Plainfield Civic Association, heartily endorse any measure seeking to secure such an improvement;

"Be it resolved, therefore, that we express to the Mayor and Borough Council of said borough our hearty approval of any means whereby this improvement may be obtained and urge the calling of a public meeting to secure an expression of the citizens in the matter."

A letter of regret was received from Bolton Hall, the New York lawyer and sociologist, expressing his inability to attend the meeting and extending his earnest approval of the objects of the association and promised his hearty support.

The Plainfield Civic Association meets every Friday night and many Plainfield citizens who are interested in the welfare of the community have expressed a desire to become members.

DISGRACEFUL SCENE ON TROLLEY CAR 1706

PASSENGERS STOP CONDUCTOR FROM TRYING TO EJECT WOMAN PASSENGER

Main line trolley car No. 1706, which reached the Watchung avenue terminus at 8 Thursday night, bore a conductor who evidently served his apprenticeship on the New York subway and who gave an exhibition that would even put some of those rough-shod individuals to shame.

This particular knight of the bell cord got into an argument with a respectable looking woman well past middle life over the payment of fare, just after the car had left Westfield. He claimed she had only given him a nickle, while she insisted that it was a dime to pay her way from Cranford to this city. She refused to present another fare and after the car had passed Terrill road he essayed to put her off. She clung to the door and a struggle followed in which the conductor showed anything but common decency, acting the part of a bully to perfection.

Male passengers in the car interfered and one of them offered to pay the disputed five cents, thus ending the struggle, though the woman declared as before that she had already done so. She had considerable money in a pocketbook and this was torn from her grasp during the scuffle and the contents scattered on the floor. The cop worn by the conductor bore No. 1,411.

Gave His a Start.

Holding up a pair of antique candlesticks, an auctioneer said:

"Give me a start."

"Fourpence!" came a voice from the crowd.

"What!" exclaimed the horrified auctioneer.

"Ah!" said the bidder, "I thought that would give him a start."—London Tit-Bits.

Explained.

"Was it, ma'am?" innocently asked the tricky milkman, "well, that's that lazy farmer's fault. He overslept himself yesterday morning and didn't milk the cows until three hours later than usual."—Philadelphia Press.

STAMPS ARE VALUABLE

Bill in Congress to Purchase Flemington Man's Collection.

VALUED AT $20,000

Private Dealers Are Willing to Pay Twice That Sum for H. E. Deats' Collection.

The bill recently introduced into the House of Representatives by Congressman Gardner, of Massachusetts, appropriating $20,000 for the purchase of the collection of drawings, proofs and essays of United States documentary and proprietary stamps, now the property of Hiram E. Deats, of Flemington, has behind it 600,000 philatelists in the United States. Included in this great army are many of the leading lawyers, doctors, clergymen, professors, business men and scientists in the country. The stamp collectors ask that this unique collection be bought by the Government and placed in the Congressional Library.

It is pointed out that to permit such a collection to be sold to individuals, thus scattering and dissipating the work of twenty years by Mr. Deats, would be to deprive the Government of important and valuable relics of the Civil War and reconstruction period. The period covered by this collection is from 1862 to 1883, and these drawings, proofs and essays are of tremendous historical and educational importance, philatelists assert, from the fact that this was the vital period in the life of the republic—the war and financial recovery from its terrific drain upon the resources. The methods employed to meet these conditions led to various forms of taxation, the outer evidences of which found expression in the use of stamps affixed to documents. Some of these stamps are extremely rare and the original drawings, proofs and essays of these stamps are unique; many of them being unobtainable except in this collection.

Mr. Deats is an ardent stamp collector and has been president of the National Association of Stamp Collectors. Nearly twenty years ago he, as a boy, began making this collection of proofs and essays, and has followed the work until at the present time it numbers more than 20,000 pieces, and is practically complete. It is said that all the collections of the world, including those already possessed by the Government, do not equal that which Mr. Deats has offered to the United States.

The leading dealer in stamps in this country has assured Mr. Deats *that he can sell the collection at pri*vate sale for double the price asked the United States, but the owner declines to permit it to be broken up and scattered. With this object his collection has been a labor of love. It has been his ambition to see the collection made a part of the permanent possessions of the Government, thus preserving for all time the records in connection with the inception of the plan to raise funds with which to carry on the war and to meet subsequent demands. Richard Rathbun, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, who is in charge of the National Museum, has declared, after examining a single volume of the collection, that it would be little less than a crime to permit the collection to go elsewhere than to the United States Government.

The collection comprises fifteen volumes beautifully mounted and suitable for permanent display in the Congressional Library. Last summer Mr. Yerkes, commissioner of internal revenue, was permitted to examine one of the volumes. He became much interested and finally invited the man who had the volume to step into an adjoining room and view the Treasury collection artistically arranged in a great frame. Mr. Yerkes informed his guest that competent judges had informed him that the Treasury collection was worth $200,000. The guest replied that he would make a perfect duplicate of the Treasury collection from the Deats collection and still have left four-fifths of the collection, *including all the very valu*able pieces. This statement appeared to produce a profound impression upon Mr. Yerkes.

Mr. Deats for fifteen years has been a member of the board of corporators of Peddie Institute, of Highstown, serving ten years as its secretary. Since 1894 he has been a member of the board of trustees of Bucknell University, at Lewisburg, Pa. He is a member of the American Historical Association, the New Jersey, Virginia and other historical societies, and is the publisher of The Jerseyman, devoted to history. He is of a studious mind, and a lover of antiquities. He says he is willing to sell to the Government for $20,000 what the leading stamp dealers in the country have practically offered him $35,000 for, for the purpose of private sale. Officials of the Government who are competent to pass upon the value of the collection, and who realize the importance of retaining it intact, have expressed a desire to appear before the committees on library, in the Senate and House, and urge its purchase.

Included in the fifteen volumes is the original order for private proprietary stamps of the Butler & Carpenter Co., with 200 original approved proofs attached, a great many of which are the original designs, some in pen, others in pencil, and many made up in part of photos with added design in pen or pencil. The approved dies are signed by the different commissioners of internal revenue, beginning with George S. Boutwell, in August, 1862, the first commissioner, and ran to E. D. Pratt, in 1875. These original dies are of the greatest value, and bear the same relation to the finished product that the original manuscript of Shakespeare would bear to the printed volume.

Book No. 2 of the Butler & Carpenter Co. contains original proof of the first stamp, together with many rarities, including stamps of the first issue, $200 denomination; second issue, $200 and $500; $5,000 and the high valued proprietary stamps.

Book No. 3 contains proofs en bloc, nearly 3,600 pieces, and No. 4 contains nearly 2,100 pieces.

Book No. 5 comprises complete sheets with imprints and plate number, extremely rare. No. 6 contains revenue proofs, beginning with one cent express through to $200 first issue, nearly 1,200 proofs, card, India and bond papers. No. 7, revenue proofs, beginning second issue, through second and third issues; 1,045 proofs.

Book No. 8 contains many great rarities, including substitution of allegorical figure (Commerce) in place of portrait of Washington. Books 9, 10, 11, 12 and 13 contain great numbers of proofs, and the essays and experiments in the way of revenue and match and medicine stamps. Book No. 14 is a collection of match and medicine stamps. Book No. 15 is a bound volume of proofs of second and third issues and first proprietary issue, and $200, $300 and $5,000 stamps.

The members of the great philatelic societies of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and other cities, and the great mass of collectors throughout the country will appeal to Congress to save this wonderful collection intact.

STATE'S INCREASE IS $3,134,102.66

SENATOR COLBY ATTEMPTS TO SHOW HOW CLOSE HE WAS TO STOKES' PLAN.

With the exception of Frank T. Lloyd, general counsel for all the railroads during the present session, and others directly or indirectly concerned in the railroad side of the question, everybody who discussed the subject of equal taxation Friday appeared satisfied over the unanimous passage of the railroad tax law in the assembly and predicted similar action in the senate and executive approval at an early date.

Senator Colby has prepared an analysis that the total revenue under the Perkins bill will amount to within $4,000 of the revenue under the Martin or Arrowsmith bills, being $4,998,291.87 under the former and $4,998,897.87 under the latter, making a gross increase over the existing law of $3,134,102.66, being the difference between the present one-half of one per cent. and the average rate.

Continuing, the senator says the only essential point of difference is that the Perkins law retains the main stem tax for the State, adding $1,700,000 to the $1,400,000 increase on personal and franchise tax, which the bills make use or apportion to the several municipalities.

The latter plan will, of course, be followed, and it will be used in the first instance to wipe out entirely the State school tax, which last year amounted to $1,887,710, and for the current year will exceed $2,000,000.

What disposition will be made of the remaining $1,100,000 has not been determined, but it will probably be utilized to eliminate some in*direct mode of State tax now exist*ing, such as the care of the insane in part by counties, as is the custom now, instead of by the State as a whole.

Mr. Lloyd, in referring to the bill, said it was most unjust and imposed a burden on railroad property out of all proportion to that assessed against other classes of property.

If other property was assessed at true value as the railroad property is, Mr. Lloyd added, the railroads would not object to any feature of the Perkins bill except the franchise tax.

What Senator Colby omits to say is that of the method of distribution had been his way, the counties of New Jersey would not get their pro rata of these increased moneys through the school moneys and other ways, but Hudson and Essex counties would get the great bulk.

Rebate on Light Bills.

With the bills just sent out by the Public Service Corporation for the past month's gas and electric lighting, it is noticed that in every case there is a rebate according to the new rates recently adopted by the company.

Another Carnival.

Members of the Germania and Turnverein have decided to hold a carnival in Saengerbund Hall for eight days beginning April 21, for the benefit of the band concert fund.

J. E. Townsend, of East Sixth street, has recovered from an attack of the grip.

CLOSE TO THE PEOPLE.

In Line at the White House.—Homer Hoch, of Marion,—"Our son Homer"—attended a White House reception when he was in Washington, and tells about it: "The line winds around two or three rooms, and you can't see the President until you are close enough to shake hands with him. A fellow in uniform asks you your name, and you tell him your name is Hoch. You turn a corner, find yourself right in front of the President, and as you reach out to shake hands the fellow in uniform announces in stentorian tones, 'Mr. Polk!' You bow your bowels, although you had always gone by the name of Polk, and before you know what has happened, or get a squint at the richly gowned ladies standing in line to watch you perform, you are being hustled on your way out to be numbered with the glad and festive throng who have shaken hands with the President! Fellow citizens, it is something great."—Kansas City Star Marion (Kan.) Correspondence.

Lightning Change on the Road.—A story is going the rounds of the territory press of a farmer, living a few miles from Albuquerque, who with his old suit until everybody was tired of it, and his estimable wife was almost ashamed of him. But one day when selling produce in town he determined to buy a new suit and a happy thought struck him. He would surprise Eliza. So he bundled a new suit into the wagon, headed towards home, and at the bridge two miles from town he stood up in the wagon and "peeled" and threw the dispised old suit into the creek. Then he reached for his new clothes. They were gone—had jolted out of the wagon into the water. He cold and his teeth chattered as he skurried for home. He surprised Eliza even more than he anticipated.—Kansas City Journal.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 11: "A Christlike Life"—Mark 2: 45-45; ...an xiii, 34; Phil. ii, 5-8; ...ii, 13; 1 Pet. ii, 21-25; iii, 17, 18; Rom. iii, 21.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

What is the Christlike life?

Much has been talked and written about what Jesus would do if He was born and in the circumstances. Much of this has been good, more of it has been poor stuff, and not a little has been positively bad. Perhaps we may not be able to discover just what Jesus would do in any given circumstances, and if we did discover that it might not be at all what we should do, for His work and ours are not identical.

But it is of great benefit to us to *study the Christ life and find the prin*ciples which underlie it and which are for guidance in our decisions and doings.

Some one has well said that the history of the world is the biography of great men. The inference is that we should study such lives to discover the course they pursued, and then govern our lives accordingly. The greatest life ever lived was that of Jesus Christ. It was the soberest, sanest and altogether most manly life. It is the model which we are in all reasonableness to follow. What are its basal principles?

First and head stands the truth stated in Philippians, that Jesus Christ existing in the God form He did not count that a thing to be tightly held or grasped. There was a better thing than this to be accomplished. He took a new form. It was not that of angels. Nothing was to be gained in that. No form could be so high as the God form, which was His by eternal generation and right. But it was worth while to lay aside this Divine form for awhile and take the form of a servant instead of that of the Creator. He took the form of a man, and in it show men what God intended man to be. He becomes the true man in all respects. He lives as they do. He enters life by birth and leaves by the common door of all the race. He works as the common people must labor. He earns his bread by sweat and toil. He, the Maker of all worlds, hungers and thirsts and is weary as the poorest man of the race. He knows our condition, for He has been all through it. He suffered and sorrowed, as we all must sorrow and suffer. He enjoyed none of the privations of the servant sphere of this world. He humbled Himself. And then the death. We would have thought He would have shrunk from that. But that horror of dissolution and all there is in death may well have been inexpressibly revolting to such a nature, there was no halting in the work He had set Himself. He became obedient to death, "even the death of the cross."

Write large in your list of the Christlike qualities which are to be worked into your own life humility and study humility in the light of the Christ life. Can you bear to be servant? Servant of men, of God, rapid, stubborn, vicious and who deride your goodness and contemn it?

But that is not the deepest secret in His life. He did act the servant's part as no man before or since has done. He did actually serve those whom He served. He loved men, unlovely as they were and are. He loved them to the end. But that is not the greatest thing about Him.

He learned obedience by the things which He suffered, but the lesson of obedience to the Father's will is not the chief thing to note.

He was ever Son of the Father. He never lost conscious Sonship. He that had seen Him had seen the Father. He revealed the Fatherhood of God in His words and acts. The Spirit was His without measure.

Is it possible that we can in any measure follow Him in these things? Certainly in humble measure as He walked. In oneness with God in spirit we can have the same abiding witness that we are well pleasing to our God in our own proper sphere. Till we all come to the perfect man, to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ, this is ever the attainment set before us as our goal of striving.

The Power to Enjoy.

You may think in looking out upon the world that the great difference between people is that some have many things to enjoy and others very few. When you know them better you will find that a greater difference is that some have great power to enjoy and others very little.—Rhoada Williams.

What Love Is.

Love is not getting, but giving; not a wild dream of pleasure and a madness of desire. Oh, no; love is not that. It is goodness and honor and peace and pure living. Yes, love is that, and it is the best thing in the world and the thing that lives longest.—Henry Van Dyke.

Unconsciousness Grace.

Perseverance is the only Christian grace that cannot be counterfeited.

A Sunshine Song.

Would you make some saddened heart
Just a little happier?
Would you make some burdened life
Seem much brighter?
Drop a word of hope and cheer;
Set the echoes ringing
With your own expression of love and joy
As you go a-singing.

Would you smooth the rugged path
Down along life's highway?
Would you plant the rose of faith
In some lonely heart?
Just a deed of kindness done
Clears the path before us,
And the lilies we have wrought
Bloom and blossom o'er us.

Just a little word of cheer
Lightens every duty;
Just a smile will often show
Hidden beauties in beauty.
Sprinkle sunshine as you go,
Comfort the distressing,
And your own reward will be Heaven's choicest blessing.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic for the Week Beginning March 11.

By REV. S. M. DOYLE.

The ideal set before the Christian in the Scriptures is that of perfection—entire separation to God and consecration to Himself. In the sermon on the mount Christ places the perfection of God before us as the model toward which we are to strive. "Be ye perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." In this idea of perfection it is not suggested that it is possible for us to have perfect knowledge, to be perfectly free from sin or that we shall not need to contend against the evil that is within and without us, but that we should take the perfect attributes of God—His goodness, justice, wisdom and holiness—and make them the goal toward which we shall strive, depending upon Him to give us grace and strength to succeed. Nor is such an ideal impracticable. The higher our ideal the higher our attainment. If we use all our powers of will to attain to it and seek the guidance and strength of God to help us.

Perfection must of course deal with all man's moral attributes, but the apostle Jas in his picture of the perfect man grasps all to center around the one attribute of speech. He declares that "if any man offend not in word the same is a perfect man." But that he does not mean that perfect speech makes a perfect man he hastens to add "is able also to control the whole body." The perfect man must have perfection in thought, word and deed, but speech is inspired by thought and is the forerunner of action. In general a man says what he thinks, and his words are a prophecy of what he will do. Therefore it is possible to estimate with some degree of certainty the standard of perfection which is reached by his words, for if we do not in word we mirror in our words an inoffensive mind and give assurance of a life of perfection. And further the apostle emphasizes the fact that speech is the result of an inward condition, and that it results in proper outward behavior and that all proceed from a divine and heavenly wisdom. "For the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy." And the fruit of this wisdom is sown in peace of them that make peace."

If we would attain to perfection as James points out we must be especially careful in our words. Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon this fact, for of all things we are less apt to put a curb upon our tongues. (1) The tongue is a little member of the body, and yet seems, therefore, unworthy of especial attention. So easy to talk, and yet seem so common and trifling that we do not weigh them carefully. Yet though small, the tongue is most dangerous. A bit is a small thing, but it controls a horse. Ships are turned by a very small helm. Therefore the tongue is not to be despised because of its insignificant size. Instead it requires the more careful guarding. (2) The tongue is hard to control. Attempts have been tried to control it by means of bits to be sure. But for this reason we are not to give it a free rein, but to put forth more strenuous efforts to control it. The unruly horse is not set free, but only held the tighter. And if man cannot control the tongue God will give him the power to do so.

The miseries of life caused by unruly tongues are of all description and all summing up in it there thoughts injure no one. We can defend ourselves against it more, but we are left before unbridled, meddlesome, scandalous tongues humanity stands almost defenseless. Let us guard against this danger by cultivating a pure heart, which shall inspire kind words, which shall in turn inspire good deeds.

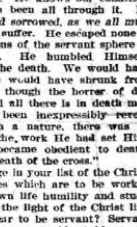
New York's Field Secretary.

Rev. William T. Edds, New York state field secretary, was a successful minister in the Congregational church before being called to this responsible position. He has been for many years an enthusiastic believer in Christian Endeavor and is an active and aggressive worker along Endeavor lines. He brings to his new post the ripe experience that will fit him for the many exacting details of life in the field. He will devote much time to needy and neglected portions of the state and will do a great amount of pioneer service, forming new societies, instructing ministers and lay workers in the value and details of organization and in every possible way helping to pass on the blessings of the movement to those who do not now share them.



REV. WILLIAM T. EDDS.

Junior Note From Ireland.

If you were going to present your friend with a rose, would you select one already full blown? Would you not rather select one that is just coming out? And don't you think that Jesus is better pleased with a child's life, when unspotted by sin, than when the old man, whose life has been spent in sin, comes to pray for mercy.—J. I. McVitty, Clones.

MAYOR CALLS MEETING OF PLAINFIELD FANS

SMALLEY WANTS DATE FOR CONFERENCE WITH PHILIP DAAB.

As a means of getting the baseball fans together to talk over the situation for the coming season, Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, has issued a call for a meeting to be held at the Hotel Ironsides on Saturday night, March 10, at 7:30 o'clock. In the meantime an effort will be made to reach as many of the fans as possible and have them promise to attend the meeting. Manager Daab, of Hoboken, will be invited and will be asked to explain his plans so far as bringing his team here this season.

The principal object of the meeting will be to form an organization if possible which will lend its support to Mr. Daab. After this preliminary meeting another one will probably be held soon to which representatives from Somerville and Westfield will be invited. The object of this is to bring about a co-operation of the three towns in a series of games during the season which it is believed will revive the old-time enthusiasm.

THE MALIGNED REPORTER.

Newspaper Men Really Detest Scandal Stories.

"A common charge brought against newspaper reporters is that they are heartless, that they revel in laying before the world the closely guarded secrets of unfortunates. It constantly happens that a reporter must do unpleasant things because others have been guilty of those violations of custom, law, or convention that make news. The opporbrium that belongs to the real offender is not infrequently heaped upon the innocent newsgatherer. There is no work a reporter detests so much as that involving a social scandal, and there is no story that a large percentage of readers will devour more eagerly.

"There isn't a good reporter living who has not been guilty of that blackest, least forgivable of all journalistic crimes, 'throwing down' his newspaper, to protect a helpless person innocently involved in a legitimate news story that is a matter of public record. On the whole, the newsgatherers are a tender-hearted folk and generous, and that which often passes for cynicism is an intense hatred and contempt for shams. If they appear suspicious it is because long experience has taught them that they must constantly guard against deception. There is no walk of life a good reporter is not compelled, sooner or later, to invade, and his position is the trying one of being compelled either to gain the confidence of or outwit those he meets there."—Hartley Davis in Everybody's Magazine.

A JAPANESE TEA.

A Japanese tea is a very popular and pretty way of raising money.

Decorate the rooms with paper flowers.

Get the paper cherry blossoms, or it is not hard to make chrysanthemums and frieze out of crepe paper. Japanese fans, umbrellas, lanterns, and any other Japanese conceit may be used, too.

Burn pastils to give the proper incense flavor, and use Japanese china if possible. A second hand tea to give away a cup and saucer with every cup of tea and to charge accordingly.

The attendants must be dressed in kimonos and Japanese costumes.

Have a pretty little table with all the articles one would have at an afternoon tea, and have the tea served there. Have small tables where the guests may sit while they take the tea, and on the tables have plates of Japanese sweets, candied ginger, candied dates and figs and salted nuts, and these be of small cakes, wafers and sandwiches.

Provide some entertainment while the guests are drinking tea. Have readings from extracts about Japan or from stories. Have singing and piano recitals.

If a still more strongly Japanese atmosphere is desired, stereopticon pictures of Japan thrown on a screen would be diverting.

FAITH CHAPEL REPORTS.

Trustees Re-elected at Annual Meeting.

The annual business meeting of Faith chapel for the election of two trustees and transaction of other important matters was held at the chapel last night. Charles W. McCutchen, president of the Board of Trustees, called the meeting to order and Rev. J. W. Musson was chosen moderator.

After the re-election of U. B. Crane and I. W. Randolph as trustees for three years, the board authorized the consecration of baptistry at the chapel, whereby it will be possible for Pastor Musson to conduct the ordinance of baptism. Heretofore this has been done at the First Baptist church. The work on the baptistry will be started on Monday. Reports were received from the various departments of the chapel work, showing all to be in a healthy condition.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

Published at

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms: $2.00 per year,

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1906.

McCurdy goes to Europe, but there is no go in Jerome.

Senator Reed may be a "dead one," as alleged, but his frequent political resurrections seem to strike terror in the camp of his enemies.

Mr. Roosevelt has taken a hand in the settlement of the dispute between the coal operators and miners. Now will he help the insurance policy-holders?

The attorney general should not only reveal the name of the newspaper man he accused, but he should have that entire speech printed for free distribution.

Probably Senator Colby would be willing to have the Trenton State Gazette in every home. Its editorial attacks bring conviction that the Senator from Essex is the right kind of a man to represent the people.

Behold John Moody, the self-crowned apostle of a proposed rejuvenated Democracy! Let all the clans of Thomas Jefferson praise his name, for verily he has made a great discovery. The Cranford apostle says, forsooth, that William Jennings Bryan, who once received about 6,000,000 votes for the Presidency, and Grover Cleveland, who twice triumphed as a candidate for the most exalted office in the gift of the American people, are nothing more or less than "political corpses." These men who have swayed the multitudes and who today are honored at home and abroad, are dead bones. John Moody says so. Praised be the name of Mr. Moody!

Kearny, Harrison and East Newark occupy about the same relative position towards one another as Plainfield and North Plainfield and a movement is now underway in the three named places for consolidation into one government. It is to be hoped that the politicians over there will not allow factional politics to interfere with the proposition which on its face will inure to the benefit of the taxpayers in the three municipalities. That was the trouble over here, for it is not denied that the first step towards consolidation of this city and North Plainfield was defeated purely because of the animosities of rival Republican politicians.

A real estate broker in Bound Brook spoke the plain truth when he told the Board of Trade in that place the other night that everything in Plainfield for a time became so enamored with the place that they either buy or make a long term lease for a home. Plainfield covers a big area and like an omnibus there is always room for another seat. But why is it that visitors become so attracted to the city? Simply because taken all in all it is as beautiful appearing, as well regulated and has as many improvements as any suburban city in the East. In fact it cannot be denied bring conveyances and the attractions that are not to be found in 999 out of 1,000 places. If anyone doubts it, just invite him to spend a day here.

Just what good reason there would be for a change in the method of selecting the membership of a school board is not quite plain, but that is the purpose of a bill introduced in the Senate at Trenton by Assemblyman Everard Tucker. In place of allowing the taxpayers to elect, the Mayor will be empowered to appoint the membership under the provisions of the bill, which is likely to become a law. As a rule, the average Mayor is not the best judge of those qualified to serve on such a board, and it should be conceded that it is much better to continue the democratic form of trusting the people to pick out men for the position. If the Mayor of a city will permit politics to work itself into another department, it is quite probable that he would do the same in the Board of Education. Better let well enough alone.

The high license bill, which in all likelihood will become a law during the present session of the Legislature, contains the best features of the Wert's act, and in addition some that will further and better restrict the sale of liquor. The bill will be passed because the majority of the legislators, it is said, do not believe that any scheme for the complete prohibition of the liquor traffic has ever worked satisfactorily. Taking this view of the matter, they will do the next best thing, and that is to place such restrictions and regulations about the saloon business as will eradicate many of its evils. As outlined by Bishop McFaul:

"That no license shall be granted, except upon the joint application of the owner of said premises and the person seeking such license, and except upon payment by the applicant or licensee, of a license fee as hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, in all townships, towns, boroughs or cities having by the census last preceding the granting of such license a population of not more than three thousand, a license fee or not more than one hundred dollars; in all townships, towns, boroughs or cities having by census a population exceeding three thousand and not exceeding ten thousand, a license fee of not less than one hundred and fifty dollars; and in all townships, towns, boroughs or cities having ten thousand, a license fee of not less than five hundred dollars.

"No intoxicating liquor shall be given or sold to any minor, or apprentice, contrary to law, or shall sell, or furnish, any of the liquors aforesaid, to any person known in the neighborhood to be of confirmed intemperate habits, or who is visibly under the influence of intoxicating liquors, or shall keep a disorderly house, or shall harbor drunken persons, vagrants, idle and vicious persons, thieves, gamblers, prostitutes or other disorderly persons, or shall suffer gambling or unlawful games of chance or other unlawful acts to be done or carried on in his tavern, beer shop, liquor saloon, or other premises, or shall permit any boy or girl under twenty-one years of age to lounge in or frequent the same.

"Intoxicants shall not be disposed of if not in an inn, or tavern, or a restaurant where the business of furnishing meals to the public for compensation is regularly carried on—in a room or place except in a room upon the ground floor, or basement, of a building, on a public street, the entire interior of which room shall be visible from the street and shall have entrance only from the street, and shall not be connected with any other room."

AMUSEMENTS.

The patrons of Joe Weber's cosy theatre now have better opportunity than ever before to witness the fun-making ability of this comedian and his company of all star players. "Twiddle Twaddle" is still retained but a new burlesque. "The Squaw Man's Girl of the Golden West," was added Monday night and has done more than anything in recent years to make audiences laugh. It is a travesty in two curtains of Far West play successes and those who have seen either of the dramas can readily see what opportunities are offered such a capable organization as makes Weber's its home. Chief in the cast are Joe Weber, Lew Fields, Charles A. Bigelow, Lee Harrison, Ernest Lambart, Edward J. Connolly, Sam Marion, Bonnie Magin, Flora Zabelle, May Monefort, Edith Moyer and Erminie Earle.

Casino; Broadway and 39th St. Telephone, 1646 Bryant. Evenings at 8:15. Best seats $1.00 at Thursday and Saturday matinees. Eddie Foy in "The Earl and the Girl," an English musical comedy by Seymour Hicks, Percy Greenbanks and Ivan Caryll.

Clara Lipman and Louis Mann celebrated the 100th performance of Lipman's theatre, corner of New York life, "Julie Bonbon," on Friday, by distributing hand-painted, chatelaine powder puffs. These accessories to a ladies' toilet seemed particularly appropriate to the atmosphere of the millinery shop and boudoir of Julie. Miss Lipman plays Julie very delicately, with a fine appreciation of the naivete of the French milliner. Mr. Mann's impersonation of her father, Jean Poujol, the inebriated drag on her life, is one of the goods things seen on Broadway this season. In the widely advertised restaurant, Little Hungary, is as realistic as the first act in Julie's millinery shop, which is one of the show settings of the play. Every detail of the restaurant is faithfully given, quite as the millinery shop is notable for a most wonderful display of tasty hats. The play has had a most prosperous life at Fields' theatre and has given Miss Lipman a new claim to distinction, that of playwrighting.

Broadway theatre—Broadway and forty-first street. Elsie Janis in The Vanderbilt Cup. Evenings at 8:15. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Liberty theatre — Forty-second street, west of Broadway. The Redskin, a play of Indian life and character. Evenings at 8:15. Matinee Saturday at 2:15.

New York theatre—Broadway and Forty-four street. Last times of Roger Brothers in Ireland. Evenings at 8:15. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Popular prices always.

New Amsterdam theatre—Forty-second street. Ned Templeton in George M. Cohan's "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway." A cyclone of humor and tuneful music. Evenings at 8:15. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

The biggest comedy hit of the year in New York is Fay Templeton in Geo. M. Cohan's music play, "45 Minutes from Broadway," at the New Amsterdam theatre, where she is now in her fourth week. Miss Templeton is undoubtedly the cleverest comedienne on the American stage. Her versatility was never more strongly tested than in this play, wherein she has serious and emotional as well as broad comedy situations. Her work is particularly pleasing to women. She is a welcome comedienne, always refined in all that she does and never resorting to the slightest suggestion of coarseness to make her comic points. Victor Moore, who plays the opposite role, "Kid" Burns, has made a hit second only to that of the star.

LITERARY.

One generation does not make a man like Togo. And also one generation does not make the fellows who went into the terrible gulf of death in Manchuria and on the eastern seas. The Japanese culture and atmosphere made them thus. I pray to God that they will remain so, as they are. Already there's a whisper of degeneration and sophistication in Japan of today. Togo is the best model of the Satsuma province, whence Marquis Oyama, Admiral Kazonora and others hailed out. There in that province plain living and high thinking; and, above all, devotion to the country, and emperor, almost reaches a religion.—From "Togo at Close Range," by Yone Noguchi, in National Magazine for March.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Another School Bill.

Assemblyman Tucker, of Union county, has apparently withdrawn or abandoned the school bill he originally introduced before the Legislature. The first was a compulsory measure and applied only to cities of the second class, having a population of 50,000 and upward; the later bill applies to all cities in this State that have not already adopted section 31 of the general school law, which provides for the election of a board of nine members only.

The newer bill is said to have been drawn with the aid and concurrence of State Superintendent Baxter, Assistant Superintendent Betts, Superintendent Chancellor, of Paterson, and a number of other educators, and to have also been revised by Governor Stokes. It seems to be intended to create a more uniform system of securing boards of education than now exist in this State. It provides that the Mayor shall, within sixty days after the passage of the proposed act, appoint eight persons to be members of the board of education, not more than four of whom shall belong to the same political party. Two shall serve till January 1, 1907, two till 1908, and so on; but their successors shall be appointed for terms of four years. The strangest part of the Tucker bill is the provision for a referendum at the next general election after the Mayor has appointed the new board.

As the bill now stands, it seems as if one provision nullifies the other, but this may be corrected when it comes up for a second reading. It is a compulsory bill, and as such will be likely to meet with opposition, from those to which it applies. The referendum, refused to provide an appointive board. There is this much at least in favor of the Tucker bill. It provides for a small Board of Education in the place of the large, unwieldly boards now working to disadvantage in some cities. It would, for example, reduce the Newark board from thirty to eight, the Elizabeth board from twelve to eight, and so on throughout the State, in all cities now having more than eight wards and electing one or more members from each ward.

That there is a strong and growing sentiment in favor of smaller, less cumbersome boards, there is no room for doubt, even in the city of Newark, which in 1904 defeated the proposition to elect nine members at large instead of one from each of the fifteen wards. It is contended, and with reason, that better work is done and better results are accomplished. The Tucker bill virtually abolishes two of the methods provided by the present State school law and leaves but one, the appointive method, yet it seems to meet with general favor and may become a law.—Newark Evening News.

Will Continue Quartette Choir.

The question of music at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church for the coming year has been under discussion by a joint meeting of the trus*tees and Session, and it is the unanim*ous opinion that a quartette choir be continued. This proposition has one difficulty, as set forth, and that is that in the neighborhood of New York fine singers command more money than the suburban churches can afford. Owing to the resignation of the tenor and soprano new voices will have to be secured.

THE ANCIENT BRITISH CHURCH.

First in a series of Lenten Lectures

By Rev. Dr. John H. Egar, Late Professor of Church History in Nashotah Theological Seminary.

In Holy Cross church Thursday afternoon the Rev. Dr. Egar, of Rockview avenue, late rector of Zion church, Rome, N. Y., and formerly professor of Church History in Nashotah Theological Seminary, began a series of talks which will be continued on Thursday afternoons during Lent on the history of the Church in England from the earliest times. The first was upon the ancient British Church, of Christianity in England before the coming of the Anglo-Saxons.

He said in brief: "The Roman conquest of Great Britain was the beginning of authentic written history of the British Isles. Before that, history was picked out of scanty notices and made by inference from ancient mon*aments, or the analysis of traditionary* legends. The Church History of what we now call England goes back to the time when Christ was the earliest age of Christianity. By the year 47 A. D. the Roman General Aulus Plantius had made good the Roman occupation of the southern portion of Britain, and by the year 81 Agricola had built the wall from the Firth to the Clyde, showing that all up to that line was in subjection to the Romans. About midway between these two dates there is mention in the New Testament of a lady who is believed to have been a British Christian. St. Paul, in his second Epistle to Timothy, writes from Rome, says: "Eubulus and Pudeus and Linus and Claudia greet thee." The evidence that this Claudia was of British birth is Martial, the poet, has several epigrams from which we learn that a Roman officer named Pudeus married a British lady whom he calls Claudia Rufina. One of his epigrams is translated as follows:

"From Britons was Rufina Claudia born,
The fair barbarian how do arts adorn!
When Roman charms a Grecian soul commend
Athens and Rome may for the dame contend."

Now an inscribed stone from an ancient temple discovered in England some time ago states that Pudeus gave the site for the temple to King Tiberius Claudius Cogitubnus. This king had been accepted as an ally by Aulus Plautius, and assumed the emperor's name as a mark of honor. His daughter therefore would be called Claudia. Now the wife of Aulus Plautius was Pomponia Graccina, who belonged to the Roman family of the Gens Pomponia. It is quite probable that she adopted Claudia and gave her own family name—Rufina Claudia. But Pomponia Graccina was a Christian, and so Pudeus and Claudia became, and part of their house is still visible under the Church of Pudentiana at Rome, which some of you have doubtless seen. This being true, of course, this Pudeus and Claudia were the persons referred to by St. Paul in the Epistle to Timothy.

At what time Christianity was introduced and churches formed in Britain itself is uncertain. It has been thought St. Paul preached there, but this is improbable. Others mentioned are Joseph of Arimathea, Aristobulu, etc. We may be sure that influential persons connected with Britain, like Pudeus and Claudia would be interested in sending Christianity there. There were many channels by which it could reach the island. Commerce was active, and there were Christians in the army.

In fact, the first Gentile convert was the Christian soldier Cornelius, and the Cornelli and the family of Pudeus were closely connected as discoveries in the Catacombs show. Records are scanty, as they generally are about the beginning of things, but it is evident that the Christians of Britain were civilized by the Romans, that the church was gradually extended there as in other countries, and that in the fourth century, when Constantine became emperor, there were Christian bishops there who were many channels by which it could reach the island. Commerce was active, and there were Christians in the army.

In fact, the first Gentile convert was the Christian soldier Cornelius, and the Cornelli and the family of Pudeus were closely connected as discoveries in the Catacombs show. Records are scanty, as they generally are about the beginning of things, but it is evident that the Christians of Britain were civilized by the Romans, that the church was gradually extended there as in other countries, and that in the fourth century, when Constantine became emperor, there were Christian bishops there who were Britain. Three British bishop, Eborius of York, Restitutus of London, and Adelfius of Caerleon, as delegates from the three provinces of Britannia prima, Britannia secunda, and Flavia Caesariensi, attended a council of Arles in 313. British bishops were probably at the council in Nice in 325, certainly at that of Sardica in 347, and that of Rimieci in 351. It may safely be said that by the time of the Saxon invasion the whole of Roman Britain had been Christianized.

The connection of Britain with the Roman Empire brought in much more civilization and learning than we are apt to think, and the Church participated in all the movements of thought upon the continent. Monasticism became popular in the fourth and fifth centuries as the empire began to break up, and the monasteries did the same work that our schools and colleges do now. At the time of the Saxon invasion we find mention of monastic institutions in Wales, where the Saxons could not penetrate the mountains. From the west of Britain missionaries went forth. St. Ninian went into Scotland, where he built, much to the surprise of the natives, a stone church, which was called Candida Cass—the White House. St. Patrick went into Ireland, and founded the Irish Church at the beginning of the fifth century. From the Irish Church came back to Scotland, in the sixth century, St. Columba and his band, who settled in the island of Iona, whence missionaries were sent who evangelised, in the seventh century, the northern part of England, after the Anglo-Saxons had made themselves at home there.

In the story of these times there is much that is legendary; but by patient study real history can be gained even from the legends. Among the speaker was in Cologne, summer before last, he visited the church popularly called that of St. Ursula and the eleven thousand virgins. He was ed the custodian, who was a very intelligent and gentlemanly man, what the clergy of that church thought was the true foundation of the legend. He told him that they had, of course, studied it thoroughly, and had come to the conclusion that St. Ursula was a real person, that she was a British princess who had been sent by her parents, with eleven companions, about the year 450, to be safe at Cologne from the Saxon invasion. At that time, as every student of history knows, Attila the Hun was making his invasion of Gaul. He destroyed and sacked Cologne and massacred all the inhabitants, St. Ursula and her companions included. The idea of eleven thousand virgins arose long after from the misreading of the entry in the Martyrology "Ursula and XI., M. V.," which means Ursula and eleven martyrs, virgins; but was interpreted as if the "M" meant thousands, instead of martyrs. The bones in the church, he said, were those of the cemetery in which all the victims of Attila's massacre had been buried. He showed the rude stone coffin in which the bones of St. Ursula had been found.

The lecture concluded with reading the account of the death of St. Columba, to show the beautiful Christian spirit of a saintly man.

No Other Magazine Like It.

Probably the most attractive pictures that have been published of Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, nee Alice Roosevelt, are those which appeared in the March number of the Burr McIntosh Monthly, now on all news stands. Among the many superb reproductions of celebrated people are those of Archbishop Farley, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, Mme. Calve, Olga Nethersole, Blanche Bates, Grace George, Signor Dippel, grand opera singer, and Jan Kubelik, the famous violinist. In the department of People of Note are the photographs of Mrs. Humphrey Ward, novelist; Dr. Osler, late Dr. Harper, of the University of Chicago, and the late Marshall Field, probably the most successful merchant of the century. The scene in this issue are very largely of the Old World: Turkey, England, France, Switzerland, Algeria, Germany and Japan. The color work is especially striking and altogether the issue will appeal to all lovers of fine pictures. Burr Publishing Company, New York.

PLAINFIELD OPPOSES TUCKER'S MEASURE

Board of Education Strongly Against a "Ring" Bill Which Vests Power in Mayor.

ACKERMAN TO SPEAK

Corporation Counsel, Representing Board, Communicates With the State Senator.

Acting for the Board of Education, Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh has set to work to help defeat the school bill introduced by Assemblyman Everard Tucker in the Legislature. Sound reasons why the measure should not be passed by the lawmakers have been framed in the shape of a letter addressed by the corporation counsel to Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, who will be heard on the floor of the Senate when the bill comes up from the Lower House.

The Tucker bill, which is opposed likewise by Newark and other cities, provides for radical change in the method of selecting school boards. Should it become a law, the Mayor and not the people, would have the say as to who should constitute the membership of that important body. Naturally the local Board of Education opposes such a change and it is presumed to be backed by the people of the city.

At present the Plainfield Board of Education is working under the school law of 1903, but the method of electing and the terms of the members are governed by the special charter granted the board years ago. Should Assemblyman Tucker's bill pass, the powers under the charter would be of no avail, for Plainfield would have to abide by the general law. Under the present law the board is allowed to work under the charter, but can change the method of choosing its membership by a vote of the people at a special election.

The bill introduced by Mr. Tucker follows:

"An Act to amend an act entitled 'An act to establish a thorough and efficient system of free public schools, and to provide for the maintenance, support and management thereof,' approved October nineteenth, one thousand nine hundred and three.

"1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

"1. Amend section thirty-eight of said act so that it shall read as follows:

"38. In each school district acting under the provisions of Article VI. of the act to which this is an amendment, except as in hereinafter provided, the Mayor or other chief executive officer of the municipality in which such school district shall be situate shall, within sixty days after the passage of this act, appoint eight persons to be members of the Board of Education of such school district, who shall severally possess the qualifications for membership prescribed in this article, but not more than four of such persons shall be members of the same political party. Two of such persons, who shall not be members of the same political party, shall be appointed to serve until the first day of January, nineteen hundred and one; two until the first day of January, nineteen hundred and eight; two until the first day of January, nineteen hundred and nine, and two until the first day of January, nineteen hundred and ten. In December, nineteen hundred and six, and annually thereafter in the month of December, the said Mayor or other executive officer of such municipality shall appoint two members of said Board of Education, who shall not be members of the same political party, to serve for the term of four years, to take the place of those members whose term shall expire with such year. Any vacancy in such Board of Education shall be forthwith reported by the secretary of said board to said Mayor or other chief executive officer, who shall, within thirty days thereafter, appoint a person of the same political party to fill such vacancy. To every appointee, as aforesaid, said Mayor or other executive officer shall issue and deliver a certificate of appointment. The term of office of a member of the Board of Education, except a member appointed to fill an unexpired term, or the members first appointed as provided in this section, shall begin on the first day of January next succeeding such appointment. TUCKER BILL IS ALL BAD

Education since 1849 has been continuously of as high a standard as could be found anywhere in this country. Its members are elected at large; the number of the board is five only; the term of office is one year longer than that proposed in the bill, viz., five years. The rule is to continue the most efficient men term after term.

"Pass the bill, and the danger of dead-locks becomes imminent. There will be four Republicans again for four Democrats, and each party will regard the members of its political faith as its representatives chosen because of their political faith, and therefore in duty bound to represent that political party. The same is true of each party's political party. Party leaders and party organs will seek to exert the power which they regard as legitimately theirs, and there will be a tie vote on such questions as the amount of tax to be assessed; whether to build a new school house; whom to engage as principal, and similar questions which require prompt decision under penalty of perhaps invalidating a tax levy, or losing an opportunity to purchase land, or to make a favorable contract. How will you prevent a tie vote in a board of eight, four to four?

"The experience of other States shows the unwisdom of attempting to govern by bi-partisan boards. The theory is illogical and unsound and the practice is worse.

"Nothing short of extreme necessity would warrant the passage of a bill that will deprive the city of Plainfield of the advantages of its present system of electing members of the Board of Education. No such necessity exists. Section 38 of the act as it stands contains a referendum clause, and any amendment that may be desired ought to contain a similar clause."

WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Rooms which have been occupied by consumptives should be thoroughly cleaned, scrubbed, painted and papered before they are again occupied. Carpets, rugs, bedding, etc., should be disinfected.

"If these directions are followed, but little danger will exist to the family and the patient will be in good circumstances for recovery.

"After removal of a patient from the house or room, disinfection should be performed at once by the Board of Health. The householder should notify the Board of Health of the removal of the patient within twenty-four hours."

P. H. S. HOURS CHANGED

Daily Session Will Hereafter Be From 8:30 a. m. Until 1:30 p. m.

A TRIAL AT FIRST

Board of Education Transacts Other Business in New Building Amid Difficulties.

Wearing overcoats because of the chilly atmosphere and submitting to interruptions from sputtering steam cocks and clanging pipes, the members of the city Board of Education held their first meeting in the new Plainfield High School Monday night. The evidence of newness about everything was not relieved by the heating apparatus. The trouble was due to the engineer's unfamiliarity with things and was overcome today.

Through Superintendent Maxson, one of the most important matters brought up was the question of changing the hours of study at the new building. After a lengthy discussion it was decided to make the daily session run from 8:30 in the morning until 1:30 in the afternoon, with a half hour's recess at 11 o'clock. Since the two sessions a day plan was abolished about ten years ago, the hours for school have been from 8:20 until 1:00, with a fifteen minute recess. In making the present change it was strictly stipulated that it should be in the nature of an experiment and that if it was found unsatisfactory, a return to the present rule should be made.

Dr. Maxson stated that the pupils have understood for some time that a change was contemplated as soon as moving was over and so far as he knew there were no objections. Secretary Woodhull vouchsafed the information, however, that a petition was being circulated against it and that many of the pupils did not desire the proposed change. It was also brought out that lunches would have to be sold in the basement of the building and that this would add an expense of about $20 a year to the teachers. They do not advocate the change but Dr. Maxson declared that something should be done as the single stretch is too much of a tax on the pupils and that the half hour recess with lunch would overcome the tediousness of study. The discussion brought out other points for and against the plan and led to the vote that the new schedule be an experiment.

Another discussion was brought about through the request of physicians of the city interested in combatting tuberculosis asking for the use of the High School auditorium to permit of a public lecture on the subject. It was stated by one of the members that there were prospects of numerous petitions of this sort and that something should be done to apply to all cases. It was decided to grant the physicians what they asked as the lecture will be an educational matter and that they be charged $10 to cover the light, heat and janitor expense. After that it can be told better whether the board would be under expense or not in making the rate permanent, limiting the rentals to lectures or gathering from which the promoters derive no revenue.

The board received a communication from Mrs. I. Rehwick Glen, of Madison avenue, expressing her wish to present the new school with six volumes of Appleton's Encyclopoedia of Biography in memory of her husband. The offer was accepted and a vote of thanks was extended the donor. Dr. Maxson was empowered to make the teachers' appointments for the coming year. A bid of $150 for equipping the laboratories and lecture room of the new school with water and gas connections and sinks, submitted by D. J. Galbraith, was accepted.

TO BLOCK AUTO SPEEDERS.

High Walks Over Morris County Turnpike Proposed.

It was proposed to the Borough Council of Chatham last night that to prevent speeding of automobiles along the Morris County Turnpike high walks be laid at frequent intervals across the road. The walks would not be so high as to annoy carriages, but would effectually stop scorching of autos through the town.

The turnpike is the direct route from Newark to Morristown and Lake Hopateong. Many automobilists are in the habit of speeding all the way from Newark to Morristown.

Opposition was manifested to the new proposition by some who prefer marshals and a tidy sum in fines and costs.

Elks Meeting in 1907.

Governor Pennypacker has extended an invitation on behalf of the State of Pennsylvania to the Order of Elks, to hold its Grand Lodge sessions of 1907 in Philadelphia. The Governor's letter, together with the formal invitation of Mayor Weaver, and the promises of welcome by business men generally, will be carried by representatives of Philadelphia Lodge to Denver, where this year's convention will be held.

KEELY GETS CONTRACT

Street Sprinkling Job Again Awarded to Him For Coming Year.

COSTS THE CITY MORE FOR FIRE PROTECTION

Extension of Time Will Result In Additional Expense of $1,000 —Mr. Tyler Tries to Delay Award.

Following a good deal of discussion, the contract for street sprinkling during the coming season was given to John E. Keely by the Common Council Monday, his bid being $667 per month. The consideration is to be paid monthly. The contract calls for sixteen horses and drivers, together with all equipment excepting the sprinkling carts, which are owned by the city. The contract begins April 1 and ends October 1. Mr. Keely agrees to sprinkle the streets free of charge at any time during March and November and December when in the judgment of Street Commissioner Gavett it is needed.

The expense for doing the work this year will be about $1,000 more than last year, because the sprinkling will be started a month earlier and extended a little later in the fall, covering a period altogether of seven months. The contract price of $667 does not include the cost of water.

Mr. Tyler advised that more time be taken to consider the matter. He said that the street committee had not gone over the contract thoroughly, and I nview of he large expenditure of money believed that careful consideration should be given the subject.

Mr. Gloak referred to the trouble of last year, when the merchants complained about the dust, and he urged starting the work at once if necessary. Mr. Mellick impressed upon Mr. Tyler that the sprinkling would be started six weeks earlier than last year, and this, he thought, was an advantage. Mr. Ginna said that at the meeting of the street committee it was agreed that the proposition was a good one to accept, and Mr. Tolles thought that there was very little difference in cost as to whether the work was started April 1 or May 1, and he favored the contract as offered.

When the vote was taken all the members except Mr. Tyler voted to award the contract to Mr. Keely, and the Third ward member voted in the negative.

On Mr. Gloak's motion, the Mayor and city clerk were authorized to execute the contract and arrange with Armstrong Mulford and C. H. Hand, Mr. Keely's bondsmen, for the filing of the bonds.

At the request of Mr. Tyler, Street Commissioner Gavett explained the terms of the contract, which, he said, were almost identical with those of last year, excepting that the time for sprinkling had been extended.

SCHOOL BOARD MAKES RETIRING JANITOR A GIFT

GRANTS S. R. HOPE FULL PAY UNTIL JUNE 1.

Stephen R. Hope, for twenty years the janitor of the Bryant School building, and next to the oldest in point of service locally, tendered his resignation to the Board of Education at the meeting last night. It stated that he had already retired, having relinquished his duties at the first of the month, and gave failing health as the cause for his action. The board accepted the resignation and the appreciation of the faithful discharge of his duties voted his salary in full until June 1. Jesse M. Scull, who has been acting as Mr. Hope's assistant since the Wadsworth School was closed, was appointed to succeed him.

The retiring janitor has always been stationed at the Bryant School, and was regarded as one of the most conscientious in the employ of the city. The oldest janitor in service is Thomas Clarkson, who has had charge of the Stillman School for twenty-five years and the Franklin School for twenty years.

CITY AS AN OFFENDER

Board of Health Tells Common Council That Dwellings Must Be Made Sanitary.

More Hydrants Asked for—Sewer Contractor's Forfeit Money As Posted Is Returned.

Following up its work of abolishing unsanitary dwellings, the Board of Health communicated with the Common Council last Monday in reference to the property located at 209 Plainfield avenue, owned by the city, by provision of the Martin act. The complaint of Health Officer L. R. Thurlow was presented and the city was asked to make improvements in the property as will render it sanitary for habitation. On Mr. Mellick's motion the matter was referred to the committee on public affairs.

The belated letter from John J. Goff, withdrawing his application, was presented by Chairman F. L. Montgomery of the license committee. He stated that it was received too late to present at the last meeting, but he thought that in justice to Mr. Goff's lawyer, W. L. Wilson, some action should be taken regarding it. The letter was filed.

H. J. Runyon and other residents of Rahway road again called the attention of the Common Council to a request for two fire hydrants on Rahway road between Woodland avenue and the city limits. The matter was referred to the fire committee, as was also a petition from J. S. Fuller and others for a hydrant on Union street, between Union street and Stelle avenue. Another petition from the same parties requested that an electric light be located on Union street between Arlington and Stelle avenue. It was referred to the light committee.

In response to a request from M. Honan & Sons, sewer contractors, the sum of $115.40, held at the City National Bank for over six years, to meet any claims that might be presented against the firm following the completion of work here, was ordered returned on a motion by Mr. Gloak.

It was stated that the fire insurance policy protecting city property at Dunellen and Rock avenues had been renewed and the communication was filed. Building Inspector Doane reported that eleven permits had been granted during the past month.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Ginna, and upon the advice of Corporation Counsel Marsh, the sum of $17.70, assessed in error on property at 1424 West Fourth street, owned by the Honer Real Estate Company, was ordered returned.

In reply to a communication from the clerk of Fanwood township, complaining of the condition of Terrill road leading into the city, Mr. Gloak stated that the matter would be attended to soon. Mr. Gloak also reported on the complaint of Thomas Morcom, superintendent of the Plainfield Avenue cemetery, who objected to the practice of bill posters in allowing paper to blow about the streets and into the cemetery. Mr. Gloak said that Chief of Police Kiely had been instructed to look after the matter and he added that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt an ordinance covering such nuisances.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution fixing Thursday night, March 22, when bids will be received for furnishing crushed stone, screenings and coal verts for the coming year. The resolution was adopted.

In accordance with resolutions offered by Mr. Mellick one two-way hydrant was ordered placed on Randolph road opposite the hospital and another two-way hydrant on Randolph road at Woodland avenue. This action was taken at the request of the Board of Governors of the hospital and the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club.

Another resolution by Mr. Mellick provided for the appointment of T. O. Doane as building inspector at a yearly salary of $500. The appoint*ment, which is for one year, was con*firmed.

Mr. Gloak offered an ordinance, which was adopted on first and second readings, and ordered advertised, providing for the opening and acceptance of a portion of Denmark road, between Berkeley avenue and a point near David Hand's property.

Mr. Ginna offered a resolution providing for the transfer of $2,000 from the general fund to the fire fund and another providing for the borrowing of $5,000 for sewer improvements, the same to be secured by notes. Both resolutions were adopted.

Improvements at First Presbyterian.

The trustees of the First Presbyterian church have decided to re-wire the electric light system of the entire church, and to re-arrange the system. It is also proposed to remove the large electric chandelier in the centre of the church and adopt other means. There will also be several changes in the choir loft, the idea being to secure more light throughout the edifice.

HACK ORDINANCE DELAY

Mr. Montgomery's Amendments Held Up Through Mr. Tyler's Efforts.

BACK TO COMMITTEE

Councilmen Buxton and Montgomery Oppose Mr. Tyler's Argument to Have the Matter Go Over for a Month.

Councilman F. L. Montgomery, chairman of the license committee, who at the adjourned February meeting of the Common Council presented certain amendments to the ordinance regulating the cabmen's business in this city, attempted to secure the adoption of the ordinance on first and second readings Monday. He failed in his purpose and on the motion of Mr. Tyler it was referred back *to the committee for further consid*eration.

This action resulted only after considerable sparring between the chairman of the license committee and Mr. Tyler. The latter was not quite sure that all of the provisions of the ordinance as amended were understood, and he wanted to be absolutely sure that the cabmen would agree to abide strictly by the ordinance if their requests were granted. He thought there could be no haste in the matter as the present ordinance has been in force for twenty-four years and a month's delay could not make much difference.

Mr. Montgomery said that he had talked with the cabmen about the changes and did not think that any greater insurance could be secured from them as to a strict observance of the amended ordinance. He was prepared to vote in favor of it now. He thought possibly Mr. Tyler objected to the omission of the clause which provided that the lamps on cabs shall be lighted one hour after sunset until one hour before sunrise, but he added the committee thought of compelling all carriages, private and public to observe this feature, and then decided that it might prove a hardship and left it out.

Mr. Montgomery continued by saying that it was the desire to give the cabmen what they asked and then make them live up to it, and inasmuch as they have promised to do so, he thought it no more than fair that the amendment should be passed.

Mr. Tyler still urged that the committee have an opportunity to fully consider the amendments and despite Mr. Buxton's statement confirming Mr. Montgomery's remarks, Mr. Tyler moved that the ordinance be referred back to the committee. Councilmen Ginna, Gloak, Hibbard, Mellick, C. C. Randolph and Frank Randolph voted in favor of the motion and Councilmen Buxton and Montgomery voted against it.

The proposed amendments to the cabmen's ordinance have been published several times are familiar to most people. It provides for the display of licensed numbers on the lamps of the cabs, the wearing of a button in the left lapel of the driver's coat, bearing the licensed number where it can be plainly seen, and the placing of a folder containing the rates in the pocket of the cab inside, where a passenger can see it easily. It also fixes the rates, that is, twenty-five cents shall be charged within the city limits and fifty cents for two or three passengers to the one address. Outside of the limits fifty cents shall be charged and twenty-five cents for each additional passenger. It further defines the number of feet from a curb at the North Avenue Station and other public places where cabmen may solicit trade.

An Easter Choir.

Arthur L. Titsworth, organist and choirmaster at Trinity Reformed church, is selecting a large chorus choir of well-trained voices for the Easter Sunday morning service, when the Lenten cantata, "The Story of Calvary," will be given. As soon as the requisite number of voices is obtained rehearsals for the cantata will begin.

WHAT WOMEN HAVE A RIGHT TO EXPECT

In an article on "Town Improvement" in a recent edition of the Federation Bulletin, the following is said about the offices of the city government:

"Amid all the civic activity and civic improvement there is one thing that we cannot learn too soon; and that is, we can never have any improvement in municipal conditions so long as all the officers are the football of political parties. National politics have no place in town affairs. Here the problems are pure water, clean streets, and public education, and we want permanent service. We want trained financiers and sanitary engineers, and not Republicans or Democrats or even Mug wumps. There are parties in city affairs, not because there are two sides in city affairs, but because there are two sides to every office—the outside and the inside. The merit system in public affairs, insuring the appointment and retention in office of trained and experienced men, is the very corner-stone of civic progress. Without it we build in vain.

"At the biennial meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at St. Louis, it was unanimously voted that all the federated women's organizations should make the extension of the merit system one of their chief times of work; and it was advised that every woman's club in all the country should devote the first meeting in January to the consideration of this great subject. It was advised further that every club should appoint civil service committees, whose duty it shall be to study the conditions of the civil service in their own town and State, and report to the club at large so that no woman may be ignorant of the imperative national need of this reform.

"Let no timid club imagine that this movement will commit us to politics. Civil service reform is not politics. On the contrary, it means that those who serve the State shall be independent of politics, and shall continue their service so long as it is done with an eye single to the public good.

"If London and Paris have clean streets, it is because no one knows the politics of the street commissioner. They were appointed because they know how to clean streets and not because they had a 'pull.' Philadelphia and Pittsburg have dirty streets because the commissioners must bring a certain number of votes to the party in power. Whether they can clean streets is a secondary consideration.

"Politics but inspection caused the loss of the General Slocum. Political fire inspection caused the loss of the Iroquois theatre. Politics in the water department means typhoid fever. Politics in the police department means illegal saloons and gambling dens and protected criminals. Fifty years ago the English government was no better than ours is now. If their cities stand today as models of cleanliness and good order, it is owing to the impartial enforcement of the principles of the merit system. If we wish to emulate the well-ordered cities of England and France, we must copy their methods, and intrust the city's affairs to competent and non-political hands. Until we do this we look in vain for no permanent improvement. It is true that women cannot do much active work to bring about this fundamental improvement in municipal conditions, but we certainly have the power of influencing public opinion. We can teach our sons what good government means and how to get it. Women have a right to demand that the departments of the government that have to do with the cleanliness, comfort, peace and order of their homes shall be intrusted to competent men who understand their business."

No Other Magazine Like It.

The Burr McIntosh Monthly enjoys the distinction of being the only magazine of the kind in the world and it is worthy of the title given it by its many admirers. "The most beautiful magazine in the world." The February number is one of the most beautiful issues of this publication ever sent out. It not only contains unusually fine photographic reproductions but the letter press is really unusual, even in this age of fine printing. Musical people will be interested in the portraits of the grand opera singers, Caruso, Sambrich, Nordica and Homer; the stage celebrities, Madame Modjeska, Blanche Walsh, Alice Nellson, Maude Adams, Henrietta Crosman and the unusualy fine portraits of Chief Justice Fuller and Mark Twain. The number also contains reproductions of the exquisite mural decorations by the eminent artist, Edwin H. Blashfield, used in the State Capitols of Iowa and Minnesota and in the Court House at Baltimore. A large number of fine photographic reproductions of science and incidents throughout the world complete this attractive number. It is to be found on all new stands. FASHION HAS ITS FRILLS AND ITS FANCIES.

Many of the new shapes have the brim turned up on the left side. Others have flat brims and brims sheltering downward, from their base or merely turned down half an inch at the edge. It is said that these bell shapes promise to find much favor with dressy women.

The craze for all sorts of beads, buttons and chains, so much worn by women of early fall, would give one the idea that the savage instinct is again manifesting itself in the feminine portion of the world.

Milliners are using a new maline in the construction of the spring hats which they claim is shower proof. It is said it will come out fresh and crisp after one wet, even after a severe wetting.

The new spring gowns cut with Dutch necks have chemisettes of linen or embroidered woolen goods in white and delicate colors. These are done in standing collars and add a touch of elegance to the gowns.

A novel idea in the trimming of the new hats is the use of tulle puffs arranged on the bandeau in colors to match the hair. This is considered a step in advance of last year's custom of introducing curly hair curls and puffs in the trimmings of hats.

Many of the new short coats that will be so popular this season have vests of soft red lainage dotted with black or white. These vests are made tight-fitting and are extremely stylish when the coats are worn half open.

The lace boleros that were so popular a few seasons ago have again gained favor, and are shown in Russian and Irish crochet as well as many of the heavy laces. They give a touch of elegance to an otherwise plain blouse.

Some of the new hair decorations are most elaborate. High coombs of amber and shell mounted with precious stones are shown in the shops, and one of the new fancies imported from abroad is the wearing of a real butterfly on the coiffure.

Fastidious women favor the pretty afternoon house coats of Irish crochet lace. They are lined with delicate shades of silk and edged with plaited frills of chiffon.

The new pedestrian skirts are made with strapped bands stitched around the bottom. In many cases the tailor arranges the straps in various designs.

The present indication in the world of fashion's is that the elbow sleeves so popular during the past season will continue in favor during the spring and summer.

The Denver Method of Dealing With Juvenile Delinquents.

Commitment, with Judge Lindsey, is always a last resort. So far, out of the hundreds of boys who have been in court, only eighteen have been sent to the Industrial School. The method of commitment is all Judge Lindsey's own. He simply gives the boy the warrant and tells him to go out to Golden and lock himself up. Not one boy has betrayed the judge's trust, although the trip furnishes numerous opportunities for escape in a street-car ride across the city to the railroad station, a train ride to the Golden station, in the foothills, and a half-mile walk to the institution. The superintendent is not even notified to look out for the boy's arrival.

Primarily, as a concession to possible attacks upon the constitutionality, the Colorado law has provided for a jury trial and representation by attorney for juvenile delinquents when demanded, no jury has yet been drawn, and no attorney has yet been appointed in the Denver court. The principle upon which it is operated is that the court itself is the best conservator of the child's interests.

For results, the Denver court boasts that in 97 per cent. of the boys are treated successfully without commitment, and that out of the 5 per cent. committed, one boy is considered a hopeless case. Opposed to this stands a record of 90 per cent. convicted and 75 per cent. to jails or reformatories under the old criminal system.—From the Children's Court in American City Life, by Frances Maule Bjorkman, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for March.

An After-Dinner Story.

A RED RASCAL.

"Why do you keep that infernal Indian hanging about here?" inquired Angus Talt, a young Britisher, of his companion, Othniel Queen, as they sat on the levee of Barker's Landing (upon the water of the ugly Missourl) late one summer evening.

"I expect he has as good a right here as we have. According to the records, his nation lorded over all things in this section 'fore ever skeeters, drummers and a soulless steamboat copperation eventuated such a doggone hole. As a connectin' link with the past, he's a nat'ral curiosity, when he's sober, which is seldom."

"Do you think there is any chance of the steamer getting here tonight?" inquired Angus, by way of changing the subject, and trying to get relief from an anxiety which was rapidly becoming insupportable.

"If she's rounded Fifty-mile Point, the pilot will come ahead; but, if sun is down fore he makes it, he'll rope her up just above, and wait for daylight to navigate a bit of water as complicated as a Chinese woman's last testament. They will get cotched there some night or other, sure as small potatoes."

"What is the matter with the stream?"

"The banks of this hyer river are formed of alluvial deposit. That is, mud which hasn't quite made up its mind to be solid earth. Consequence is, that when the river is bank full, and a stiff breeze helping it, it cuts slick across points like that and forms a new channel. While it is doing that same there's no depth of water in the old bed or the new, and a steamboat aground in the old channel may stick there eternally, or till these redskins make matchwood of her. Hand over that bottle, if you please."

"I'm afraid there is nothing in this one," answered Angus, with a sigh.

"It's the last in store, and no Christian drink till the boat's in. Hello! here's a redskin, and full as a report of Congress. I wonder where in all mischief he got his liquor?"

The representative of a once noble but sorely oppressed race was making a circuitous course in their direction, with the nearest approach to a smile which the redman permits himself enlightening his inexpressive features.

"He has been doing some work," remarked Angus carelessly.

"How so?" replied his companion, with a strong expression of incredulity.

"He has a spade in his hand, and there is fresh mud upon it."

Othniel sprang to his feet with a violent exploive, rush upon the Indian, seized him by the throat and shook him till he grunted like a foghorn.

"You drunken abortion! Tell me what you have been doing before I whack the life redskin, and full as skin!" he cried as he released his hold and bestowed a most complicated kick upon his victim.

With owl-like gravity the Indian answered:

"Great-Sunset, the pride of his nation, serves the children of the palefaces, but gets little fire water. Plenty for all soon, when steamboats run on land and the remnants of my nation have their own way with her. Remember Fifty-mile Point for many, many moons!"

"Great heaven!" cried Queen, "this fiend has cut a ditch across the point, the Indians are out of their reserve, and every living soul aboard the Niobrara will be slaughtered as soon as she goes aground there. Hurry up, Britisher!"

Talt's face whitened as he laid his hand on the young man's arm and said:

"I ought perhaps to have told, for I noticed that you saw I was anxious. My sweetheart is aboard that boat."

Seizing a couple of rifles the young men rushed along the river bank. Othniel beguiling the way with forcible and eloquent comments on the pernicious results of the civil man's passion for spirituous liquors.

For some moments "Burning-Sunset" looked after them, plunged in the depth of thought.

"Heap much squaw!" Where is mine? Dead, poisoned by those of my own race, for no fault but that she loved me. Who tried to save her? A woman skilled in medicine, and a daughter of the palefaces, and I vowed that should I harm one of her kind who had a lorne. Curses on the firewater they gave me to steal away my brain so that I dug that ditch. Curse son them!"

With a wild and mournful cry he set off as fast as he could run, along the river bank, but inland toward a swamp in the direct line between the landing and the point. Over the treacherous ground he passed, with strides so long and step so light that even the wakeful willow seemed to regard him as only a deeper shadow in the darkness, and cowered in silence as he passed.

In the meantime the "Niobrara" felt her way cautiously down the river. The pastled pilot "rang her down" dead slow, then astern, and then ahead again. The captain, who was awakened from dreams of a full freight and a good market, by the clang of the bell, came on deck in light marching order to see what was wrong, but had wisdom enough not to ask questions.

The plaintive cry of the leadsman became more intermittent, the great wheels ceased to revolve, and then seven shots rang out from the pilot-house as the big boat ran hard aground, and the cry of the redmen rose from the bank.

That there was a fight on, and a fight for life or death, every passenger on the boat was well aware, and they knew that the chances were a level fifty to one against them at the least. In the half gloom, between the boat's lights and darkness of the shore, it was impossible to estimate numbers.

"You women git below!" yelled the captain, forgetting his usual free-school phraseology, and his suggestion was backed up by remarks from the pilot (whose education was strictly limited to "head-waters" lingo), which caused the order to be carried out promptly.

"There's one of the poison-breed skipped ashore!" cried the mate.

"Hold your fire!" vociferated the pilot, who had recognized Burning-Sunset.

"Now!" he added, as the Indian climbed to his . side, "what's the racket?"

"Fire those empty barrels and throw to shore!" panted the redskin.

There were a pile of bush things on the foredeck, and the men saw at once the wisdom of the order, so that when the howling savages came to the attack they found the steamer cut off by an impenetrable wall of flame blowing back in their faces. Talt and Queen arrived on the bank just in time to see what they thought was the destruction of the steamer and the loss of all on board, for that little ditch, cut by the Indian across the point, with its soft alluvial banks, had now the full course of the big river running through it, and the old river bed was silting up as fast as it could.

With most unearthly cries the redskins retreated, and, half stifled by the smoke, many were hopelessly engulfed in the marsh, meeting a speedy death.

"Let into them!" cried Othniel, shooting as rapidly as his finger could press the trigger, and scattering destruction with each discharge.

"With you!" replied Angus, sending shot for shot.

There was a cry from the deck of the "Niobrara," a storm had come down from the hills, and the "freshet" enabled her to back into the old channel so that Angus and Queen skipped aboard before she was fairly underway.

Talt and his sweetheart, as all sweethearts do, and they turned to Othniel, with many at his back, to inquire where the redskin hero was who had saved so many from robbery and pillage.

The reply came from the captain:

"That red rascal has got in the spirit room and is as drunk as Noah, but he had the old Amurrican grit, and don't you fergot it."—Exchange.

NOTHING SERIOUS.

The Same Rule.

"See here, sir," exclaimed the successful manufacturer to Mr. Adam Upp, his dilatory bookkeeper, "you have not been attentive to business as you might be. Now it has been my rule in life to be at my desk early and late——"

"Me, too," interrupted Mr. Upp; "sometimes I get there early and sometimes late."

One Thing that Saved Him.

Casey—O! but that byp o' Finnegan's is the bad one.

Cassidy—Aye! he'd bring his father's gray hairs in sorrow to the grave if it wasn't fur wan thing.

Casey—An' w'at's that?

Cassidy—The Finnegans always git bald befoor they've a chance to git gray.

So Refined.

Mrs. Uurltch—Mr. Uurltch is so particular, so refined in his tastes, don't you know. For instance, he has his coffee imported direct and no one else in this country gets any just like it.

Mrs. McCall—Indeed? I suppose he drinks a great deal of it?

Mrs. Nuritch—O! No; only a saucerful at each meal.

News.

"Ah, yes," said Kwotee, "death is impartial. It seeks out the poor man and the rich man alike."

"Not exactly alike," replied Hardhead. "In the case of the rich man it is usually accompanied by reporters."

Sufficient Reason.

Pepprey—It's just as well.

Hoggley—Sure it is.

Pepprey—Yes, for in these days of free education they wouldn't be able to escape some knowledge of grammar and they'd be forever correcting you.

Two Questions.

"I've got something important to do," said the practical young man, "and I just don't know how to go about it. I'd like you to help me."

"Yes?" replied Miss Pechia. "What is it you propose to do?"

"That's not the question. It's what is it you do to propose?"

Expenses Grew.

"Do you really believe," asked Singleton, "that living expenses have increased 25 per cent. in the last five years?"

"Do I? Why, they've increased 100 per cent.!"

"Impossible!"

"Not at al. Five years ago there was only my wife and me, but now there are six of us in the family."

THE AMERICAN MAN IS NOT A DUMMY

The American man as Mr. Hen Peck is his last picture by his English cousin.

Of course we are more or less accustomed to having our foreign cousins picture us women as domineering, globe-trotting, do-as-you-please, disagreeable females.

The men have been spared; they have only been called good-natured, money-making individuals, with no imaginations, but they were at least called manly.

Now the last vestige of their manhood has been taken, and we are told by Professor Reich, the Hungarian historian and lecturer of a London university, that in America woman commands man and man does not count; that today man has no existence here; he is a dummy!

One can't help wondering in what part of the continent Professor Reich made his observations.

Perhaps it was in Colorado, where the women are so bold as to vote.

Or perchance he gleamed his fashionable facts from the new anaemic American specimens who frequent foreign shores.

It is not fair to judge the American man by the one you meet in Europe.

The best American is found at home.

Professor Reich's knowledge of American men and women seems to be limited to the comic-paper variety of the pallid, anaemic, masculine woman carrying her husband around Europe under her arm.

He doubtless has made up his mind that all American women being of this variety, all the men must be dummies. A most natural conclusion.

But, thank fortune, this is not the predominating type of woman in America, and the American man is something more than a wooden image, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

The American man doubtless has his shortcomings, but that only makes him more human.

None of us would enjoy living up to the virtues of a Gabriel.

Even with his shortcomings, in the eyes of most American women, he is far and away above men of other nations.

Talt and his sweetheart, as all sweethearts do, and they turned to Othniel, with many at his back, to inquire where the redskin hero was who had saved so many from robbery and pillage.

The reply came from the captain:

"That red rascal has got in the spirit room and is as drunk as Noah, but he had the old Amurrican grit, and don't you fergot it."—Exchange.

Is most kind and generous. He looks upon woman as his equal, and wishes to make a companion—not a slave—of his wife.

In this he differs from the men in foreign climes.

He is hard-working. His ambition in life is to make his wife comfortable and happy, to give his children a good education and to give them a better chance in the world than he has had.

He is courteous to women.

He is independent in thought and action; in fact, it is because he is not a dummy, but is alive, lovable creature, that the American woman delights to honor him.

NOT TO BE QUOTED'

The reporter boarded a Chestnut street car at Broad street. Two minutes later a bulky gentleman dropped into a seat by his side and jammed him against the window. The reporter grunted, but the newcomer was cheerful.

"Fine day, Chestnut street before it had car tracks," he announced pleasantly. "Used to run omnibuses up one side and down the other."

The reporter wasn't interested.

"Yes," he continued, "I've lived here all my life. I like to see the old town grow. I was born in 1844—on the 4th of July, 1844."

The reporter tried to imagine just when the momentous event happened. The information was somewhat hazy.

"Yes, those are facts," he went on. "I went to school—What, not going?"

"Yes," replied the reporter, "here is where I belong."

"Say, young man, what's your business?"

"I'm a reporter."

"A reporter! Great heavens!" he cried, "and here I've been talking so freely to you. Say now, don't quote me. I wasn't talking for publication."

But he was, even if he didn't know it.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

An Investment.

Thirsty Tanques (gleefully)—Just got hold of a little money. I'm goin' ter be a vessel owner purty soon.

Hungry Higgins—Come off! How much money did yet get?

Thirsty Tanques—A nickel, an' I'm goin' ter buy a schooner.—Philadelphia Press.

As It May Be.

"Now, tell me," said Mrs. Hiram Offen, "why did you leave your last place?"

"Well," replied the new cook-lady, "me an' the woman couldn't git along. My automobile an' hers was different makes an' we was always discussin' about 'em."

His Experience.

"No rest for the wicked," they say.

"That's wrong," the old convict confessed.

"Now I've been quite bad in my day And frequently found there's arrest."

COLBY DEFINES "RADICALISM" IN JERSEY POLITICS

Senator From Essex Given Splendid Ovation By Representative Men at the American Banquet Where He Tells How Freedom of Speech and Thought is Forbidden by Party Bosses.

FATHER OF "CONSOLIDATION" PLEADS FOR UNION

Former Mayor Saunders Responds to r Plainfield to Toast, "Our City"—Mayor Smalley Toastmaster—Governor Stokes Unable to Attend—State Officers of the Order Speak—Colby's Speech.

When Mayor Newton B. Smalley, North Plainfield's fighting mayor, introduced Everett Colby, Senator from Essex county, at the "Junior American banquet," given at the Casino Thursday by Franklin and Benevolent Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., the stalwart foe of the State Republican machine, received an ovation that lasted fully three minutes, and when he arose to speak again prolonged applause was given that must have dispelled any vestige of doubt as to the genuineness of the welcome, and the desire of Plainfielders to see and hear him.

The gathering was a thorough representative one, including not only members of the Jr. O. U. A. M., but many others prominent in city, county and State affairs. There were over 200 guests seated at the various tables, which were attractively decorated with the National colors.

Early in the evening it was learned that Governor Edward C. Stokes would be unable to attend, as he had been called to Millville by the serious illness of his mother. He informed Mayor Smalley late in the afternoon of his inability to be present and expressed his regrets.

Naturally, however, the greatest interest centred in Senator Colby. The failure of the Board of Trade to invite him to its banquet only increased the desire of Plainfielders to have the Senator from Essex county come here and his doctrines expressed in earnest, forcible words found a response indeed in the heart of everyone present.

In introducing Senator Colby, Mayor Smalley remarked that he felt particularly unfitted to do so. He said that a man who rose from the ranks, reaching the high position of Senator must become unusual power. However, he did not think that the Senator was a stranger here inasmuch as he had to come to Plainfield to get his better half.

At the outset Mr. Colby expressed his delight in meeting those present, and also in the fact that women had been admitted—Mrs. R. R. Ackerman and Mrs. Colby occupying seats in the balcony. Continuing, the Senator said:

"I don't think that we half appreciate what the women have done. Going back several years to the horrible massacres in Armenia we learn that the Sultan was able to repulse England and Germany, but when a woman, Clara Barton, appeared before him, within six months she stood on the ramparts and was instrumental in putting a stop to the brutality. This is not my first visit to Plainfield. I was a candidate here once, but not a political candidate. At that time I didn't care whether the county was Democratic or Republican, but was concerned as to how I stood with a small minority.

"I am sorry Governor Stokes is not here, though we may not all agree with him. If his life work should end tonight there are three monuments he would leave—the school system, the primary law and his last message, which I think, should be filed with the State papers.

"I am convinced that every one should be a politician, not the kind that follows a boss and sells his vote for $2, but a follower of an ideal or an idea. I was deeply impressed with the remarks of one speaker in his reference to the American flag, and it reminded me of a trip I took to Hong Kong. On the voyage I was continually annoyed by an Englishman who spoke sneeringly of our navy, but when we sailed into Hong Kong and saw the American fleet anchored there showing the National colors, the tears fairly streamed down my face, and yet that was not patriotism—the kind that inspires at the noon hour or when one is in some obscure corner."

Senator Colby's subject was "Patriotism." He spoke as follows:

"Patriotism is the product of environment. A seed is sown in childhood in the home and in the school. If sown on good ground the bright leaves of a small plant appear above the surface, they reach out toward the sun, in the air they in the air they surrounds them, and, if nourished and protected from the chill blasts of civic indifference, those small leaves will burst into the perfect flower of love and devotion to our country and its ideals. We see, therefore, the great need of preparing the soil from which the plant is to draw its vigor and its life. If the seed falls in stony ground, it will not take root. Its leaves will be scorched by the sun and wither; the stones must be taken from the field. It is a hard task for a few but so easy for the many if each would carry but one stone from the field.

"You remember the story of Christ crossing the field with his disciples. It was covered with stones and the Master suggested that it could be easily prepared for harvest and made to yield its fruit if each one would but carry away one stone; so each picked up a stone, but one of the disciples looked about for the smallest he could find that his burden might be light. Soon they stopped for lunch, and having nothing to eat, Christ turned the stones into bread and the disciple with the pebble found that he received but little. On the return they repeated their task, and the one who had taken the smallest stone, thinking that he would profit by experience, sought the largest in the field, but at the border of the river Christ ordered the stones to be thrown into the water, suggesting that the man who works only when there is a reward deserves nothing in return. Is there not a pretty good Sunday-school lesson in that for us all? If the stones must be taken from the field, should we not all look for the biggest boulder we can carry on our backs?

"What are some of the stones in the political field? Is not one the wrongful application of money in public life? Is it not a rock that must be removed from the field if a harvest is to be reaped. Patriotism cannot live in an atmosphere of corruption nor can it breathe the air of a commercialism that barters on exchange the ideals and principles that are and should always be the foundations of our government—freedom of speech, freedom of thought and freedom to do as you please until you infringe upon the rights of your neighbor.

"In Essex County, where I live, freedom of speech and freedom of thought have in a large measure been curtailed through fear. The only men who seem willing to tell the whole truth are the ministers of the gospel and some independent editors. The Essex County Bar, although composed of many high-minded, splendid and able men, as an organization to influence public opinion hasn't the courage of a robust clam when it comes to a fight in the open. If it wants to oppose some nomination, it does it in the cellar and it sends a second cousin of a brother-in-law who wont tell you from whom he comes rather than come out in the light of day.

"Now why is this? Because certain men control the business of the county and have it in their hands to make and unmake the prosperity of thousands of men. It is not a case of active corruption. It is not a case of open threat, but it is the power to prevent a man from developing his own resources by his own endeavor. In the case of those who are striving hard to make a living it is natural that they should guard their interests by the exercise of independent speech. We would all do the same, but in the case of men who can make a living without the aid of certain influences I see little excuse for shirking the responsibility of blurting out the truth.

"But what happens when a group of men try to pick up a few of these bricks? They are said to be unpatriotic, radical and unsafe. Let us see. They started out to make the railroads pay their fair share of taxes. Is that radicalism? They attempted to reform

WEDDING SUIT IS STOLEN

Now Robert Guttridge Wants Tailor to Make Good.

PLETHORA OF LAWYERS

Three Counsellors Engaged For Defendant—None of Them Appeared In Court When Case Was Called.

Justice Hand adjourned the case of Robert Guttridge against Joseph Kamosko, in tort, Monday afternoon. The court wanted a week to figure out who held the brief for the defense.

Guttridge brought suit against Kamosko three weeks ago, for the value of a suit of clothes that disappeared while in Kamosko's possession. Kamosko is a tailor, and Guttridge turned the clothes over to him for complete and especial cleaning, pressing and retouching. Guttridge was particular about the suit because he intended to get married in it. The day before the wedding, when he called at the tailor's place for the wedding garments, Kamosko told him that burglars had been in his place the night before. One of the first things they packed up, Kamosko intimated, was Guttridge's nuptial suit.

Guttridge was openly skeptical of the burglary story. He had doubts, although he couldn't prove them. It was his conviction, however, that a man who was careless enough to lose another man's wedding suit on the eve of the wedding, and force him, the other man, to get married in his prosaic, workday clothes, ought to have something done to him. So he brought suit in Justice Hand's court, through Lawyer L. A. Clement.

A day or two later Kamosko hired Lawyer John P. Owens to defend him. Lawyers, like lions, warn one another before they pounce, and Mr. Owens wrote Mr. Clement that he had been retained.

Two days later Mr. Clement came to Mr. Owens with a puzzled expression and a letter. The letter was from Codington & Swackhamer, and informed Mr. Clement, that, as Kamosko's lawyers, they intended to ask for a jury trial in the case. Mr. Clement wanted to know how Codington & Swackhamer got in the case; so did Mr. Owens, and he went to Codington & Swackhamer's office to find out.

"We were retained by Mrs. Kamosko," said Codington & Swackhamer. "As long as you were retained by Mrs. Kamosko," they continued generously, "you go on and try the case. We will just keep a general watch."

Two bore days passed, and Lawyer Clement again approached Lawyer Owens with a letter. The expression of perplexity on his face this time was so deep it almost disguised him. The letter was a notice from Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., who informed Mr. Clement, that, as Kamosko's lawyer, he intended to ask for a jury trial.

Mr. Owens went over to the trial of Mr. Hetfield very rapidly.

"I'm the Kamosko lawyer," said Mr. Hetfield, when Mr. Owens made the Missouri declaration. "Mrs. McCready, for whom Mrs. Kamosko works, retained me."

Mrs. Robert H. McCready, of Ravine road, was the woman Mr. Hetfield referred to. Mrs. Kamosko has worked for her a long time, and she thinks highly of the wedded handmaiden. When she heard that Mrs. Kamosko's husband was threatened with lawing, she decided that she way to show her regard for Mrs. Kamosko was to hire a lawyer.

Yesterday afternoon the case was set for trial. When Justice Hand called the case, Lawyer Clement and his client stood up. They were the only ones present. Of the four lawyers gathered about the defendant not one appeared.

"Too many cooks," sighed the court. "I guess I'll adjourn this case a week to give them a chance to decide which lawyer will cook this case." Lawyer Clement had no objection, and the case went over.

Threw Stones and Swore.

George Curtis, a small boy, will be arraigned before Judge Runyon in the city court Saturday morning, charged with throwing stones and swearing at Mrs. L. P. Schatel, 334 Jackson avenue. He was arrested on her husband's complaint.

Dr. Clark to Preach Here.

Rev. Dr. W. W. Clark, of New York, secretary of the Domestic Board of Missions of the Reformed church, will occupy the pulpit at Trinity Reformed church on Sunday morning, March 15, when the annual offering for domestic missions will be received.

The net proceeds from the amateur production of "The Pirates of Penzance," for the Day Nursery, the new charity recently started by the King's Daughters, amounts to $105.75 and a check for that sum has been sent to Mrs. Charles A. Reed, president of the Union, King's Daughters. The organization appreciates the benefit it derives from the performance and feels that credit is due to former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, William Holmes, W. J. Counihan and all those who took part in the affair. The proceeds will be devoted to meeting expenses incurred in starting the nursery.

A WAY TO OPEN STREET

Mayor Smalley Suggests that Watchung Ave. Property Owners do It Themselves.

AVOIDING RED TAPE

Borough Council Accepts Allen Place and Makes Marshal Appointments.

In the course of regular business at last Friday's meeting of the borough Council, Mayor Smalley announced that he had suggested a new plan to interested property owners for the opening of Watchung avenue from its present terminus to the foot of the mountain.

If the ordinance covering such matters, he said, was strictly followed out, nothing but red tape would have to be gone through and a great deal of expense would be incurred in appointing commissioners to assess damages and care for other details. On the other hand, if the owners most directly concerned would get together, open the street, and then petition the Council to accept it, the improvement could be reached in a short time and at less cost. The Mayor stated that he had presented the facts in this way, but as yet he had received no word as to what was to be done. He asked that the petition for the opening, presented last month, be laid over pending the property owners' action, and this was done by vote.

On a resolution offered by Councilman McGee the borough clerk was authorized to borrow $500 for current expenses if it was found necessary. The financial report showed that there is a balance of but $8.28 in the treasury and there is a possibility that some bills might have to be met.

In response to petitions, Allen place was accepted as an improved street and four lights were ordered placed on DeLacy avenue. Peter Dooley, who was recently appointed a regular marshal, tendered his resignation as lieutenant of No. 2 Hose Company, and it was accepted. The police force was increased by the appointment of Herman Klinsman as marshal to do special duty.

Permits were granted William H. Kirch to build a barn for Levy Brothers at 41 Duer street, and Dan auto house for William Jeffery at 95 Duer street. Councilman Lee reported that $317.7 had been collected in street taxes during the month and the police committee reported collecting $55 in fines.

The Gun a Teacher.

A story is going the rounds in New York of a discussion between two well-known business men who visit the Maine woods every shooting season.

One had been telling of his outing, which he had found doubly delightful, because for the first time he had taken his small boy along.

"A boy of twelve? I should be afraid," said the other, "to give my boy the responsibility of a gun."

"Well," said the first, "I should be afraid to deprive my boy of his share of responsibility. Nothing develops a boy like responsibility."

This man's view is exactly in line with the propaganda being carried forward by the J. Stevens Arms and Tool Company, Chicopee Falls, Mass. They argue very reasonably that by putting a rifle or gun in the hands of a boy you teach him to be careful, you increase his self-respect, and make him self-reliant and manly.

The Stevens company have issued a catalog on rifles, shotguns and pistols, which every father should see. It not only describes the many different styles there are today, but it is a perfect mine of information on all points connected with shooting, whether for sport a-field, or target practice. We have read the copy sent us with greatest interest, and strongly advise our readers to write for it. The company's only request is that 2-cent stamps be sent to cover postage; the catalog itself is free.

Fine Organ Recital.

The first of a series of Lenten recitals was given at the Holy Cross church Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock by Mr. Lee, organist, assisted by Mr. Loder, baritone, of New York. The edifice was well filled with members and friends of the parish and all enjoyed the programme exceedingly. The principal numbers included "Fantasia and Fuge in C Minor," Bach, and "Andante," Merkel," by Mr. Lee; "It Is Enough," from Elijah, and "The Lord Is My Light," Allitson, by Mr. Loder. These recitals will be given every Saturday afternoon during Lent by Mr. Lee and attractive programmes will be presented.

Carnival Drawing Card.

Through the efforts of former Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, a novel production will be one of the features of the Hospital Carnival in June provided it is passed upon favorably by Major Mase Edwards, who has been authorized to witness a private rehearsal of the performance tomorrow night. The dancing dolls are controlled by Mr. Simon Levy, an old college friend of Judge Runyon, who first suggested the scheme to Mr. Fisk. Mr. Levy has traveled all over the world with his show during the last few years and is now living in New York.

ONLY ONE SERVICE AT CALVARY CHURCH

BAILEYITES PROTEST AGAINST SERMON BY SOUTHERN PREACHER.

Little snags interfered with the smooth current of worship at Calvary Baptist church Sunday. There was one service, under difficulties, and another one was nipped in the bud.

Rev. Alfonso La Chia, of Pee Dee, N. C., who was asked to preach by Deacons Robinson and Conway, head of the Morris faction, came to the church in the morning to take over the service. Rev. J. W. Mitchell, who claims to be in charge of the church still, as pastor, supply, made formal objection to Mr. La Chia's speaking from the pulpit. The North Carolina minister spoke from in front of the platform. He said he didn't want to mix up in the trouble, and made no objection to Mr. Mitchell's order.

In the evening, Mr. Mitchell dismissed the congregation a few minutes after it assembled, with the announcement that there would be no service. The people filed out quietly.

Deacon Mansfield Robinson, who is supposed to take charge of the church money, was put out last night to discover that the morning collection had disappeared. Deacon Conway says representatives of the other faction carried it off.

The aspect of the legal battle over the pastorate remains the same as on Saturday, excepting for an addition to the armament of the Morrisites. Former Senator Charles A. Reed has been retained to assist Clarence L. Murphy in fighting the case.

COPY OF FRANKLIN'S PENNSYLVANNIA GAZETTE

ISSUE DATED 1718 IN POSSESSION OF A PLAINFIELDER.

A copy of the Pennsylvania Gazette, the paper edited and published by Benjamin Franklin, for August 18, 1748, is in the possession of J. M. McNaughteon, of Sandford avenue. The paper is in an excellent state of preservation, protected from the ravages of air and time by tight-fitting glass plates. A glass sheet backs the frame, as well as fronts it, so that all four of the small pages on which the paper is printed may be seen.

Most of the columns in the paper are given over to advertisements, but they are such quaint-seeming advertisements that they make more interesting reading than the letters from London and New York that comprise the great proportion of the news in the Gazette.

Several of the advertisements are for the apprehension of runaway servants. Thirty shillings reward is offered for the return of one of them. Servants were bound out in those days, and it was a criminal offense for them to leave before their time had expired. Times have changed since then.

Two letters from London, one containing the King's speech to Parliament, and "despatches" from Antwerp, Liege, Paris and other old-world places—some of them with news of war—are included in your school history—are on the first page. The news didn't move so fast in those days as it does now, the letters from abroad in this issue of August 18 are dated the May before.

Advertisements of sales of all sorts are scattered through the columns. Captain Joseph Redmond, of Front street, near Society Hill, advertises "a parcel of very useful and fashionable household furniture of most sorts, with a parcel of plate, and a serviceable Negro man." Serviceable Negro men brought a good price in those days.

Mr. McNaughton naturally prizes his copy of the Gazette very highly. The recent celebration of Franklin's bi-centennial gives it additional interest as a curio.

MASON'S MUSHROOM DINNER.

Anchor Lodge Members Have Merry Time at Pedeflous.

Forty members of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., had a mushroom dinner at Pedeflous' Hotel Saturday night. Every dish on the menu contained mushroom prepared in some way or another and the novelty of such a dinner proved enjoyable.

Worshipful Master William N. Runyon sat at the head of the long table and about the board were others who have held that exalted office. Short speeches were made by Mr. Runyon and a dozen others. After the dinner vocal and instrumental solos were furnished by members of the lodge.

THE AMERICAN PRESS.

Not As Good As English Journalism, Hall Caine.

"How does the American press compare with that of England?" asked a reporter when Hall Caine, who went to New York to rehearse his "Prodigal Son," reached home, says the London Mail. The Manxman replied quickly:

"Not very favorable. The timeliness, the promptness, the power of 'being on the nail' are almost as conspicuous in the best American journals as in your own papers. But there is neither the simplicity of form nor the breadth of interest which distinguish English papers. Consistency is not a cardinal journalistic virtue, and perhaps need not be. It may be as true of a journal as of humanity that consistency is a leading characteristic of weak minds, but the self-contradiction of the American newspaper, even of the best kind, from day to day, without shame or any attempt to 'save the face,' is an amazing and bewildering fact to the English observer."

"Has the personal tone of American newspapers improved?"

"Decidedly. I was also pleased to find that a man's trousers, coat, necktie, not to speak of his hair and his eyes, are less than formerly considered a proper subject for public comment. Then there is distinctly more sincerity of criticism and less indulgence in personal ridicule than of old."

"Do not let me conclude," added Hall Caine, "without saying that I should be sorry if any criticisms of mine on America or the Americans conveyed an unfavorable impression. Everywhere the Englishman so much at home outside his own country as when he travels in the United States; nowhere so sure of an immediate and hearty welcome; nowhere so certain to find aims and institutions that have all his sympathy and that command all his heart, and nowhere does he meet with men and women more able and earnest—more brotherly and sisterly."

Y. M. C. A. IS STILL IN THE WINNING GAME.

Atlantic Boat Club Defeated in Deciding Contest.

By one hard won point, Y. M. C. A. defeated the Atlantic Boat Club five in the deciding game of the series, at the local gymnasium Saturday night. The crowd that stayed away on account of the rain missed one of the liveliest contests of the season. The score was 18 to 17.

The game was as close as the score indicates. The outcome was in doubt up to the last minute of play, both teams playing swiftly and doggedly. Both fives played teamy ball, and some pretty passing figured in the scoring. Leary and Scull made a great showing.

The lineup:

Y. M. C. A.		Atlantic Boat Club.
Utzinger		Haselman
Thompson		Binderwald
	forwards.
Scull		Shortemple
	center.
Leary		Hanke
Letson		Fagan

COMMUNION SERVICES AT LOCAL CHURCHES

UNUSUALLY LARGE NUMBER OF NEW MEMBERS ADDED.

Communion services were held in a number of the local churches Sunday morning, and in nearly every case new members were received. At Trinity Reformed church, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor, received twenty new members, eleven by letter and nine on confession. Of those received on confession, four were from the Junior department, two from G. L. Van Emburgh's Bible class and one from W. F. Oliver's Bible class, all of which was very gratifying to pastor and people. There were 319 persons who took communion at this service.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, received five new members, three by letter and two on confession, and Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, received five new members by letter.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, received six new members on confession, five by letter and two were baptized. At the First M. E. church, Rev. A. C. McCrea received eight new members by letter and two on confession.

At the Monroe Avenue M. E. church there was an unusually large number of communicants, and Rev. George Mooney, pastor, received Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schiltz, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Cox, Mr. and Mrs. William Hinton, Miss Margaret, by letter. J. Stephen Higham was received on confession and Miss Ruth Martin on probation. Marie Eloise Brower and Dorothy Marguerite Brower, infants, were baptized, as were also three adults: Mrs. Sally Brower, Miss Carrie Brower, Miss Sadie Brower, Miss Mary Matthews, Mrs. Charles Smith and Chauncey Lant.

CLASS FOR AUTOISTS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

CLARENCE BROKAW WILL GIVE A SERIES OF TWELVE LESSONS.

A class for the instruction of automobilists will be started at the Y. M. C. A. on March 15. It will be under the care of Clarence Brokaw, a former Plainfielder, head of the automobile school of the West Side Branch of the Y. M. C. A., New York, the largest school of its kind in the country.

The class is designed for owners and prospective owners. Twelve lessons will comprise the course. They will be given weekly, on Thursday nights. Mr. Brokaw's lessons will be demonstrated by the aid of automobiles from the garages of Morris Brothers and H. L. C. Martin.

Mr. Brokaw is an expert in the field of chauffeur instruction. The school at the head of which he is ranks as the best, as well as the biggest, in the world. Among its 400 or more pupils there are a number who have come from abroad for the sole purpose of instruction under Mr. Brokaw. The school is located in a big garage on West Sixty-first street.

GOLF ANNOUNCEMENT.

New Jersey State Golf Association Executive Committee Named.

Perry Jackson, president of the New Jersey State Golf Association, has selected his executive committee for the coming season as follows: Leighton Calkins, Plainfield Country Club; H. H. Spies, Montclair Golf Club; W. D. Vanderpool, Morris County Golf Club, and Charles W. O'Connor, Essex County Country Club. There will be a meeting of this committee at Mr. Jackson's office, in New York city, next Saturday afternoon.

It has been generally supposed that the association championship to be held over the links of the Morris County Golf Club would be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 7, 8 and 9, but President Jackson said last night that he thought it would be a week earlier, naming May 31, June 1 and 2. This, however, is a matter to be decided on by the committee.

BOARDING HOUSES AS BOOMERS OF TOWNS.

Bound Brook Board of Trade Wants a Truell Inn.

The Bound Brook Board of Trade is advocating the erection of a high grade family boarding house-hotel, on the order of the Truell Inn and Truell Court, to encourage substantial people to live in their town. It is argued that a hostelry of that character is a decided factor in bringing desirable people to a town, and forcing the boosting of the locality and of the municipal government on their attention.

Money enough to build the place is not in sight, but the Board of Trade thinks a joint stock company, to which all the town boomers might contribute, would bring about its erection. One of the board members said the Truell houses had done much to build up this city.

BASEBALL STOCK CLUB

Scheme to Float Shares at Five Dollars Each Suggested.

MEETING ON SATURDAY

Fans to Be Invited to Subscribe to Plan Which Insures Good Ball for Plainfield.

Local fandom is reminded of the meeting to be held at the Hotel Iroquois on Saturday night at 7:30 o'clock to discuss the advisability of forming a baseball association. The enthusiasm in the project is steadily increasing and there appears to be no doubt but that it will go through all right.

It is conservatively estimated that the expense for the season will be about $2,000, and the plan is to issue shares of stock at a par value of $5 each. Anyone interested will be invited to subscribe to one or as many shares as he likes. At the close of the season, if the venture has been a success, each stockholder will be refunded his money in full; the profits, if any, to be applied to next season and deposited in the treasury until that time.

If there should be a loss, each stockholder will receive his proportion according to the amount of stock held by him. For instance, if a person subscribes $5, and $2,000 is raised, and the season closes with a deficit of $1,000, he will receive $2.50.

Manager Daub believes that with the reduction in salaries, a shorter season, extending from May 1 until Labor Day, that the association can pull out whole and may be able to make a little money. Under such conditions he figures that there will be a saving of at least $3,500 over last season.

Notices for the meeting will be issued in a day or two and a full attendance is expected. Manager Daub will be present to lend his influence and give any assistance possible in the formation of the league. If it is thought advisable to organize, officers will be elected and steps taken at once to get affairs in shape for the season.

Mayor N. B. Smalley and City Judge Runyon, together with representatives from both Plainfield newspapers, have taken the initiative in the matter of calling the meeting, and it is hoped that there will be a large and hearty response so that it will be possible for Plainfield to enjoy a season of good baseball.

CHINESE NEWSPAPERS.

Although it is notorious that the Chinese preceded us in the invention of gunpowder, it is somewhat astonishing to learn that Pekin is the home of the oldest newspaper in the world; yet this statement is made in a recent issue of the North American Review by no less an authority than Mr. Archibald R. Colquhoun, author of "Greater America" (Harpers) and of other books dealing with Far Eastern questions. If anything could surprise us more than the assertion, it is the fact that "in China there are actually no press laws in existence today," which, as the author observes, is "in curious contrast to the state of affairs in more than one Western country." Even progressive Japan is less liberal than China as regards freedom of the press, and in the former country the publication of matter deemed seditious can be punished by fines and imprisonment. "Indeed, till lately," says Mr. Colquhoun, "imprisonment was so common that most papers employed a 'prison editor,' or official scapegoat, whose business it was to undergo those terms. The real editor was treated merely as a 'contributor,' and thus escaped the arm of the law." It would seem, however, that journalism in Japan and China, in spite of its dangers, is even less profitable than elsewhere, for we are told that the Japanese pressman rarely receives more than $100 a year, while his Chinese brother gets a still smaller stipend. The serious purport of Mr. Colquhoun's inrormiss paper is that through the press and literature of China much may be done towards giving her a "true perspective."

Spoke Too Soon.

A middle-aged woman and her little son, a lad of six or seven years, got on the car, and as soon as they were seated the woman took a half-dollar out of her pocket, and handed it to the youngster to pay the fare with. The boy held the coin in his small, fat hand, and examined it closely and solemnly. The conductor appeared for the fares, and the youngster gave him the half-dollar with much solemnity. The money was pocketed, and forty cents in change was put in the small, extended hand. As soon as the change, the boy laughed, wriggled in his seat, and shouted, gleefully: "Oh, ma, he's taken the bad half-dollar!"—Argonaut.

Investigation of the report that the P. S. C. men were frightening housekeeping to burglar scares, has disclosed the fact that it is unfounded. W. C. Causebrook, head of the P. S. C. office, said this morning that none of his men had prowled about houses.

RELIGION IS EMOTIONAL

Rev. Dr. Symonds Begins a Special Sermon Series.

THE TWO ESSENTIALS

Dependence and Adoration True Religion—A Sermon on Christian Unity by Dr. Symonds in the Morning.

Rev. Dr. Herbert Symonds, of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, Canada, delivered the first of his series of addresses on "Religion" at Grace P. E. church Sunday. His subject was "What Is Religion?"

After a brief introductory to the series, in which he outlined the course to be followed in the presentation of the different sides of the general subject, which will include the historical aspect, Dr. Symonds took up the immediate subject. Religion, he held, was the combination of dependence and adoration. Man felt his own limitations and his impulse for adoring and serving the higher power. It could not be one without the other. A sense of weakness, of limitation, alone would not necessarily lead to adoration; it must be complemented by an object worthy of being adored; an object commanding and compelling adoration.

That religion was external in its source, something that came to man from the outside, as his clothes, his education did, Dr. Symonds denied very strongly. Religion, he held, was innate in man; it was not an addition to humanity, but part of its essential being. It was a thing of the emotions, not of the mind. Dr. Symonds said he had the Englishman's dislike and distrust of the emotional in religion, but he could not disguise nor overlook the fact that the source of religion was entirely in the emotions. It was not intellectual, and could not be demonstrated intellectually. There was no answer for the scientists and agnostics who demanded intellectual proof of its claims. It came from the heart, and to the heart it made its appeal.

Dr. Symonds will continue his addresses tonight at 8 o'clock and every night this week, with the exception of Thursday, when he will interrupt the series to deliver his lecture on the religion of the poetry of Tennyson and Browning, which was first announced for Wednesday night. Dr. Symonds will give daily Bible talks at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Dr. Symonds preached at Grace church in the morning, as well as at 4 o'clock yesterday. The topic at the early service was "Principles of Christian Unity." The subject, he said, was a practical one, and in the air. Progress was being made by the unionists, particularly in Canada. The essential principles of Christian unity are liberty and love. Liberty alone was a disintegrating principle; it might be compared to centrifugal force in nature. Counteracted by love, the social virtue, it was checked; love restrained the destructive tendencies. With liberty and love dominant, Christian unity was assured; the two principles were really the essentials of civilization as it was known today. Dr. Symonds showed how his arguments were in accordance with the teachings of Scripture.

WEATHER NO DETRIMENT TO HOPE CHAPEL AFFAIR.

Oyster Supper Conducted by Ladies' Aid Society Meets With Success.

Though the weather was decidedly against the conducting of a social affair, success attended the oyster supper given by the Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel, Scotch Plains. HOLY CROSS' NEW CHOIR

Men and Boys Take the Place of Mixed Choir at Borough's Episcopal Church.

MR. WARNER'S WORK

Since His Coming to North Plainfield Three Months Ago Renewed Activity Has Marked Parochial Life.

Since the arrival of Rev. George A. Warner, formerly curate of Grace church, Orange, new plans and policies have been inaugurated at the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, one in particular being the organization of a boy choir, which takes the place of the mixed choir for many years in service. The rector has had considerable experience with boys, having been an instructor in an academy some few years ago, and he found no difficulty in attracting twenty-four lads with good voices. Supplementing this number, he obtained the services of ten or twelve men. At the outset he secured George Lamond, choirmaster of Trinity church, to train the voices, and a fairly good standard of musical excellence has already been attained.

These boys together with about fifty other lads whom Rev. Mr. Warner has interested in the parish have formed a Boys' Club which meets once a month. They are working hard for medals offered in various contests and there is keen rivalry for the good conduct award, the prize being the opportunity to go camping with the rector during the summer vacation season.

The parish Sunday-school has also been reorganized and a graded system established. Its membership has jumped from seventeen to seventy. A feature of the work is a monthly children's service held in the church edifice where the pupils are publically catechised.

When Rev. Mr. Warner took charge of the parish, he impressed upon the congregation the position the church should occupy and the responsibility it should assume in the foreign mission work. As a result of his efforts the missionary appropriationment of $284 was quickly met. Moreover the Ladies' Auxiliary of forty members was formed and a large contribution in cash and clothes made to the cause. The Sunday-school gave $12 in addition.

During the last three months, the treasurer of the parish reports that the offerings have been nearly trebled and the sittings and pews are most all taken, for the first time in years. One thousand dollars have been expended on improvements on the rectory and church. A sexton has been regularly engaged.

As soon as a note and mortgage on the parish is wiped out, the exterior of the church edifice will be renovated and various improvements made to its interior. The Ladies' Aid Society have $140 in hand for the exterior work, and will raise a balance of $700 for that purpose. Early in the spring an addition will be built to the parish house to be used as a kitchen.

Organ recitals are now being given every Saturday afternoon in the church and the public seems to appreciate these free musical programmes.

Easter Monday Night Affair.

The Gesang and Turn Verein will hold a concert and ball in Saengerbund hall, Easter Monday night. committee is now at work making all arrangements.

Generosity on Club's Part, Which Includes Free Steed Service, Wins Friendship of the Farm Owners.

Practically all the farmers with whom the Watchung Hunt Club has had differences over the damage done by, or expected from, the club runs have been pacified by the organization, and the few who have not are on the verge of it. Between the farmers and the club has been established an entente cordial of a lasting character.

The club has met the farmers in a spirit of liberality, and every evi*dence of friendliness has been shown* by the riders. The club recently sent a cordial invitation to the farmers to join in the runs, and the agriculturists will be greeted as welcome additions to every chase after the wild and swift anise bag.

So much for the social relations. On a more material basis, the club has salved the farmers by agreeing to keep the fences on all properties over which they ride in repair. The organization will not merely repair the damage done by the members, but patch every fence that needs it, and whenever it needs it. If the farmer prefers that, he will be paid for the damage. A man will visit every farm regularly to note places in need of repair.

Service from a stallion free for all farmers who permits the club to ride over their grounds is another inducement for continued friendliness on the part of the agriculturists. The club is interested in raising the standard of horseflesh generally, and has secured the thoroughbred steed Nitrate, (15,523,) bred by August Belmont in 1898.

The club hopes to see a fine breed of horses in this neighborhood through Nitrate's service, and the service of the blooded steeds that will succeed him.

Nitrate is sixteen hands high, of good bone and substance, with a remarkably good disposition, and if bred to mares of size, should produce valuable colts for general purposes —possibly ones of considerable value. During 1905 he has been entered in the principal steeplechases, with creditable results as follows: 1st in Handicap Steeplechase, Brighton Beach Rac. Assn. (7 started); 1st in Kings Highway Steeplechase, Brooklyn Jockey Club (8 started); 2d in Hitchcock Steeplechase, Brooklyn Jockey Club (7 started); 2d in Handicap Steeplechase, Brighton Beach Rac. Assn. (11 started;) 2d in Handicap Steeplechase, Coney Island Jockey Club (15 started); 2d in Handicap Steeplechase, Brooklyn Jockey Club (10 started).

To all those whose grounds are not open to the club, or regular service fee will be charged. The steed is at Middlesex Farms, Colonia. Several farmers have already availed themselves of the opportunity.

Bishops' Bill Alone.

No compromise on the "Bishops' bills" for high license and clean saloons, Scovel's equal tax bills, substituted for the Perkins measures, corrupt practice acts, passing the house; electrocution bill passing in the Senate, hearing on mosquitoes and drugs, insurance report, were among the many interesting incidents in the Legislature yesterday.

HONOR CONFERRED ON ROBT. A. MEEKER

PLAINFIELDER RECEIVES DEGREE FROM RUTGERS COLLEGE.

Robert A. Meeker's services and ability as a road builder have been formally recognized by one of New Jersey's seats of learning. The Plainfielder has received the honorary degree of civil engineer from Rutgers College, the announcement being made yesterday.

Mr. Meeker is State supervisor of roads and to him in a great measure is due the excellent condition of the highways throughout the State. He has held the office for a number of years and his wide knowledge of the work has been recognized by other States and by magazine authorities on the subject.

It was he who laid out the model roads at the Good Roads' exhibit at the St. Louis exhibition, which attracted universal attention. During his term of office, he has seen New Jersey take first place among the States for good roads, and the work is being extended by his efforts and support continuously.

LOOMIS DIMMED JEROME

American Humorist Pleases Crescent Avenue Audience Mightily.

JEROME NOT SLIGHTED

He Was Accorded a Sympathetic Reception, But the Fanwoodite Raised More Laughs and An Ovation.

Jerome K. Jerome—pronounced Jerum—the English humorist, and Charles Battell Loomis, author of "The Four-Masted Catboat" and other successful funny books, entertained a crowded house at the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last night, under the auspices of the Young People's Society. Mr. Loomis lives in Fanwood, disguised as a justice of the peace.

The humorists are making a platform tour of the East. Mr. Loomis reads from his published works, and Mr. Jerome, who is the most noted exponent of English humor in the British empire 'and all its possessions, lectures humorously as well as reads.

Mr. Loomis read five bits from his books, and Mr. Jerome contributed six numbers to the programme. The bill was a sort of a sandwich, Mr. Jerome giving three numbers first, then Mr. Loomis letting go all of his five in a row, then three more from Mr. Jerome, so the audience had a slice of American humor surrounded by the British kind. It made a reflection that appeared to be very palatable to the audience. They laughed freely at Mr. Loomis' exaggerations and his dialect, and they gave attentive and sympathetic ear, with smiles always read, to the gentler fun of Mr. Jerome. While the latter had not cause to complain over lack of appreciation, the Fanwoodite was very plainly first choice with the audience. It clamored for his return, and was visibly disappointed when he failed to give them more of his brand of fun.

MEYER COMMITTED BY JUDGE VAIL

SENT TO RAHWAY REFORMATORY FOR INDETERMINATE SENTENCE.

Ferdinand Meyer, the local youth who was picked up by the police last week for breaking his parole, was arraigned before Judge Vail in the Union County Court this morning and committed to the Rahway Reformatory. The length of his sentence is to depend upon his behavior but will not be less than three years.

In the past two years Meyer, whose aged is twenty-three, has been arrested several times for theft. The police had him before Judge Vail a short time ago on a charge of wholesale bicycle stealing and he was then placed in the care of the probation officer. He was instructed to report at regular intervals but failed to do so and Captain Irwin ordered him picked up. He has a wife and one child.

Cops Learn More First Aid.

Dr. C. B. Lindburgh gave the cops another lesson in first aid to the injured yesterday afternoon. Particular attention is being paid in the course to the handling of drunken men—restoring them, patching their cuts and bruises, and tying them down when they coquette with pink rats. "The lesson on drunks was real interesting," said one of the cops last night, "and I understand the next one will be even more interesting. He is going to teach us how to take their money away from drunks without hurting them."

HONORED FATHER BOGAN

Plainfield Priest Presented With Loving Cup by Catholic Diocesan Union.

CEREMONY AT NEWARK

Rector of St. Mary's, for Eighteen Years Spiritual Adviser of the Union, Expresses His Appreciation.

In recognition of his services as spiritual director of the Catholic Young Men's Diocesan Union of the Newark Diocese, upon the occasion of his retirement, over 600 members, representing thirty societies identified with the Catholic church in and near Newark, assembled at Catholic Institute, Newark, last night and presented Father Bogan, rector of St. Mary's church, this city, with a handsome silver loving cup, suitably inscribed.

Father Bogan was spiritual director of the Union eighteen years, and last night's affair was in the nature of a farewell reception. The societies from Paterson, Jersey City, Elizabeth and Arlington attended in a body, accompanied by brass bands, fife and drum corps, the Protectory Band, of Arlington, being included among the musical organizations.

Father McManus, of St. Aloysius church, Newark, made the presentation of the cup on behalf of the Union, recalling the long and faithful services of Father Bogan and telling of the work he has accomplished. Father Bogan responded in a happy vein, thanking all for the beautiful testimonial. He reviewed the history of the Union and the red letter days in its history, which in*cluded addresses by Bourke Cockran* and John Delaney, of New York. He also mentioned the attainments of the members in athletics, such as bowling, baseball and field meets, but made special mention of the literary work of the Union, the debates, telling how in this way the members had profited and had reached prominent positions in the legal, medical and religious worlds. He mentioned *the names of a number of such mem*bers who are leaders in their profession today.

Other speeches were made by former Assemblyman James Hammil, of Jersey City; former Mayor Ryan, of Elizabeth; Mayor Kenny, of East Newark; Father Isaac T. Whelan, rector of the Newark Cathedral and brother of W. J. Whelan, of this city. All were of complimentary nature and the praises of Father Bogan were heard throughout the evening in speeches and song.

The Catholic Institute in New street, Newark, is fifty-one years old, and it was as a boy that Father Bogan lived and played about this neighborhood and later became a member of it, joining the gymnastic and other classes His early life being so closely identified with the in*stitute and the Diocesan union, it was* more than fitting that he should be selected as its spiritual director.

The cup presented to Father Bogan bears the dates 1888-1906, and the inscription reads, "To our spiritual director in affectionate remembrance from the members of his Diocesan Union."

OLD FASHIONED SCHOOL.

Entertainment of Park Avenue Endeavorers.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held a unique social in the chapel last night, called an "Old Fashioned School." Joseph M. Hawkins was the teacher and the young people as pupils were questioned concerning the alphabet, geography and physiology.

After the school session a recess was declared for lunch. During the intermission the pupils engaged in playing all kinds of old fashioned games. Each was given a stick of candy in addition to the lunch served.

For proficiency in answering questions the pupils were given rewards of merit. The committee in charge of the affair comprised Miss Miner, chairman; Miss Elizabeth Van Winkle, Miss Mary Giles and Irving Van Winkle.

Masquerade Party.

A masquerade party pleasantly surprised Miss Nora Schenck at her home last night on Manning avenue. The company arrived with Jack-o-lanterns and market baskets filled with good things. After a social hour dancing was enjoyed. Among those present were Misses H. Squires, E. Squires, Hattie Bailey, Kate Bodine, Edna Bryan, Minnie Nyman, M. McKane, Messrs. Windham, Blimm, Bennett, Brown, Smith and others.

The suit of Matt Schenck against Edgar Schenck, for $200, on notes, has been settled. F. J. Blatz was the plaintiff's lawyer. The principals live in South Plainfield and the action was brought before Justice von Minden.

COURT WILL BE HELD IN A CHURCH BUILDING

Somerset County Freeholders Will Lease Chapel at Somerville For Two Years.

SUITABLE AS SUCH

The Temporary Quarters Needed While New Court House Is Being Erected—Other Changes Recommended.

The novelty of holding court in a church building is likely to result from an action of the Somerset Freeholders at their regular meeting yesterday afternoon. The demolition of the old structure that has served the county for civil and legal affairs for many years, has been ordered and while the work of building a new one is in progress temporary quarters must be secured. A committee has been looking for a suitable place and has decided upon the chapel of the First Reformed church at Somerville as the best to be had. The consistory has agreed to lease it for two years and the committee so reported at the meeting yesterday. The matter is now under advisement and will be decided upon within a few days.

The chapel is constructed of brick and has an assembly room large enough for court purposes. It is also conveniently situated and the necessary fixtures can be installed with but little trouble. The committee also recommended the renting of the old chapel next the county clerk's present office for this official's use. By inserting a small partition it can also be used as a room for examining witnesses and as quarters for the Grand Jury.

The committee on the new county buildings recommended that the houses known as the Bee Hive, the Cooper and the Grover places be sold and removed as soon as possible, as it is desired to fill the cellars with debris from the old court house. The ground is also needed for the storing of materials while the building is in progress.

JACOB HIGGINS HAS DISAPPEARED

FRIENDS WORRIED OVER CONTINUED ABSENSE OF BOROUGHITE.

Relatives and friends of Jacob Higgins, a well known borough resident, who lives on Upper Duer street, have been greatly worried over his protracted absence. He left home two weeks ago and since then nothing has been heard from him. He was treasurer of the North Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association and also the Relief Association, but his accounts for both have been found in satisfactory condition. He was to have submitted a report at the annual meeting of the former last night and his failure to do so revealed the fact of his disappearance.

Higgins is a mason by trade and of late has been employed by Tallamy Brothers. He was at one time treasurer for the Mason's Union and has always enjoyed the confidence of his friends. He has always been steady in his habits and has never remained away any length of time before. It is the belief that he has become temporarily despondent over some family affair and will eventually return.

MARRIED IN AUGUST; ANNOUNCEMENT JUST MADE

MISS MINNIE HARTFELDER AND AUGUSTUS FEIRING, JR. SURPRISES FRIENDS.

Much to the surprise of their many friends, Miss Minnie Hartfelder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hartfelder, of Whitewood avenue, and Augustus Feiring, Jr., of Harrison avenue, have announced that they have been married since August 3. The ceremony was performed at Newark by Rev. Mr. Perris, of a Presbyterian church, and was attended only by members of his family. The young couple afterward returned home and kept the fact a secret until a few days ago. They received parental forgiveness and a belated reception will be tendered them at the home of the bride's parents tomorrow night.

The groom is widely known in the city and borough and was prominent in baseball and athletic sports for several years. He was considered one of the strongest men on the Hope Y. M. A. team during its series with the St. Marys and has also been a member of its basketball five. He is a machinist by trade and is employed by the Hall Signal Co., at Garwood. His bride was a member of Hope chapel Sunday-school for many years and also has a large circle of acquaintances. The young couple have planned to begin housekeeping within a few weeks.

REV. MR. HERRING'S TALK ON MEXICO

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE BEFORE THE PLAINFIELD CAMERA CLUB.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, gave an illustrated lecture on Mexico at the Camera Club rooms last night before a large audience. Mr. Herring took an extended trip through that country last year and he secured many fine views, which he explained in his usual interesting fashion.

The views depicted the life, manners and customs of the Mexicans throughout that country in general and in Mexico City in particular. He also exhibited several views of the exterior and interior of the cathedrals, explaining the quaint religious customs which have been followed for many years. His views and remarks concerning the saloons and methods of conducting them were timely.

The lantern was operated by John Neagle. After the lecture there was a social time and refreshments were served. It is expected that Andrew McClean Park will give his illustrated lecture on "Panama" at the same place in two weeks.

STRIKE IN P. S. C.?

An important conference is being held at Newark this afternoon between officials of the P. S. C. and the power-house men, the latter threatening to strike unless they get an increase of wages.

It is also said that the other employes of the company will go out in sympathy unless the demands of the power-house men are granted.

—A feature of the fruit and vegetable display at Neuman Brothers' is fresh strawberries. They have been selected with especial care for the local trade.

MISS SHACKLETON BECOMES MRS. FARRELL

QUIET NUPTIAL CEREMONY AT SCOTCH PLAINS PARSONAGE.

Miss Selena Shackleton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Shackleton, of Scotch Plains, and Thomas Farrell, also of that place, were quietly married last night by Rev. T. Moore-Smith, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, at the parsonage. The ceremony was witnessed only by a few friends.

The bride was gowned in white point d'esprit, trimmed with ribbons and she carried a bouquet of white carnations and asparagus fern. Miss Myrtle Shackleton, a sister, was bridesmaid, and she wore a gown of white and also carried white carnations and asparagus fern. The best man was William Milliken, of this city.

After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride, where a reception was held and supper was served. Commencing April 1 the couple will begin housekeeping at Scotch Plains. The bride was engaged as a saleswoman at the Park, this city, for two years, and the groom is employed as a draughtsman at the Acolian Works, Garwood.

The committee in charge consisted of Charles L. Holstein, Peter Sheridan, Thomas Connors and Michael Lyons.

SUGGESTS USE OF CITY'S SEWAGE DISPOSAL SYSTEM

J. O. Osgood, Chief Engineer of Jersey Central, Gives Expert Opinion on Solution on Problem.

TO CONVERT MAYOR

Unfortunate Condition Due to Separation from Plainfield—Action Should Not Be Delayed, He Says.

Of two announced speakers for the meeting of the Board of Trade March 7, one was Joseph O. Osgood, chief engineer for the New Jersey Central, who presented some interesting facts in regard to "A Sewage System for North Plainfield." Being a resident of the borough, Mr. Osgood has given the matter much personal attention and, as was afterward remarked by former Mayor Saunders, there is no man in the State better qualified to discuss it. He spoke as follows:

At first it hardly seems worth while to say anything more than has already been said as to the necessity of a sewerage system for North Plainfield. The need was apparent to a large part of the population many years ago when Plainfield built its first sewers, and many thought then that the borough would shortly join in the forward movement.

The years have passed by, however, one after another, with only occasional mention of the subject by our borough fathers, until now, just as the city is planning the extension of its system to its farthest corners, there is a revival of interest in the matter in the borough, and we hear arguments for and against a sewerage system.

I have even heard it said recently by those who have made inquiry in the borough that the people are generally in favor of sewers, and sincerely hope that this is true.

It is certainly time that something was done, and a disgrace to the borough that we are still talking and have not yet taken the first step.

It is perfectly possible in a community where the house lots are a half-acre or so in extent, to entirely dispose of the house wastes by means of cesspools, burning, burying in the ground, etc., but it is not practicable to do this without much more care than the ordinary householder will devote to the subject.

Even on such large, roomy lots, the cesspool becomes at times a nuisance and the proper disposition of the sewage in the ground expensive and troublesome.

Where, however, the lots are reduced in size and the buildings crowded together, as in the more thickly settled parts of the borough, it is impracticable to keep down the bad odors and unwholesome conditions. The soil under and around the buildings becomes badly contaminated, the air of the dwellings impure and an invitation is offered to disease.

Forty years ago the more progressive communities of the size of ours, both at home and abroad, were trying many methods to dispose of their household and manufacturing wastes, with varying degrees of success, according to the locations and the care exercised in conducting it.

An effort was made to dispose of the solid wastes in one way and sink water and liquids generally in another. Pails and earth closets were much in vogue and house to house collection was extensively tried.

After years of experimenting, however, most of the methods then tried have been abandoned and sewerage systems almost universally adopted in their place.

Sewers for large cities are of very early origin—witness the great sewers of Rome, London and Paris. These were large enough to carry the rainfall as well as the sewage and were therefore too expensive to be within the means of small communities.

The adoption or separate systems by which the waste products are carried by means of the domestic water supply through a series of small pipes, while the rainfall is conducted to the streams by surface drains or separate storm water sewers, has made it possible for even small communities to dispose of their sewage without great difficulty.

Generally speaking, the introduction of a copious water supply makes sewers necessary, where otherwise they might be longer omitted.

We should have begun to build sewers when the Plainfield Water Company extended its pipes to the borough.

Without sewers the borough seems to me to have little future.

The outlying parts where the lots are large may still be attractive, but there can be no material growth in the business portion of the town where the lack of sewers already makes the conditions very unfavorable as compared with the same streets across the brook.

We need sewers—why do we not have them?

If we are a community sufficiently awakened to their importance, it is only necessary for the Mayor and Council to secure competent professional assistance to survey the ground and report a plan with an estimate of cost, then submit to the people their recommendations as to the portions first to be built, and, the necessary authority secured, to make a substantial beginning this year.

We are unfortunate in this matter, as in some others, inasmuch as we are a separate community and not part of Plainfield, but perhaps the city will be good to us and let us pump our sewage, for a time at least, into her main sewer and take care of it for us at the disposal works.

If not, we can build ourselves a little disposal plant of our own and have it all to ourselves. Our worthy Mayor talks at times about joining with Dunellen and taking the sewage down to Bound Brook or some other distant point on the Raritan; but when he gets down to business I, for one, shall try to persuade him to look nearer home for a chance to dump the sewage rather than to further postpone action in the search for a tide-water outlet and a route for a trunk sewer.

These may be desirable things in themselves, but as any outlet short of Raritan Bay will necessitate disposal works similar to what would be needed here, the expense of the longer mains practically prohibits them in this case.

The Mayor and Council of the borough have arranged for tomorrow evening an informal discussion of this matter with the local Board of Health. Let us hope that something tangible will come of it.

Following the address, Mr. Osgood stated that since he had prepared the facts he had received a letter from the secretary of the State Board of Sewage Commissioners relative to emptying sewage in small streams and rivers. It asserted that it would be improper for North Plainfield to discharge crude sewage in either Green brook or the Raritan river, and suggested as the best way out of the difficulty to co-operate with Plainfield. The beds are adequate, the writer asserted, and in an engineering way there are no difficulties.

COLONIAL SOCIABLE AT WARREN CHAPEL

MEMBERS OF MISSIONARY SOCIETY DRESS IN COSTUMES AT THE AFFAIR.

The colonial sociable of the Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel, March 7, was completed success. It was well attended and the programme was very enjoyable and much enjoyed.

The feature was an illustrated lecture by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, the pastor, on his recent trip to the South. He showed forty-one views of Georgia, Washington and Mt. Vernon. The discourse accompanying the slides was connected and entertaining.

"Local color" marked the affair. The members of the society all appearing in costume. There was a flag drill by twelve small members of the Jr. Y. P. S. C. E., arranged by Mrs. W. C. Smith.

Refreshments were served. All the members of the society acted as a committee of the whole in arranging the affair.

The proceeds will be applied to the new chapel building fund.

Who Has Steamer Chair to Loan?

The Plainfield Relief Association, 544 West Front street, makes an appeal for a steamer chair for a man suffering with tuberculosis and who is unable to lie down. The use of such a chair will be greatly appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell, of East Front street, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gee, of Third place, will sail for Europe in April.

LITERARY.

Of more than unusual interest are the old prehistoric "bird tracks" of the Connecticut Valley to either active sportsmen or students of natural history, and to give some of our sportsmen friends outside the "Valley" some idea what these signs of game, of what is called the "Triassic Period," are like, I have enclosed a photo or two. Just outside the city of Holyoke, Mass., between the Old Road and the New State Road to North Hampton, there is a patch about 50x100 feet which has been cleared of all surface earth by parties interested in geology, and which is now protected by the State. This patch is completely covered with well defined tracks, such as my photo shows, and most of which will measure 12 to 14 inches in the longest parts, and 8 to 10 inches wide, while in depth they are from 1 to 2½ inches.—J. E. McIlwain, in Recreation for March.

These are days of gold in the West as much as in '49. Bonanza surprises are reported almost daily from California, Nevada, Oregon and Alaska. Millionaires are making over night. Prospectors and pack-mule trains are trailing the mountains and deserts. "It's the lure o' gold. The situation in California is well told in the Sunset Magazine for March. The leading article, "California's Treasure Beds," is by Charles G. Yale, a special agent of the United States Geological Survey, correspondent and associate editor of the New York Engineering and Mining Journal, and statistician of the United States Mint, and his writings are widely recognized as most thorough and conservative. Besides this article there is "California's Rivers of Buried Gold," by Carrie Stevens-Walter; "Social Life Among Western Miners," by A. Burrows; "Silver State Gold Surprises," by K. R. Casper; and "In Social Vanity," by Mary Edith Grissold. And a funny story by David Atkins: "How Noonan Lost His Fortune." The cover was designed by Maynard Dixon and is a typical miner. The departments are full of interesting news items.

In attractiveness, timeliness and interest The American Boy for March is, to use a popular expression, in "ten time winner." The cover page shows a typical young lineman in happy mood. The continued stories are: "Shaggycoat," the biography of a beaver, by Clarence Hawks; "Adventures of Joe and Dan," telling of the thrilling adventures of two boys lost in the woods, and two more chapters of "A French Frog and an American Eagle." Other stories are: "My Last Game of Ball," by the editor; "The Downfall of Dennis," recording the mishaps which befell a middle aged gentleman who tried to be a boy again; "A Will and a Way," showing what a boy of determination and pluck can do; "A Keepsake of the Boys' Club," which tells how good deeds are rewarded in most unexpected ways; "Patsy Connoer's Wolves," is a story of a plucky boy, ravenous wolves, and two sticks of dynamite; "The Man at the Key" and "The Press Agent," describes the youngest press agent, perhaps, in the world.

WOMAN IN MALE GARB.

Dons Trousers and Coat to Look for Work in Chicago, But Speeding Auto Betrays Her.

Chicago—Attired in masculine garb, Augusta Helvey, a young married woman, sought work for four days in the downtown district, mingling with scores of rival male applicants and passing unobserved in the throngs on the busy streets. She would have begun work as a male waiter in a downtown restaurant had not an observant policeman noted a characteristically feminine move and manner in a natty youth. The policeman took the "prospect" to the police station.

In the station the young woman at once admitted her disguise and declared she had assumed the garb solely in order to secure employment in which living wages could be obtained. In St. Louis, from which town she came, she said she had worked as a waitress and had been able to earn barely a scant living, while her clothing had been worn to shreds. Unable to replenish it, she had taken from a trunk a suit of clothing once worn by her husband and had determined that henceforth she would pass as a man and endeavor to earn the wages given the male worker.

A speeding automobile was the cause of the failure of Miss Helvey's plans. As it flashed by the corner of Clark and Van Buren streets Policeman Murphy leaned forward to catch the number. The woman, in coat and trousers, was in its path. She shrieked as she leaped aside into a mud puddle and made a motion as if to gather up her flowing skirts. Then this youth moved a hand to his hat as if to adjust it.

The patrolman waited no longer. He had missed the number of the auto, but he took the "boy" to the station. Later she was released on the promise to don skirts.

Elands Broken to Harness.

A Rhodesian hunter of the name of Jellman has been successful in domesticating and training a number of young elands to the yoke. He has had eight of them working in a wagon for some time, and their action admirably bears out the assertion that kindness is more powerful than force.

REV. DR. EGAR'S LECTURE

He Tells the Story of the Conversion of the Anglo-Saxon.

AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH

Second Lenten Series of Talks on "History of English Church" —Other Addresses to Follow.

Rev. Dr. John H. Egar's second lecture on the "History of the English Church" was delivered in the Church of the Holy Cross on Thursday afternoon. The subject was the conversion of the Anglos Saxons.

"The ancient British church," he said, "remained, and remains to this day; but it was driven back into the mountains of Wales, and the western parts of the island, and took no part in Christianizing the English. A very powerful influence, however, as we shall see, came indirectly from that church.

"The Anglo Saxon invasion," he said, "commenced in force about the year 450, and continued until the whole eastern, southern and central portions of what had been the Roman dominion were occupied. The invaders, however, (and this is an important fact,) did not, as did the barbarians who settled in Gaul, Spain and Italy, come in contact with the Roman empire; for the legions had been withdrawn in 401, and the Roman portion of the population must have followed them. They established themselves, therefore, as purely Teutonic or Scandinavian tribes, with the customs, laws, usages, religion and government to which they had been accustomed in the lands of their forefathers.

"It must have been providential that these heathen tribes were permitted to develop themselves in their new home for a hundred and fifty years before Christianity touched them. For one thing it enabled them to adapt themselves to the country, to modify their customs to suit new conditions, and the lay the foundations of the English character. They became a people of the farm, the manor and the village. The Roman cities were deserted and went to ruin; the Roman civilization dropped out; the Celtic population were ruthlessly exterminated; and therefore, though the movement which brought Christianity to them emanated from Rome, the Christian institutions were modified to suit the environment, and the Church in England was from the first, as will be shown, both in name and in reality the Church of England.

"The mission of Augustine and his monks to England in 597 is given fully in Bede, including the well-known episode of St. Gregory the Great and the English boys in the Roman market place. But there is more in that event than appears in Bede. When Augustine landed, Ethelbert, the King of Kent, had had a Christian wife and a Christian bishop resident in his palace for twenty-four years, and he must have thought that he was an ignorant of the religion as the simple narrative of Bede would lead us to suppose. Ethelbert was in his way something of a statesman. He had extended the overlordship of Kent to the Humber, and he had done it without violence; and Gregory on his side was a man who kept his eye on all that was passing in the world in which he lived. There is evidence that Gregory was informed of Ethelbert's predisposition towards Christianity, and the meeting between Augustine and Ethelbert has all the appearance of a royal reception of expected guests, and a diplomatic introduction of them to his people. He proceeded with the caution of a wise ruler, and held back until he could bring his people with him. He gave the missionaries a residence in the City of Canterbury, which has ever since been the primatial see of the English Church, and in a short time the king and many of his people were baptized, and Augustine was consecrated by Virgilius of Arles the first bishop of the English nation.

"The subsequent history as given by Bede was rapidly reviewed, the relations of Augustine with the bishops of the British Church, the mission of Paulinus to accompany Ethelbert's daughter, Ethelburga, to Northumberland, and the conversion of her husband, King Edwin, his retirement after Edwin had been killed in battle, and the taking up the work, on the invitation of Oswald, by the monks of St. Columba's monastery at Iona, etc. From these centres the church spread out in all directions, sometimes driven back by a heathen king, but speedily recovering ground, so that by 80 years after the coming of Augustine the whole realm of England acknowledged the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of Theodore of Tarsus as Archbishop of Canterbury.

"I think it very important to remember," Dr. Egar proceeded, 'that this church from its beginning was known as 'the Church of England.' That was the name given to it by Gregory the Great himself. Just as soon as Augustine got fairly to work he consulted Gregory about various matters upon which he felt that he needed advice. I want to read you a few sentences from Gregory's reply. The first question was about the relation of a bishop with his clergy. Gregory writes: 'In regard that you, my brother, having been brought up under monastic rules, are not to live apart from your clergy in the English Church. * * You are to follow the course of life which our forefathers did in the primitive church, when none of them said of anything that he possessed was his own, but all things were in common among them.' Another question, evidently suggested by the usage of Lutlhard, Queen Bertha's chaplain, why there are differences in the liturgical uses of different churches, elicited from Gregory a reply which shows how superior he was to narrow prejudices in such things: 'You know, my brother, the custom of the Roman Church in which you remember you were brought up. But it pleases me that if you have found anything in the Roman or the Gallican or any other church which may be more acceptable to God, you carefully make choice of the same, and sedulously teach the Church of the English, which as yet is new in the faith, whatever you can gather from the several churches.'

"Another question was in regard to the consecration of bishops, and the reply of Gregory was: 'As for the Church of England, in which you are as yet the only bishop, you can no otherwise ordain a bishop than in the absence of other bishops, unless some bishops should come over from Gaul,' etc. I want you here to notice that this is the first time the term 'Church of England' makes its appearance in history, that it is within one year after the landing of Augustine, and that it is given by the man who sent him." A number of other extracts were read showing the continued use of the name until in the year 1215 it appears in the first article of Magna Charta, which begins, "That the Church of England be a free church, and keep its laws entire, and its liberties uninfringed."

The lecture concluded with an account of some particulars in which the English Church modified the general system of the continent to adapt itself to its environment.

STEAMSHIP COMPANIES PAY MRS. LA BOYTEAUX

SETTLEMENT OF HER CLAIM FOR DAMAGES EFFECTED.

Settlement of a claim for damages that had been delayed by litigation for considerably more than two years was effected this week between Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, of Fairview avenue, and the Old Dominion and the Prince steamship lines. The claim grew out of injuries sustained by Mrs. LaBoyteaux in a collision between a vessel of the lines in New York harbor on April 2, 1900.

Mrs. LaBoyteaux, on her way South aboard the Old Dominion liner Jefferson, with her husband, was seated in her stateroom when the Occilian Prince line, also bound South, backed into the Jefferson. The stateroom was wrecked by the collision and pieces of the smashed woodwork planed Mrs. LaBoyteaux to the floor, injuring her severely. Through lawyer C. M. Dolliver she began suit in the United States District Court, which held both lines responsible. The suit was carried to the United States Circuit Court, which confirmed the verdict. After various delays, Dr. P. J. Zeitlo, for the Old Dominion line, Dr. F. W. Westcott, for the Prince line, and Dr. Tomlinson, for Mrs. LaBoyteaux, met and settled upon the damages to be paid. The checks have been received. The amount allowed has not been made public.

Must First Notify Residents.

Investigation of Chief Kiely into the reported late instructions by Sumeter inspectors has resulted in a statement in explanation by an official of the company. The official says that in order to make proper tests, voltage must be checked during high-load periods; that is, when the lights are in general use. It is necessary, therefore, that the inspections be made in the evening between the hours of 7 and 9. Chief Kiely has requested the P. S. C. officials to notify residents where voltage is about to be tested.

Learning All About Drills.

FANWOOD COUNCIL FILLS SEVERAL VACANCIES.

Removal of Members From the Borough Makes Action Necessary.

Owing to the vacancies existing in the Fanwood Council by reason of the removal of W. E. Collins and L. J. Ellis, the former going to Westfield and the latter to Plainfield, the Mayor and Council met Thursday and appointed J. H. L. Todd and Charles R. Vincent to these offices. J. P. Stevens, another member, moved to Plainfield and his place will be filled at the next Council meeting.

The vacancy as assessor caused by the death of William T. Stanbery was filled by the appointment of Horace G. Young. The appointees will serve until the next election.

Dual Athletic Meet Probable.

It is thought that in the near future there will be a dual outdoor athletic meet between the boys of the Plainfield High and Leal's Schools. The private school boys refused to engage in an indoor meet owing to lack of material, but the chances for an outdoor affair are more promising.

City Judge Wm. N. Runyon.

Republican Organization Suffers Severely by the Loss of its Most Magnetic Leader.

SHABBY TREATMENT

Brightest Mind Among the Active Politicans Asked One Small Favor and Did Not Get It.

Although the action was expected for some time by his intimate friends, the announcement was not made until Friday by Judge William N. Runyon that he has retired from politics.

"I am out for good," is the way he expresses it. Conceded to be the brightest man and the most magnetic personage in the regular Republican organization, the extent of the loss can be easily imagined.

In speaking of his withdrawal from the councils of his party, Judge Runyon said: "I am out for good. During the time I have been at all active, I only asked for one favor and I did not get it. I felt that John Cose was entitled to succeed to the second assistant chiefship of the fire department. He had rendered good service to the party and was a hard worker. Besides he was well qualified for the office—that was generally admitted. I must say I was greatly disappointed at the way he was treated."

"As to who was directly responsible for the defeat of Mr. Cose, the Judge refused to say, but he intimated that some men high in the ranks did not do all they might have done to further the candidate's chances. Cose, he said, wanted to withdraw from the race, because it was hinted that he was going to be thrown down, but that he, Judge Runyon, stood firmly against such action. The organization man was advised by him to stick to the last. The predicted defeat came to him.

Judge Runyon's first appearance in politics was as a candidate for the Common Council, in which he was elected. Then he became city judge, but the salary was insignificant. Other men, less valuable to the party, have been getting the plums while the Judge has worked untiringly. Perceiving this ago, he led the bolt from the Union County Republican convention for the sake of the organization and it is generally conceded that he made the independent movement for recognition of Plainfield's right she success it was. The judge has one of the largest, if not the largest, personal following of any man in politics in the city.

Friends' Conference.

The Plainfield meeting of the Religious Society of Friends is planning for a two days' conference to be held here during April. A special committee of about the twenty-five members which is visiting all the Friends' meetings throughout the United States, is expected to assist in the conference, which will be for the advancement of the interests of the society.

Formed a Partnership.

Peter Ritter and George Shay, of Fanwood, have formed a partnership in general trucking and express business for that borough.

Needed in Middlesex.

Judge Vail, in Union county, has disposed of a Plainfield character who spent about half of his time in the county jail, by sending him to State prison for three years. A little of that kind of medicine in Middlesex would serve to purify the air.—Perth Amboy Chronicle.

WHY MR. M'KINLEY WAS A FREE MASON.

War Time Experience Led the Martyr President to Join the Lodge at Winchester.

A dinner in the Sovereign Grand and Grand Consistories of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite was given at the Savoy Thursday night by consistories of the metropolitan district. Incidentally, it was the ninety-ninth anniversary of the establishment of the Supreme Council of the United States.

Gen. Horatio C. King gave some reminiscences of the Civil War and told how President McKinley came to join the order.

"It was during the campaign in the Shenandoah Valley," he said. "McKinley, then a captain, and myself, his ranking officer at that time, were walking through a hospital tent in which were a number of Confederate wounded. The captain seemed surprised when the surgeon in charge of the ward talking to some of the Confederates as if he had known them all his life. He shook hands with them all, giving here and there small sums of money, until his supply was exhausted. McKinley asked the surgeon if he knew the men.

"No," he replied.

"Well, do you ever expect to get the money back?" McKinley asked.

"I presume some of them will return it when they can," said the doctor.

"Why did you give it to them, anyway?"

"They were Masons," said the doctor. The play impressed McKinley so that he immediately joined the lodge at Winchester, made famous by "Sheridan's Ride." After the war he took his dimit to Canton Lodge.

Frank T. Watson, grand commander in charge of the state, gave a brief history of the order in the State and its early days in this country. Andrew J. Provost, sovereign grand commander, responded to "The Grand Man of the Rite."—New York Sun.

THE SHOW WINDOW.

Don't neglect the upper part of the window.

Don't stick to one style of trimming. Branch out.

Don't skimp on elbow grease in cleaning the glass.

Don't wait till a trim is fly specked before changing it.

Don't overlook the utility of a certain number of fixtures.

Don't be afraid to try something new in the way of a display.

Don't fill a sunny window with goods that the sun will discolor.

Don't let the window stand too long. A week is about the limit.

Don't be afraid to spend a little money on the trim. It will come back.

Don't fail to call the local newspaper's attention to each nice trim that you make.

Don't prolong the trimming unnecessarily. A quick change will impress the public more.

Don't copy. But you can elaborate or change someone else's ideas without being open to the criticism of copying.—Exchange.

STARTING FOR THE PLAY.

Grace, the cab is waiting.
We are deuced late.
You are never ready.
Jore! It's after eight.
Darn this beastly collar
(Buttenhole's immease).
Shines like celluloid—
Laundries have no sense.
Opera glasses? Have them.
Wear your heavy wrap.
Well, then, wear the other.
How those gloves do gap!
Fix them in the carriage.
Come, dear, never mind.
Don't stop. Stick a pin in.
There's no fault to find.
Yes, I kissed the mamy.
Glad! you do look nice!
What's that in your flowers?
They are on the ice.
Try to hurry, dearie.
Darn it. Pardon me.
You should hold your train up.
Yes, I have the key.
Jane will guard the silver.
Everything's all right.
O, Grace, you must hurry.
Yes, I fixed the light.
Leave the windows open—
It's not going to rain.
Everlasting fussing
Goes against the grain.
What? Your powder chamois?
O, you goosie, don't!
Put it in my pocket??????!
No, my dear, I won't.
You look simply stunning.
What's up now? O, bang!
(At this point the hall door Closes with a bang.)

SOME TIMELY HINTS.

Newspapers spread flat under a mattress give a great deal of warmth.

Prune juice, on dry cereals makes a nice change from cream.

Cold baked potatoes, sliced thin then put in a baking dish, with salt, pepper, butter and milk, make a better scallop than raw potatoes.

Apple pie is delicious with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream.

A good ish for luncheon or supper is a baked potato with one end removed and enough of the inside to permit a soft-boiled egg that has had its shell taken off, dropped in. Season with salt, pepper and butter and serve hot.

A small hole in china can be perfectly mended with plaster of paris. Mix very thin with water and drop into the hole. Let it harden before using.

When eggs are scare, the place of custard in a cake may be taken by a thin cornstarch flavored with jelly.

If your gas burns unevenly, low at one side and with a long flame at the other, you may be sure there is dust in the tip. Run a piece of thin cardboard through it and you will be repaid.

Give the dining room a good airing every day, winter as well as summer. Germs are in dust everywhere, but in the dining room they get into the food and thence into our bodies. The dining room above all rooms, must be kept clean and well aired. Ventilate the halls. The stale odor of cooking which too often greets one coming in out of the fresh air, savors of a third rate boarding house.

Don't look sloppy while doing your work. Eschew wrappers, kimonos, half-worn or ragged shirt waists and old cloth dresses that hold odors. Even at this season there is nothing son neat and sensible as perfectly plain white waist suits of gingham, or skirts and waists attached as in a nurse's costume. A plain white collar and tie give a good finish, and one is ready to go to the door or meet strangers with no apology necessary.

Steamed Brown Bread.

Put two cups of ryemeal and one cup of cornmeal in a bowl. Turn in two cups of sour milk, one-half cup of molasses, one level teaspoon of soda dissolved in a tablespoon of cold water and a pinch of salt. Steam in a mold three hours.

Old-Time Hop Yeast.

Steep one handful of hops in four quarts of boiling water for a half hour. Pare and boil six large potatoes, then mash them and mix with two cups of flour, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of salt, and strain the hop tea over, after straining it. When cool add one cup of the liquid or any yeast cake dissolved in water. Let the yeast work until frothy, then put away in stone jugs or bottles and cork tightly.

French Rolls.

Rub two-thirds cup of butter into two quarts of flour, add two cups of milk, three tablespoons of sugar and one-half yeast cake dissolved in the milk. Add one beaten egg, cover and let rise. When light roll out half an inch thick, cut in squares, spread with butter and fold over; let rise and bake.

Cocoa Icing.

Mix one level teaspoon of cocoa with one cup of powdered sugar. Add a tablespoon of lemon juice and then one tablespoon of boiling water. This should form a paste or icing that will settle smooth when poured on the cake. Have the cake hot when this icing is to be used.

Plain Puffy Omelet.

Beat the yolks of six eggs until they grow thick; then beat the whites until stiff. Melt a level tablespoon of butter in an omelet or frying pan. Add to the yolks a saltspoon of pepper, half a level teaspoon of salt and one-half cup of milk. Turn into the pan when the butter is very hot, then spread the beaten whites over the top. Cook slowly, and when almost done set in the oven for a minute to dry off the top, then slip a broad knife under one side and fold over and turn on to a warm platter.

Pressed Beef.

Chop or grind three pounds of lean meat fine, add two eggs beaten, one-half cup of milk, four rolled crackers, one-half cup of melted butter, one level tablespoon of salt and one level teaspoon of white pepper. Mix well and pack in bread tin. Bake two hours covered and when cold serve in thin slices.

Watermelon Cake.

Make one white cake, using any favorite recipe, and bake in two layers. Leave one white, and tint the other pink with color paste. Have the pink layer at least twice the depth of the white layer. Sustana raisins or cleaned currants may be added to the pink layer, to simulate the melon seeds. Put the layers together with a very little white icing. Cover the top with an icing tinted green.

Spring Millinery Hints.

Even the lingerie hat is tp-tilted.

Some of the new straws are as supple as ribbon.

The round, bowl-like crown is again in evidence.

Burnt straw is again seen trimmed in the nasturtium colors.

SLANG AND HOW TO USE IT PROPERLY.

Just as there is poetry and poetry, there is slang and slang. In fact, all things in this world are not just alike, though they may be called by the same name.

Some slang is extremely tart and clever, and some is decidedly inelegant. The way women utter these little flights of English language has a lot to do with it. Take the bold woman of bold talk, it isn't what she says, but the way she says it.

Then there is the bright woman with her eyes full of wit and her tongue ready for a jolly retort and repartee for a good laugh; she may indulge in a tiny bit of slang, that is all right. But if you don't know how to use these expressions of the moment, stick to clear, clean, plain English. It is safer.

Lack of balance is a besetting sin of most individuals. They don't strike the settled point, they sway this way or that. Such should avoid slang, for they lack a descretion which, after all is a most valuable and necessary character quality.

For everything there is a use and everything that is worth while is subject to abuse. Let us, for instance, consider beautifying. Limited to reasonable methods, healthy ideas, mental loveliness, cleanliness and matters of the sort, are ennobling.

They make women live better lives. They set the brain to working intelligently. They broaden and stir us out of ruts and old beaten ways that are cobwebby with monotony.

But what about the abuse of these ideas. It is when women take to painting their faces like Indians, ready for a war dance; when they bleach their hair in a bargaree skip hop; when thye do their hair in pompadours seven stories high, and when they wear soubrette hats and look like utter idiots. This is beautifying abuse, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The abuse of mind work out carnality and ambitions in life.

"Ha," says Mrs. Woman, "I have a fine idea. Now watch me work it to death." And she does. There are others who cultivate the same idea moderately and are reasonably benefited.

To say that a woman should never use a word of slang would be to make uninteresting prudes of most of us. There is a certain joy in keeping in step with the band in knowing what sort of rattle-talk the world is talking, but one can tag along without becoming common or unladylike in using slang expressions.

LIKES HER MIRROR.

Average Woman Spends 7,000 Hours Before Looking-Glass.

Assuredly the bump of curiosity must be marvelously well developed in the twentieth-century head, for word comes from France that a certain statistician, anxious to know just how much time the average woman spends before her mirror in the course of her life, has just figured out that from the age of 6 until 16 she spends minutes a day, deemed a sufficient time to prink. From 10 to 15 years a quarter of an hour is given over to the fascinating business or pleasure, whichever the case may be, and from 20 on the mirror claims a good hour a day. At a certain age it begins to lose its interest. A woman past 60, he says, hardly cares whether she looks in the mirror—which statement is somewhat surprising when one takes note of the well groomed grandmothers on social pink lover, to simulate the melon seeds. Put the layers together with a very little white icing. Cover the top with an icing tinted green.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 18: "The Glory of Christlike Lives"—John xvii, 22-24; Col. iii, 9, 10; II Pet. i, 4; II Tim. iv, 7, 8; I John iii, 1-3; Matt. x, 32, 33; Luke xii, 8, 9.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

The pomp and glory of earthly ceremonies and human achievements seem insignificant when we come to think of the majesty and power and perfections of the eternal God, by whom all things were made and by whom they are preserved and governed. To conceive His glory must be the height of all things in the universe. Far above our conception of things it well might be. This is the glory which Jesus says He had before there were any worlds.

Such glory must be more than what is revealed in merely material things. It can be nothing less than all the depth of Divine spiritual perfections of love and justice and holiness.

All this Jesus had and showed in His life as man on earth. In His prayer before His betrayal He spoke of these matters. From eternity He had possessed the glory of His deity. It was this which He had shown to men. Still further. He declares that He had imparted this same glory to them. He prays that they may come to oneness as the Father and He were one.

But this is to be in life to go away soon. He prays that those who love Him may be where He is, that they may behold His glory. Not all is yet clear to them nor can be. Not until the Holy Spirit has come and they have gone into the world as He went and carried the gospel to men and learned obedience as He learned and have come to know the Father through the Spirit for themselves, not until they have come to oneness with God in reality in they fully understand His glory which they had before the overcome the world as He overcame it, then shall they know His glory and share it.

This is the truth which entered into the hearts of those who heard Him and kept them patient in all troubles and persecutions of after years. Having the hope of glory, they purified themselves because He is pure. They know themselves to be sons of God now. *But what they should be in all the full*ness of the future glory they could not tell. The thing, however, was certain —when Jesus should appear they would be like Him. He had but gone away for a little while to get in readiness a place for them and was to return shortly to receive them to Himself. This is the hope which has come down the ages of expectancy in all these years of His absence. He is coming. "Be ye pure and ready for the Bridegroom when He comes!" has been the warning cry through all the ages since.

The full glory lies beyond the day when we are to be clothed with the new bodies like His most glorious body. All the ages have been preparing for this consummation. Many forms of divine glory have in the ages past been seen by God's creatures, but none of them are to be mentioned in comparison with the new body which His Son took when He rose from the dead and ascended far above all principalities and powers and sat down on the throne of God. Not the form of humiliation now does He wear, but the form of eternal beauty and divine-human majesty. It reveals fully all the perfections of His nature.

We are here in this life to show to the world the earth glory of Christian holiness. We are to be among men and in society. We are to work out our salvation as God works it within us. Society has its development as really as the individual. We are members of a body of which Jesus is the head. Righteousness and holiness have their sphere in society as truly as in the individual. While working out the problems of spiritual goodness and heart purity within our own souls and in our acts we are to have regard to duties as members of the human family also. Business and politics and social life are to be interpenetrated and redeemed and glorified by Christly lives and loving ministrations and teaching.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic for the Week Beginning March 18.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Christ's life. III.—His summary of conduct; the sermon on the mount.—Matt. chapters 5, 6, 7.

The sermon on the mount was delivered to the multitudes of people by Christ just after He had chosen the twelve apostles whom were to be associated with Him in His work and to carry it forward after His death. He spent the night in prayer, then selected the twelve and then delivered His first great address upon the kingdom of heaven. The place is supposed to have been a high elevation near Jerusalem, and hence the address has been popularly called "the sermon on the mount." While many think it so, it is by no means the greatest of Christ's addresses. It is ethical rather than spiritual. It deals with man's relation to his fellow man rather than to God. It emphasizes proper moral conduct rather than the deep inward experiences of the soul and its longing for God.

In every instance moral conduct as set forth by Christ differed from man's previous conception of it and perhaps fell so better way than Christ's conception of conduct might be heeded.

1. Christian conduct must begin with an inward condition rather than an outward one. In describing the citizens of the kingdom of heaven Christ pronounces a blessing upon the poor in spirit, the bereaved, the meek, those who hunger after righteousness, the pure in heart, the peacemakers and the persecuted. The world pronounces its beatitudes upon the rich, the aggressive and the strong, but these worldly conceptions do not produce proper moral conduct. They make the heart of men with pride instead of purity and make them tyrants and oppressors rather than meek and peaceful. It is easy to see, therefore, that if human conduct be based upon Christ's conceptions it must begin with the right kind of an inward life. Character must begin with what we are and not with what we have. Men may be good in spite of wealth and worldly prosperity, but these things will not insure goodness. Goodness must have its foundation in the heart whether it be possessed by rich or poor, high or low. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

2. Christian conduct involves the inward as well as the outward life. To transgress the law in thought an overt act need not be committed, but this is not so when it comes to God. An evil thought is a sin against God. The world says a man as a murderer when he actually slays his enemy. Christ declares that he who hates his brother is a murderer at heart. In the world impurity to be a sin must be committed, but by Christ's ideals impurity of heart is no less serious than impurity of life. "He that looketh upon a woman to lust after her hath committed sin.

3. Christian conduct is based upon the principle of love rather than that of retaliation. The world retaliates; the Christian loves. The world says, "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth;" but Christ says, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you and do good to them that hate you and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you." In all our relations toward one another our conduct is to be governed by the Golden Rule, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye also unto them."

4. Christian conduct should be religious as well as moral. The world only demands morality; Christ demands religion. Our duty to God must be ignored. It should be placed first. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness." Our devotion should be sincere and not hypocritical. Our prayers are from the heart and not from the street corner. We should give alms in the name of Christ and not to magnify our own names. We are to trust God and commit our way to Him and let Him bring it to pass. "He that doeth these things shall live."

South Australia's Increase.

South Australia's first effort in the increase campaign resulted in a gain of 24½ per cent in the number of societies and a banner from the World's Union. The second effort, recently reported, brings a further increase of 7½ per cent. There are now in South Australia 217 Young People's and 157 intermediate and Junior societies. WHY SOME GIRLS ARE NOT MARRIED

STANDARDS OF LIFE HAVE RISEN AND YOUNG PEOPLE WAIT FOR A INCOME.

I am one of a family of two girls and one boy, and my parents are both wealthy, in particular my father, who is "A Rich Man's Daughter" in the London Mail. A man proposed to me six months ago, and with the consent of my parents we became engaged. My fiance and I are anxious to marry soon, and so the other day my fiance approached my father upon the subject of settlements, and met with the response that beyond a pittance of £75 per annum—my pin money, that is to say—which my father proposes to continue to allow me, he will make no monetary settlement upon me, nor permit my mother to do so.

My father told my fiance that upon his death I should be a rich woman, but that until that event I should have from him only what he had said. Upon learning this my fiance told my father in many words that such an arrangement was not good enough for him. My father was aghast. He did not understand the point of vie wtaken by my fiance in the least, and despite the pains with which he tried to put the situation from his standpoint before my father, my father remained so hurt and vexed that he ended the interview stormily, and refused to listen to a renewal of the subject.

After making a futile attempt to open up the subject with my father, who speedily suppressed any discussion with the remark that it was not my business to talk about matters I could not understand, I went to my mother and threshed out the subject with her. As it appeared during our conversation an aunt of mine, who is a thorough woman of the world and my father's sister, made her appearance. Her views and those of my mother are diametrically opposed, and I think it will be found interesting if I note down here both sides of the very vexed question.

My mother argues, I daresay, in exactly the vein that has been laid down for her by my father, against my sweetheart's course of action. She says she does not see why her daughter should not begin life as she did—that is to say, as the wife of a man with his way to make in the world, and with very small income at the outset of his career.

The conduct of my fiance in asking for money with me, my mother stigmatized as unworthy of him. She said that had she not known and admired him, she would have set him down as a fortune hunter and nothing more. She added that she thought my father was very generous to allow me my pin money after my marriage.

At this point my aunt, who had been listening attentively to what we were saying, asked if she might express her views upon the subject. She said that she quite understood the position taken by my fiance. He is a young doctor who means to do very well in his profession. He is clever, and feels that he has a great future before him, but, argued my aunt, if he marries, and it is generally considered a good plan for a young doctor to marry, and settle down as a general practitioner, he may, and probably will, make a fairly good income, but never anything very great, because of the hampering conditions of poverty stricken matrimony.

It is not unnatural, therefore, that he should wish to wait until he has a sufficient dowry to enable him to rise above the petty trials of working for her bread and butter, and instead devote himself heart and soul to the amassing of knowledge in the particular branch of surgery that he means to make his own.

Proceeding with the setting forth of her ideas, my aunt pointed out to my mother that the position of affairs to very much changed since the time she and my father were married. House rents have considerably risen and rates and taxes have followed suit. The professional man must inhabit a good house in a good neighborhood, particularly if he is to be a wealthy doctor, for only there can he expect good fees, and his wife must play her part in the scheme of affairs by dressing well and entertaining well.

My aunt is very strongly of opinion that one reason why young men of this generation do not marry until they are well over thirty is that they can not face life on small incomes with the equanimity their fathers did. It is generally supposed that extravagance, foolishness and a desire for ease prevent early marriages, but she says that she thinks this is not at all the case, but that ambition is quenched by early marriages unless there is plenty of money to make the husband's mind easy upon the score of his wife and children's comfort and happiness.

Make marriage a business affair, said my aunt boldly, and you will face the matter in the proper spirit.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

THURSDAY, MARCH 15, 1906.

Shame on the Newark Advertiser. That's all.

Something wrong. Bryan alleged to have been attacked by Cranford man, and not one word yet from Jim Martine.

Legislature will adjourn March 29. The railroads and other corporate interests couldn't mind if it stopped right now.

The story about a basket of eggs falling 25 feet and not being broken is not an improbable one. Speaking of eggs, did you ever get your breakfast in a restaurant?

Rumor blows in that Charles Napoleon Fowler expects to go back to Congress when his term expires. What's to prevent him? Visitors are allowed in the galleries.

Counsel in a Chancery case proves that courts have upheld a man's right to beat his wife. However, there is nothing to prevent wifey from taking physical culture exercises on hubby's anatomy.

It is cheering news to hear that the New Jersey Democracy is to be revived. Good government is only maintained when there is a healthy minority to keep the dominant party in check, and if ever there has been need of reform since the days when the Democracy itself was drunken with power, that time is right now.

The withdrawal of Judge Runyon from the councils of the local Republican party is a serious blow to the organization's forces. With all due respect, it will be admitted that there is not another political leader in the city with the qualities he possesses. His magnetic personality drew to him probably the largest following of any member of the organization. He is a man all the way through, and should have fared better than he has been allowed to by the organization, for which his services have been well-nigh indispensable.

The Elizabeth Journal is wrong when it surmises that the opposition here to the Tucker school board bill comes "apparently from the faction opposed to Mayor Buckle." It is not a factional question in Plainfield at all. So far as Mayor Buckle is concerned, while we do not pretend to speak for him, it is quite safe to say that he would oppose the measure had he a voice in the Legislature. One thing is certain and that is that the Journal can dispell any doubt it has as to what position Senator Ackerman will take when the bill comes up for passage. He will be squarely against it from first to last.

Senator Kean is getting to be almost as generous at the public expense as Congressman Fowler. During the last few weeks he has been sending to influential men in the State copies of a speech delivered thirteen years ago against the election of United States Senators by the direct vote of the people. Of course he did not deliver the speech; he honored and lamented George Frisbie Hoar was responsible for it. Neither did Mr. Kean pay postage on it or defray the cost of publication. The printing was charged up against Uncle Sam and the postage also, for the document is mailed under the government frank. But 'tis any rate it is very kind of Mr. Kean, particularly so when one realizes that a bill is pending in the State Legislature providing for the selection of senators by popular suffrage. Therefore we say "Sage of Trsino" is getting to be almost as liberal as the congressman-marblemaker, who caused to be distributed thousands or copies of a speech he delivered on his yet unpassed banking bill at a time when he was pleading for the votes of the people to renew his right to occasionally keep the dust off a seat in the lower house at Washington. The government had to stand the expense of printing and mailing, of course. "What fools we mortals be."

Delightful Lenten Recital.

The second Lenten recital at the Holy Cross church Saturday afternoon, attracted even a larger congregation than at the first recital and the programme as arranged by Mr. Lee, organist and choirmaster, was greatly enjoyed. In addition to the several numbers by Mr. Lee, a feature was the singing of Mrs. William L. Saunders, who gave two delightful renditions. The programme comprised ten numbers and everyone was fully appreciated. The third recital will be given at the church Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when another attractive programme will be presented by Mr. Lee, assisted by a well-known soloist.

House Physician on Duty.

Dr. Anthony, of Catawissa, Pa., who has been engaged as house physician at Muhlenberg Hospital, arrived here Saturday night, and has entered upon his duties.

AMUSEMENTS.

Clay by resorting to the frock coat of another member of the company, the serge coat of a stage carpenter and a pair of trousers borrowed from a scene shifter, was Edmund Breese enabled to appear in "The Lion and the Mouse" last night. Breese plays "Ready Money" Ryder. "The Lion and the Mouse" without Ryder would be like an engine without fuel; so there was consternation behind the scenes at the Lyceum theatre when it was learned that Breese's entire wardrobe was missing. The actor on Saturday night had sent all the clothes he uses in the play to be pressed, and when a messenger was sent to the tailor's shop last night the place was closed. It was time to ring up the curtain when the messenger returned Breese had to appear somehow. Breese, whose part is that of a millionaire, struggled into a suit worn in the first act by the Judge, built for a man of 32 inches. Breese has a measurement of 40 inches without expansion. The next change of scene the luckless Breese appeared in a pair of blue serge trousers, added to an evening coat and waistcoat borrowed from the property man. In the final scene, where he and the Judge both have the stage, he was equipped with a suit loaned by a well dressed attache from the front of the house, who stood on the stage in his overcoat until the agony was over. Corporation Counsel John J. Delaney's remark concerning "The Lion and the Mouse:" "The man who has seen 'The Lion and the Mouse' should thank God for a play-wright so gifted as when staged at the New Amsterdam Theatre. No increase in prices will be made during this engagement, which means that the theatre patrons of the New York for several weeks to come will see the largest attraction ever presented at popular prices. William C. Schrode, who made such a hit as the clown at the New Amsterdam, Frank Moulan, John McVeigh, Geo. Schiller, Maude Lillian Berri, Nellie Daly, Diamond Dick Johnson, John G. Sherburne, Joseph C. Smith, Madeline Saville, Augusta Greenleaf, William Fables, David Abrams, Clinton Caly and Eugene Everett are all favorably remembered for their clever work. The Grigolatis troupe of aerialists will appear in an entirely new feature presenting a flock of marvelously trained pigeons which follow them in their wonderful gyrations through the air. More than 400 people will be seen in the ballets. Prices will range from 25 cents to $1.00 and seats may be ordered two weeks ahead by mail or telegraph.

W. A. Brahy's production of Donald MacLaren's new play, "The Redskin," has created a sensation at the Liberty Theatre. It is a drama novelly and the first ever presented with all Indian characters. The locale is the region of the great lakes, year 1750. It is staged in four acts, the scenes showing the council wigwam, the Lily Pool of Namabin, Nistawa's wigwam, The Great Cave of Many Spirits, Louswonda's barricade and Autumn, Winter and Spring. The last three scenes are wonderfully beautiful. The acting of the characters in this play is superb. Tyrone Tower plays the blind Chief and Edwin Arden acts Nistawa. Katharine Grey plays Adahola. The staging is superbly beautiful. To add realism to council scenes, ten real Brule Sioux from the Rosebud Agency in South Dakota have been brought to New York. Anyone who delights in the best in dramatic art will be well repaid by a visit to "The Redskin" at the Liberty.

Those who saw "The Girl of the Golden West" the other night wondered why Miss Blanche Bates wore a neat, white cloth on her left hand. The bandage seemed not to have any connection with the action of the drama, and Miss Bates, as "The Girl," did not vouchsafe any explanation. Neither did any character in the play. The truth is that it was a real injury, which necessitated Miss Bates calling in the services of a surgeon. "Jack Rance," the Sheriff, was responsible for it, although it must be said, in justice to that picturesque Californian, it was accidental. In the second act of "The Girl of the Golden West," Rance, represented by Frank Keenan, tries to kiss "The Girl," and, when she repulses him, he becomes only the more insistent. It is a powerful dramatic episode, and is always followed by the audience breathlessly. A few nights ago, Miss Bates, in swooping her hands across the bureau with a characteristic freedom that is well understood by her admirers, came in contact with a tack, which a careless stage hand had left sticking up in the polished wood. A long, jagged wound was made. It was red and angry, and Miss Bates hastily staunched the flow of blood with her handkerchief. Mr. Keenan saw that she was hurt, although she was too plucky to admit it, but could not assist her in the midst of the scene. He asked her, sympathetically, whether it was serious, and she replied, sotto voce, while defying him aloud, for the benefit of the audience, that it was nothing. All the same, Miss Bates has been in the care of Dr. Samson Bainbridge ever since. He has considered it necessary to go behind the scenes nightly to dress the wound, as he is afraid of blood poisoning. Miss Bates hopes to take the bandage off altogether in the course of a few days.

STRAIGHT TALK IN LIFE

Rev. Dr. Chambliss Tells How Strife Would Be Avoided in All Pursuits.

EVASION AS AN EVIL

"What Would Become of the Lawyer?" Asks the Divine—Address at Men's Club Meeting.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss gave a highly instructive address before the Men's Club of the First Baptist church last night on the subject of "Straight Talk to Men." He said that people will go year in and year out to hear the same person preach on the same line of subjects, all of which he considered a severe test of not only the preacher, but those who hear him. He did not believe that anyone would care to see the best actor one hundred times, nor crowd themselves into a court room to hear a lawyer many times, no matter how witty or interesting he might be. Continuing, Dr. Chambliss said, in part:

"What could we do without talk in the literal sense of the word. It is indispensible. There is nothing that is not affected or accomplished without talk, from the sweetness of the home and success in business to usefulness in Christian life. All depends so largely on talk that it is something that demands our earnest attention.

"Straight talk is a necessity for the best things, the kind of talk with the most simplicity and directness toward the object given in mind. If there was straight talk between husbands and wives there would be no more divorces. If there was straight talk between young men and women there would be no more heartbreaks. If there was straight talk between business men there would be no more trickery. If there was straight talk between employer and employe there would be no strikes, and if there was straight talk between politicians there would be no more graft, boodle or bosses, but I don't know what would become of the lawyers. Their occupation would be gone, and there might be a little less trading between merchants and manufacturers. And what would the newspapermen and the physicians do?

"Probably, if you were in my place you might have something to say about the preacher. I must confess that some of the most difficult, evasive and worse preaching comes from the pulpits today. It reminds me of a class of candidates for the ministry who were questioned as to the personality of God, whether they believed in Him as the living Son of God and whether they believed in a personal conscience after death. In every instance the candidate wanted to qualify his answer by reference to some new thought on the subject.

"How can such apostles preach or deal with souls? Let us put it down rather as evasion. Straight talk does not mean harsh, blunt words, the kind of talk that speaks out whether it hurts or not, but the kind with nothing of doubleness, insincerity, or the shadow of a lie about it. It is not so much orthodoxy and religiousness that we need nowadays as goodness. We must have straight talk between us and God and no profession without practice. There must be straight talk between members of the church and the fulfilling of the covenant which binds us one to another and straight talk with the outside world among men, so that they will say that there goes a Christian."

In addition to this entertaining talk by the pastor, other features of the programme were the recitations and impersonations by Miss Helen M. Miller, of New York, and violin selections by Miss Florence Wohlfert, of Westfield. These two artists delighted the club by their clever performances. Miss Miller was a favorite with all, while Miss Wohlfert was never heard to better advantage. Both received numerous encores. Howard M. Case accompanied Miss Wohlfert on the piano. Samuel St. John McKechen, president of the club, was in charge, and his humorous remarks were fully appreciated.

Feast of Purim.

The Feast of Purim was celebrated by Plainfield Hebrews Saturday night and yesterday. Special services were held in the synagogue of the Children of Israel, Rabbi Davidson officiating. At the Feast of Purim the Jews exchange presents of fruit and give money to the poor.

Senator's Brother Robbed.

Alexander Kean, brother of United States Senator Kean, reported to the police of West Orange Saturday night that, with several other residents, he had last five hundred chickens within a week. The only clue to the thieves is a trail of chicken feathers where the men picked the fowl.

A NOVEL SCHOOL TEST

Borough Pupils Prove That the "Three R's" Are Not Being Neglected.

CAME UNEXPECTEDLY

Questions in Spelling and Arithmetic Were Same Used in Springfield, Mass., Schools in 1846.

The recent discussion in educational circles as to whether the "Three R's" were being neglected in the schools of today through the introduction of fads, was indirectly due to a novel test conducted by Superintendent Krebs in some of the classes of the Somerset School this week. It dealt alone with spelling and arithmetic and the questions were similar to those presented to pupils in the Springfield, Mass., schools in 1846. They were contained in the last annual report of City Superintendent Maxwell, of New York, concerning which the following particulars are given:

Dr. Thomas M. Balliet, while superintendent of school of Springfield, Mass., discovered in the archives a volume of examination papers in spelling and arithmetic written by eighty-five pupils in the Springfield High School in 1846. With these papers were the original questions. These questions were given last March to 243 pupils in the ninth grade of the Springfield public schools. The results were published in the Springfield Republican, together with the questions, and data establishing that the pupils of 1846 were either a little more than of schooling per year than the present ninth year pupils of Springfield. Mr. Mills, principal of Public School No. 75, Brooklyn, gave these same questions to ninety-four pupils of the eighth grade of his school, with the results mentioned below.

The pupils of the North Plainfield High School are younger than those in the Springfield High School were in 1846. Those of the eighth grade are fully three years younger than the average high school age. The schools of Springfield in 1846 were then, as now, among the best in the United States.

Much care was taken to secure absolute fairness in the test in the borough schools. Neither pupils nor teachers were given an inkling that the test was to be given. The classes were unexpectedly confronted with the questions and set to work immediately. Every pupil in the classes took the test—not one was excluded.

It is likely that the questions given in 1846 were based on work that the pupils had done during the year. The spelling words were most probably selected from lists that the pupils had at some time studied. Hence whatever advantage there was should be credited to the Springfield schools of 1846. The examination questions and results were as follows:

Arithmetic Questions, 1846 and 1906.—1. Add together the following numbers: 9,999, 301, 61, 702., 9,000., 13½ and 1½.

2. Multiply 10,008 by 8,009.

3. In a town five miles wide and six miles long, how many acres?

4. How many steps of 2½ feet each will a person take in walking one mile?

5. What is 1-3 of 175½?

6. A boy bought three dozen of oranges for $0.37½, and sold them for 50 cents apiece; what would he have gained if he had sold them for $0.02½ each?

7. There is a certain number, 1-3 of which exceeds ¼ of it by 2. What is the number?

8. Find the simple interest of $1,200 for 12 years, 11 months and 29 days (at 6 per cent.)?

Superintendent Maxwell argues from these results that the schools of today, while cultivating through manual training and other lines of work the various mental powers of the pupils which were not given any attention sixty years ago, are through the power thus gained making the pupils at least twice as efficient in the "Three R's" as they were in 1846.

NEARLY WON FROM NEWARK CHAMPION FIVE

NEWARKERS JUST MANAGED TO WIN, AFTER A HARD FIGHT.

The Newark Y. M. C. A. basketball team, winner of the Northern New Jersey Y. M. C. A. championship, was given a close tussle in the game with the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team, Saturday night, nosing out Plainfield only after a hard struggle by the score of 29 to 25. The Newark team with their fast team work, had the Plainfield team on "Queer street" during the first half, which ended in the score reading 16 to 8 in Newark's favor.

In the final period, however, Plainfield took a decided brace and for a time Newark's clean record on its home court was in grave danger of being tarnished. Plainfield made a strong up-hill fight. They broke through the locals' defense and caged the ball three times in quick succession, which, together with a point scored on a free throw, made the score 17 to 15, with Newark on the long end.

The excitement was intense at this stage of the game. The players dashed around in pell-mell fashion and so great was the noise of the rival rooters that the referee's whistle could scarcely be heard. Toward the close of the half, however, Long and Vreeland dropped the ball through the network. On a neat shot from the field and another point scored when a foul was committed, the Newarks placed themselves beyond danger. The line-up:

Newark.		Plainfield.
Vreeland	right forward.	Smith
Long	left forward.	Thompson
Seidler, Wagner	centre.	Scull
Pollard	right guard.	Leary

FARMERS UP IN ARMS AGAINST HUNT CLUB

WARN MEMBERS OF ORGANIZATION TO KEEP OFF THEIR PROPERTY.

Angered because of the destruction that follows in the wake of the usual Saturday afternoon chases, the farmers in the Alton section of Fanwood township are up in arms against the Watchung Huna Club, of this city. Legal steps have been taken to prevent the members from riding over restricted ground and each one has been served with a notice detailing the names of property owners who would rather see the red-coated horsemen go some other way. The territory now prohibited included one of the favorite routes of the club and will lessen the diversity of the Saturday afternoon and holiday runs.

The riders who have been served with copies of the notice by the township authorities are S. A. Crailkshank, George C. White, Chauncey Sayre, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, W. Bourne, Duncan Brinkley, W. Webster, Dr. H. O'M. Knott, C. E. Bellows, C. B. Chobbesin, Miss Leila Crailkshank, Miss Holly, Miss Noe and Mrs. VanBeck.

The farmers claim that in going across their fields, the club members' horses not only injure the winter grain but break down wooden fences and loosen the wire guards. Since the chases started, bills have frequently been presented the club for damage done and they have been paid promptly. In addition officials of the organization have gone over the route during the week and generously offered to [illegible] for any loss caused by them.

This has been unsatisfactory, however, as the breaks in fences on several occasions have allowed cattle to wander away and has caused no end of trouble that could not be computed as money damage. The chief sufferers held a conference and decided the only way to abate the nuisance was to stop the club from going over their property and this has been done. The notice sent out is signed by fifty-three Fanwood borough and township residents.

DIOGENES'S JOB WOULD BE MUCH HARDER TODAY "TREATING" A GREAT EVIL

He'd Find Honest Men Scarce Today, Says Rev. Mr. Osborn.

CHEAT GOVERNMENT

Tells Men's Club Members Modern Life Furnishes Surprising Evidences of Lack of Honesty In Business.

"Put on the whole armor of God" was the slogan of Rev. Louis Shreve Osborne, of Trinity church, Newark, to his hearers in Grace Episcopal church Sunday. The service was held under the auspices of the Men's Club of that congregation, which fact, together with the prominence of the clergyman, attracted a goodly number of men to the service, as well as a large number of women.

Faith was the keynote of Rev. Mr. Osborne's theme. To be a true follower of Christ and child of God, a Christian should be clothed with this virtue. When Christians lose their faith, he said, the devil starts to creep in a man's character. It is then a man weakens. He loses his armor of righteousness in one way by lying or trying to cheat the Lord of his tithes.

This is evident, said the preacher, by the many scandalmongers in the world of society; business men unconsciously lie to make money, and many so-called upright citizens today lie consciously in an effort to cheat their town or city government by trying to swear off their taxes. City fathers, who haven't the armor of righteousness, he said, do not hesitate to become interested in graft. Graft in business life, he declared, had become so great that men receive salaries of $100,000 who are not worth one-fifth of that amount.

The lack of righteousness among business men of today, he declared, was surprising. With emphasis, he declared, "Should Diogenes walk through the streets of our principal cities today he would find it a harder task to find honest men than he did in the corrupt city of Athens three thousand years ago."

Faith in Christ is the safeguard of a Christian. This virtue, he said, predominates in the characters of America's greatest men of today, including the successful business men, the sound statesmen, the honest legislators and the reformers that are now waging a warfare throughout many sections of the country for civic righteousness. With faith, the Christian can defy all the world, and every victory gained by faith will hasten the coming of Christ.

Corrupt politics, ballot box stuffing, vote buying, crooked business dealings, trickery of all kinds, and society snobbery are the inevitable fruits of a weakness in faith. These vices, he said, go hand in hand, and until a Christian starts to love God with his whole heart as well as with his heart no relief will come; but if Christians will inject faith in their religion, a marked change will be visible in current proceedings of life.

Without faith the Roman legions could never conquer. So it is today, if Christians are not imbued with the true faith, the Christian cause will never advance. Take the Word of God, it is sharper than a two edged sword, he said. Christianity is nothing unless it advances.

"A good many people," he said, "think they are right with God if they join the church, pay their pew rents regularly, and put a dime in the collection box every Sunday; but a true Christian hero is to be found out in the by-ways preaching the gospel to sinners and battling with sin in all injurious quarters."

In closing, the clergyman exforted his hearers to renew their faith and follow God more closely, especially during the Lenten seaso...

LOCAL GOOD ROADS MADF HIM AN AUTO ENTHUSIAST.

Treasurer Vail, of Philadelphia Grand Opera House, Now Negotiating for a Machine.

The smooth roads in and about Plainfield and the novelty of a delightful spin out in the countryside in an auto proved a combination that converted W. J. Vail, treasurer of the Philadelphia Grand Opera House into an auto enthusiast Sunday. Mr. Vail and his wife have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Counihan for the past few days and in his efforts to show them the city and adjacent territory, the New Plainfield manager took the visitors and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cunningham for a spin to Perth Amboy. At the Middlesex county place they were entertained at dinner at the Packer House by Joseph F. Stricker and his hospitality aided in Mr. Vail's conversion.

On the return home he waxed enthusiastic over autoing and the local system of good roads, and finally declared he was going to buy himself a machine and began negotiations with the F. L. C. Martin Company for a car.

BILL SMITH GETS OUT OF HIS LATEST SCRAPE

SETTLEMENT WITH CALDWELL BARBER ENDS HIS EXILE.

His involuntary exile ended, Mayor "Bill" Smith has abandoned his New Market refuge and returned to his home in Caldwell. The barber he nearly killed two weeks ago in a row, has forgiven him on a cash basis, and withdrawn proceedings. Besides, the barber is getting better, and the coroner has lost interest in the case.

Announcement of the settlement of the trouble was made Monday morning by R. P. P. Von Minden, Smith's counsel. The sum necessary to salve the barber's wounded feelings and his more material injuries was not made public, but it is reported in New Market, where most of Bill's other family secrets have leaked out at various times, that the tonsorialist got $700.

Mrs. Smith, whom it was rumored, had decided to let Bill go his own way, wherever it might lead, gave the lie to the story by sticking faithfully to him through the trouble. She conducted the negotiations, with the assistance of Lawyer Von Minden, and visited Bill in his exile at New Market, to cheer him up with encouraging news from the firing line.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT STRIKING IN EXCELLENCE

DELIGHTFUL PROGRAMME AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

A Sunday-school concert took the place of the evening service at the Congregational church last night. The programme was one that can scarcely be overpraised. The music was of striking excellence, and there was (but one, very brief and very pointed, talk. The attendance of adults was large.

In addition to the quartet choir, composed of B. F. Tallamy, James Sanford, Mrs. Thomas McDonald and Miss Jessie Haines, an instrumental quartet took part. The latter was made up of J. Herbert Smith, first violin; Miss Edna F. Smith, second violin; Miss Rhea G. Smith, flute; and Miss Morgan, piano. Miss Haynes sang the solo part of Gounod's "Praise Ye the Father," and Mrs. McDonald sang the offertory, accompanied by Mr. Smith. Edson C. Martin led the Sunday-school in singing. Mrs. B. T. Barnes, the organist, directed the choristers.

G. E. Hall, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, who has had wide experience in Sunday-school work and is recognized as one of the leaders in that field in the State, gave a talk on Sabbath-school advancement that was strong and suggestive out of all proportion to its length. He spoke for scarcely five minutes, but his talk was full of matter for everyone of his hearers who had any interest in the Sunday-school. He dwelt, for the most part, on the danger of allowing the school to become rutted. He compared the school in a rut to a trolley car off the track.

"Get the car back in the rut and back on the track, where you can use the power from above, or all your passengers will leave the car. Use jack-screws, if necessary, but get back on the speedway; back to the road of advancement."

The concert was arranged by the Sunday-school music committee, composed of Miss Alice Morgan, chairman; Stacy Raynolds and Miss Myra Emmons. The concerts have been made a permanent feature of the school.

Approaching Wedding.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Henry T. Cuipp, formerly of this city, and Miss Grace Parks, of Cranford. The event will be celebrated on Saturday, March 31, at the home of the bride. Miss Edna A. Lewis, of the borough, will be bridesmaid, and Allen Vanderhoef, also of the borough, will be best man. A number of guests from this city will attend the wedding.

Want Bicycle Shed.

The plans for the new Plainfield High School called for a bicycle room, but in cutting down the expense to get within the amount appropriated for the structure, it was found necessary to omit the wheel room. As a large majority of the pupils of the school ride wheels it is almost a necessity that some place be provided for the storage of bicycles. In view of this it is quite likely that a shed will be erected in the rear of the building in the near future.

Frank Bullman, of Lincoln place, has purchased the property, No. 22 Duer street, belonging to the estate of Mrs. Mary L. Force, and intends occupying it as his future home.

A mothers' meeting will be held on Friday afternoon, March 16, at 4 o'clock, in the new High School. An invitation is extended to all mothers to be present.

Clergyman Scores Practise; Says Make Saloon as Public as Grocery Store.

FOR BISHOPS' BILL

"No Side Room" and "No Screens" Good Features of Measure to Be Offered in the Legislature.

Rev. E. V. Stevenson, rector of Grace P. E. church, spoke strongly in favor of the Bishops' bill for the control of the liquor traffic, at the morning service yesterday. The arguments advanced by those in support of the measure, he said, were, for the most part, what had already been the convictions on the subject. The sermon was preached in accordance with Bishop Scarborough's general request.

The temperance question was to be divided into three heads, he said. There was, first, the question of drinking at all. It was one that every man should decide for himself; it was a matter for his conscience to govern. It was for the individual to decide what things were lowering him morally and for him to eschew everything that tended to lower his Christian dignity.

Secondly, there was the relationship of the individual to his fellow man. That brought in the question, "Will my drinking hurt my brother?" The treating habit was the great evil that centered about this phase of the subject. Mr. Stevenson scored the treater severely. The treating system, he said, should have no place in society. In general, the individual should not drink if his drinking served to unman or weaken his fellows.

The third heads was the question of the State's relation to the liquor traffic. There was no doubt that the traffic was a dangerous one, and it followed that the State was entirely justified in stepping in and controlling it. The question of degree of method was to be decided after careful thought. Mr. Stevenson was especially pleased with the "no-screen, no side-room" clause in the amendment.

"The removal of the screens is the fundamental step in the reform of the saloon business," he said. "Make the saloon as public as the grocery or the chemist's shop. If it is right to drink, drink in public. Secrecy is always a ground for suspicion. In moral ills, as in physical ones, disease vanishes when the air and the sunlight was admitted freely."

Mr. Stevenson urged his parishioners to think the temperance question over earnestly, as a civic duty, decide on a stand, and make that stand known. It was a question that was too important to be put away as of no immediate interest by the men with the nice home, and the quiet life.

SMALL DOG WENT TO JAIL WITH A DRUNK.

Andre Champagne's Little Friend Was Faithful in Trouble.

Andre Champagne, a Frenchman employed by Albert Rajotte, a Dunellen brickmaker, lived up to his name Sunday. Patrolman Higgins found him in a very soused condition on Grant avenue.

Champagne had Rajotte's dog with him, and the animal stuck to him through his incarceration. It chased faithfully after the patrol wagon when Champagne was carted to jail, and insisted on going into the cell with him. When he was brought before City Judge Runyon this morning the dog lined up before the bar at his side, ready, evidently, to share whatever the magistrate handed out to his comrade.

"Sentence suspended," said the judge, and the small dog, hungry, but still faithful, wagged his tail joyfully at Champagne's heels as he went out to freedom.

Convention Called to Start Party on a New Life.

CALL BY BIG CHIEFS ITS LOCAL CHARACTERS

James E. Martine Signs Call, Which Is Headed by Allen Benny and John Moody.

Democratic leaders in Central and Central Northern New Jersey have issued a formal call for a convention to be held in Newark March 21, to infuse new life and progressive ideas in their party in this State. The movement, at the head of which is Allen Benny and John Moody, is designed to bring about the complete reorganization of the Jeffersonian forces. James E. Martine is among the active workers in the movement, and his name is among the signatures to the call.

The call is addressed to "the citizens of New Jersey" and its signers are representative Democrats in all parts of the State, both of the "old school" and the "new school."

In the circular are set forth principles of a "progressive democracy." They outline a line of action with the tactics of the Colby movement in the Republican camp and go further than the original manifesto of the Newark Democratic League. Simon Northrop, president of the latter organization, and many of its leading members are among the signers of the State call.

In the list are also the names of Charles C. Black and Senator James F. Minturn, of Hudson county. Former Judge George H. Lambert, of Newark, is said to be the foremost spirit in Essex county in the movement. Julian A. Gregory, of West Orange, and Thomas A. Davis, of Orange, are also on the list. Others are Edmond A. Whittier and Mayor Edward Kenny, of East Newark.

Among the principles advanced as a basis for the movement are government and municipal ownership of public utilities, equal taxation, laws to prevent election frauds such as the improper use of money, election of United States Senators by popular vote, the Assembly district plan, a better primary law, direct legislation through the initiative and referendum and revision of the tariff laws.

It is declared that political conditions were never before so unsettled in the United States as now and that men are renouncing their party affiliations because as now constituted the parties no longer represent the principles in which they believe. It is also set forth that a study of politics discloses the fact that the machinery of the two old parties has fallen completely under the control of corporate and other privileged interests, and the spirit of independence has reached the highest point in the history of American politics.

It is expected that more than a thousand prominent Democrats will attend the convention which is proposed.

The convention will be held at the New Auditorium, Orange street, organizing at about noon.

These two classes are to be especially represented at the meeting.

Miss Cora Remington, a vocalist of fine talent and much ability, will render several selections, and will have as accompanist the well known composer and pianist, Charles Gilbert Spross.

E. C. Wooster, county superintendent of Bergen county schools, is president of the association, and O. W. Travelle, of Elizabeth, is chairman of the executive committee.

Inopportune Enthusiasm.

Friend (at a French play): Why did you applaud so vigorously when that comedian made his speech before the curtain?

Spriggins (confidently): So that folks would think I understood French. What did he say?

Friend: He said the remainder of his part must be taken by an understudy, as his mother was dying.—Tid-Bits.

His Thought.

"I tell you," said the dreamer, "if I could only acquire a nice pile of money I wouldn't do a thing but travel."

"Of course," remarked the schemer, "but maybe the police wouldn't do a thing but stop you."—Philadelphia Press.

Mrs. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman's Book "The Debtor" Has Angered Her Neighbors.

Authoress Denies She Portrayed Village Folk In Her Novel—Who the Originals Are.

"How does she dare to call us snoopers?" is the indignant inquiry of every middle aged woman in Metuchen, N. J., whenever anyone mentions the last novel of their neighbor, Mrs. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman. One of them has already called on the authoress for an explanation. The town is in a turmoil and the "types" go about the streets. The grocer, the milkman, the leading liveryman all eye each other askance as they pursue their vocations and salute each other by the names which they bear in "The Debtor"—for that is the much discussed book. They are rather pleased than otherwise, although the barber objects to the putting of a dumb canary in his shop and has taken down the lambrequin.

Nor do the feminine contingent look less complacently upon the portraits of their neighbors. The resemblance and recrimination which is whirling over the place reached its lowest depths last week when a young woman was informed that her mother was one of the aged ladies with violets in her bonnet who examined the wedding gifts of the bride with such a critical eye that she thought that none of its members was at home.

Nothing will agitate a feminine resident of Metuchen more than to address her as "Mrs. Lee" or "Mrs. Van Dorn," or to remark in a stage whisper: "Oh, they don't have elegant wardrobes and be very wealthy people indeed. This petticoat is real lace, don't you think so, Mrs. Van Dorn?"

Women who once dwelt in amity even though they were members of the same bridge whist clubs, have in the last week been seen to glare at each other as they passed in Main street.

"Mrs. Freeman," said one yesterday, "had no call to say such things as that. I do think it is a perfect shame. Metuchen has always been minded their own business, and besides, they don't take up with strangers unless it is for the good of the church."

Protest comes from all sides. The young woman, who thinks that somebody had cried to refer to her mother as "Lee" in the book, is very much concerning the tea stains on her absent neighbor's table cloth, is willing to declare that no relative of hers gave way to an exhibition of curiosity, and other young persons who have elderly relatives, as well as the aunts and the grandmothers of the above members, are raising their voices in indignation. They wish to go on record as having no more than a proper interest in the affairs of newcomers. The small boys from safe distances are now wont to cry aloud:—"Hi there, snoop the snoop!"

About the postoffice, in the library, at the afternoon teas, this breach of etiquette is widely discussed, and every woman in the place who has shown even an ordinary neighborly interest has a self-conscious expression when she comes from church. Few in Metuchen will now wear simple flowers in their bonnets, clean their gloves with gasolene or use Russian violet as a "calling perfume" for fear they will be covertly spoken of as the originals of Mrs. Henry Lee and Mrs. William Van Dorn.

Some of the citizens of Metuchen, however, are pleased and flattered as they are identified with the story. The Samson Rawdy of fiction and Bainbridge closely resembles John Dempsey, of Metuchen, for he has "the two fat boys sacred to fashionable calls and the coach, quite a resplendent affair, with very few worn places in the cloth lining."

Flynn, the barber's original, may be seen in Metuchen in the person of Frederick Smith. His establishment has had its scheme of decorations slightly changed since the book was published, but substantially it is the description given in "The Debtor," which is as follows:—

"There was a lace curtain in the show window, a palm in each corner, between which stood a tank of goldfish, and below the lace lambrequin swung a gilt cage containing an incessantly hopping though silent yellow canary."

Edward Kramer is recognized in the guise of Rosenstein, the leading dry goods merchant, and Mr. Martin, the milkman, appears as Tappan.

As to who was "The Debtor" himself the delicate question is often discussed, but as far as that is concerned, it is considered best to let the dead past bury its dead. One supposed original is dead and another was last heard of in Philadelphia. The main story of Mrs. Freeman's book, however, closely follows the career of a dashing stranger who came from some mysterious place and cut a wide swathe in Metuchen society. He had teams of horses and his family lived in the best style. The house where he lived is pointed out.

At least six tradesmen lay claim to the title of the philanthropic grocer who sold supplies to "The Debtor" and his family. The natives of Metuchen say that about three years ago this personage sought to disappear. His intention was divined, however, and the freight car containing all his household effects, which was on a siding, was plastered with injunctions. Like the character of Mrs. Freeman's book, he finally gave checks to all his creditors. The paper, however, was worthless. The merchants managed to intercept the car and reimbursed themselves by selling his furniture. "The Debtor" of fiction earned money to meet his obligations by singing and dancing in black face at a vaudeville house; the supposed original also gave his creditors the proceeds of a song and dance.

Mrs. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman expressed astonishment when she was told how much Metuchen had taken the book to heart.

"I never intended," said she, "to portray my neighbors in such a way, and, in fact, I did not draw my material from Metuchen. I would not do such a thing. I was amazed only a few days ago when an estimable woman of this town and a dear friend of mine called and wished to know if she was described as one of the women who went through a neighbor's house in the absence of the family. Of course the characters were entirely imaginary."

"This act shall take effect immediately."

MEMORIAL TO THOSE WHO HELPED SAVE HIS LIFE

Frederick's Chaft on Anchor Lodge Contains Names of Brethern Who Gave Cuticle For Skin-Grafting.

A MASONIC FUNCTION

Grand Lodge Officers In Assemblage of 300 Fraters—Present for Worshipful Master Runyon.

In recognition of the self-sacrifice made by members of the organization when he was apparently dying from burns received in the Jersey Central wreck at Westfield three years ago, Wilson Frederick, of Dunellen, presented to Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., with an engrossed memorial Friday. It bore the names of seventy Masons who had contributed pieces of cuticle from their arms to cover portions of his body scalded by steam and was encased in a handsome frame. Grand Master Benjamin F. Wakefield and staff, of Passaic, and 300 members of the order from all parts of the State, were in attendance, and afterward extended congratulations to the donor, just as they had done when he was first discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, after passing through one of the most trying ordeals that has ever been the lot of human being.

Worshipful Master William N. Runyon was in charge of the ceremonies, which opened with the reception of Grand Master Wakefield and the following members of his staff: Deputy Grand Master Walter Chandler, of Elizabeth; District Deputy William D. Wolfskeil, of Elizabeth; Grand Marshal Charles P Russ, of Elizabeth; Grand Organist Powell G. Fithian, of Newark. The five charter members of Anchor Lodge, Stephen D. Affleck, of New York; Dr. H. H. Lowerie, Russel Johnson, Samuel C. Peck and T. A. Rogers, of this city, and sixty Masons who had aided Frederick in his time of need, were also received, and in their presence he made the presentation. It was accomplished in a few words, during which he again expressed his appreciation in a manner that showed more than did the gift the sense of gladness that prompted him to do it. The memorial was accepted by Grand Master Wakefield in behalf of Anchor Lodge, who responded in a fitting manner.

Mr. Frederick's gift was followed by several others which came as a surprise to most of the fraters. One was the presentation of a large Bible to Anchor Lodge by Stephen D. Affleck to take the place of one he had given at a former institution and which was destroyed in the Babcock fire four years ago. It was received by Worshipful Master Runyon, who in turn was made the recipient of a past master's jewel and apron, as presents serving his second term. It was entirely unexpected but the Judge proved equal to the occasion and responded to the good wishes of the brethren. The last gift was made by Craig A. Marsh to Grand Master Wakefield and was a tasseled Bible, the official and his wife both being interested in Sunday-school work at Passaic.

The formal programme was followed by a social session during which banjo selections were given by Fred Van Eps and solos by Judge Runyon and Elmer D. Cutting. The ceremonies terminated with a supper served in the banquet room.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the affair comprised Louis I. VanAistyne, Peter A. Emmons and J. Stephen Higham.

The recovery of Wilson Frederick from the frightful injuries he received in the Westfield wreck represents the most marvelous skin grafting operation in the history of medicine. His case attracted the attention of physicians and surgeons the world over and has been the subject of numerous lectures and newspaper and magazine articles. Three-fourths of his body was denuded of skin and when he was pulled from beneath the wreckage not one in a hundred thought he could live. One after another of the physicians at Muhlenberg Hospital said that he was beyond aid but Dr. Albert Pittis believed there was a slight chance and immediately took steps to save his life.

The suffering man was placed upon an air bed and when the sloughs from the scalded surfaces ceased, Frederick was entirely raw and denuded of cuticle on one side of the body, from crown of head to the groins to the shoe tops. Under the circumstanes skin grafting, the forlorn hope, seemed impossible. But Dr. Pittis is a militant surgeon. While the patient was carried through the first and often fatal period of shock by the administration of whiskey and champagne in large quantities, the doctor cast about busily for the needed cuticle. He consulted first with Louis I. VanAistyne, then worshipful master of Anchor Lodge, to which both he and Frederick belong. Dr. Pittis told his fellow-Mason that there was no focus left for new skin to form on Frederick's burns and that their comrade's only chance for life lay in securing skin in large quantities from outside sources.

VanAistyne at once called the matter to the attention of the lodge and there was exhibited a spirit and altogether noble spirit of unselfish fraternity. As one man the members pledged themselves to submit to Dr. Pittis and when it became a question of selection the selected ones were actually notified. No less generous a spirit was shown by the local sister Masonic lodge—Jerusalem —and the rivalry for sacrifice grew daily brisker. Seventy of the Masons bared their arms to have sections of cuticle removed and when the supply of men from this source was exhausted, employes of the United States Express Company all the way from New York to Wilkes-Barre on the New Jersey Central and from Bound Brook to Philadelphia on the Reading, asked to undergo the ordeal. Frederick, at the time of the accident, was a clerk in the express company's office at New York and was held in high esteem by the men working for the same concern. They came many miles gladly to help him and when at last his body had received a new coating, exactly 173 men had contributed from twenty to thirty pieces of skin.

In all, Frederick was about a year at the hospital but has since fully recovered and resumed work, now being manager of the U. S. express business in the city. Outside of the scars the only effect he suffers is a limitation of the leg movements due to unavoidable antisection from scar tissues. To every one of the 172 men he feels grateful while he ascribes his marvelous escape from death to the indomitable will and skill of Dr. Pittis. The list of men included others than Masons who gave skin he has kept as follows:

MASS MEETING TO BEGIN CONSUMPTION CRUSADE

Dr. Farrand and Other Authorities on Tuberculosis to Address Plainfield People.

NOTABLE COMMITTEE

Plans Made For First Meeting at New High School Tuesday Night, March 20—Consumption's Ravages Here.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield Clinical Society a campaign has been started here against tuberculosis. For the present, the whole of the work proposed, will be entirely along educational lines, and, as a first step toward this end, a public mass meeting will be held on Tuesday night, March 20. The meeting will take place in the new High School auditorium. Dr. Livingston Farrand, of New York, executive secretary of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, will be the principal speaker. Others who will make addresses include Dr. J. H. Huddleston, of New York, who has been particularly prominent in the association's campaign, and Hugh F. Fox, of this city, secretary of the New Jersey State Charities Aid Association, which is lending its efforts to the crusade against consumption.

This gathering will be followed later by smaller district meetings. It is hoped in this way to reach all classes of people in Plainfield and to show them how consumptives may be cured by careful treatment and how to prevent others from contracting the disease.

The committee on tuberculosis of the Plainfield Clinical Society was enlarged to a general representative committee, which now consists of the following men and women, who have consented to give their support to this movement: Dr. B. vanD. Hedges, Dr. W. H. Mowrey, Dr. A. C. Imbasco, Dr. T. S. Davis, Dr. F. C. Ard, Miss Emma L. Adams, Miss Margaret Holly, Miss Susan Hubbell, Mrs. Elizabeth Tiffany, Mrs. Elliott T. Barrows, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Rev. A. C. Henderson, Rev. Henry M. Bogan, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Henry M. Maxson, C. J. Fisk, C. W. McCutchen, Alexander Gilbert, Hugh F. Fox, Henry C. Krebs, L. R. Thurlow.

The call to the people contains the following paragraphs:

"The object of this meeting is to instruct the people on the subject of tuberculosis, or consumption, and to show how the large number of deaths from this disease each year may be greatly reduced, for in the last five years, twelve per cent. of all deaths have been due to consumption; there has been an average of three deaths every month. This means that unless some preventative steps are taken to check the progress of this disease, and the people educated to the needs of fighting it, that of the 24,094 persons in Plainfield and North Plainfield, nearly 3,000 will eventually die because of tuberculosis. This is more appalling when one realizes that consumption is a preventable disease and could be completely wiped off the face of the earth in a few decades, if the nature of the disease and the means of its prevention and care were properly understood. It was because of this fact that the committee felt warranted in starting this educational movement.

"The conditions in Plainfield are not worse than elsewhere; more people die of consumption in the United States than of any other disease. Other cities have started the work proposed in Plainfield and North Plainfield and we are in hopes that the public will realize the advantages that can be obtained from such meetings and that they will make it a point to attend them, taking such an interest that many lives may be saved."

His death was indirectly due to a fever contracted while in active service in the Philippines. He was discharged when it first took hold upon him and he returned to Plainfield, but afterward went to Mexico for treatment. From there he came home again but complications had followed and he lingered in a hopeless condition for several months.

J. HENRY CRANE'S SUCCESS.

Young Lawyer Recently Admitted to Bar Now a Counsellor.

J. Henry Crane, son of Rev. Arthur Crane, has received notice from Supreme Court Clerk Riker, at Trenton, that he has successfully passed his examination as counselor at law and master in chancery, which gives him many additional privileges in the practice of law.

Mr. Crane held a responsible position with the Equitable Life Assurance Company for nine years, during which time he was for seven year in the office of Former President Hazen Hyde, where he was engaged in the law and inspection department. When the troubles of the Equitable began, Mr. Crane resigned his position, but in the meantime he had studied law and was admitted to the New Jersey Bar in 1902. After giving up his position in New York he opened an office in Park avenue for the practice of law, and today he enjoys a generous share of patronage.

SAY SHE FORGED A MARRIAGE CERTIFICATE.

Also Declared to Have Passed Off As Her Own Baby One Taken From Farm.

A woman who called herself Mrs. Jessie Plaut left last February 19 a four-months-old baby boy at the Day Nursery in Jersey City. She said her husband was in the hospital and that she was dependent upon her parents.

When she did not return in five days the police made an investigation and through Detective-Sergeant Van Horn it was ascertained that the woman had secured a baby from a farm and adopted it in an effort to make it appear that she had taken one Irvin Plaut was its father and hoping to win the affection of Mr. Plaut.

Plaut declared he had never married the woman. "Mrs. Plaut," so it is declared by the police, secured a copy of her sister Edna's marriage certificate and erased her sister's first name and substituted her own, also writing in the name of Plaut.

"Mrs. Plaut" is in the county jail on a charge of abandoning her baby.

AGAINST CITY PARK PROJECT THIS YEAR

PUBLIC AFFAIRS COMMITTEE DOES NOT FAVOR PLAN AT PRESENT.

Several petitions referred from last year's Common Council by the committee on public affairs, was taken up at a meeting of the committee last night. Most of the petitions were unimportant, but there was one regarding a proposed public park for the city, that was discussed informally at some length.

It was the opinion of the committee that it would be unwise and impractical to start to establish a city park this year and it is unlikely that this will be done. The committee considered various sites, including those suggested last year in the southeastern part of the city, but as the expense of such an improvement would be so great it was thought best not to bring the matter before the Common Council at present.

MOVING AGAINST THEATRE SIGNS.

Public School Teachers Find Cause for Criticism with Some Posters.

Newark school teachers are going to move in force against sensational theatrical posters. These proved the principal point of discussion at a meeting of the executive committee of the Essex County Teachers' Guild at the Free Public Library in that city Wednesday night.

Miss Elizabeth M. Stringer, president of the guild, a teacher in the Washington Street School, objected especially to two lithographs posted in the neighborhood of the school, one of which pictured a man teaching small boys how to pick pockets, and another scene in which a man supposed to have hypnotic power is lifting a woman up in the air and sparks are coming from her in all directions.

Miss Harriet E. Van Nest, a teacher in the Hamburg Place School, told of what she considered immoral posters near that building. The teachers said that these had a bad effect on the morals of the children, which all the good influences of the classroom could not counteract. They passed a resolution authorizing Miss Almeda M. Olds, a teacher in the Washington Street School, to write a letter to Arthur W. McDougall, secretary of the Newark Conference of Charities and Correction, asking that organization to take the matter up and urge the city authorities to take steps to do away with the evil.

The teachers also put themselves on record as being opposed to the passage of a bill now pending at Trenton, which provides for the killing of doves by sportsmen during certain seasons of the year. They also made arrangements for the celebration of Audubon Day, Wednesday, April 11. Next Wednesday afternoon at the library, Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, of Elizabeth, will address an open meeting of the teachers on her work as a probation officer.

RELIEF CORPS' AUCTION.

Women's Lunch Boxes Bring $20 When Sold by Capt. Smith.

Under the auspices of the Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., a successful lunchbox social was held in G. A. R. Hall Friday. There were not nearly enough boxes to go around and they were quickly disposed of by Auctioneer Captain W. C. Smith. In this way nearly $20 was realized.

During the evening there were vocal and piano selections by the Misses Edgar, several selections by alstring-ed orchestra, of which Dr. Berg was the leader; soprano solos by Mrs. Sadie Baglin and iano solos by Miss May Smith.

The social festivities began after a short meeting of the corps, when one new member was elected. Past Commander I. L. McVoy took charge of the programme of the evening and in addition to the music there were short speeches by the comrades and women. Mrs. William Edgar was chairman of the general committee, assisted by other members of the corps.

YOUNG FORGER ARRESTED

Tailor Victimized By His 16-year-old Son.

GOT COSTLY LESSON

Boy Taught Father to Write His Name In English, Then Tried It Himself—Headed for Institution.

Samuel Berkowitz, sixteen years old, taught his father, L. Berkowitz, women's tailor, to write his name in English. Three weeks ago Samuel tried the signature himself on one of his father's checks. The signature looked good and Samuel took it to the First National Bank to see if it was as good as it looked. It looked as good to the teller as it did to Samuel, and the youth went to New York with $15 of his father's money.

Two days later, when the check came back from the bank, L. Berkowitz understood why Samuel hadn't been home for two days. Samuel had been giving his father and some other people a lot of trouble before, and Berkowitz decided that the check episode put the boy in the incorrigible class. He turned the matter over to the police and told them to let the law take its course.

Samuel sported in New York, according to the police, until a day or two ago, when his money gave out and the chill of panhandling in a real city drove him back to Plainfield. Detective McCarthy spotted him on the street this morning and Samuel's lark ended with a suddenness that took the starch out of him.

Chief Kiely turned the boy over to Capt. Winn, assistant probation officer, and the latter sent for Berkowitz pere. The latter's heart was still firmly set against the youthful forger, and he authorized Capt. Winn to go ahead with arrangements for sending Samuel to the Jamesburg Reformatory.

"Is there no Hebrew institution for such boys to which you can send him?" asked the probation officer. "It is only fair to you to say that Jamesburg is a prison in effect, and nothing else. He is too bright a boy to be loose until he has been trained correctly, but there are better places for such offenders than the boy's reformatory."

Capt. Winn's unfaltering picture *of Jamesburg had its effect on Berko*witz. After a talk with Chief Kiely he left the court to arrange, if possible, to have Samuel placed in a Hebrew protectory in New York. Capt. Winn retained the forged check and other proofs against Samuel, and the boy will he arraigned before the Juvenile Court if he isn't placed in the protectory. Samuel was allowed to go in his father's custody.

LOCAL FIRM WINS AN IMPORTANT CONTRACT CASE.

Suit Heard Before Justice Squires and Jury at Springfield.

VanZandt & Voorhees, of Park avenue, were defendant in an important suit brought before Justice E. R. Squires and a jury at Springfield Friday by the United Law and Adjustment Agency, which seeks to settle by adjustment any claims or troubles a patron may have in business affairs. The action was on a written *contract. The Plainfield firm, repre*sented by Isaac P. Runyon, secured a verdict, the jury being out but ten minutes.

In 1900 the defendants signed a contract to pay $25 for two years' services. If the firm did not comply with the certain conditions in a written contract, which conditions were numerous and in fine print and couched in technical language, it would forfeit so much money. It was proved at the trial that the conditions were so many and worded so peculiarly that it would take a bookkeeper and a lawyer to comply with them.

It was shown that VanZandt & Voorhees did comply with the contract, and the jury promptly gave the firm a verdict. There were three or four other suits returnable against Westfield merchants, W. D. Wolfskeil, of Elizabeth, representing them, but as the VanZandt & Voorhees case was before a jury it was tried first. The verdict is considered important in that it establishes a precedent for other merchants who have contracted for this or similar services.

"This silver dollar," began the cashier of the restaurant, as he crutinized the coin.

"Is bad, eh?" interrupted the sour-looking patron.

"Why, it doesn't look very good."

"That so? Just bite it, and if it's anything like the dinner I had it'll taste even worse than it looks."—Ex.

WILLIAM L. SAUNDERS' BRIEF FOR CONSOLIDATION

Former Mayor and Other North Plainfielders Present Arguments at the Board of Trade Meeting.

CONVERTS ALSO K

Not a Matter For Practical Politicians But For the People—

How Borough Is Suffering—"Home Rule."

Consolidation of the city and borough received a vigorous boom at the Board of Trade meeting March 7. A splendid address on the subject by former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, opened the way for a discussion that brought remarks from representative men of the two municipalities, and led to a resolution being passed that will bring the matter to the attention of the proper authorities. There was not a dissenting address at any time during the evening, and the speakers included Captain William C. Smith and William G. Debele, two boroughites who did a great deal to defeat annexation, but who are now in favor of the two places being one.

At the beginning of his talk, Mr. Saunders quoted a remark made to him several years ago by Dr. H. K. Carroll. "Every broad minded man ought to see these two places made one. I don't expect to in my time, because we cannot get the politicians with us."

"But now I think the politicians are with us," continued the speaker, "and I think the people realize more than they ever did before that North Plainfield and Plainfield should be united. Under Assembly bill No. 155, still in existence, it is possible for us to consolidate, and the question of changing county lines, over which the politicians get so greatly disturbed, could be taken care of later. It is not an unusual thing, however, to have a city in different counties, New York being an instance."

This subject with us is unique and without a parallel, because we are located on Green brook and in growing are following the line of Front street and the Central Railroad of New Jersey. This makes Plainfield and North Plainfield three times as long as they are broad, with the latter simply representing the overflow from the former. There is a barrier in the mountains to the borough's growth northward, naturally it must grow side by side with the city and always will, thus practically being a part of it. We are not like Dunellen or the Oranges—a case of outlying districts. We tried to build stores in North Plainfield, but they did not prosper as we hoped and though both communities are better off than they were five years ago, we are still helping Plainfield.

"One of the strongest arguments for consolidation that I ever heard was put to me recently by a borough merchant. He said, 'My father was always opposed to a circus coming to town, when I was a boy, and I never could understand why. When I grew older he told me his prejudice was due to the fact that they came into a town and took a lot of money away from somebody but themselves. A study of the situation has convinced me that there is a circus in the borough every day and that money is being taken out of it to contribute to stores, but we are not getting a thing for it.'

"I have no doubt that if we held an election now, Plainfield would vote to take us in. We are one in church, hospital, Sunday school and social affairs. The difficulty in the borough is purely sentiment and the belief that something is behind the movement; peculiar sentiment existing in the sections that would be most benefited by the change.

Let us take, for example, the growth of the city and borough in the past five years. Plainfield in 1900 had a property valuation of $8,329,500; in 1905 its valuation was $10,192,000, an increase of twenty-two per cent. The borough in 1900 had a valuation of $2,302,225, and in 1905 $2,655,700, a gain of twelve per cent. In the five years the city gained about two to one over the borough. As to population, Plainfield has 15,377 to 1900 and 18,478 in 1905, a twenty per cent. increase. The borough in 1900 had 5,009 inhabitants, and in 1905 it had 5,616, a gain of twelve per cent. It is percentage that counts, and in this instance again the city beat the borough almost two to one.

"This must mean something to us in the borough. Some may think we ought to change the county line first, but this will be a natural result after consolidation, and it will come without any animosity that some have feared. It is none of Somerville's business about us; this is a question of 'home rule.' The county line is only a convenient division for the separation of the official business of the two counties.

"Consolidation means a representation of people which cannot now be understood by the industries that want to come here. Plainfield would gain in this matter alone, as it would be listed with 25,000 population, whereas it is spoken of as having but 18,000. With consolidation, the two places could join in municipal improvements and in many ways benefit by each other's help.

"In concluding, I wish to make one remark concerning the appellation 'The Father of Consolidation.' There is no 'Father of Consolidation.' It was a spontaneous movement among the people, but if there is any credit to be placed it belongs to this Board of Trade. Eight years ago the question was taken up and discussed at a meeting at the conclusion of which a committee was appointed to bring the matter before the mayors and Common Councils. A resolution was passed that consolidation was desired and that a bill be drawn up and passed by the Legislature permitting the people to vote on both consolidation and annexation."

When Mr. Saunders concluded he was enthusiastically applauded and his address furnished suggestions to others as a basis for remarks. Among those who spoke was James E. Martine, who said:

"It is the merest farce to maintain two sets of government so near together. I believe the people are honestly in favor of consolidation. I believe it would advance the interests of both city and borough to put the propositions in its right before the community. Back in 1873 I was a member of Common Council and introduced a resolution to unite the interests of city and township. We then asked a more intimate relation between the two, North Plainfield. We asked to have the street numbering the same in both the city and borough because we then realized that the interests were identical. I believe that consolidation will soon be accomplished. I want to see the combination of city and borough and the municipal ownership of sewers, water and gas."

Speaking directly to Joseph O. Osgood, who had spoken earlier in the evening on the borough sewage question, Mr. Martine said: "Let the sides by side with the city and always will, thus practically being a part of it. We are not like Dunellen or the Oranges—a case of outlying districts. We tried to build stores in North Plainfield, but they did not prosper as we hoped and though both communities are better off than they were five years ago, we are still helping Plainfield.

Speaking directly to Joseph O. Osgood, who had spoken earlier in the evening on the borough sewage question, Mr. Martine said: "Let the probable cost would be to install a pumping station to discharge borough sewage in the Plainfield mains. Mr. Osgood replied that the had no exact figures, but that the expense would be small, perhaps $50,000, the lift being very slight.

William G. Debele, a former opponent of consolidation, said: "I'll admit that I was one of the kickers, but today I feel differently on the the question, and I believe there are others in the borough who have changed as I have. I think that if consolidation was brought before the people now it would be carried, also annexation."

An excellent suggestion was made by Andrew E. Kenney, who, when called on, said: "The time is ripe to begin the agitation again, but it ought to be done on a different plan than it was before. Eliminate the idea of annexation, and let those who were in favor of it before step back now and give a new element a chance. Let Captain Smith, William Debele, Lewis Barkalew and others head the movement, these men having opposed it before, and realize that it would be best after all."

Other remarks were made by Mr. Barkalew, Captain Smith, Charles A. Reed and W. R. Codington. At the end of the meeting the following resolution was offered by Mr. Saunders and carried: "Resolved, That it be the sense of this meeting that the two places be consolidated and that it be suggested to the governing bodies that the question be brought before the people."

FIRST STEP FOR SEWERS

North Plainfield Authorities Agree to Ask City to Help the Borough Out.

TO USE OUR PLANT

Committee Appointed to Go Over the Ground—Health Board and Council in Conference.

In a joint session between the borough Common Council and the Board of Health, Thursday, the question of a sewer system for North Plainfield was threshed out in a more vigorous manner than at any time in several years. It resulted in what might be construed as the first step toward actual work and is to be the predecessor of other conferences.

The most noticeable thing about the meeting was the fact that the Board of Health members wanted the Council to take the initiative in forcing an issue while the latter body was not disposed to go it entirely alone. The men who were present were Mayor Smalley, Messrs. McGee, Smith, Kreyson, Topliffe, Van Arsdale and VanWinkle representing the Council and President Osgood, Secretary Dundon, Thomas Boud and Andrew E. Kenney for the Board of Health. While each member took some part in the discussion and there was more or less cross-firing, the only definite action was the appointment of a committee consisting of Messrs. Van Arsdale, VanWinkle and Smith to confer with a competent engineer as to what course to pursue in preparing plans to present the people. They will report at another meeting to be held next Thursday night.

At the beginning of the conference and before the two bodies settled down to actual business, Frank Rowley, borough clerk, showed some maps and plans for a system that had been prepared by George Pearson, engineer for the Municipal Construction, in 1902. They gave an idea of what was needed and aided in the discussion that followed. Mr. Rowley inquired if the borough could use the Plainfield beds if a system was built and was informed by the mayor that it was both possible and probable, this plan being kept in mind by all participating.

Andrew E. Kenney suggested that any action the Council should take should be immediate and let discussion come afterward. He asked for an expression of opinion and was answered by several of the Council, who declared the borough needed a sewer system and the quicker it was secured, of course, the better, but before any steps were taken, the question of disposal, the cost, etc., should be carefully gone into. In answer to a question from Councilman Smith as to whether or not the vote of the people was needed before anything was done, Clerk Rowley explained that a petition must first be circulated to gain the consent of the property owners.

Addressing the gathering direct, Mayor Smalley said it had been the sense of the Council for a long time that sewers were needed and should be installed, but that it was only recently that the Board of Health had recognized the fact officially. He asserted that while the borough fathers favored some plan that had been proceeding cautiously lest they might get something they didn't want and regret it afterward, for that reason, if nothing else, he advocated proceeding cautiously. In reply, Mr. Osgood insisted that action should be immediate and that conditions on Somerset street were such that they demanded a change from the present antiquated method of disposal.

"Employ some competent man, said he, "to go over the ground and report to the Council just what is needed and the best way to get it. The only way to begin the establishment of a sewer system is to begin it."

Thomas Doud, of the Health Board, suggested the appointment of a committee to consult with the Plainfield authorities as to whether or not they could connect with the city beds as he believed that to be the best solution. He had been informed, he said, that the plant could take care of both Plainfield and North Plainfield with a twenty-five per cent. increase and that the operation in this way would be cheaper to both.

Here Mr. Kenney asked bluntly if there was any objection on the part of the Council to a decision that "we are going to have sewers."

"Well," said Mayor Smalley, "supposing it does, a vote of the Board and the Council."

Mr. Kenney backed down, however, and none of the other board members seemed to be willing that it should be put on record in this way.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dodge, of the Stillman building, will move to Bayonne on April 1.

HE WROTE OLD "NASSAU"

Karl a Longlotz Tells the Origin of Princeton's Famous Song.

WROTE MUSIC QUICKLY

In a foreword Wilford S. Conrow, Princeton, '01, the compiler of the volume, says: "Already fifty classes of the Princetonians have sung 'Old Nassau,' and for years this song has been held by them in a spirit of semi-sacred reverence as a cherished inheritance from former days. That it has had a large share in the development of the charm of the atmosphere and the admired spirit of Princeton is unquestioned." The idea of the book came to Mr. Conrow as the result of a call at the Trenton home of Karl A. Langlotz (the composer of the music for the song. The interest then aroused in the genesis of "Old Nassau" and in the lives of the men who gave it to Princeton resulted in a resolve "to put the facts regarding these subjects in a form dignified as befitting 'Old Nassau,' and permanent, that their record may be preserved in our Princeton world."

Mr. Peck, who wrote "Old Nassau" in February, 1859, in competition for a prize offered by the Nassau Literary Magazine. It was published as the prize song in the Lit of the following month. Mr. Langlotz at the time he wrote the music for "Old Nassau" was a teacher of German in the college. He says in his sketch: "During the winter and spring of the year 1859 some of the seniors and tutors used to meet with me in a little old house on William street, just east of the college grounds, where we would smoke and sing college songs over our glass of beer. When 'Old Nassau' was written we tried to sing it to the air of 'Auld Lang Syne,' but found this utterly unsuitable. Mr. W. C. Stitt, one of the company (probably then a tutor in the college, as he received his degree of M. A. the following commencement), suggested that I should write original music to the words. I agreed, thinking the proposal and my agreement would vanish like the smoke from our pipes. I took the words, however, promising to compose the music before I went home. I thought no more about it. But my memory was strengthened from day to day by Stitt, who requested it for 'tomorrow.' That day was long dawning. At last his determination brought me up to the mark. I was living in a house opposite the large entrance leading into the park of the late Judge Field, now owned by Professor Allan Marquand. There I was sitting on my front porch, smoking my peaceful pipe, when the energetic Stitt arrived on the scene, and asked me in an offhand way if I had anything particular to do that afternoon. I answered 'No.' Immediately he produced pencil and music paper, and wrote down the 'tomorrow' so long promised. Here is "Old Nassau." Now do as you promised, and put the music to it.' I did write the music then and there, with Stitt standing guard over me. When it was at last finished I handed it to him, thinking I would never hear of it again. * * * I have no recollection of hearing my music to 'Old Nassau' until long afterward."

NEWSPAPERS ARE A POWER IN SALOON FIGHT.

Oklahoma Press Can Defeat Licenses By Refusing to Print Notices.

Judge Irwin's recent decision at Guthrie, Okla., to the effect that no newspaper could be compelled to publish a notice of application for saloon license, and that the publisher having the largest circulation could prevent the granting of licenses by refusing to publish such notices has been taken up by the temperance societies over the territory, with noticeable results.

The most positive stand on the matter has been taken by the publisher of the Hennessey Clipper, who not only refuses to publish saloon licenses, but also refuses to declare to the county commissioners the circulation of his paper. As the law requires the publication to be in the two papers having the largest circulation in the county, his refusal put the county commissioners in a dilemma, as for all they know his paper might be one of the two having the largest circulation. For refusing to obey the direction of the probate court to have his circulation filed, Editor Miller has been declared in contempt of court until the district court can settle the matter finally.

The members of the W. C. T. U. in Custer county have started a campaign to get the Waterford Democrat and the Custer County News, the two papers of largest circulation, to refrain from publishing license notices. The result of the campaign is still in doubt, with the chances against the W. C. T. U.

Many of the newspaper men of Oklahoma, even those who are personally opposed to the liquor traffic, continue to publish liquor notices. Ex-Governor T. B. Ferguson, who declared himself strongly for prohibition in a recent letter to Rev. J. J. Thompson, had four liquor notices in a recent issue of his paper.—American Press.

DIAMOND DUST.

The Hobokens will play their first game on April 1 with the Longhlins, of Brooklyn, on Loughlin Oval, that city.

The O. N. T.'s, of Newark, will again be in the field this season, with the veteran Sam Lunn at the helm. He makes the twenty-third season for the team.

Harry Mathewson, brother of the famous Christy, will now occupy the limelight for some time to come. The cranks are anxious to see what he can do in a game.

Manager Daab will give Hogan, an outfielder of New York State League experience, a try for the outfield. Hogan is said to be a fast fielder and handy with the stick.

Charlie Handford, the hard hitting left fielder of the Trenton Y. M. C. A. team for several years, has signed to play with the Jersey Citys this season. Manager Murray secured his signature to a contract Monday of this week.

Doubt exists regarding the Hudson River League. For several seasons the game has been a losing proposition. The Paterson Club, of that league, will undoubtedly play independent ball. The Patersons will make a welcome addition to the independent ranks.

Manager Jack Dunn, of the Providence Eastern League champions, will give young Brogan a chance to work himself out in the practice season, and if he is fast enough he will probably sign him as utility player. Kid Brogan was brought out last season by Manager Daab. He covered second by while Dalton was laid up with his spiked foot.

Jack O'Neil, the popular catcher of the Plainfield nine, has received several calls during the past winter from Eastern League magnates, but Jack will stick to his municipal job and semi-professional baseball. He generally manages to get some Eastern League experience every season by filling in for various clubs whose catchers become disabled.

Lou Wiltse may wear a Cincinnati uniform this season. Wiltse wants to play in the big league, and ever since he was transferred from Brooklyn to Baltimore the lanky twirler has been dissatisfied. As Ned Hanlon stock is both in Brooklyn and Baltimore clubs, Wiltse is hopeful that some deal can be made whereby Hanlon will take him to Porkopolis.

Mike Leonard, the veteran third baseman, and without doubt the fastest third cushion artist in the world, is managing a team that he hasn't aged any during the winter months, and will not need to hunt up a fountain of youth to get himself into shape. Mike has been playing with first class clubs for about fifteen years, and, like wine, he seems to improve with age, instead of deteriorating.

One of the strongest teams in the State this season will be the Somerville nine. The ball was started rolling last season and the club was about the only organization in New Jersey that quit business on the right side of the ledger. The association made about $300 and will be represented by a stronger aggregation this season. If plans at Plainfield go through a series will be arranged between the two towns.

Jack Burke, of Jersey City, and formerly of Westfield, who was a good catcher, will play ball with the best semi-professional teams a few years ago, will, it is said, organize a team to travel on Saturdays and Sundays. Burke incapacitated himself while playing in Westfield three years ago where his right hand was broken by a foul tip, and although this injury he maimed his throwing arm, from which he never fully recovered.

One of the rumors that have cropped out this season which local cranks will be interested to hear, is that the versatile short stop of the Plainfield team, Peter Kiernan, intends to take another plunge into the matrimonial sea. As Peter has been staying indoors most all winter, this report cannot be verified, but personal friends of the short stop declare with much confidence that he will be a bride to the altar before cherry picking time.

Pete Lamar, Esq., of Dumont, Bergen county, who married and settled down last fall, is laying lines to become a gentleman farmer. It is said that he has been consulting the farming experts of his section as to the advisability of trying to raise peanuts on his two-acre plot at Dumont. He has been assured that peanuts can be raised just as successfully in this State as in Virginia if the proper care is accorded the vines. In view of this advice, Mr. Lamar says he will make the try.

Smith Getting His Arm Right.

Phil Smith, the High School pitcher, has begun to work out his arm in earnest in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. His catcher, Douglas, is working with him. He has had a little outdoor practice.

William B. Reed, of Whitehouse, who underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. D. De Lenardo, of Liberty street, are the parents of a daughter who came to their home a few days ago. Mrs. De Lenardo was formerly Miss Paoli, of North Avenue.

CHILDREN'S GUARDIAN WORK IS REPORTED

H. F. FOX SAYS MORE THAN HALF ITS CHARGES COME FROM HUDSON COUNTY

Of the 218 children committed to the care of the State Board of Children's Guardians, during the past year, more than half came from Hudson county, according to the report submitted to the Governor by President Hugh F. Fox, of this city. He believes that the small increase in the amount annually appropriated will meet present administrative needs, but does not allow for extra service in behalf of children who are the victims of cruelty.

Many improvements have been made by the boards of freeholders throughout the State for the care of dependent children, the report states, and tabulated figures are given showing how the little ones have been accommodated up to November last. Of 119 children placed in families to board, twenty-three were sent back to relatives able to care for them. There were only four deaths in almshouses, seven deaths in families and but three children succumbed in hospitals. Fifty-eight applications were made from Catholic families, and 128 from Protestant families for children under the board's care.

The 218 children committed throughout the State, the majority were of Irish birth, Americans and Germans following. The greater number of commitments embraced children between five and ten years of age. Six foundlings were committed from Trenton.

Dr. Edward Cowl, in charge of the medical and surgical work for the children, paid 328 visits to sufferers and vaccinated thirty-seven. Only three cases of diphtheria, two of scarlatina and one of spinal meningitis occurred during the year.

The report, of Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, the treasurer, shows that $2,233.81 was expended last year for traveling expenses, while for stationery, telegrams and other incidentals $1,896.91 was paid out. The salary list called for $3,381.72 and the total of expenditures for the year reaches $9,192.18. The State has contributed $9,000 toward meeting this outlay.

TOMMY ATKINS.

The Highland Light Infantry, the only unkilted Scottish regiment in the British army, were specially granted the privilege of wearing trews as a reward for their great valor during the Peninsular war.

The Imperial Yeomanry, who may be looked upon as the cavalry of the volunteer force, do not wear swords, as do the cavalry of the regular army but are armed with rifle and bayonet and receive the same training as the mounted infantry of the regulars.

The King's Royal Rifle Corps (the old Sixtieth), one of the most famous regiments in the British army, was once known as "The Royal Americans," having been recruited almost entirely in New York and Philadelphia. The present Second Battalion is also of American origin, having been raised in North America in 1758.

Cuirasses are only worn nowadays in the cavalry regiments of the Household Brigade. But they have not always been worn by them, for during the time of William III. they were discarded, and were not used again until after the battle of Waterloo. Their reintroduction into the Household Brigade cavalry regiments is due to George IV.

Perhaps the most curious name given to any of the regimental quicksteps is that of the "Kynegad Slashers," the march-past of the First Battalion Gloucestershire Regiment. This singular name has no connection with Kennegad, in Ireland, as is usually believed, but is reminiscent of much desperate fighting in the American War of Independence.

The old Thirty-third, the Duke of Wellington's West Riding Regiment, are nicknamed the Havercake lads, because it was once the custom with its recruiting sergeants to carry oatcakes aloft on the points of their swords. This was in 1814, and in a work published by G. Walker there is a plate illustrative of this peculiar custom. Up to 1853 the corps was known as the First Yorkshire West Riding.—London Tit-Bits.

The Truth of It.

Miss Bluff—O! Jack Jones, he proposed to me once.

Miss Sharpe—That so? Why, I was talking to your old friend, Tom Browne, about you yesterday and he—

Miss Bluff—O! he proposed, too, did he tell you?

Miss Sharpe—Not exactly. He said he was proposed to, too.—Ex.

Hurray for Bill!

Wm. K. Case is the last carpenter left here, and he is not rushed. You had better go to Plainfield, too, Will, though we don't want to lose you.—Cherryville correspondent Clinton Democrat.

NOT IN THE C. E. UNION

Crescent Avenue Church Society's Application For Membership Refused.

CHANGED ITS NAME

Hitch Over Pledge—Action Taken Regretfully — Vote Unanimous.

By an unanimous vote of the members, the application of the Young People's Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church for membership in the local union, Christian Endeavor, was refused at a meeting of the Congress held in the Seventh Day Baptist church, Thursday. This matter has been under consideration by the Endeavorers for some time. It was brought up at every meeting of the Congress only to be laid on the table for future action. Last night's meeting was held chiefly to settle the question.

The Crescent Avenue church had a Christian Endeavor Society and disbanded it to form a Young People's Society, the Endeavor pledge being objectionable to many of the young people. Then application was made to join the Endeavor union, it being the opinion that some things could be accomplished if all were united in this work.

The principal objection to receiving the Crescent Avenue church society into membership was the fact it does not have a pledge, or similar vow, that the Endeavorers do. According to the constitution of the Endeavor Society it would be a violation of one of the most important articles to accept a society of this kind and a majority of the Endeavorers voted to sustain the constitution, at the same time regretting that they were forced to take that action. The secretary was instructed to communicate the fact to the Crescent Avenue church society.

The question was thoroughly discussed from every point of view and it is generally conceded that there was but one course to pursue. It is possible, however, that the matter may be brought up again later on, provided the Presbyterian society decides to conform to the Endeavorer's constitution.

Arrangements were made by the Congress for the mass meeting to be held in Trinity Reformed church on Thursday night, March 15. This will be in charge of the missionary committee of the Congress, of which A. H. Vanderbilt is chairman. It was announced that Rev. H. J. Scudder, a returned missionary from India, had been secured to give an illustrated lecture on mission work in India. There will be other interesting features.

In the absence of Fred Lounsbury, Jr., president of the Congress, who is ill, the chair was occupied last night by Clarence LaRue. There was a gratifying attendance of Endeavorers from the various societies in the city.

GETS ANOTHER TRACT.

Highland Park Company Now Owns 700 Lots Near Netherwood Station.

Elston M. French has bought the tract of land on the southerly side of George street, above Leland avenue and extending to Raymond avenue, and has sold it to the Highland Park Realty Company, whose main tract of building lots is immediately adjoining. The realty company now owns 700 lots near the Netherwood station, and great real estate activity has commenced in this section.

Many New York people as well as residents of Plainfield and vicinity are buying lots at Highland Park, and over twenty houses have been contracted for to be built this spring. Of this number about fifteen will be erected by recent purchasers of lots, while the company itself will build five or more up to date dwellings.

Engines Destroy Sleep.

Residents of Dunellen near the Central Railroad roundhouse are complaining of the racket made by locomotives held on sidings with steam up in the small hours of the night. They say the engines blow off steam for long periods at a time, for no discoverable reason, making a racket that prevents sleep. One of the locomotives, it is said, hissed and rumbled for several hours steadily one night this week, and none of the people in the vicinity within two blocks of the roundhouse got sleep enough to make a cat's nap. The borough Council will be asked to bring the matter to the attention of the railroad.

Delegates to Nashville.

Miss Elsie Horne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horne, of Willow avenue, who is a student at the Teachers College, New York, was sent by that institution as a delegate to the seventh conference of the Women's Board of Foreign Missions in the United States and Canada just closed at Nashville, Tenn. James R. Joy, of Myrtle avenue, editor of the Christian Advocate, was another delegate.

BASEBALL CLUB ENTHUSIASTICALLY LAUNCHED

Mayor Smalley Heads Fans Who Effect Temporary Organization and Arrange for Stock.

MR. McCARDELL HELPS

Committee Appointed to Secure Financial Assistance — Manager Daab on Hand—Judge Runyon Wanted.

The Plainfield Baseball Association was launched Saturday night at the Hotel Iroquois by a large number of enthusiastic supporters of the game, and there is every indication that Manager Daab and his fast aggregation of players will again represent the city on the diamond this season. While a short time a little less than $300 was subscribed for shares of stock, Mayor Newton B. Smalley, chairman of the meeting, starting the list with a subscription of $100. Every one present took one or more shares at $5 each, and it was the general opinion that success would attend the efforts to secure 400 subscribers.

Officers were elected and a committee of twenty appointed to solicit subscribers for shares of stock. This committee, as well as the officers, will go to work at once, it being necessary to ascertain by Thursday whether a sufficient number of shares will be taken to insure the return of Mr. Daab and his team.

These officers were elected temporarily: President, Newton B. Smalley; vice president, Andrew McCardell; treasurer, Charles W. Runyon; secretary, Robert Gow. Mayor Smalley took the presidency temporarily with the idea that City Judge William N. Runyon be chosen as permanent officer. Judge Runyon was unable to be present but it was believed by all that he would accept the position.

Manager Daab addressed the meeting, reviewing last year's experience here in baseball. He explained how he was induced to bring his team here by Lines Groo and enumerated the various items of expense. He also told how the franchise was purchased from the Alls Club. He then showed how certain expenses could be cut out if an association was formed and properly conducted. Last year Mr. Daab was under a weekly expense for ticket sellers, ticket takers, police, and for the care of the grounds, and in an association he would be able to cut out at least $1,000 expense by taking direct charge of affairs here.

His plan appealed to those present as being reasonable and fair, and it was finally voted to accept this proposition, which was made by Mayor Smalley. The association is to have half interest in the game and Mr. Daab is to retain a half interest, manage the team and arrange the schedule of games, while the association will look after the local end of affairs such as caring for the grounds, police, the sale and taking of tickets, etc. The association proposes to raise money by subscriptions to shares of stock, it being desired to sell at least 400 shares. This will establish a fund and make it possible for the association to conduct the game along right lines. Any profits or losses will be shared alike by the association and Mr. Daab. There was a free and full discussion of plans and everybody was enthusiastic about having a good article of ball in Plainfield this year.

Mayor Smalley complimented Mr. Daab for last season's success in giving the town the best baseball in its history and said that the fans realize that with him at the head there would be a continuance of it.

Mr. Daab expressed himself as being in hearty accord with the plans proposed and said he was well pleased with the outlook. It is necessary for him to know by Thursday the decision of the association so that he can arrange his schedule of games and sign his players for the season. With this end in view the committee of twenty will hustle between now and Thursday to get the necessary number of subscribers to convince Mr. Daab the assurance he desires. This committee will meet tonight at the offices to decide on its plan of action.

The committee comprises the following persons: Charles A. Sturtevant, chairman; W. H. De Mary, William R. Townsend, F. S. Cutter, George Hallock, George Voehl, Roy Phillips, F. S. Shuster, Robert V. Hoffman, James R. Blair, Fred Huff, Walter C. Dobbins, William Addis, B. A. Mumford, John Cose, William L. Smalley, Jr., Charles H. Dunham, Phil. Smith, Carroll Runyon and L. Bunn. From this committee William Addis, B. A. Mumford and George Voehl were appointed to see the business merchants. This action was taken so as other members of the committee will not conflict. Each member will have a list to which all interested will be asked to subscribe and it is hoped that there will be a liberal response.

There was also some talk of partially enclosing the grounds with a fence and this matter will be discussed a little later. Among those present Saturday night were several who volunteered their services to help at the games, thus making it possible to cut down the expenses. Mr. Daab stated that with the exception of Cregan and Cosgrave he would have the same team as last year.

As a business proposition baseball was decided to be a good thing for the city, being an excellent means of advertising and the prospects of putting the game on a business basis with an association behind it was considered the only thing to do. An adjournment was taken to Saturday night, when the association will meet at the Hotel Iroquois. At that time it is hoped that everything will be in shape so that when the time for opening the season comes all details will be attended to.

NEARLY GOT AWAY WITH BUNDLE OF SILVERWARE

NERVY DAYLIGHT CROOK FRIGHTENED AWAY FROM G. W. REIGHTON'S HOUSE.

A thief with nerve enough to carry two Jimmy Hopes through seven or eight Manhattan Bank jobs wasted some time in G. W. Reighton's house, 145 West Second street, Saturday morning. With two of the three families living in the house at home, the bold crook gathered $150 worth of silverware and jewelry together in an upper room and came within an ace of getting away with the goods. He was frightened off just as he was on the point of carrying the stuff away. As it was, he made his escape without allowing anybody to see him or leaving any clues.

The crook entered the house, apparently by the street door, which is rarely locked fast, between 9 and 9:30 o'clock. Somewhere about the latter hour Miss Bessie Reighton went upstairs to do some housework in her father's bedroom she found the drawers and closet open, with the things scattered about. She hurried to the next room, where more evidences of a thieving visit were in view. Going into the hall to give an alarm, she stumbled over a bundle of silver and jewelry, belonging to Mrs. Burkins, who lives on the second floor. The swag was wrapped in a sheet, and the thief had evidently dropped them as he ran downstairs. She heard a noise as of somebody walking on the floor above when she entered her father's room, which is supposed to have been the sounds of the crook's retreat. How he got out of the house and out a window is not plain.

The swag in the bundle was worth at least $150. The case was reported to the police.

PRAISE FOR LOCAL SALOON GOVERNMENT

RECTOR OF HOLY CROSS CHURCH ON BISHOPS' BILL.

Before his morning sermon Sunday Rev. George A. Warner spoke in favor of the "Bishops' bill" from the chancel. The measure, he said, did away with the most objectionable features of the liquor traffic. Mr. Warner read Bishop Scarborough's letter, in which the salient arguments for the bill are noted.

In the course of this talk Mr. Warner paid a tribute to Plainfield's government of the saloon business. With high license on both sides of the brook and a restricted district in the city, the community was one of the best governed, so far as the saloon business went, of any in the State.

Mr. Warner urged his men to work for the passage of the bill, and to write Senator Frelinghuysen, asking for his support. It was not enough for Plainfielders, he said, that their own town was well governed. They had a duty to the State, and as good citizens they were required to help make conditions better in places less favored than Plainfield. That was their duty as good Christians, because a man could not be a good Christian unless he was a good citizen.

Author of "Texas" Wrote It.

Jane Mauldin Feigl, the author of "The Girl Patsy," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday night, wrote "Texas," the play in which Sidney Ayers starred for two seasons and which had a long run at the Fourteenth Street theatre, New York. She is one of New York's best known literary women and is credited with having a sense of humor seldom possessed by one of her sex. "The Girl Patsy" gives evidence of this fact in every act and it is one of the most delightful plays that has come from her pen.

Junior C. E. Entertainment.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church is preparing to give an entertainment in the lecture room of the church Friday evening.

FIELD IS NOW RIPE FOR GLORIOUS HARVEST.

Rev. Dr. C. L. Rhoades Brings Good Tiding From Foreign Fields.

Rev. Dr. C. L. Rhoades, secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, occupied the pulpit of the Park Avenue Baptist church, yesterday morning, speaking in the interest of the work in foreign lands. Dr. Rhoades is a speaker of exceptional ability and his knowledge of the foreign fields and work being accomplished there is of great value to the denomination.

Dr. Rhoades spoke especially yesterday of the opening up of the educational work, of the desire of the natives in China, Japan and Africa for the schools and teachers, and he then told something of what has already been accomplished in these countries by Christian missionaries. In each instance Dr. Rhoades said there was a hunger and real desire to learn more about the Christian religion and added that the field is now ripe for a glorious harvest. At the close of the sermon the annual offering for foreign missions was received.

AMOS MOFFETT, OLDEST CONSTABLE, IS DEAD

Succumbed Last Night After a Week's Illness With Complicated Diseases.

OFFICER FOR 41 YEARS

Terror to Plainfield Evil-Doers in His Younger Days—Court Constable For 34 Years at Elizabeth.

In the house at 434 West Sixth street, where he had lived for fifty years, Amos Moffett, the oldest expoliceman of this city and the dean of the constables of Union county, died Monday night, 86 years of age. Death followed a week's illness with a complication of diseases, the most acute of which was what the doctors call old man's bronchitis.

For forty-one years Amos Moffett was a member of the constabulary. *He was a court constable at Eliza*beth from the day the county court, created for the then new county of Union, was opened, and attended every term from that time until two terms ago. He was made a regular policeman here thirty-five years ago, when the force consisted of three men.

Mr. Moffett was born in the northern part of Somerset county on August 26, 1820. In 1837 his brother, Simeon Moffett, was a blacksmith in Scotch Plains, and Amos came down to learn the trade under him. He worked with Simeon until about 1850, when he came to Plainfield to enter the employ of William Shangle, who had a blacksmithing shop on North avenue. Later he entered the employ of J. B. Brown, a wagon-maker, who lives now on Park avenue, doing the blacksmithing jobs of the business. He left Brown's employ to set up a forge of his own, locating on West Second street, where the Plymouth Brethren now worship. He gave that up to re-enter Shangle's employ. Not long after Shangle was killed in Newark, where he had gone to buy nails, and Mr. Moffett bought the business from the widow.

Mr. Moffett was a big man, and in his prime his strength was tremendous. Steady-going and hardworking himself, the town authorities saw in him just the man they wanted for police work. In 1865 he was induced to become a constable, and six years later to go on the regular police force as a patrolman, on night duty. He became a terror to the town roysterers, and the occasional disturbers of the peace learned to fear Constable Moffett as they feared sudden death.

He gave up his business when he was put on the police force and never returned to it. He gave up police work after a few years and devoted himself to service as constable. In 1862 he made his headquarters in Justice Nash's court, and his headquarters it remained until he left it for the last time a week ago. For twenty-four years he was to be found there every day, except when illness or duty in the county court kept him away.

Mr. Moffett was a familiar figure to practically everybody in the city, and none of the attaches of the county court was better known. He was liked by everybody who knew him, and no man was ever liked with better reason. He was simple, kindly and courteous, and no one ever suspected Amos Moffett of a crooked thought. He never learned the mod*ern art of knocking: he was far read*ier to speak a good word for his fellowman than to count up the specks on his soul.

Mr. Moffett's strength began to fail him a year ago. When the term of court opened he was not able to continue his work there, and he was still away when the fall duties of entering the last term. He went to Elizabeth early in the year, however, to be *sworn in, as he had done for two*score years. Last Tuesday he complained of illness in Justice Nash's office, and lay down on a couch in the back room. He grew worse hourly, and the justice urged him to go home. The old man looked about the room and shook his head.

"I'm afraid I will never come back if I go," he said.

Justice Nash finally persuaded him to leave, and sent him home in a hack. Mr. Moffett lived with his daughter, Mrs. John G. Stryker, and he received every care and attention in the illness that ensued. He never left his bed after Tuesday night. He grew worse every day, despite everything that Drs. Boone and E. W. Hedges, in consultation, could do. His last feeble bit of life flickered out at 10:30 o'clock last night. He died, exactly as he had lived, peace*fully and unafraid.* Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, where the family worshiped, gave him religious consolation as he was passing to the dark realm, and the old constable was entirely resigned as he faced the call to the highest court of all.

The funeral will be held Friday afternoon. There will be a service at the house at 2:30 o'clock and at the Park Avenue Baptist church at 3 o'clock. The body will be interred in the Plainfield Avenue cemetery.

MRS. VAN EMBURGH DEAD

Active Worker is Trinity Reformed Church Succumbs to Bright's Disease.

AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

Wife of George L. Van Emburgh—Funeral Services Friday Afternoon—Interment at Newark.

Following a short illness, Mrs. Sabrina Van Emburgh, wife of George L. Van Emburgh, passed away at her home, 331 East Second street, at 6:30 Tuesday morning. She was taken ill on Sunday, February 18, with a severe attack of gastritis, to which she had been subjected. On the previous Friday she and her husband made a trip to Bloomfield by trolley to visit her brother and Mrs. Van Emburgh caught a heavy cold. Acute Bright's disease with gastritis was the direct cause of death. During her illness she was a great sufferer, yet she patiently bore it all, only praying for the end to come. About 5 o'clock this morning she went into a sound sleep and at 6:30 passed away.

Mrs. Van Emburgh's maiden name was Miss Saphronia Ryerson Colfax. She was born at Ringwood, near Greenwood Lake, Passaic county, and was next to the last of thirteen children, a brother, William R. Colfax, living at Bloomfield, now being the sole survivor.

In her early married life Mrs. Van Emburgh and her husband were active church workers and were among *those who labored so hard and suc*cessfully for the starting of Trinity church in Newark. She has been a resident of Plainfield twenty-seven years. Soon after moving here she and her husband joined with Trinity Reformed church, where they both have been active. Mr. Van Emburgh is the senior elder of the church.

Mrs. Van Emburgh possessed a sunny, happy disposition and made friends wherever she went. She was thoroughly devoted to her home, and it is there that she will be greatly missed. She is survived by a hus*band and two sons, F. M. Van Em*burgh, of Westervelt avenue, and H. C. Van Emburgh, of Richmond street. Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Van Emburgh celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 3:30 from the home, 331 East Second street, and the interment will be in the family plot in Mount Pleasant cemetery, Newark.

The Somerset County School Board Association will hold its regular spring meeting at the Somerville Court House on Saturday morning, March 17, at 11 o'clock. The meeting will be addressed by Dr. Maximilian P. Grosszmann, the distinguished educator who has a school for special pupils at Watchung Crest. *His subject will be "A Study of Pu*pils." J. Brognard Betts, assistant State superintendent, will speak on "Some Recent School Legislation," Senator J. S. Frelinghuysen is expected to attend the dinner and address the assemblage.

The public is invited to the meeting and to the dinner. The dinner will take place at Cawley's restaurant at 1 o'clock. Those wishing to attend the dinner should send notice to Judge Schenck at least one day before the meeting.

Express Assurance that Supt. Snyder Will Act Fairly.

The Roman Catholic rectors of Jersey City have sent to the Board of Education a letter expressing "confidence in the broad minded fairness and justice of Supt. Snyder," on whom the board has conferred power to supervise the admission to the City High School of graduates of the parochial schools.

The board took this action in consequence of a petition of the rectors that the admission should be without examination.

ARRESTED BY THE COURT

FISTIC JURISPRUDENCE

William Peepe Kicked Up a Row In Court and the Squire Yanked Him to Jail.

Another man with the notion that anything goes in the justices' courts was set right Monday afternoon. He was awakened from the delusion by Justice Hezekiah Hand, after he had kicked up a row in the squire's court in the First National Bank building, that scared the typewriters in all the law offices and made the men sit up and listen for a riot call.

Wrought up because the justice had held him in $100 bail for the Grand Jury, to answer to the charge of stealing a pig, the victim of the delusion, William Peepe, a middle-aged Hebrew, addressed a lot of bald statements to the court, and breathed contempt and defiance of all its rulings.

Peepe is a husky man, but the justice did not hesitate.

"This court has full and ample authority under the constitution of New Jersey," he said, "and I propose to see that it is respected. You are under arrest for contempt and for disorderly conduct."

Justice Hand is something of fine figure of a man himself, and he has been called "The Fighting Justice." He lived up to the name. Stepping down from the bench, he strode up to the indignant Peepe and gathered the slack of the defendant's neck in a brawny hand.

"You come with me," ordered the justice, and Peepe went. Not that he wanted to. He pulled back and tried to tear the justice's grip loose, but the grip was there to stay, and Peepe found that it was go along decently and in order or be dragged. The justice marched his prisoner downstairs and across the street to police headquarters, where he turned him over to Doorman McCue. Charged with disorderly conduct, Peepe was locked in cell number 2. The justice's hands were scratched a bit where Peepe tried to break the judicial grip, but the court was unwinded and in shape for another lesson in Jersey justice at call.

Peepe was arrested by Constable Manley yesterday morning, on complaint of Douglas Darby and Peter Robinson, the latter colored. Darby and Robinson raise pigs on shares in Fanwood, an dthey charge that Peepe stole one of their choicest porkers on Washington's Birthday. They claim that he has resisted every effort to induce a settlement since then, ignoring their offers and adding insult to injury.

Peepe had been taking something to fortify his nerve before his arraignment in court, and he started to sniff at the justice as soon as proceedings were terminated that nobody within sight had any authority to arrest him, and that an apology was due. After Lawyer F. J. Huff, for the State, had presented evidence sufficient to establish the charge, and the justice ordered him to appear before the Grand Jury, Peepe's outraged feelings flowed over. He raised a sinful fuss, making so much noise that the sound of the excitement reached every office in the building.

After Peepe had cooled off in the cell for two hours, Justice Hand decided that he had learned enough about the dangers and discomforts attendant on defiance of the courts, and sent an order of release to headquarters. Peepe was in a tractable mood when freed, and meekly consented to go under bonds. The bail was furnished by James B. Guttridge.

QUARTERS FOR TEAM AT HOTEL IROQUOIS.

Jerome Leary's Liberal Offer to Baseball Association.

As an evidence of his personal interest in a successful baseball season, Jerome Leary, proprietor of the Hotel Iroquois, has agreed to fit up a room at his hotel for the use of the Plainfield team during the summer, where they can go and don their uniforms prior to the game and then dress afterwards. The room will be provided with a shower bath and other conveniences for the comfort of the players.

The accommodations at Crescent Oval last year were not of the best, a great inconvenience being the lack of running water, while the dressing rooms were small and not well adapted for the purpose for which they were intended. Besides miscreants would break the locks and do other damage which necessitated constant repairing.

Jr. O. U. A. M. Fair.

Under the auspices of Franklin and Somerset Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., a fair will be held in Co. K Hall from Saturday, March 17 to March 24, inclusive. Music for dancing will be furnished throughout the week by Suhr's Imperial Orchestra, and other features will be popular song artists and shadow dances every night. Elaborate preparations are being made for the fair, which promises to exceed all previous events.

HOSPITAL GETS $4,000

Members of Board Makes Contribution Towards Isolation Ward Fund.

COMMITTEE ON PLANS

Necessary Fund Partly in Hand—Report to Be Made at the Next Meeting.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital at its March meeting *Monday instructed the build*ings and grounds committee to prepare at once complete plans for a building for the care and treatment of contagious diseases, to be known as the "Isolation ward." The matter has been under consideration for several months, as stated at the last Common Council meeting by Councilman George P. Mellick, who is a governor of the institution.

A member of the board has, on behalf of himself and wife, offered to contribute $4,000. The probable cost of a suitable building will be much more than that sum, but there is a sum in hand and others will be asked to make up the requisite amount when the total cost is ascertained.

An isolation ward has been in great demand, there being no place at present for the treatment of contagious diseases. The ward will not be used for the care of smallpox patients.

At present there are thirty-one patients at the hospital and the work for the past month has been unusually active.

HOSPITAL LIGHT PLANT

Committee Appointed by the Governors to Secure Estimates for Improvement.

BILLS ARE TOO HEAVY

Private Water Hydrant Also for the Institution—Action at the Next Regular Meeting.

The feasibility of installing an independent electric light plant at Muhlenberg Hospital and thus reducing the expenses of a very important item at that institution was one of the chief topics discussed at the monthly meeting of the Board of Governors Monday. A committee was instructed to secure estimates for this improvement and it is more than likely that it will be authorized at the next meeting of the board.

Considerable electric light is needed at the hospital and the bills reach enormous proportions every month. This has been especially true since the new hospital has been in use, and for some time the board has been considering a change. It is believed that with an independent plant a great saving would result.

Another very important improvement discussed last night and one which will undoubtedly be made is that of installing a private water hydrant back of the hospital.

The hydrant will be connected with the mains of the Plainfield Water Supply Company on Randolph road by a six-inch service pipe. The plan is to install in the hospital three-inch standpipes at the entrance to each ward and a standpipe in the main building, with an outlet on each floor. This will give the hospital ample fire protection, the lack of which has heretofore given those in charge much anxiety in behalf of the great number of occupants, made up for the most part of helpless invalids and their nurses.

The committee on buildings and grounds was instructed to report to the Board of Governors proposed plans for the erection of an isolation ward for the care and treatment of contagious diseases. Several very substantial gifts for this improvement have been received and there is no doubt but what the ward will be built within a short time. The board acknowledged the receipt of communications from the Board of Health and the Common Council relative to this matter and the secretary was instructed to notify both bodies as to the action taken.

PRINTERS CELEBRATE THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

Typographical Union Has a Dinner at Hotel Kensington.

Celebrating the advent of the eight-hour day, the members of Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 295, enjoyed a spread at the Hotel Kensington Saturday night. Covers were laid for seventeen. G. Emerson Mowen, president of the union, was in the chair, and after the feast of good things he introduced the various speakers.

William Trenchard brought up the question of forming a pressmen's union in this city, and after an informal discussion it was decided to lay the matter over for the present. It is possible that the local pressmen may join the organization in Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AROUSED TO DANGER OF TUBERCULOSIS

Secretary of National Movement For Prevention, and Others Address Big Meeting.

STARTLING STATEMENTS

Terrible Record of the Disease Forcefully Presented, and Need of a General Crusade Made Plain.

Leaders in the great fight that is being waged against consumption and tubercular diseases sounded a strong call to the Plainfield public last night. The seriousness of the danger that confronts the people of every community, the need of general co-operation in meeting it, and the certainty of victory if the proper measures are taken to combat it, were graphically presented at a public meeting held in the auditorium of the new high school, Arlington avenue and Ninth street, under the auspices of the Plainfield Clinical Society.

The meeting was planned for laymen. It was designed to bring the Plainfield public actively into the campaign against the great white plague that is just being started throughout New Jersey, and the central idea was to draw members into the state society that has been organized to carry on the fight. Arranged by a general committee on which well known laymen served, the meeting drew an audience that almost filled the auditorium. Very nearly 500 people were present, and their interest in the subject, their desire to know more of, and do more to prevent, the blighting disease was evidenced by the unwavering attention given to the speakers.

Dr. B. vanD. Hedges, chairman of the original committee of three in which the Clinical Society placed the arrangements for the meeting, presided. Besides the five speakers, there were Charles A. Fisk, of the Board of Health; Rev. Father Bogan, of St. Mary's R. C. church; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel; Drs. F. C. Ard, T. S. Davis and N. H. Probasco on the platform.

Dr. Hedges presented the situation to the audience very forcefully, in opening the meeting.

"You will perhaps realize strongly how grave is the danger," he said in part, "when I tell you that of the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield 3,500 are destined, according to past statistics, to die of consumption. It may strike you more poignantly to realize that of the people before me, seventy-five will die of consumption in one form or another. I want to urge everybody in Plainfield and North Plainfield to join in the fight against the disease. It is preventable, and it should be prevented, but we need the help of everybody in overcoming it."

Dr. Livingston Farrand, executive secretary of the National Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, the first speaker, spoke on the general campaign against the disease.

Dr. Farrand called attention first to the seriousness of the general situation with regard to tuberculosis and particularly that form known as consumption. He stated that a conservative estimate was over a million deaths a year from this disease in the civilized world and over one hundred and fifty thousand deaths in the United States.

"The demand for organized effort to fight tuberculosis," he said, "is due to the admitted preventability of the disease. It is now certain that tuberculosis is infectious, that it is preventable, that it is not inherited, and that it is often curable. It is known that the infection in the vast majority of cases is spread through the dried sputum of consumptive patients. It is therefore necessary to take steps to see that this sputum is disposed of in such a way that it cannot become a menace to others. Anti-spitting ordinances are of use, but it is still more necessary to educate the people to a point where public sentiment will demand that indiscriminate spitting shall not endanger the well and where tubercular patients shall recognize the responsibility resting upon them and so conduct themselves that they are not a menace to those about them.

"To the people at large the problem of the day is not so much that of curing the sick as of keeping the well well. This problem reduces itself to a campaign of education. The wide-spread ignorance regarding tuberculosis and the ever present dangers of infection demand an organized campaign in every community in the civilized world in order to successfully fight the disease."

Dr. Farrand described the organization of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis showing how it is endeavoring to organize affiliated societies in every state in the Union and to co-operate with every existing agency of standing in an endeavor to reach all classes of the people. Such National bodies as the American Federation of Labor, the Young Men's Christian Associations and other existing organizations are working hand in hand with the National Association in carrying out their plans.

The series of tuberculosis exhibitions now being held in different cities of the country was also described and it was stated that within the last three months over 100,000 people have visited these exhibitions and obtained visual demonstration of the conditions.

In closing, the duty of the municipality in the struggle was discussed, and the speaker mentioned five points as essential in the programme of work to be pursued by every community. (1.) Early diagnosis of every case of consumption by the family physician and the attempt to secure compliance with his advice to treatment. (2.) Notification and registration of all cases whether in city or country such registration to be regarded as confidential and not to be followed by any unnecessary interference on the part of Boards of Health or other authorities. It was insisted, however, that notification is an absolute necessity of the situation in order that the authorities may have accurate knowledge of the conditions with which they have to contend. (3.) Establishment of adequate facilities for the care of advanced cases of tuberculosis. (4.) The establishment of adequate provision by state, municipal, and private sanatoria for the treatment of incipient or curable cases of tuberculosis. (5.) The education of the public through every possible channel of instruction.

Dr. J. H. Huddleston, of New York, one of the recognized leaders in the fight against the disease in the metropolis, spoke on the municipality's part in fighting the disease, and on the medical care of tubercular cases. Cases in the early stages, he declared, could be cured, by a maximum of fresh air, good food and rest. Climate no longer figured in the cure; the local air, so long as the patient gets it fresh and in plentious quantities, was as good, if not as rapidly recuperative as Western or Southern air. It was no longer said "The patient must go away," but "must the patient go away?"

"The relation of a municipality to tuberculosis," said Dr. Huddleston in part, "is comprised in three fields of work: First, the definition of the problem by the record of the number of cases, the places in which those cases are found, and the conditions under which they live; second, the care of the cases not under city's competent care; third, the disinfection of the places occupied by the cases.

"Compulsory notification is an absolutely necessary precedent to municipal control, and for that the municipality must have the power and the will to enact reports of cases from institutions and from private physicians. The requirement of notification should be supported by public opinion led by medical advice.

"Care of cases not under other competent care involves, first, such supervision of the rules of institutions as may be necessary to provide that cases shall not infect non-tubercular inmates of the institutions, and second, for cases not in the hands of private physicians or of institutions, that the Board of Health of the municipality shall be prepared to treat ambulant and bed cases, willing and refractory cases. Ambulant cases may be efficiently cared for in special classes of existing dispensaries, but if such classes do not exist, the Health Board must see that they are brought into existence, either as parts of existing institutions or in a special Health Board dispensary.

"The care of bed cases involves the provision by the municipality of a sufficient number of free beds to receive those who are unable to be treated at home. For the care of both ambulant and bed cases, with the necessary attention, so important a part of the treatment of tuberculosis, to home hygiene, it is necessary that persons be provided to visit the homes. Trained nurses employed for the purpose are usually found to be in this matter the most suitable agents.

"Inasmuch as the supply of proper food is quite as necessary in the case of tuberculosis as the proper hygiene, and much more necessary usually than medicine, the municipality must be prepared to supply to indigent cases additional food, usually in the shape of milk and eggs.

"Willing cases can be easily cared for in the ways mentioned, but home-

SCHOOL MEETING QUIET

Rumored Opposition to Borough's Regular Ticket Fails to Develop.

ONLY 100 VOTES POLLED

Messrs. Townsend, Miller and Woodruff Re-elected Trustees and John S. Johnston Succeeds H. E. Needham, Resigned.

For the first time in several long and turbulent years harmony, with a big "H," attended the annual school meeting in the borough last night. The scare thrown into the camp of the regulars yesterday amounted to nothing and everything was so quiet and peaceful that a dozen or more of the faithful had to pinch themselves to see if they were really awake. The one ticket prepared went through without a sign of opposition, returning Samuel Townsend, Nelson A. Miller and Hiram A. Woodruff to the Board of Education for a term of three years, and electing John S. Johnston for one year to fill the unexpired term of Henry E Needham, resigned. There was a total of 100 votes cast for the trustees and sixty for the appropriation of $21,830, polls for the latter being closed a half hour earlier.

The meeting was called to order by Mayor Newton B. Smalley, and he was made chairman. James K. Arnold was elected secretary, William Dorsett and J. W. A. Bauersaches tellers for the vote on trustees, and Fred Bettman and George H. Kenyon for the appropriation. The annual report of President James R. Joy, of the Board of Education, was read by District Clerk Stelzer, and after its acceptance nominations were called for. Only the prepared ticket was announced and though there were numerous prominent "Cits" in the gathering, no sign of hostilities came from them. The polls were then open an hour and the total vote was as follows: Townsend, 100; Johnston, 100; Miller, 99; Woodruff, 98.

"This is the fiftieth year of the North Plainfield public schools, the beginning having been made in a building at Race and Harmony streets in 1857. The cost of land and building was $4,500. That building was superseded in 1877 by one on Chatham street. In 1882 the original brick building Somerset street was erected; in 1893 this was enlarged by eight rooms. In 1898-9 the Watchung School (six rooms) was built on Mountain avenue, at a cost of $20,000. In 1901, by the aid of C. W. McCutchen and the bounty of the State the Manual Training building was erected, at a cost of $4,200. This year we are occupying for the first time the new north wing of the Somerset building, which has cost for ground, construction and equipment $40,000. This building enables us to give a seat and full time instruction to every enrolled pupil, and puts an end for a few years at least to the distressing period of part-time classes and makeshift school rooms. The building has been utilized as follows: first floor, library, office, teachers' room, kindergarten, and two first grade rooms; second floor, High School classical and commercial departments, two second grade rooms, and supply room. The $4,000 voted by the district July 3, 1905, enabled us to equip the entire Somerset street plant with an electric clock and signal bell system, together with a four-face tower clock, which may be illuminated whenever the necessary funds shall be available.

"A fire alarm system has also been installed and the pupils have been drilled to leave the building quickly and in order at the stroke of the gong. The old part of the Somerset building has been rewired in conformity with the requirements of the Underwriters. The ground about the new building has been rough-graded and the broken flagging on Park place and Vine street has been relaid in a thorough manner. Those windows in the old building which were darkened by the new structure have been reglazed with prisms which, with the whitening of the reflecting exterior walls, has relieved this difficulty.

"The gift of an alumnus, supplemented by donations from several members of the board, has secured from the State geologist a highly instructive collection of typical mineralsof New Jersey Another citizen has offered to deposit with us for the use of the school his large and valuable collection of Indian relics and curios. Last year the Manual Training School received a fine gift of a collection of decorative designs in plaster, which are now shown on the walls. Yet another citizen by a loan of his invaluable collection of Lincolniana enabled us to make usually impressive our commemoration of Lincoln's Birthday. With these gifts and loans should be men-

Entertained New Brunswick Birds.

Fifteen members of the recently instituted aerie of Eagles at New Brunswick paid a fraternal visit to Plainfield aerie, No. 846, last night. Though their coming was practically unannounced, the Plainfielders produced an abundance of talent and the Middlesex birds found no lack of entertainment. Songs and speeches were given by members of both aeries and at a late hour refreshments were served. The New Brunswick aerie was instituted by the local organization and there was a warm feeling of friendship between them.

ACKERMAN NOT LINED UP

Union County's Senator Opposed to Equal Taxation Bill Without Some Amendments.

POINTS OUT DEFECTS

Plainfielder Takes Position that No Unjust and Inequitable Burden Should Be Placed on Railroads.

Although Senator Ernest R. Ackerman is quoted in dispatches from Trenton as being in line for the Perkins equal taxation measure, which has passed the House and has been referred back to the Senate, the Plainfield legislator in the upper halls at Trenton does not favor the bill in its present shape. In fact, he is strongly in favor of certain amendments which he declares would make the workings of the act more equitable in all its phases. This much he stated to a representative of The Daily Press, who drew his attention today to an article that said he was counted upon to vote for the bill just as it has come back from the Assembly:

"While I am aware," said the Senator, "that in some of the various States a franchise or the right to do business is considered an property, yet to my mind it is not fair to consider as property of enormous value the simple right which permits a railroad corporation to do business. A franchise is a necessity for every business, be it railroad, express, telephone or manufacturing company, and if railroads are by law compelled to consider it as property and be taxed thereunder at an 'average rate' of the State, instead of the usual rate of 1-10 of one per cent. now levied, not all corporations be compelled to pay the same, even though the railroads are given the power of condemnation or right of eminent domain. And if all corporations were compelled to pay the same rate of tax, how long would corporations continue to incorporate under the laws of New Jersey?

"The Governor in his message," declared the Senator, "intimates that 'there is a widespread belief that now incorporated in our State, from whom the State received nearly two and one-half millions of dollars last year, are likely in the near future to seek incorporation under national laws,' and, if so, the loss to you tax all 'franchises' in order to produce equality in that particular with the railroad company, the State will only hasten the manner of their reincorporation somewhere else.

"According to the articles in the public press," Mr. Ackerman said, "House bill No. 1 is laid on lines very similar to that of the present law of Michigan on the subject, the constitutionality of which is now being argued in the United States Supreme Court on the ground that the law comes into conflict with the provisions of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which the railroads of that State claim deprives them of their property without due process of law and denies them the equal protection of the laws."

Continuing, Mr. Ackerman said: "The railroads are not some special form of human beings, but they are people themselves, the stockholders, the bondholders. Their securities comprise the assets in great part of all our financial institutions; the State itself is a holder of railroad securities. If the rate of taxation is unduly burdensome the people, sooner or later, will be compelled to foot the bill, either by the means of decreased dividends or interest or increased charges on traffic to meet the increased expense of taxation.

"Whoever has taken the pains to examine the report of the State comptroller," he said, "cannot fail to have noticed how in detail every item of the railroads' property is scheduled and is valued at its true worth. More revenue was collected in 1905 from the railroads than ever before by nearly a half million of dollars.

"The Governor, in his message," added Mr. Ackerman, "says that during this period of increased income from the State local taxes have increased. Is it not a fair conclusion to assume that inasmuch as during the past ten years local taxes have not been decreased, that they will not decrease in the future, even though the revenue of the State is greater because of the demand for State aid? On page 37 of the Governor's annual message the State aid, he says, for penal and reform institutions is growing from year to year, State aid is being asked for the purification of the Passaic River, the State ownership of potable waters may become a duty which the State must assume in the interest of the health and happiness of the people, and, in my opinion, this act, if it become a law, will not equalize the rate of taxation as it is expected to do."

MISSIONARY TALKS ON WORK IN INDIA

REV. H. J. SCUDDER ADDRESSES LOCAL CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Local Union, comprising all the Endeavor societies in Plainfield and vicinity, a mass meeting was held in the Sunday school of Trinity Reformed church last night. Rev. Dr. H. J. Scudder, a returned missionary from India, gave a lengthy illustrated lecture on that country, especially the missionary phase of it. Dr. Scudder has been in India for several years.

The views depicted the life, manners and customs of India and the speaker described in an entertaining and forcible manner the many religions and told of the superstition of the natives which leads them to follow customs resulting in torture. In spite of this, Dr. Scudder said that the cause of Christianity is progressing in India and the missionaries are doing a good work there.

Among the many views exhibited by Dr. Scudder there were several showing the gorgeous temples in which the worshippers of the various religions gather and the expensive idols worshipped. The natives have great faith in these idols, believing that they can grant everything. Regarding this, the speaker said that the work of the missionaries is rapidly effecting a change and leading the followers of superstition to see the truth as it is in Christ.

At the close of the lecture an offering was received for the Christian Endeavor work. The lantern was operated by John Neagle.

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP'S ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION.

Harmony Prevails and Scheduled Business Goes Through Without Hitch.

Little interest was manifested by the voters in the Fanwood township annual school meeting in the assembly hall of the Scotch Plains School last night. Three trustees were elected, T. J. Nicholl and F. W. Westcott to succeed themselves, while John L. Hatfield was chosen to fill the unexpired term of Arthur Hazkard, who recently removed to Newark.

The annual report of the district clerk, T. J. Nicholl, showed the school to be in a good condition, the attendance during the past year being a decided increase. The appropriations asked for by the board were all carried as follows: Tuition pupils in adjoining district, $500; repairs, $300; books, $50; current expenses, $4,450.

MISSIONARY TALKS ON WORK IN INDIA

REV. H. J. SCUDDER ADDRESSES LOCAL CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Local Union, comprising all the Endeavor societies in Plainfield and vicinity, a mass meeting was held in the Sunday school of Trinity Reformed church last night. Rev. Dr. H. J. Scudder, a returned missionary from India, gave a lengthy illustrated lecture on that country, especially the missionary phase of it. Dr. Scudder has been in India for several years.

The views depicted the life, manners and customs of India and the speaker described in an entertaining and forcible manner the many religions and told of the superstition of the natives which leads them to follow customs resulting in torture. In spite of this, Dr. Scudder said that the cause of Christianity is progressing in India and the missionaries are doing a good work there.

Among the many views exhibited by Dr. Scudder there were several showing the gorgeous temples in which the worshippers of the various religions gather and the expensive idols worshipped. The natives have great faith in these idols, believing that they can grant everything. Regarding this, the speaker said that the work of the missionaries is rapidly effecting a change and leading the followers of superstition to see the truth as it is in Christ.

At the close of the lecture an offering was received for the Christian Endeavor work. The lantern was operated by John Neagle.

FIRST BAPTIST RECEPTION

Congregation's Annual Greeting to Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss.

A THRONG AT AFFAIR

Music a Feature — Refreshments Served—Lists on General and Other Committees.

The annual reception tendered Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss by the members of the First Baptist church and congregation attracted a large number of people. The affair was arranged by the women of the church for the purpose of affording everyone an opportunity to become better acquainted with the pastor and his wife, and especially the large number which has been received during the year.

Dr. and Mrs. Chambliss were assisted in receiving by the deacons of the church and their wives. They took a position at the center of the room, where the platform was prettily decorated with cut flowers and palms, and throughout the evening they were kept busy greeting the people present and exchanging good wishes.

The Sunday school rooms, where the reception was held, was unusually attractive in its decorations. Well arranged draperies, rugs, cosy corners filled with pretty sofa pillows, banquet lamps, together with the various colored electric lights, all combined to make the scene very homelike. There was also a profusion of palms and roses which added to the general attractiveness.

A marked feature of the evening was the program of music rendered by the Sagamore Banjo and Mandolin Club. At frequent intervals the club played popular selections which were well received.

During the evening refreshments were served by a number of young women under the direction of the refreshment committee. Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen and Mrs. George A. Chapman poured coffee.

WHITE GIRL BAPTIZED AT A COLORED REVIVAL

Emily Bye Converted and Immersed By A. M. E. Zion Church Pastor.

AT A BIG REVIVAL

She With Ten Colored Persons Candidates at Ceremony—Methodist Pastor Performs in Baptist Church.

The greatest religious awakening in the history of the colored people of this city which has stirred the Mt. Olive Baptist and Mt. Zion A. M. E. churches, resulting in the conversion and baptism of scores of people, including a young white woman, Miss Emily Bye, is now in progress at the Mt. Olive Baptist church. Evangelist Alexander, of North Carolina, assisted by Evangelist and Mrs. Thomas, also of the South, who have been conducting special services at Reform Hall, have aroused the colored people to a remarkable degree.

Miss Bye has been a faithful attendant at these services, was converted and baptized. Although it is one of the rules of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church that new members can have their choice of immersion or sprinkling, for the first time in the history of the local church the pastor, Rev. H. C. Ashley, joined with the members of the Mt. Olive Baptist church and in their edifice baptized eleven of his flock, one of whom was Miss Bye. The young white woman was questioned by Pastor Ashley as to her belief and as to her reasons for wanting to be immersed. She answered the questions to the satisfaction of the pastor.

Parson Ashley's people witnessing the administration of the ordinance of baptism according to the rite of the Baptist church, expressed a desire to follow in the footsteps of their friends in the Baptist church. There being no pool at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, Pastor Ashley consequently arranged with the officials of the Baptist church to immerse his converts there.

When the call was made for candidates who wished to be immersed, eleven persons responded, ten colored and one white, the latter being Miss Bye. She did not object in the least to being baptized with the colored people, and she took her regular turn when the ordinance was administered by Pastor Ashley. As she was placed under the water there were many "hallelujahs" heard throughout the congregation that crowded the edifice.

Evangelist Alexander first baptized twenty-five converts of the Baptist faith, after which Pastor Ashley was given the privileges of the pool and immersed the eleven persons in waiting.

The special services began at the Mt. Olive Baptist church a few weeks ago under the direction of Evangelist Alexander, that church now being without a pastor since the resignation of Rev. E. E. Jackson. It is the oldest colored church in this city and has the largest membership. A week ago Sunday twenty-five persons were baptized by the evangelist, and the converts, who have many friends in the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, spread the news. Soon the Methodist flock was stirred and began attending the nightly services at the Baptist church. The pastor, Rev. H. C. Ashley, realizing the importance of the religious wave that was sweeping over his people, decided to join in the movement.

MAN'S HAND ALMOST SEVERED BY BUZZ SAW

PHILLIP DeHART THE VICTIM OF ACCIDENT AT THE POND PLANT.

As a result of injuries received at the Pond Tool Works, Thursday afternoon, Phillip DeHart, of South Second street, subsequently underwent a partial traumatic amputation of the left hand at Muhlenberg Hospital. The wound was sutured and House Physician Anthony today declared the patient to be resting easily. He will remain at the institution several days.

DeHart is a patternmaker at the plant and was engaged in trimming some board strips with a small buzz saw. One of them caught on a knot and jerked his hand directly against the teeth of the whirling blade. Before the member could be extricated it had sawed through much of the fingers and down into the palm. In a similar accident three years ago DeHart lost one of his fingers so that very little of the hand is left. He is thirty years old and married.

CHIEF HOLDS A FIRE - DRILL AT THE THEATRE

DOANE PUTS ATTACHES THROUGH STUNTS TO INSURE PATRONS' SAFETY

Previous to the opening of the New Plainfield theatre Thursday, the entire force of ushers and stage hands were put through the first of a series of fire drills planned by Manager Counihan to further insure the safety of his patrons. Patent appliances have recently been installed *and the men are to be made thor*oughly familiar with every device intended to guard against the spread of flames or a panic.

The employes were first taken in hand by Chief Doane, who explained the workings of the new hose reels and the water sprinklers that have just been connected up with a four inch main from the street. The auxillary pipes are three inches and the connections are to be of standard size, making it possible for the fire department to attach its hose to the house appliances if necessary. The men were showed how to handle the lengths and instructed as to the best method of attacking flames.

The house has also just been equipped and there are jets in orchestra, balcony and gallery with a patent arrangement for lighting in the event of the electric light failing. It is only necessary for the ushers to pull a hanger to cause ignition and Chief and Manager Counihan assigned a man for each light. The exits were also portioned off and every one will be thrown open at the first indication of trouble, the attendant directing the people out.

These drills are to be a weekly feature at the theatre and the chief and Manager Counihan will do still more to make it the safest in the State. The force of regular firemen is to be doubled and next season two more exits are to be added, leading from each of the two balcony stairways. While performances are in progress, two men will patrol above and below the stage to strictly enforce the "No Smoking" rule, this habit being responsible for a great many fires.

MORE WOE FOR POLAND.

Her Industries Have Suffered More from War with Japan Than Rest of Russia.

According to United States Commercial Agent Harris at Eibenstock Germany, the industries in Russian Poland have suffered more from the war with Japan than any other part of Russia. That is attributed to the fact that the Polish provinces on the Vistula manufacture to a large extent certain articles which are dependent for a market, either upon foreign countries or distant parts of the Russian empire. One-half of the inhabitants of Russian Poland is dependent upon house industries for a living. These house industries consist of the manufacture of gloves, shoes, waists, neckties, shirts, underwear and ready-made clothing. There are whole cities in Poland, as for example Bresitay, to the district of Pozirow, which are absolutely dependent upon the manufacture of cheap, ready-made clothing for this last market.

"Up to the outbreak of the war," says the report, "Siberia and the Russian possessions on the Pacific were the best markets for these industries. Today there is practically no demand for manufactured goods in any Russian territory in the far east either directly or indirectly influenced by the war.

"Another cause of the extreme business depression in Russian Poland is a too liberal use of the long-credit system, which has been participated in to the fullest extent by both the manufacturer and merchant. At the outbreak of the war those manufacturers who were called upon to meet the demands of their foreign backers were compelled to force payments from their customers. Such pressure has made its influence felt among every class of the inhabitants.

"The crop failure in the Vistula provinces in 1904 caused by the long-continued drought has also produced much misery among the peasant classes."

OKEFINOKEE SWAMP BEARS

Get in Part of Their Time Preying Upon the Pig Pens of Cornfarmers.

"The next time the president goes off on a hunting trip I hope he will come down our way," said S. B. Floyd of Waycross, Ga., to the Washington Post.

"The great Okefinokee swamp begins not far from our town, and extends due south for a distance of about 40 miles running over into Florida. Here in this vast tract of desolate bog and swamp are thousands of bears, deer, and wild turkeys without number. The whole region is a hunter's paradise, and yet so abundant is the game in this remote and desolate country that it does not seem to diminish in spite of the Nimrods.

"The bears weigh from 200 to 300 pounds and put in a great part of their time preying upon the pig pens of the farmers. If forced into a fight they are dangerous antagonists and in rudest humor will attack one save at a point of vantage."

Italy's Industrial Advance.

Not many people in the United States are fully aware of how rapidly Italy is advancing in industrial importance. In some ways northern Italy has in the last ten years shown a promising development in an industrial way as is to be found anywhere in Europe. The never-failing water supply from snow-topped mountains is being utilized by the electrical engineers in a way which promises to make northern Italy into a great industrial state. Nowhere in Europe is there a population better fitted to aid in such development. The people are dexterous, quick to learn and diligent, and up to the present time the general wage scale compares favorably with that of any competitors which they have to meet. The result is that cheap labor in Italy has been a factor in the development of the silk industry at a rate which sounds like a statistic of American industrial growth.—Frank A. Vanderlip, in Circle's.

The Cold South.

From the observations made by recent antarctic explorers, Prof. Julius Hann has recalculated the average temperature of the southern hemisphere as compared with the northern, and his results differ, in some respects, from those heretofore accepted. He finds that the mean temperature south of the equator, for the entire year, is about two and three-quarters degrees lower than that north of the equator. But the annual variation of temperature in the northern hemisphere is twice as large as in the southern, the summer temperature being much higher and our winter temperature perceptibly lower than those of the corresponding seasons in the southern half of the globe.—Youth's Companion.

An After-Dinner Story.

THE INITIATION OF KINWEISER.

When young Kinweiser got his job as entry clerk in Burkman's notion house he made up his mind that by displaying unremitting zeal and industry he would please his employer. But, although he had done his best, had tried to familiarize himself with the stock, dusted the shelves, voluntarily remained after hours to finish work that might properly have been deferred until the next day—although he had done all these things *and many others outside of his prop*ed Reid of work, Burkman apparently had taken no notice of him. Not only that, but the order clerk, Williter, his superior, appeared to look upon him with disfavor. At least, he showed no signs of approval.

It hurt Kinweiser's feelings. He had always heard that bright, energetic young men were bound to be appreciated, and he had certainly been energetic. As for "brightness," Roder, who made the bills from the same "call" as he and then checked up with him after the "call back," had made three errors to his one. Roder was a smart youth, too—smart enough to try to make it appear that the mistakes had been Kinweiser's.

Kinweiser redoubled his efforts, still Williter frowned his annoyance and Burkman passed and repassed the entry desk without seeming aware of the existence of the young man who worked there. Kinweiser was thoroughly disgusted. He felt unwisely and unjustly misused about it to some one, so he took Roder into his confidence.

Roder heard him to the end and then grinned.

"Smoke up!" he said. "You're a chump if you don't see what's the trouble."

"What is it?" asked Kinweiser.

"Williter's got it in for you."

"Why?" asked Kinweiser, wonderingly.

"Didn't you ever hear about the fellow that worked himself out of a job?" asked Roder, with his expansive grin. "That's where you are going to get left. You're trying to make yourself too useful. You know blamed near as much about the stock as Williter does. You called him down on the p'int of them coat springs the day before yesterday—and you've called me down once or twice."

"What if I did?" said Kinweiser. "We don't want mistakes made, do we?"

"That's all right," said Roder. "That's all right, that part of it, but the man who makes the mistakes ain't going to feel extra good about it. I don't care myself, but Williter doesn't want anybody round that's smarter than he is. He likes you starting out to make a record, and he thinks you stand a pretty good show of getting his job. He doesn't get here before the warehouse is unlocked in the morning and stay after 6 o'clock to help close up in a rush, and if he doesn't do it himself, he doesn't want nobody else to do it, and get shoved up over his head."

"Do you think that's it?" asked Kinweiser, doubtfully.

"I'm sure of it, and on the way you are doing and see how long you'll be able to hold your job."

"I don't want to lose my job," said Kinweiser. "I had too much trouble getting it."

"Then slow down," advised Roder. "*Quit when it's quitting time or a lit*tle before, and don't be in too much of a sweat to get down on time in the morning. Let the shelves alone. You're entry clerk, ain't you? Then you ain't nothing to do with the stock. And don't be afraid of making mistakes. If I was you I'd make a few. Williter would think all the more of you."

"Maybe you're right," said Kinweiser, thoughtfully.

He adopted the course that his as*sociate had recommended, cautious*ly at first, but later, as he fancied he saw Williter relaxing, he went to extremes of shirking and made one or two blunders that he considered highly judicious.

"You're all right," grinned Roder. Kinweiser took that view of it himself, so it was a distinct surprise to him when, at the end of his fifth week with the firm, Burkman called him into the office and told him that he would have not further use for his services.

The young man could only gasp with the shock.

"I'm sorry," said Burkman, rather moved with compassion at his distress. "Mr. Williter reported very favorably of you at first. He said you were quick and seemed to be trying to learn and taking an interest in the business. Still, he thought it might be a case of new broom, and the way you've dropped off in the last week or two shows that that was the correct assumption."

"I wasn't," declared Kinweiser. "I was interested and I meant to work hard, only—I—Ithought—"

"Well?"

"I thought I wasn't wanted to—that is, I was told—"

"Well?"

Kinweiser was silent. Perhaps Roder had meant well.

"What made you think you weren't wanted to?"

"Mr. Williter didn't act as if he was pleased with me."

"Do you mean that he didn't put you on the back every time you did what you were hired to do? I tell you, young man, if you start out with the idea that you've got to have a lump of sugar every time you do your tricks you'll never amount to a row of pins. Good men aren't so scarce as you may think, and if you want to succeed you've got to hustle."

"If you would only give me another trial," pleaded Kinweiser.

"Well," said Burkman, "go back to your desk and we'll see."

"What's the trouble?" asked Roder maliciously, as Kinweiser climbed upon his stool.

"Nothing much," replied Kinweiser. "I made a fool of myself, but I'm getting wise already."—Chicago News.

"LOU" WILTSE SIGNS CONTRACT WITH YORKS

CLEVER TWIRLER WILL PLAY IN TRI-STATE LEAGUE THIS SEASON.

"Lou" Wiltse, the baseball pitcher, will be a member of the twirling staff of the York (Pa.) Tri-State League Club this season, he having signed a contract with Manager Hockett of York. "Lou" expects to report at York the latter part of April, when the season will be opened there.

The popular player was not in any haste to sign a contract with York, for he thought that his case now before the National Commission might be adjusted so that he would be able to join the Cincinnati Nationals, to be managed this year by "Ned" Hanlon. The case has not been disposed of yet and is not likely to be at present, so Wiltse accepted his opportunity to go with York.

Wiltse still believes that he will be able to return to the National League, for his case is not similar to that of Hayden, Sebring and others who "jumped." He had a long talk with Hugh Jennings, of the Baltimore team, before leaving, and it was agreed that the pitcher was not being treated right and if he had a chance to do better she should be permitted to accept it. In the case of the other players, they "jumped" without any notice.

CLAIMS POLICE WERE PAID FOR SHOOING GRAFTERS.

Chief's Version of Why Cops Came High at the Baseball Games.

Chief Kiely said this morning, in response to a general expression of surprise over the fact that Manager Daab had to pay for policemen at the ball games last season, that the officers were not paid for protection. They were used inside the grounds, he said, as pickets, to keep out grafters, and as collectors. They were there in their own time, and got $1.-25 apiece for the afternoon's work, and were also given free admission. The city didn't hire them, he said, to go to the field, but Manager Daab did. Councilman Tyler, who was chairman of the board last summer, was at first opposed to sending officers to the game at all, he claims.

CRASHED THROUGH ROOF

Big Chunk of Iron Hurled a Quarter of Mile Disturbs Family at Dinner.

POLICE INVESTIGATE

Mr. Kriney's Home Was Disturbed As Result of Italians' Method of Breaking Up Roller.

John Kriney's family were eating supper in their home on Evona avenue at 6:30 o'clock Monday night, when they heard the sound of an explosion nearby.

"Somebody must be blasting out stumps," said Mr. Kriney.

Next night at the same time another explosion sounded. There was a thump on the roof and a crashing noise. The family jumped to their feet in alarm. No more explosions and no more crashes sounded, so Mr. Kriney stopped ducking and went upstairs to investigate.

He found a five-foot hole in the roof and a big, jagged chunk of iron embedded in a floor beam of the attic. The chunk would have gone right on through to the next floor if it hadn't struck the beam.

Mr. Kriney spent the next day trying to find out where the chunk of iron came from. He could get no clues, and went down to police headquarters yesterday to lay the case before the head sleuth. Chief Kiely detailed Patrolman McCue to investigate, and the officer started out to scour the Kriney neighborhood.

Within two hours Mr. McCue discovered that two Italian laborers in Piscataway township, over a quarter of a mile away from Kriney's house, had been engaged in breaking up a big road roller with nitro-glycerine Monday and Tuesday nights. That explained the bombardment of the Kriney place.

McCue had no authority in Middlesex county, so didn't say anything to the Italians. Chief Kiely has reported the case to the Middlesex authorities. Kriney says he wants more satisfaction than police proceedings can give him. Unless the Italians pay for the damage to his roof he will sue them.

It is remarkable that no other houses in the neighborhood were hit by flying chunks of the roller. The Junkmen took no precautions to cover the explosions, and with charges strong enough to throw a two-hundred pound piece of iron over a fourth of a mile at work everybody in the neighborhood stood a good chance of being buttered into an unhandsome mess.

CLOTHES AND EDUCATION IN THE POLICE COURT.

Lack of One Interferes With Other in Kiely Family.

School Superintendent Maxson appeared *in police court Friday morn*ing against Edgar Kiely, an employe of the water company, to press a complaint under the truancy act. Four of Kiely's children have not been coming to school more than half the required time, and the school authorities say there is no excuse for their absence. It could be knew of no reason why the children shouldn't go to school, except that there might be a lack of shoes or of clothes occasionally. He supports a family of nine.

"There aint always the best of clothes in the house, and shoes are sometimes hard to get right away," he said, "but I do the best I can."

He promised to see that the chil*dren were at school every day it was* possible for there to be there, and Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

Odd Stories of a Village in Old Hunterdon County.

ANTIQUATED GROUND

Cemetery at New Germantown—Belongs to Lutheran Church —The Inscriptions.

The quaint and curious epitaphs of the old days have long been a matter of deep interest, as well as a source of amusement, to thousands of people who seek the oddities of the earth. Much has been written about ancient gravestones and their strange messages. One of the most antiquated cemeteries in the State of New Jersey is located at New Germantown, Hunterdon count, and, because of its remote situation, it has not become generally known to the lovers of the unusual.

This burying ground is in the yard of the Lutheran Church, which has been organized over one hundred and fifty years and has a most interesting history. Balthazar Pickel, who was one of the leading church workers at New Germantown and left by his will one thousand pounds to the church, is buried close to the east wall of the edifice. At his tomb the following memorial is disclosed:

Here lies the body of Baltes Pickel,
who departed this Life Dec. 5th,
1765,
In the 79th year of his age.
Remember me as you pass by
As you are now so onst was I.
As I am now so must you be;
Prepare for death and follow me.

The body of Charity, wife of Balthazar, lies near his remains and a curious epitaph also marks her last resting place. It is as follows:

Here lies the body of Charity, the wife of Baltes Pickel, Lever, who departed this life December the 4th, 1761, in the 77th year of her age.
My grass is thin,
My grave you see;
Prepare for Death
And follow me.

Another ancient stone worthy of particular notice is the one that bears this inscription:

In Memory of
Baltes Pickel, son of Fred'k Pickel, who depart'd this life March,
1786, in the 20th year of his age.
My feebel race
Has run a pace
My dwelling place is here.
This all I got
To keep the spot
That men dig not too near.

Many of the ministers who preached in the church are buried around its walls. In 1809 the Rev. William Graaf died, having founded out a pastorate of thirty-four years. This is what is inscribed in memory of him:

In Memory of
Wm. Graaf,
Rector of Zion's Church in New Germantown,
Born at Grunstadt in the County of Leiningen, in Germany, in the year 1727, and departed this life
May 31st, 1809, aged 82 years.
"I have waited Thy salvation, O Lord."

Barnet Hall Academy at New Germantown, which is the public school now, was named for and erected by Dr. Oliver Barnet, who is buried not so far from the antique cemetery. A small slab bears this humble epitaph:

In Memory of Doctor Barnet, Esq., who departed this life
in the 66th year of his age.

Dr. Barnet was the first physician to settle in New Germantown. He *went there in 1765 from Orange, Es*sex county, where he came of an old and distinguished family. After reaching Hunterdon county Dr. Barnet soon became a leader in his profession. He was a doctor when he went there, his entire capital being his education and a scrawny Maryland pony. But by perseverance he was able before he died to value his estate at $80,000.

HOW TO SUCCEED.

The late Baron Alphonse Rothschild, financier and philanthropist, just before his recent death at Paris, France, gave two million dollars for the erection of workingmen's homes. He gave something "just as good" (or perhaps better) to the young men relying on "Self-help" in his formula 'How to succeed." Here it is:

Shun liquor.
Dare to go forward
Never be discouraged.
Be polite to everybody.
Employ your time well.
Never tell business lies.
Pay your debts promptly.
Be prompt in everything.
Bear your misfortunes.
Do not reckon upon chances.
Make no useless acquaintances.
Be brave in the struggle of life.
Maintain your integrity as a sacred thing.
Never appear to be something more than you are.
Take time to consider; then decide positively.

THE LATEST IN MILLINERY

Jet and sequin trimmings are shown in a variety of beautiful designs. Sequin hats to be used over a frame are very useful for evening hats and require very little trimming. These are exhibited by Keeling, Wiles & Co., and the model shown me had a low square crown, with a brim straight at the front and turned up at the back. Three small ostrich plumes were arranged inside the back brim to fall forward over the crown and a lace scarf tied in a large bow was fastened low on the outer side of the brim with the ends hanging down to the shoulders.

Satin dome crowns are shown and I have seen a very striking model in which one was used to good effect; this model had three curling brims of fine yedda bound with satin ribbon. The brims were cut open at the left side and in the opening four ostrich feathers were arranged, two upstanding and two curling under the brims. Pleated tulle rosettes decorated the bandeau at the left side and a small tulle ruching was placed round the base of the crown.

In ornaments, mother of pearl occupies the most prominent position; it is shown in a great variety of buckles, slides, bits, etc; fine jet is also shown. Steel and gun metal trimming and ornaments are used mostly for bonnets. Tinsel passementeries are shown in some very handsome patterns, embracing shells, leaves, etc., but all are very light and open with a gauze or spider-web effect. Tinsel and tuscan combined are also very good and are shown in floral designs worked on a fine gauze.

Ribbons are used very profusely on the early models and it looks as though they will go well through the season. Wide fine chene effects are shown and many patterns have gold threads worked in to form floral designs. Wide gauze metal ribbons in both silver and gold are shown, both in plain effects and with printed floral designs and a few are exhibited with small broche spots.

Long scarf of wide metal gauze printed with large floral designs are shown for the neck, but it is doubtful if they will be used in any quantity for that purpose.

In flowers, roses are still most prominent, and they are generally small or moderate blossoms. Rose buds or half-opened flowers are preferred and the small moss rose is very much favored; small clusters of these buds with foliage make good effects.

Pansies come next in favor and are shown in all the natural colors from pale mauve to deep purple. Pastille colors in violets, cowslips, hyacinths, forget-me-nots, Japanese anemones, cacalas and lilacs are all good.

Small dainty clusters of lilies and moss roses with foliage, or mignonette and moss roses are selling well. Many other combinations are shown, but these are about the best.

Foliage of all descriptions is in good demand, but the most favored has a slight frosting in pastille tones to blend with the colors of the flowers with which it is used. Floral toques and hats are again going very well, a most successful line shown by Keeling, Wiles & Co. being a sailor shape of poppy petals.—The Millinery Trade Review.

Deep Custard Pie.

In old times a deep custard pie was the treat offered to company invited to tea, and it was entirely innocent of a meringue. But it was rich and satisfying. To make such a pie put four cups of milk and a shaving of the yellow part of a lemon rind in a double boiler and heat. Mix a level tablespoon of flour in a little cold milk and cook two minutes. Now pour the thickened milk over four eggs beaten with one-half cup of sugar. Pour into a deep plate lined with rich paste; grate a little nutmeg on and omit the lemon rind if it is not liked. Bake in a moderate oven until the custard is firm in the centre. Have the heat strong on the floor of the oven in order to have the crust cook before it soaks.

White Ginger Cake.

Cream one-half cup of butter, add slowly one cup of fine granulated sugar and beat, then add three eggs beaten light. Add one-half cup of cream, a level teaspoon of cinnamon, a level tablespoon of ginger and two cups of flour. Beat smooth. Dissolve one-half level teaspoon of soda in two teaspoons of vinegar, stir at once into the cake and bake three-quarters of an hour.

Fish Chowder.

Put wo layers of thin slices of salt pork in a kettle and fry until crisp. Take out half. On the pork remaining in the kettle make a layer of fresh cod or haddock cut sliced, then a layer of sliced potatoes, on that a layer of sliced onions, making this not quite as thick as the other, and on the onion lay a row of split crackers. Season all with salt and pepper as put in, then repeat the layers in the same order, putting the pork that was reserved on the crackers and following the same order as at first. Cover with boiling water, lay a plate on to cover closely and cook slowly one hour. About ten minutes before the chowder is done pour in two cups of milk and finish cooking.

THE WIDOW'S RUSE

"Do you really believe in love?" asked the Widow.

The Colonel started. He had been wondering how he could find out the exact amount of her fortune before taking the plunge.

"Er—oh, yes," he said. "Certainly, certainly."

"How refreshing!" sighed the Widow.

"Love?" queried the Colonel, with a splendid show of tenderness.

"I meant how refreshing to find a man who believes in it, especially a man with so much experience in life."

"I have always believed in it," replied the Colonel, simply. His eyes became slightly misty; they were not strong.

"I wonder you never married," observed the Widow.

She was looking down. He used the opportunity to note the luxury of the room. Even if rumor had exaggerated, she must be worth at least—

"Because," he said, slowly, "I have waited to find the woman who realized my ideal.'

The Widow shook her head. "I'm afraid you will remain a bachelor to the end of your days," she remarked.

Now he might do it. To be or not to be? Courage!

"But I have found her," he murmured, hoarsely.

"Really?" She was vastly fluttered. "How very interesting! May one ask"—

"It is yourself," protested the Colonel, pulling forward his chair a little that he might the more conveniently seize her hand. "Will you take me, Hester?"

"Ruth," corrected the Widow.

"I beg your pardon, Ruth. Will you—will you marry me?"

"Yes," whispered the Widow.

He dropped on to his knee with some difficulty, and brushed her cheek with his mustache. It tickled frightfully, but the Widow did not laugh.

"I will do by best to make you happy," promised the Colonel. "I ought to warn you, though, that I have very little beside my pension."

"True love is better than riches. We can afford to face poverty together."

"Ye-es," the Colonel agreed. "At any rate, it is a comfort to me to reflect that you need never fear privation."

The Widow sat up. "By the way," she observed, "I suppose you know that, in the event of my marrying again, I lose all my money?"

The Colonel gasped. The expression on his face betrayed him.

"Thank you," said the Widow. "I invented that to test you. One has to be so careful, doesn't one?"—London Daily Mail.

HOME.

No house is mine in the North or South;
No lands in the land of my sires.
Roofless, the careless winds have spent
The smoke of my vagrant fires.

No name have I in the clanging town;
No seat with the grave and wise.
The snows and the dusts of the trails get
That have blinded my foolish eyes.

But safe and warm and steadfast-true
(God, how was the wonder done!)
The heart of a woman shelters me
From the lonely winds and the sun.

THE SPELLING BEE.

What is that you ask me, sonny?
Has a spelling bee got honey?
Tha: it has, in truth.
Lots of it an' drippin' ove,
From the flips as red as clover
In the days of youth.

How we loved it, me and Mandy;
Sakes alive, but she was dandy!
Always knew just how.
And the words that they were givin'—
Double-pointed—land o' livin'!
Ain't no such words now.

Mandy spelled me down completely,
But I owned up mighty neatly
Failure to confess.
See it: "Dear, you spell like thunder
All the long words, but I wonder,
Love, can you spell, "Yes?"

Then she spelt it sort o' slowly,
An' she beat her head down lowly,
Cryin' happy teaps.
Reckon now you see it, sonny,
How a spelling bee has honey
Flowin' through the years.

A TIME LIMIT ON AN ENGAGEMENT.

In our sentimental age it is impossible to return to the good old custom that prevailed when a man who asked permission to visit your daughter was asked to file a declaration that he meant business and was going to begin active operations right away.

Nevertheless every thoughful person knows that there ought to be a time limit on engagements, and that it is a wise parent who calls for a breaking-up when there is no immediate prospect of the wedding.

Nothing else is so trying on a girl as a long engagement.

It bunches all the other woes and worries of her sex, without any of their ameliorations.

She is a grass widow without allmoney, a wife without a billfayer, a maiden with no further opportunities of conquest.

She has made a compact with fate, in which she has signed, sealed and delivered herself over without getting anything in return for it but a piecrust promise from a man, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

American society, so far as men are concerned, is run too much on the opendoor policy, anyway. We need a little more home protection.

Any man with a decent coat and half-way decent manner can get an entree into any house he chooses.

This has produced a class of social freebooters—men whose attentions are without intention, and who supply one side of their female acquaintances as a kind of free club, where they are electric-fanned and cool-drinked in summer and steam-heated in winter, and entertained at all times without money and without price.

A long engagement is suicide of happiness for a girl, and any one is justified in keeping her from committing that particular form of harikari if possible.

Raisin Roll Cake.

Beat one cup of sugar with the yolks of three eggs. Sift one cup of flour with three level teaspoons of baking powder and add to the sugar and egg, then fold in the stiffy beaten whites of the three eggs. Add a teaspoon of lemon flavoring and last three tablespoons of boiling water. Beat well and pour into a long shallow pan and bake in a moderate oven. Turn on to a cake rack and spread at once with a mixture made from the whites of two eggs beaten with one cup of powdered sugar and one cup of chopped raisins.

Sausage Rolls.

Put sausages into a frying pan with cold water to cover and set where the water will simmer and evaporate, then let the sausage cook brown. To prevent breaking into pieces stick a steel skewer into the sausages in several places. Make a dough from two cups of pastry flour sifted with a saltspoon of salt and four level teaspoons of baking powder and one cup of milk. Turn on to a floured board, pat out half an inch thick; cut in rounds and put a piece of sausage in each. Moisten the edges, fold over and press together, then bake.

Dates with Ginger.

Stone the dates and fill the centres with finely chopped preserved ginger. Roll in powdered sugar. Always wash dates before they are stuffed; if they are roled in a cheese cloth they will be dried quickly.

Potato Soup.

Cook one quart of potato dice in water to cover until tender, adding also a stalk of celery cut in several pieces and half a small onion sliced. Pres through a strainer and season with salt and white pepper. Rub two level tablespoons each of butter and flour together and add to the soup; cook five minutes and then if the soup is too thick add a little hot milk. When the soup is ready to serve sprinkle on top with a little finely minced parsley.

Silver Cake.

Cream one-half cup of butter, add one cup of sugar and beat again 'til creamy. Add one and two-thirds cups of flour sifted with three level teaspoons of baking powder, alternately with one-half cup of milk and last the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Flavor with one teaspoon of lemon flavoring.

Rye Muffins.

Beat one egg, add arounding tablespoon of sugar, two tablespoons of melted butter and a saltspoon of salt Mix with one cup of milk and one and one-half cups of rye meal sifted before measuring and one and one-half cups of flour sifted with five level teaspoons of baking powder.

Sally Lunn.

Sift two cups of flour with a saltspoon of salt and two level teaspoons of baking powder. Beat the yolkes of three eggs well, add one cup of milk and a tablespoon of melted butter. Add the flour mixture and mix well, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and bake in a loaf.

Orange Cake.

Cream one-half cup of butter, add one cup of sugar and the beaten yolkes of three eggs, a saltspoon of salt and the grated yellow rind of one-half orange. Sift one and one-half cups of flour with two level teaspoons of baking powder, and add to the first mixture alternately with one-half cup of strained orange juice Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs, then bake in a loaf. Cool and cover with a white icing, flavored with orange.

LITERARY NOTES.

What is the matter with Friday? Is it really such an unlucky day after all? asks The Scrapbook.

According to tradition, Friday is unlucky because it was on that day that Christ was crucified. In nearly all the countries of Europe, Friday is regarded as the black sheep of the days of the week, and it is so esteemed by Buddhists and Brahmins. The old Romans called it nefastus, from the utter overthrow of their army at Gallia Narbonensis.

In England it was once the custom to execute the sentence of death on condemned criminals on Friday, which, therefore, has been commonly known as "Tyburn's day." There is an English proverb to the effect that a Friday moon brings foul weather. Most sailors refuse to go aboard a vessel that is to start its voyage on a Friday.

On the other hand, evidence is not wanted that Friday is one of the luckiest days in the week. Charles Dickens says that nearly all the fortunate events in his life occurred on this day. In Scotland, Friday is the favorite day for weddings.

Below is given a list of some important events that have occurred on Friday:

Moscow was burned Friday.
Washington was born Friday.
Shakespeare was born Friday.
America was discovered Friday.
Richmond was evacuated Friday.
The Bastile was destroped Friday.
The Mayflower pilgrims were landed Friday.

Queen Victoria was married Friday.

King Charles I was beheaded Friday.

Napoleon Bonaparte was born Friday.

Julius Caesar was assassinated Friday.

The battle of Marengo was fought Friday.

The battle of Waterloo was fought Friday.

The battle of Bunker Hill was fought Friday.

The battle of New Orleans was fought Friday.

The Declaration of Independence was signed Friday.

Probably the most attractive pictures that have been published of Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, nee Alice Roosevelt, are those which appeared in the March number of The Burr McIntosh Monthly, now on all newsstands. Among the many superb reproductions of celebrated people are those of Archbishop Farley, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, Mme. Calve, Olga Nethersole, Blanche Bates, Grace George, Blanche Dlopel, grand opera singer, and Jan Kubelik, the famous violinist. In the department of People of Note, are fine photographs of Mrs. Humphrey Ward, novelist; Dr. Osler, the late Dr. Harper, of the University of Chicago, and the late Marshall Field, probably the most successful merchant of the century. The scenes in this issue are very largely of the Old World: Turkey, England, France, Switzerland, Algeria, Germany and Spain. The color work is especially striking and altogether the issue will appeal to all lovers of fine pictures. Burr Publishing Company, New York.

THE LAND OF "PRETTY SOON."

I know of a land where the streets are paved
With the things we meant to achieve.
It is walled with the money we meant to have saved
And the pleasures for which we grieve.
The kind words unspoken, the promises broken,
And many a coveted boon
Are stowed away there in that land somewhere—
The land of "Pretty Soon."
There are uncut jewels of possible fame,
Lying about in the dust;
And many a noble and lofty aim
Covered with mold and rust.
And, oh, this place, while it seems so near,
Is further away than the moon!
Though our purpose of fair, yet we never get there—
The land of "Pretty Soon."
It is further at noon than it is at dawn,
Further at night than at noon;
Oh! let us beware of that land down there—
The land of "Pretty Soon."

Millburn Out Against Racing.

South Orange, March 19.—Chief of Police Oliver, of Millburn, has been instructed by the Township Committee to see that the order of the Essex County Board of Freeholders, prohibiting horse racing in Millburn avenue, is carried out, by force if necessary. The township treasurer, Dr. Wellington Campbell, is the instigator of this action. His opposition is to the regularly advertised races, which are held on Thursdays. The horsemen monopolize the avenue and even drive the automobilists off the course. It is alleged that the rural "sports" bet real money on the races. The whole thing is said to be very demoralizing to the bucolics.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning March 25.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Bountiful sowing; our gifts to Christ's cause.—Luke vi, 38; II Cor. ix, 1-15. (A missionary meeting.)

Salvation is free, but the extension of Christ's kingdom in the world is expensive. Yet this is the mission of Christ's church, for He Himself gave the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." And the money necessary for carrying forward the work of God must come from the Christian people of the world. We should not expect the state to furnish funds for Christian missions, and it is not the duty of the people of the world to do it. The duty and responsibility of supplying the means for the spread of the gospel rest upon Christians alone, and they should consider it a privilege and a joy as well as a duty and a responsibility. Moreover, the money for this purpose is to be given. We can not find days great stress upon giving, but it nowhere intimates that the church is to become a business concern and to raise its funds by engaging in money making schemes, even such as are legitimate among men for the accumulation of wealth. In laying down this law God must have had a good purpose even toward the givers, and, therefore, for our own sakes, as well as for the good of the cause, we should not shirk this Christian duty, but heartily and liberally respond to it.

The inspiration to bountiful giving for Christ's cause is in the promises of God. God has definitely promised in His word that if we will give to Him He will give to us even in greater measure than we have given; and on the other hand that if we fail in the performance of this duty He will fail in blessing us. Christ says, "Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down and shaken together and running over, men shall give into your bosom." The apostle Paul, emphasizing the same fact, declares, "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." The principles here set down are simply those of nature. He that gives receives. The farmer who sows but little reaps a small harvest, while he who sows plentifully reaps an abundant harvest, but back of this natural law is the promise of God. Crops may fail, whether from lack of sowing or bountiful, but God's promises never fail. In the spiritual world, therefore, we have the natural law plus the promise of God. If, therefore, we trust God, we should give bountifully, to Christ's cause. If we do not trust God we can withhold our gifts, but when there come heaviness of soul and dearth of spiritual harvest let us remember that the burden rests upon our own shoulders. Having sown nothing we cannot expect to reap anything, and if we do we shall be sadly disappointed.

The methods of giving as set forth in the Scriptures are simple and practicable. God asks nothing impossible of any man. The rule of giving is possessing. Only in proportion as we possess does He ask us to give to Him, but He does ask and expect that of us. If we have much we should give large gifts. If we have but little our gifts must be small, but for this reason they should not be withheld. We should not be too proud to give what we can, because we cannot give as much as some one else. The effectiveness of money does not always depend upon the amount of it. Out of a little money some men make a fortune, while out of a fortune others make a failure. The value of money depends upon how it is used. Our God can make the smallest gift, if it be in proportion to our ability and cheerfully given, accomplish great results. As He blesses us, therefore, let us give bountifully, willingly and cheerfully and wait for the harvest of souls, and when that day comes our only regret will be not that we gave what we did, but that we did not give more.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

March 25. Africa. "Daybreak on the Dark Continent"—Joshua 1, 1-8. Public Programme by Mission Study Class.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

It was a great undertaking which Joshua had in hand. It was to get a land for a people not a half century out of slavery. And more than the conquest of a land was the need of the assimilation of the mixed elements of the mass of the people into society under right laws and customs. A beginning had been made, but not much progress had been marked.

So it is with the great continent and people of Africa. A half century since and the greater part of the vast land was marked on the best maps of the world as unexplored—that is, the civilized world was in ignorance of what was held in the interior. But all that wonderful stretch of territory was peopled and life after a sort had for ages been moving on there.

Whether the outside world knew or did not know its affairs would not much signify had that life in its limits been a worthy life. If the people had been rising in righteousness and reaching the real end of human existence they could not long have remained isolated, for the long chain that cut off from the remainder of mankind when it comes to realization of the duties of life.

Africa has been discovered. This is all so recent that it seems but yesterday that we knew not the secret of the Nile nor the Congo. Long since Livingstone was lost in the wilds of the far interior and Stanley went to seek him how greatly all has changed. Now they talk of a railroad to cross the continent from both its coasts, and already considerable of it is builded and in operation.

Hunters have done a little to give us information of the conditions of affairs in the land. Traders have done some more. Explorers in the interests of science have contributed their quota, but the greatest benefactors have been the Christian missionaries. The names of these will ever be headed by that of the indefatigable Livingstone, who died in the interior with only his faithful natives with him.

Discovery is only the forerunner of evangelization. The Christian world is awaking to a realization of her Christ given task of world evangelization. The whiter portion of the continent's white missionaries have settled on all her coasts and taken the native paths for the interior. Daybreak has come. The natives have been aroused to religious life in Christ and are fitting themselves for work for Christ's cause. Even the west coast Liberia and Sierra Leone have seen the day star rise. Angola, which Livingstone predicted would some day be found by the Christian missionary, now sees the light. The story of Wesleyan triumphs in the southern half of the American board in Natal is full of fascination. The scenes occurring here during the evangelization tour of William Taylor, afterward bishop of Africa, are thrilling in the extreme.

But a little while has this kingdom been pioneered, but far lack of funds could not be entered for work. Now the man who first looked it over is in charge of all our east coast work in Inhambane, and the name of Dr. Richard Hall stands high among those who have given all for the uplift of this darkened land.

What a story is that of the turning of Uganda to God! Well may our leagues devote much time to the study of this work. We need to know what has already been done and what is now urgently needed. We should know the young people in our institutions of learning in this country who are fitting themselves for work in that land. We should know the brethren and there who rank second to none in our schools and who are looking forward to service in their own country as soon as fitted for it.

The work of our own church under the oversight of Bishops Hartzell and Scott moves well in comparison with what was its condition some years since. But more prayer, money and workers is the great need at the present time.

When Influence Need Not Count.

No man ever failed solely for the lack of good influences. Many a man likes to believe that he would have done better if the influences about him had been better, but the man who believes that would not be likely to profit by better influences if he had them. The only influence that we need to be concerned about is that which we control. It is our duty to shed a right influence on others, and it is our duty to seek right influences if we can. For the influences or the lack of influences upon our lives which are beyond our control we have no responsibility. God only asks us to do our best without the favorable surroundings that we lack or in spite of the unfavorable conditions that we regret. God's influence is at hand for all of us. If we will not respond to that influence of earthly friends could not help us.—Richmond (Va.) Christian Monthly.

Getting Home.

My ship is nearing its harbor;
Just entering the narrows now;
The engines have shocked their throbbing;
The evening shadows bow.

It has sailed over many waters,
It has weathered many gales,
The sturdy ship has been tested,
The peace that has kept prevails.

The merciful Father of oceans
Has saved from a shipwreck's fate,
And the harbor lights are gleaming;
The shores of liberty wait.

And the long gone friends are watching,
And my soul swells high with praise,
For it soon shall be moored forever
Within the Harbor Master's place.

MANY WORK WAY THROUGH COLLEGE

SELF-SUPPORTING STUDENTS ARE WELCOMED TO PRINCETON'S BEST CLUBS.

A matter which is causing not a little discussion among the undergraduates at Princeton at the present time is the organization of a freshmen's glee club. Such an organization has been tried before with small success, but it is generally felt that quite a large freshmen classes which now enter Princeton, the proposition would work well if properly managed. There are always a large number who, on entering college, cannot quite qualify for the University Glee Club, but whom, it is felt, should be kept in line for the future by proper training in an intermediate club, and not be allowed to drop entirely out of the work because of failure to qualify during their first year.

The prominence and popularity which the Triangle Club has attained at Princeton in recent years has considerably overshadowed the Glee Club, which, nevertheless, is far from being without value or dull. For, while the former is bound to be more popular and to attract greater attention, the Glee Club holds an important place in college life. It may be considered necessary in many ways, but it also has great possibilities for being a delightful and entertaining side of activity for the students fortunate enough to qualify for membership.

It is expected that another year will see the addition of a regular professional coach to aid the leader of the University Glee Club in training the men. In order that the best results may be obtained, however, from the University Glee Club, even with a professional coach, a freshmen organization should be organized and it is probable that a capable manager will be appointed soon to conduct the work in the fall.

A communication was recently received by the Alumni Weekly of Princeton from a graduate of the university asking whether it was still possible for a student to work his way through this college. The fact is that there are a surprisingly large number among the undergraduates of Princeton who are doing that very thing today in part and in some instances in whole.

Princeton's pride is her democratic spirit of social equality, and these self-supporting students will be found in the best clubs of the university, as well as in every other grade of the social scale. The fact that Princeton men are treated cheerfully during recent years makes the opportunities for helping one's self more and more numerous "for bright and alert young men blessed with good health and common sense," as The Weekly says. "And we need not add that they will receive the unusual respect and admiration by their fellow-students. For, while they are yet boys in years, their courage in undertaking the expense of their education and in successfully carrying the undertaking through in most instances, proves them to be men in affairs. But we would not encourage dull fellows to try the experiment or even the boy of ordinary gifts. Either unusual ability or some special accomplishment with a market value in the college world is essential. It's a case where a capable stenographer would succeed but a prime minister might fall."

NEW NEWARK THEATRE.

Vaudeville House to Be Established in Austin Fynes Circuit.

Newark is to have another theatre, if plans announced by J. Austin Fynes materialize. Mr. Fynes is president and general manager of the International Amusement and Realty Company, of New York city, and his purchase of the Bijou theatre, in Jersey City, and a site for a new Harlem theatre has just been announced. He intends to establish theatres in Brooklyn and through New England besides Newark. All of these will be vaudeville houses. Mr. Fynes will also run a chain of moving picture shows in stores and halls in New York and vicinity. Up to two months ago he was general manager for F. F. Proctor, and had been connected previously with the Keith circuit.

Mr. Fynes is negotiating for a site in Newark, and its location is a source of many rumors, among them one concerning the purchase of the old T. P. Howell residence in Broad street, north of Fulton, and another regarding property in Halsey street and Central avenue. He is represented in Newark by M. T. Barret, who in his local office yesterday stated that nothing definite regarding the site for the new local theatre could be announced, although developments might be expected immediately.

Lack Enough.

Jess—Poor girl! She was married a Friday, the thirteenth.

Jess—Well?

Tess—The idea! Don't you know that's unlucky.

Jess—Unlucky? How can it be if she's actually married?

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

A. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, MARCH 22, 1906.

Now's the time for the Joseph W. Folk of New Jersey.

Can anyone explain why it should cost the baseball club nine dollars per game to police the grounds?

The biggest beat that the serene Oscar Hammerstein could score would be to get Jerome to pose as a sleeping beauty.

Atlantic City has a new "political party whose slogan is "down with" grafters." Time for the hotel employees to hold an indignation meeting.

Senator Colby must laugh heartily when he observes the antics of the half-hearted and pretended friends who try to do the straddle act in politics.

According to the New Brunswick Daily Times, "Judge" Andy Hamilton refuses to talk since his return from Europe. Pray what was he doing up at Albany the other day?

Charles Newell Fowler is said to be a very busy man, therefore, it will be a generous act on the part of the Fifth Congressional district to dispense with his services when his present term expires.

Rutgers College has conferred the honorary degree of civil engineer on Robert A. Meeker, State superintendent of roads. Does that mean that Robert is inactive?—Trenton True American.

No, brother, if Robert had been a trifle more inactive those automobilists, wouldn't have such a love for Jersey roads.

When the redistricting bill becomes a law, which it is likely to, providNew Jersey will be divided into the following assembly district: Bergen, two; Burlington, two; Camden, three; Cumberland, two; Essex, eleven; Hudson, twelve; Middlesex, three; Monmouth, three; Morris, two; Passaic, five; Union, three, and all other counties, including Somerset, one each.

Despite the fact that such learned authorities as Frank Bergen, ex-municipal ownership advocate, and Robert McCarter hand out the opinion that "reformers are no good," the man who watches the course of politics in New Jersey will do well to give his attention to the Colby movement. "You can't fool all the people all the time," and the young and valiant Essex Senator will sweep the State sooner or later, for he wears the armor of honesty.

Newark is awake to the fact that a city can run a lighting plant at a profit, barring, of course, we suppose, any interference of a political machine which might use the public utility as a place of employment for heelers of the ring. An exhaustive report made by the live Board of Trade of that municipality has left open no other course than the immediate establishment of a plant for the lighting of public buildings, parks and streets, according to the Newark Evening News which makes this comment:

"The example set by Detroit in the construction and management of its municipal lighting plant proves to the entire satisfaction of the members of the Board of Trade, who have examined carefully into the matter, that Newark can establish a lighting plant with 3,000 arc and 15,000 incandescent lamps and save $105,000 a year over present prices. In ten years this would more than pay for the entire cost of establishing the plant, assuming, of course, that Newark can operate an electric light plant as honestly and economically as Detroit. A significant feature of the report made by the committee on legislation is the concluding paragraph, in which it is asserted that the strongest arguments against the municipal lighting proposition emanate from the headquarters of private corporation or interested stockholders. This is in itself a strong reason why this city should establish a plant. The private corporations naturally want to make all the money they can, and they, therefore, oppose any plan that limits their income; but there is no need of wasting sympathy on them, for their charges both to cities and to private consumers have been exorbitant. They have consolidated and monopolized the business, have charged whatsoever they pleased, and have ceased to their extinctions by great reductions in contract prices for public lighting whenever they have been threatened with competition they could not suppress. Newark has unusually favorable conditions under which to make the experiment of municipal lighting, and should do so at the earliest practicable date, for the direct benefit of the city, and indirectly to reduce the cost of electric lighting to the citizens."

Henry Lavedan's "The Duel," with Otis Skinner in the principal role, is at the Hudson theatre, Forty-fourth street east of Broadway. Evenings at 8:20; matinees Saturday at 2:15.

AMUSEMENTS.

W. A. Brady's production of Donald MacLaren's new play, "The Redskin," has created a sensation at the Liberty theatre. It is a dramatic novelty and the first ever presented with all Indian characters. The locale is the region of the Great Lakes; year 1750. It is staged in four acts, the scenes showing the council wigwam, the Lily Pool of Nanabin, Nisatah's wife, and the Ice Cave of Many Spirits, Lonawonda's barricade and Autumn, Winter and Spring. The last three scenes are wonderfully beautiful. The acting of the characters in this play is superb. Tyrone Power plays the blind Chief and Edwin Arden acts Niatawa. Katherine Grey plays Adulola. The staging is superbly beautiful. To add realism to council scenes, ten real Brule Sioux from the Rosebud Agency in South Dakota have been brought to New York. Any one who delights in the best in dramatic art will be well repaid for a visit to "The Redskin" at the Liberty.

Klaw & Erlanger's revival of the Drury Lane spectacle of last year, "Humpty Dumpty," is presented by the same cast and with the same magnificent detail as when staged at the New Amsterdam theatre. No increase in prices will be made during this engagement, which means that the theatre patrons of the New York for several weeks to come will see the largest attraction ever presented at popular prices. William C. Schrode, who made such a hit as the Clown at the New Amsterdam; Frank Moulan, John McVeigh, Geo. Schiller, Maude Lillian Berri, Nellie Daly, Diamond Bonehead, John G. Schrode, Joseph C. Smith, Madeline Saville, Augusta Greenleaf, William Fables, David Abrams, Clinton Caly and Eugene Everett are all favorably remembered for their clever work. The Grand Carousel of aeriallists will appear in an entirely new feature, presenting a flock of marvelously trained pigeons which follow them in their wonderful gyrations through the air. More than 400 people will be seen in the ballet. Prices will range from 25 cents to $1.00 and seats may be ordered two weeks ahead by mail or telegraph.

Charles Klein's second mighty success, "The Lion and the Mouse," is still making the "S. R. O." sign do duty at the Lyceum theatre, Broadway and Forty-fifth street. Evenings at 8:15; matinees, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 2:15.

At the Knickerbocker theatre, Broadway and thirty-eighth street, Fritzi Scheff in the ballet, has large audiences nightly. "Mlle. Modiste" is her vehicle. Evenings at 8:15; matinee Saturday.

The uproariously funny English farce, "Mr. Hopkinson," is on for a long run at the Savoy theatre, Broadway and Thirty-fourth street. Evenings at 8:15; matinees Thursday and Saturday.

Augustus Thomas' brilliant production, "The Embassy Ball," with the distinguished actor, Frederick D'Orsay, is to be seen at Daly's theatre, Broadway and Thirtieth street. Evenings at 8:15; matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:15.

Francis Wilson in "The Mountain Climber" is the attraction at the Criterion theatre, Broadway and Forty-fourth streets. Evenings at 8:20; matinee Saturday, 2:15.

At the Empire theatre Miss Maude Adams, the theatregoers favorite, is starring in J. M. Barrie's magnificent production, "Peter Pan," Broadway and Fortieth street. Evenings at 8:20; matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2:15.

George M. Cohan in his new play, "George Washington, Jr.," is to be seen at the Herald Square theatre. Best seats $1.50.

A notable event in New York theatricals this week in the revival with all the circumstance of an original production of Brandon Thomas' great comedy, "Charley's Aunt," at the Manhattan theatre. Old theatregoers will remember that this phenomenally successful play had its original production at this theatre thirteen years ago, and that here and elsewhere throughout the country it duplicated its enormous success in London, England, where it perhaps holds the record for a long run. It is by common consent one of the most amusing plays ever produced in English, and its revival is more than timely. On its original run in New York, it will be remembered that Etienne Girardot, the accomplished English comedian, who has since become thoroughly an American actor, was as responsible for its success here as Penley was responsible for the English vogue of the play, although Mr. Girardot played on original lines, and was in no sense an imitator of Mr. Penley, who originated the part of the bogus aunt. It augurs well for this revival of "Charley's Aunt" that Mr. Girardot has been engaged for his original role, and there is no doubt that again he will impart to the performance his inimitable charm as a comedian. It is said that the new company to support Mr. Girardot is as good as the company that formerly supported him; while the management has had the play equipped newly throughout, the scenery being by Gates and Morange, and all accessories being of the first class. It will be strange indeed if "Charley's Aunt" does not again capture New York and run indefinitely.

A RACE-HATRED PROTEST

Rev. H. C. Ashley Says no Negro Should Attend "The Clansman" Performance.

INDIGNANT OVER IT

Pastor Declares That Self-Respecting Colored People Will Keep Away From Show Booked for March 30.

That "The Clansman" will be greeted here in much the same way that its initial performance was received in New York is evident from the feeling among members of the colored race. When the show was put on at the Liberty theatre, in New York, there was a storm of protest against it and on *one or two oc*casions, its author, Rev. Thomas Dixon, narrowly escaped being assaulted. Not until he applied to the police department for protection did he feel safe in going about the streets as he pleased. Whether he will come here personally with his show is not known.

Rev. H. C. Ashley, pastor of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, is one of the representative negroes of the city who is outspoken against the play. He lived among the Klu Klux clansmen when the bitterness was the most intense and says he knows what it means to live where there is race hatred. In speaking of the coming production, Rev. Dr. Ashley said to a Daily Press reporter today:

"I think that no self-respecting negro should attend the performance of 'The Clansman.' I do not think my people ought to patronize a show that has for its moral 'race hatred.' Stirring up the racial matter can do no good to anyone and is harmful both to the individual and the State. What the intelligent and self-respecting negro wants to see is the uplifting of his race and he is opposed to making the narrow and uncalled bitterness against the black people any more intense. I hope no colored man will go near the Plainfield theatre on March 30, when that show is parading its dangerous teachings."

T. H. Bridges, of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, is another colored man who deprecates the fact that Manager Counihan has given the play a date at his house. Mr. Bridges says: "The colored people won't go sort to violence, but they don't like to see such a thing as 'The Clansman.' It's a wrong thing to have such a show and I don't think it ought to be allowed. No decent colored man will go to see it."

Rev. Chase, secretary of the Church of God, colored, said today that his church takes no notice of such men as Thomas Dixon. "We ignore him and his books altogether for he can't hurt or benefit the colored race. Of course I am opposed to that play being produced here but it won't harm anybody."

DR. ZELIE SPOKE AT SUMMIT BANQUET.

Annual Affair of the Y. M. C. A. of That Place Saturday Night.

Hamilton Wright Mable, LL. D., of Summit, acted as toastmaster, as he has for many years past, at the annual dinner of the Young Men's Christian Association in the New Park House at Summit Saturday evening. The speakers were the Rev. John S. Zelie, D. D., pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of this city; the Rev. B. P. Raymond, D. D., president of Wesleyan University, of Middletown, Conn., and William B. Millar, International secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who took as his topic "The World-wide Work of the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A."

The occasion proved to be the equal of any of its predecessors and the attendance was large, covers being laid for 122. The committee in charge was composed of the Messrs. James B. Gallagher, William S. Porter and A. A. Ahern.

The Pen in the War Office.

The sword seems to have had a fascination for men of the pen, for several war secretaries have been noted for their literary achievements. Macaulay was war minister under Melbourne, Windham, who held office under Pitt, could claim to be a true journalist, for he helped Corbett to start the Political Register. He also was a member of the famous Literary Club, and stood by Johnson's death-bed. Wynn, who was war secretary in Grey's administration, was a man of literary attainments, and numbered among his personal friends Southey, Hallam, and Carlyle.—London Chronicle.

Drying the Face.

A soft towel should always be used in drying the face, rather after soap or any other, for a rough or bath towel only irritates the skin and serves to work it some injury. The following recipe is also a very good one: Dissolve one can of lye into a quart of cold water. Try out five pounds of mutton tallow until perfectly pure. Have the grease as cool as it can be without congealing, then pour it in, a drop at a time, and beat constantly into the dissolved lye.

4TH JR. O.U.A.M. COUNCIL

Plainfield Council Title of Organization to be Instituted Here Next Month.

PLANS ARE ALL MADE

State Officers to Be Present at Ceremony on April 23—Charter Member Signers Obtained.

Plans are underway for the institution of a new council, Jr. O. U. A. M., in this city, and invitations have been issued by a committee comprising Peter H. Bennett and Daniel Van Winkle for a public meeting to be held in Junior Hall on Monday night, April 9, at which time J. Morgan Reed and State Council Secretary W. S. Meek will be among the speakers. It is proposed to institute the new council on Monday night, April 23. The name chosen for the new organization is Plainfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and meetings will be held every Monday night at Junior Hall.

The required number of signers, twenty-five, has been secured for the charter list and the committee is now perfecting the organization. It is announced that thus far not a single member has been secured from either Franklin, Somerset or Bensonhurst councils, and it is proposed to recruit members from outside those councils.

One of the features of the new council will be the funeral benefit rate. It is proposed to give the members the choice of three rates, $750, $500 or $250. They can choose either one and pay accordingly. The sick benefits will be the same as in other councils, $5 a week for thirteen weeks.

While the committee in charge declare that it does not intend to draw from the other three councils, the more has naturally stirred up some opposition, but it is not likely that any concerted action will be taken to prevent the institution of the new council. It is maintained that there is room here for a fourth council, that there are many here who do not belong to either one of the three councils, and who are willing to join the new organization. It is on this basis that the new council is being formed.

FORMER PLAINFIELD GIRL TO BE A PRIMA DONNA

MISS JOSEPHINE SCHAFFER WILL MAKE DEBUT IN "SARONNA."

Miss Josephine Schaffer, the former Plainfield young woman who has been training hard for herself a member of Conried's School of Opera established in connection with the Metropolitan Opera Company, is soon to make her debut as a prima donna. She will appear in Le Grand Howland's new opera, "Saronna," to be produced soon in Florence, Italy, and will be supported by many singers of note.

Miss Schaffer's success has been almost phenomenal and she is now one of America's best known young singers. She has been appearing in various operas at the Metropolitan in the past two seasons, and exceptional praise has been accorded her. There is but little doubt that she will be classed among the leading prima donnas within a few years.

While in Plainfield Miss Schaffer lived with her father at Liberty and Fourth streets, where he conducted a grocery. He is now a resident of Brooklyn, but both he and his daughter make frequent visits to this city when her studies will permit.

$5,000 Suit Against P. S. C.

A suit for $5,000 damages has been brought in the Union County Circuit Court against the Public Service Corporation by Charles F. Beigert, of Elizabeth, for injuries he claims to have received on last February 17 at East Jersey and Division streets, that city, in a collision with a trolley car. He was driving a wagon at the time, and was hurled to the pavement with great force, while the wagon was wrecked. He has since been confined to his bed, and claims he is permanently hurt. He attributes the accident to the carelessness of the motorman.

St. Patrick's Day Party.

Captain and Mrs. J. E. Curtis, of 729 Carlton avenue, entertained a company of forty persons at a St. Patrick's Day party at their home Saturday night. The invitations to the affair were printed in green, the house was elaborately decorated with the color green and ice cream was served bearing tiny green flags. The evening was spent in playing games and dancing.

Borough School Report.

The borough Board of Education's annual school report has just been issued in neat pamphlet form. Copies may be had of Superintendent Krebs. Besides covering the work of the past year it gives most valuable information relative to school matters and details the courses of study for each year.

OSHKOSH CLUB PLANS ITS THIRD PRODUCTION

JOSEPH M. SHELLABARGER SELECTED AS LEADER.

The Oshkosh Club met at the Casino Saturday night and decided to give one of its original hodge-podge shows sometime during May at the Casino. There was a large attendance of members and the rehearsals are to be started at once. While the show will be along the same lines of the previous ones, it is intended to make it more elaborate and different scenes than those used before will be secured. As previously stated, no women will be engaged in the cast.

Joseph M. Shellabarger has been chosen leader and he will turn his musical ability to good account in the arrangement of the music and songs. The club has the hearty support and help of Charles J. Fish, while George S. Ring is the treasurer and Harry Lovell the secretary.

From now on two or three rehearsals will be held every week until the time for the show. The members are now in search of an original name for the production, and something quite as startling and unique as those selected before will be announced soon.

MRS. FEIGL'S NEW PLAY PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCE

LOCAL THEATREGOERS ARE DELIGHTED WITH STORY AND PRODUCTION.

Before two large and appreciative audiences, Mrs. Jay Maiden Feigl's new play, "The Girl Patsy," was successfully launched at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday. The author has taken a distinctly new field from her previous efforts but as in "Texas" her plot, situations and climaxes bear the stamp of originality and received the seal of approval. The story is refreshingly told and the role of "Patsy," a supposed waif but in reality a rich man's daughter, affords Miss Mary Ryan ample opportunity to display her ability. She is a dainty little actress who is sure to make a success of the part. The love romance running through the story is as "cute" as that in "The Prince Chap," conceded to be the prettiest revealed in any play of the year.

Individual hits were made by Miss Marie Haines as "Mrs. Musselwhite" and John Morris as "Jasper Musselwhite," the latter furnishing most of the comedy. The four acts have been mounted with great care, the smallest detail receiving attention. Mrs. Feigl and a large number of well known New York theatrical men and women witnessed both matinee and night performances.

Only popular prices were charged *but the production is one that en*titles the management to place it among the biggest attractions on the road.

Kean's Assistant Secretary.

United States Senator John Kean has appointed Erol O. Horner, son of Captain Edward A. Horner, Jr., of Tuckerton, as his assistant secretary at Washington. Erol has been for some time in the Tuckerton Railroad office at Tuckerton, as stenographer and assistant to Superintendent John C. Price. Erol was recommended by State Chairman Frank O. Briggs.

MISSIONARY RAISES $500 ON A APPEAL

REV. DR. CHOATE'S PROFITABLE TALK TO CONGREGATIONALISTS.

Rev. Dr. Washington Choate, of New York, secretary of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, occupied the pulpit at the Congregational church, Sunday morning, when a special effort was made to secure funds for this work. As a re*sult of his appeal* $500 was subscribed by the members of the church.

Dr. Choate gave an outline of what the Congregational home mission work has done for the country from its inception and of the effect and influence of it in the home and the church. He gave an exceedingly clear idea of the work in the home field and his remarks encourage those who heard him to contribute liberally to end the enterprise.

Last night Dr. Choate addressed the young people of the church, telling them what they can do toward helping the cause of home missions. He also told what has already been done by the Congregational young people throughout the country.

Jersey Fame Reaches Spain.

Secretary William Fleming of the Savings Loan and Building Association of East Rutherford, N. J., has received a letter from Manager A. Ramirez, of El Hogar Espandi, a cooperative bank of Madrid, Spain, asking him to "send us some of your literature illustrating the working of your juvenile savings bank; also that you inform us of the price of the banks that you lend to the Hibpotian savers."

Mr. Levy Turned Down.

Simon Levy's dancing dolls will not be an attraction at the hospital carnival, Major Maze Edwards having decided that as he refused to give a private performance, the show might be of a doubtful character. Former Mayor Fink has returned Mr. Levy's check for privilege.

Will Fix Yearly Budget.

The Common Council will not meet until Monday night, April 2, when it is expected that the budget for the year will be determined upon by the adoption of an ordinance presented by the finance committee.

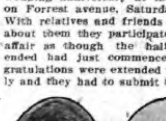
FIFTY YEARS MARRIED

The Golden Anniversary Observed Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Young.

RECEIVED MANY GIFTS

The Celebrants Leave Today on the Same Trip As Taken on Their Honeymoon—Were Wedded at Albany.



Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Young.

Rounding out fifty years of happy, married life, former Mayor and Mrs. Thomas S. Young, of Fanwood, observed the event by holding a golden wedding anniversary at their home on Forrest avenue, Saturday night. With relatives and friends gathered about them they participated in the affair as though the half century ended had just commenced. Congratulations were extended repeatedly and they had do submit to all the gibes and jokes that generally fall to the lot of a bride and groom.

In the early part of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Young were "married" again, the supposed ceremony being performed by Thomas J. Nicholl, of Scotch Plains. It was observed with every detail surrounding a nuptial event and a collation was served at the close, just as is done in present day affairs. There were several features of the gathering arranged that neither celebrant knew anything about and among them was the presentation of several handsome gifts. Mr. Young is a member of the New York Produce Exchange and from some of his colleagues he received a handsome loving cup engraved with the dates 1856-1906 and the following inscription: "Presented to T. S. Young on the fiftieth anniversary of his wedding by a few of his friends of the New York Produce Exchange, March 18, 1906."

During the "reminiscent" social period, vocal selections were given by Miss Edna Nichol, accompanied by her sister, Miss Florence Nichol, and there were short addresses by relatives. The home was attractively decorated with palms, plants and ferns. Today Mr. and Mrs. Young departed on a trip that will include all the points stopped at on their wedding tour, among them New York, Philadelphia and Washington, though the time consumed in doing so will be very much less, the travelling facilities then being carried on under difficulties.

Among the guests in attendance were Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bettman, Freeholder and Mrs. S. P. T. Wilbur, and daughter, Miss Louise F. Wilbur, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Stephen, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Moore, of this city; Mr. and Mrs. Corry Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Connell, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. J. Lowery VanDyke, of Westfield; Thomas Brooksby, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Horace G. Young, and daughter, Miss Frances Young, C. A. Bettman, Miss Carrie Bettman and Miss Louise Bettman, of Fanwood; B. B. Tatham, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Nicholl, the Misses Edna, Louise and Florence Nicholl, Mrs. Tom. Townsend, Stephen S. Townsend and Miss Lydia Townsend, of Scotch Plains. Before parting, each guest left his autographs upon a golden wedding sofa pillow cover.

Mr. and Mrs. Young, the latter being Miss Wilbur, were married at Albany, N. Y., March 18, 1856, by Judge Robertson. The only guests in attendance who were at the anniversary were Mrs. J. M. Bettman and Freeholder Wilbur, brother and sister of the bride, Freeholder Wilbur being but a very small boy. In 1873 Mr. and Mrs. Young settled in Fanwood and ever since he has been identified with every movement which has been for the best interests of the township or borough. When the agitation began a few years ago to set the borough aside from the township, he was one of the prime movers and was made the first mayor. He is often referred to as "The Father of the Borough" because of his untiring work at the time. After stepping from the executive chair he served other offices and to this day never fails to respond to the citizens' calls. He is now a member of the Common Council and the affairs of Fanwood are attended to with as much care as though they were his own private matters. He has been a member of the New York Produce Exchange for forty years and is to be seen on the floor any day hustling about to keep in touch with the turns of the market.

During her residence at Fanwood, Mrs. Young has been identified with church and social affairs and has been a devoted worker in the cause of temperance. Many kind acts of charity, quietly done, and her sympathetic nature have endeared her to all. Both she and her husband enjoy the best of health and have never once thought of allowing the younger people to take their places in business or social life.

DANGER OF TUBERCULOSIS

less cases or refractory cases, cases unwilling to follow instruction or too unintelligent to carry them out, cases who, therefore, cannot be properly controlled at home and who are discharged on account of discipline from institutions, are especially dangers to their neighbors and to the public, and most of all need the care of the Health Board. These, the Health Board must have the power to remove, forcibly if necessary, to a place of quarantine, and to detain as long as the danger they represent exists.

"The call for disinfection follows naturally from the knowledge of cases obtained through notification, and demands that when a case of tuberculosis dies or moves from its residence, that residence shall be made safe.

"These three fields comprise for the most part as has been said, the municipality's functions relative to the disease, but to explain the necessity and means of notification, to point out the dangers arising from lack of care in tubercular cases, and to emphasize the safety always present when the cases follow the usual simple rules for the disposal of sputum, the Health Board may, and in fact should, instruct the public by means of placards, circulars and notes of information of various sorts."

Hugh F. Fox, of this city, president of the State Charities Aid Association, who is one of the leading authorities on the subject among laymen in the country, spoke on "Fighting the Death Rate." He said in part:

"I hope, after what we have heard from Dr. Farrand and Dr. Huddleston, that the doctrine of pre-destination as applied to consumption, is completely exploded in Plainfield. If we can only do away with the idea that it is a hereditary disease, the hopelessness of it will disappear. But old superstitions die hard. It took the Europeans 700 years to overcome the superstition that scrofula—which included tuberculosis—was a disease which could only be cured by the Royal touch. It was mixed up somehow with the Divine Right of Kings and came to be known as the 'King's Evil.' In the reign of Charles the 2d of England, 92,107 persons were touched, and according to the King's physician—Dr. Wiseman—they were nearly all cured! The custom lasted from the time of Edward the Confessor to that of George the First. We have no 'King' to touch us here—and the problem is one for democracy to solve. Suppose we measure it first. I am not going to bore you with a mass of statistics; just a little simple arithmetic.

"You have heard that consumption has been spread to a greater proportion of the people than any other disease, and that it is the most dangerous communicable disease with which sanitists have to deal. It is said to kill one-seventh of the human race! There are at least 330,000 living consumptives in the United States, and the deaths from this disease number at least 110,000 a year. Perhaps we can grasp what this means better if we compare it with the costliest tragedy in our nation's history—the Civil War—which last four years and caused the deaths of 359,528 Union soldiers. There were only 67,058 killed in action; those who died from their wounds numbered 43,012 and the deaths from disease were 224,586. (There are now nearly a million Civil War pensioners on the roll and our pension bill amounts to $142,000,000 a year!)

"The deaths from tuberculosis in the last four years were probably 120,000 more than are credited to the whole war! Deaths from death in a single year number 10,000 more than all the Union soldiers who fell in action or died from their wounds! And there is no pension fund for the families of consumptives! The total death rate of the Union army from all causes, was about 2 per cent., but the killed and those who died from wounds were only 3½ per cent. The death rate from consumption in the cities of the United States during the same period was probably about ½ of 1 per cent. If this were, a life insurance company had been called upon to choose between the battle hazard and the tuberculosis hazard, the tables of mortality only, have given the city stay-at-homes seven chances to one in the comparison between bacilli and bullets.

"Now let us consider for a moment the social urgency of the problem. The losses from consumption under the age of 15 are very small. Its chief havoc is worked between the ages of 15 and 45. What is more, it attacks preferably young men and women who are just beginning to repay to society the capital that has been invested in them through the years of their helplessness and education; or those who, a little further on in life, are at the height of their productive power, and have families dependent on them.' (Lilian Brandt). Not only does it make an enormous loss in the aggregate productive power of the social body, but it has a large place among the causes of poverty. The records of the relief societies show that sickness is the cause of poverty in at least one case out of four. The long duration of consumption and its liability to fall on the chief wage-earner of the family gives it importance as a cause of poverty, out of proportion even to its importance as a cause of death! Remember that no laws, and no administrative measures can increase the number of births, but we can fight the death rate! The prevention of disease is not merely a matter for doctors. To lower the death rate is a part of social reform. In fact to multiply life's chances and opportunities is the very passion of the democracy!

"Just a word more as to the Plainfield point of view. The health of a community is said to be the measure of its well-being, and this city has been one of the first in the State to treat his question seriously. The death rate from tuberculosis in Plainfield is lower than in most cities, but it is larger than it need be! Mr. Thurlow will tell you presently what is being done, and what may be done to make this a model, not only for the State but for the Nation. The point I want to impress upon you is that every citizen, our neighbor is social as well as personal, and we are concerned in the conditions of Jersey City, and Newark, and other places, almost as vitally as though we lived there. The suburbs must help the cities to fight this evil. This is essentially a city problem, and two-third of the population of New Jersey are living in the cities! We cannot separate ourselves from the mass of the people, even by living in model suburbs. There are very few places in New Jersey—or anywhere else for that matter—which have as definite municipal ideals as Plainfield has. We are still in the experimental stage of municipal organization and government in this country. In Europe, as Dr. Shaw puts it, 'the honesty and general efficiency of municipal government are not seriously in question anywhere. Municipal government from Scotland to Hungary is exciting the bacteriologist and the technical school, and inquiring anxiously about the housing of the people.'

"In New York city, physicians are required to report their cases, just as in Plainfield. The reduction in the mortality from tuberculosis in New York since 1886 has been about 40 per cent.

"And now in closing, I want to explain Dr. Hedges' appeal to the people of Plainfield to help along the newly organized State Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis. The membership fee has been put at a dollar a year in the hope that a large number will join. This is the first general appeal that has been made for it, and it would be a fine thing if Plainfield could lead the way tonight with a hundred applications!"

Dr. William H. Murray, who is a member of the State Board of Health, spoke of the importance of the crusade as viewed by the Board. He said:

"That the state is sadly in need of such a movement as was started in Newark a few weeks ago and as we hope is now being started in Plainfield, there can be no doubt. Last statistics show that 3,380 persons died from consumption in New Jersey during the year 1904. Think of it! In one year in our state nearly 4,000 persons died of a disease the very existence of which it is possible to prevent.

"It is unnecessary to quote any more statistics to prove that this subject ought to lie deeply on the hearts and consciences of those of us who are state officials and especially of those of us who are charged with the care of the public health. While the work of stamping out tuberculosis is one which must of necessity be carried on mainly by local Boards of Health or by societies formed in the different communities, the State can do much by the passage of proper laws and the erection of proper sanitoria to hasten the extermination of this evil. The State of New Jersey has already begun the erection of an institution for the care of unfortunates who have contracted this disease and who must be treated in a hospital; for it is obviously wrong to expect such patients to be treated in the general hospitals throughout the state.

"The state is already doing much toward the stamping out of this malady in cattle, and thereby diminishing the chances of its transmission to mankind by meat and milk. And the State Board of Health is doing what it can with the limited funds afforded it to prevent the spread of tuberculosis through railroad cars, especially sleeping cars, and steamboats.

"Perhaps the work carried on by our State Laboratory is at present the most valuable to physicians and local Boards of Health; here at the small expense of 18 cents for postage for each examination, a test is made which will enable any physician to detect or determine the positive presence of this disorder, and showing beyond peradventure of a doubt the necessity for at once taking radical measures for curing this sickness in any given case.

"The law has prescribed that when any disease shall be declared by the State Board of Health to be dangerously communicable, then local Boards of Health may pass ordinances compelling physicians to report cases of the disease in question, and thereby enabling local Boards of Health to take the necessary steps for stamping it out. This malady has already been declared by your State Board to be of this nature, and splendidly have the members of your local Board taken up their part of the work. It is for you and me as citizens to hold up their hands by word of mouth and by encouraging the appropriation of money by the city, thus enabling them to maintain an effective warfare against this common foe.

"I will just here say I say a word to my brother physicians who may be present: Gentlemen, you must help the local Board of Health more freely than you have done in the past; you must tell them promptly of the location of your cases or the Board can do nothing. Some years ago the local Board sent a courteous note to each physician requesting him to notify the Board of the location of any case of tuberculosis in his practice or to state that he had no cases. But two of the physicians made any response, and a third used the accompanying stamped envelope to send a communication to the Board on another subject, thereby saving himself two cents.

"It has been said that this is at present, a campaign of education. No doubt this is so, but it must soon become a campaign of action and I earnestly hope that within a short time we of Plainfield may point with pride at the improvement in our death rate as well as the improvement in other and larger fields.

"Again, on the part of the State Board of Health let me wish this movement every success."

Health Inspector Leon R. Thurlow delivered the closing address, speaking on the work of the Plainfield Board of Health against consumption. He spoke as follows:

"Plainfield, in common with every city in the United States, has a high death rate from tuberculosis. During the past five years there have been 167 deaths from tuberculosis in Plainfield alone. This is 12 per cent. of the total deaths and an average of three deaths per month. This past year of 1905, there were 35 deaths, over 15 per cent. of which were persons between the ages of 20 and 40 years.

"The Plainfield Board of Health realizing that tuberculosis was a preventable disease, made its first move in 1901 in the adoption of an ordinance prohibiting spitting on the sidewalks of the public streets and upon the floors of public buildings and in street cars. Signs were posted in prominent places in public buildings and in railway cars; and, while up to the present time, this ordinance has not been strictly enforced and no arrests have been made as in some of the larger cities, the moral effect has been very good, especially in regard to the street cars and depot platforms. Today, the policemen and car conductors are supplied with a small yellow card on which is printed a warning against spitting; one of these cards handed to a passenger in a crowded car will usually be very effective.

"In 1902 tuberculosis was declared by the Board of Health to be communicable and dangerous to the public health, and physicians were required to report all cases coming under their professional attendance. Much trouble was experienced in compelling the physicians to report these cases promptly, but gradually the feeling against this is being overcome. In the majority of cases reported, no action is taken by the Board beyond recording them. But if the consumptive has the disease in an advanced stage and lives in a crowded boarding house or similar place, he will be required to move to some place where there is less danger of spreading the disease.

"Our house-to-house inspection of the past two years has shown that the housing facilities of Plainfield are very satisfactory. We are fortunate in having very few tenement houses and a correspondingly few instances of overcrowding. There are, however, a number of houses, principally single dwelling houses, that are in an unsanitary and uninhabitable condition and it is against these that we are now making a crusade. The work of disinfection is equally handicapped by the frequent change of residence of a consumptive and the difficulty of obtaining knowledge of these changes. There is no doubt but that, when consumption is thoroughly understood that the family of a consumptive will be compelled by ordinance to report any change of residence.

"The Board of Health is aiding in the education of the people on the subject of tuberculosis by the wide distribution of circulars and also through the local papers. Circulars containing general information for the consumptive and those living with him, are supplied to all physicians for their use among their patients. This work of the Board would be more effective if supplemented by a well organized Anti-Tuberculosis Society. Such an association could send a nurse into the homes of the consumptives and show them the details of the treatment and how to live without being a danger to their family and friends.

"Such a movement, in combination with the work of the Board of Health, would undoubtedly greatly lessen the number of deaths from this dreaded disease."

In closing the meeting Dr. Hedges called attention to the fact that it was in caring for the infected sputum that the fundamental step in the prevention of tuberculosis lay. The dried sputum of consumptives, flying from the streets and the floors of public places, constituted the greatest danger in the spread of the disease. He strongly emphasized the need of compelling consumptives to dispose of the sputum by sanitary and hygienic ways.

SCHOOL MEETING QUIET

tioned the generous offer of still another citizen to donate all the shrubbery which may be needed to beautify the school grounds.

"The introduction of departmental instruction in the higher grammar grades, the abolition of mid-year promotions, and the stiffening of the High School curriculum by the restriction of electives, the thorough revision of the courses, and the extension of the commercial course to four years, are radical changes which will, we think, soon prove their value.

"The total enrollment of pupils for the school year 1904-5 was 1,171, and the average attendance 836. This year, to the first of March, the enrollment is 1,120, and the average attendance 926. The gain in regularity is largely due to freedom this year from the diseases of children, usually prevalent, and to the open weather of these winter months as compared with that of the previous year."

The financial report detailed the following figures: Receipts—Building fund, balance March 31, 1905, $16,364.02; sale of bonds, $4,000; total, $20,364.02. Manual training fund, $7,270.84; general fund, from all sources, $54,703.16; library fund, $196.88; total receipts, $82,534.90. Disbursements—Building fund, $20,242; manual training, $4,672.42; general fund, $39,225.20; library, $76.57. Balance in hands of custodian, $18,318.71.

RECITAL BY PUPILS OF MISS MAY WHITNEY.

One of Them Played Composition Studied Silently.

An informal but exceedingly interesting musicale was given Saturday afternoon by a few of the pupils of Miss May Vincent Whitney at her studios in the Babcock building. One of the most interesting features of the occasion was the playing by Miss Frances Rittenhouse of a composition of Reinberger memorized on the clavier and played on that instrument, and then for the first time on the piano.

Those of the audience who heard these pupils in a recital given a year ago were impressed to an even greater degree with their ability, their careful training and the intelligent rendering of the programme: Fanisidle by Lack; "Gavotte" from Gluck, George; Preamble, by J. S. Bach, Miss Muriel Collins; "The Chase," by Reinberger, Miss Frances Rittenhouse; "Pastorale Scarlatti," Miss Myra Emmons; "Papillon," Grieg, Miss Sadie Winkler; "Perverte Disciplinade," Miss Helen George; "Impromptu in B Flat," Schubert, Miss Frances Rittenhouse; "Polonaise," Paderewski, Miss Murfel Collins; "Polonaise," Borowitz, Miss Sadie Winkler; "Valse Brilliante," from Overture of Faust for two pianos, Miss Whitney, Miss Biglow.

A second recital will be given next Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Shrieking and Shooting.

It is a comfort to realize when we hear Sadie talking about the good old times that used to be," that in some respects, at least, we show more common sense today. One instance is our attitude toward women. There was a time when a woman was expected to shriek and faint in almost any emergency. It was even considered an attractive exhibition of dependence. Today we pardon lack of nerve and self-possession in a woman almost as little as in a man. The girl who rides and shoots has taken the place of the girl who used to shriek and faint. No small factor in bringing this welcome change about has been the campaign carried on by the J. Stevens Arms and Tool Company, Chicopee Falls, Mass., makers of the famous Stevens firearms, who have introduced our girls to the healthy, unbuilding sport of outdoor shooting. The company have issued a catalog illustrating many varieties of light-weight rifles, shotguns and pistols which girls all over the country are using today. It contains much useful and interesting information on such points as the selection, care and testing of firearms, besides notes on ammunition, targets, etc. We understand this book of reference will be sent free to any one sending four cents in stamps, to cover postage.

A Lenten Musical Service.

The choir of the First Baptist church, under the direction of Howard M. Case, organist, is rehearsing the oratorio work, "The Seven Last Words," by Dubois, which it is proposed to give at the church on Thursday night, April 12. The choir will be augmented by additional voices and assisted by a stringed orchestra.

FRIENDLY SONS BANQUET

Father Bogan Makes Informal Remarks Before Assemblage Addressed by Governor.

STOKES IS HUMOROUS

Rev. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook Among the Speakers—Annual Affair at Elizabeth.

Rev. B. M. Bogan, Mayor James F. Buckle, Chief of Police P. S. Kiely, Amos Andrews, George J. Tobin and Charles M. Ward were among the Plainfielders who attended the banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in the Y. M. C. I. A. Hall, Elizabeth, Saturday night. Father Bogan was called upon for a speech, but confined himself to a few informal remarks.

Governor Edward Caspar Stokes was the principal speaker. Others who responded to toasts were Rev. Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook, William A. Pendergast, William P. Cantwell, Colonel Charles W. Fuller.

The remarks of Governor Stokes were replete with humor and won hearty applause. When Pthe toastmaster, W. Charles Matlack, introduced the chief executive, he told him that the Sons of St. Patrick elected him to membership.

"Then," exclaimed the Governor, glancing at the liquid refreshment with a sly look, "I can thank you for my present condition. A great many other organizations claim to have elected me, but I now perceive their claims were false."

Colonel Dennis T. Collins, who introduced the toastmaster, had said that Governor Stokes' administration was one of the best the State had ever known.

"I am gratified to know that," said the Governor, referring to this remark, "and I may incidentally state that Colonel Collins is the heavy end of that administration."

The colonel is a man of great avoirdupois. The allusion raised a great laugh.

"There are three occasions in the calendar year," continued the speaker, "when the people of this country offer up homage on the altar of indigestion: the birthday of Lincoln, the birthday of Washington, and the birthday of one who assumed the greatest role of all times—that of freeing Ireland from sinners."

The Governor then traced America's achievements in late years and advocated a policy of caution, that her future might be secure.

UNDECIDED ON SITE FOR ANNUAL CARNIVAL

TIER'S LAKE LOCATION CONSIDERED TOO SMALL FOR THE PURPOSE.

W. S. Miller, manager for the hospital carnival, and former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, held a conference on Saturday to talk over some of the details of the great show to be held here in May and June. It has not been decided yet where the carnival will be held. The grounds on the bank of Tier's Lake offers some advantages, but it is hardly thought they will be large enough to accommodate the crowds that will attend. It is quite likely that the grounds on West Fourth street will be chosen.

Manager W. J. Counihan, manager of the New Plainfield theatre, also attended the conference and at the request of Mr. Fisk he agreed to look after the bill posting for the carnival and to assist in other ways toward making the carnival a success.

The details for the carnival are rapidly being perfected and there is no doubt but that this year's affair will far exceed the one held last summer. It is planned to present many additional attractions and the whole affair will be conducted on a more elaborate scale,

The weather kept the crowd away from the Jr. O. U. A. M. fair at Armory last night. A crush is expected tonight, when Eddie Weston's singing of Haviland hits will be a feature of the night.

PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION ADOPTS A CONSTITUTION

Former Senator Reed Enlivens Meeting By One of His Papers.

MR. DEPEW EXPLAINS

President of Organization Says Next Thing To Do Is To Get Funds Together — Compares Rates Here and Elsewhere.

Clad in full armor of organization, the Plainfield Protective Association ended its second meeting Wednesday prepared to wage its campaign for equitable treatment from the P. S. C. in earnest. A constitution and a set of by-laws was adopted, and the immediate programme of activity was outlined.

The meeting was held at the Casino. The forty members present were of the same representative character as at the first gathering in Grace church parish house, and the same pitch of earnestness that marked that meeting was noticeable.

Former State Senator Charles A. Reed, who did not attend the first meeting, was present, and took an active part in the proceedings. He asked for a lot of information and advocated an amendment to the constitution. The information was given, but the amendment was lost. He enlivened the session with a snarl at the newspapers. Councilman Hibbard was among those present.

Chairman L. V. F. Randolph presented the constitution, which is a somewhat lengthy instrumeat.

Partisan politics is ruled out of the organization by the following section:

"No partisan politics will be permitted in any addresses or speeches made before the association by members or otherwise. This will not prevent the advocacy of any useful measures, no matter by what party it may be endorsed, but in no case shall any such measure be treated or considered from a political point of view. This rule will be enforced by the presiding officer in conducting all meetings."

The objects and purposes of the association are stated as follows:

"The protection of its members and the community in general against extortion, danger and injury, and the improvement of municipal conditions in the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield."

Four sub-committees, to be appointed by the chairman from the members of the executive committee, are provided for. There is to be a P. S. C. committee, to look after the gas and electric lighting situation, headed by the president; a public welfare committee, headed by the vice-president; a finance and expenditure committee, of which the treasurer is head, and a law and legislation committee, of which the secretary is chairman.

Mr. Reed thought the law and legislation ought to be differently constructed. It was his opinion that different forms of legislation might require different workers on the committee, and he advocated the appointment of the committee by the president, with particular attention to the need of a lawyer among its members.

When the amendment was put seven members supported its author.

In the general discussion that followed the adoption of the constitution Mr. Reed asked for information as to the proceedings at the first meeting.

"All I have learned about the association," he explained, "was what the president's circular contained and what information I could glean from the newspapers, which, of course, are very inaccurate."

Timorous members of the association shivered as they looked at the reporters. They were reassured by the absence of cheers and bitterness among the newspaper men. True it was that his remark about the newspapers was uncalled for, but then Mr. Reed does not seem to be able to forget the cause of his political retirement.

"One of the things Mr. Reed wanted to know about was the powers of the executive committee. Was it in full control or did the rank and file have any voice in governing the organization?

Chairman Randolph explained that the committee had full powers under the constitution, but that the organization was very democratic, and suggestions would always be welcomed by the committeemen. President Depew added his assurance in a similar view. Mr. Reed appeared to be satisfied with the prospect of unlimited suggestion.

He spoke in favor of hiring an expert to look over the meters and to investigate the methods of supply in vogue at the P. S. C. stations.

"Somebody must be able to tell us what we are getting and what we are paying for," he said. "Let us find that somebody and employ him."

"An expert is certainly needed," agreed President Depew. "That is why we must have money. We have not done any very active work on the matter at issue because we thought it best to adopt a constitution and get our money together first. It was decided to have our basis of operations established firmly before going into active work."

"The formation of the association has already done some good, as you know. A low rate for electricity has been put into force by the P. S. C. It is a step in the right direction, but it is not long enough. I have received a number of communications from other places which show how various are the companies' rates. In Montclair, for instance, the price has been thirteen cents per kilowatt hour for electricity and $1 per thousand feet for gas. What we wish to find out is why this lower rate was in force there and not here.

The I. S. C. is giving a lot of consideration to this association. I happened to be at the house of the chief electrician of the United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia, which owns considerable stock of the P. S. C., on Sunday, and he told me that the company was paying considerable attention to this organization. We talked for three hours on this one subject, and he told me a lot about supply and service.

"I have this to tell you of the membership of the association: at the last meeting we had 110 members; since then we have increased in number to 159."

PARK CLUB BOWLERS ROLL 1,012 IN 3D GAME

GREAT RECORD MADE IN CONTEST ON LOCAL ALLEYS.

The Park Club crack bowling team met the Elizabeth Town and Country Club five on the local alleys Mar. 14 and established the highest score ever rolled at the club, in the third game, three men rolling over 200, and the total score being 1012. Barlow put up a score of 225 in this game, Walter Long 201 and F. O. Ball 217. The county seat bowlers could not hope to beat this and had to be satisfied with a total score of 849. The Parks took all three games, winning the first by a score of 835 to 804 and the second by a score of 902 to 844.

Special mention should be made of the great work of Barlow, whose three scores were 212, 200 and 225, a record to be proud of. M. Long also rolled a high score in the second game, putting up 204. The local bowlers have never performed better and if they had struck this pace in the Central Journal Bowling League series they certainly would have landed in first place.

$60,000 SUMMER HOME AT PERTH AMBOY.

Newark Man Erecting a Handsome Place of Unique Architecture.

A. A. Guigee, of Newark, is building a residence, gardener's lodge, garage and conservatory on the residential part of Perth Amboy. The grounds are large, and will be laid out in the English style, in keeping with the informal brick and shingle architecture of the main buildings.

The entrance floor plan shows a reception room, large entrance and stair halls, living and dining rooms, conservatory, pantry, kitchen quarters, etc. Wide porches and terraces command the best views and cool breezes. The finish will be simple, generally mahogany, except in the dining room, where an old flog-oak paneled wainscote will predominate, with tapestry frieze above and Elizabethan tracery ceiling.

The second floor will contain four chambers, two baths, a lounging room, servants' quarters and bath; and the top floor will have a large available billiard room with beamed ceiling and paneled wainscote; also a serving room adjacent.

A laundry, coal and ice storage for a year's supply each, wine vault, photographic dark room, etc., will occupy the cellar. The cost will be more than $60,000 when completed.

J. Hittle's Mystery.

Jules Hittle, the barkeeper at Henry Haurand's, has his friends guessing. Frank Haurand heard that Jules got married two weeks ago, and he told all Jules' friends about it. When Jules was taxed with being a benedict he smiled a tantalizing smile and said nothing. He has met all inquiries since in the same ungenerous spirit, and his friends and the regulars at Haurands' are in a turmoil of uncertainty over Jules' state.

BOYS' MISSION BAND HOLDS CHINESE TEA

SUCCESS ATTENDS EFFORDS TO RAISE MONEY FOR MISSIONS.

Under the auspices of the Boys' Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church a successful Chinese tea was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of the superintendent, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, of 744 Watchung avenue. The affair was largely attended by friends of the band and liberal patronage was accorded. It is believed that about $50 will be realized for mission purposes.

Mrs. Miller's home was appropriately decorated for the occasion with Chinese lanterns and other decorations. Members of the band wore Chinese costumes and during the afternoon there was offered for sale home-made candies, preserved ginger and fans. A feature was the loan exhibition of Chinese articles of interest. The band, of which Francis Foster is the president, had charge of the sale, the various boys presiding at the tables.

Mrs. Miller had general supervision of the affair, while in the tea room Mrs. C. W. Foster, Mrs. J. H. Manning, Mrs. O. G. Dale and Mrs. Julia Scribner poured. Assisting were Miss Anna Miller, Miss Edith Tracy and Miss Annie Miller.

BILL POSTERS IN REFORM MOVEMENT.

Want to Eradicate Offensive Style of Theatrical Advertising.

Action taken by the directors of the Associated Bill Posters and Distributors of the United States and Canada, which have been in convention in Detroit, looking toward a reform to eliminate from Newark and other cities the display of sensational, vicious and suggestive billboard pictures that have been common sights along the streets in recent years, is told of by A. F. Vedder, secretary of the Newark Bill Posting Company, who has just returned from the conference.

"So many vaudeville and low grade shows," said Mr. Vedder to a reporter, "have been furnishing us with paper depicting semi-nude and other disgusting figures that bill posters have for a long time realized they must take some stand in assertion of what they believe to be their rights in the matter. As it seemed to us when in Detroit, the wisest first move would be to call a conference of theatrical managers and billboard men, arrangements were made for such a meeting in New York within the next four or five weeks.

"Invitations are being sent out to the managers of all the larger theatrical interests. We want to agree upon what may be considered legitimate theatrical advertising so far as the bills for posting that are handed to us are concerned. In London they have a censor, appointed by the city government. We have not yet discussed whether or not it would be desirable to have such a censorship established here. We are anxious to take some effective action in this line, that when the advertising matter for the summer shows goes to press, and that will be very shortly, it may not be of a character which we shall later have to refuse to post.

"A reform in advertising matter, such as we post, is demanded by the public all over the country. In many places, as reported at our Detroit conference, feeling on this subject is so strong that posters have been compelled, even though their action was not a part of any concerted plan, to refuse to put up much of the advertising matter which has been handed them. As a class of business men we want to thoroughly legitimize our work, and reading from public opinion that is what we are attempting to do."

PLAY GROUNDS FOR THE SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Civic Association About to Solve Another Municipal Problem.

A meeting of the Plainfield Civic Association was held Friday at its rooms, 136 Park avenue, and matters of importance came up for discussion pertaining to the interests and welfare of the city of Plainfield, but no definite action was taken.

The suggestion was made to provide accommodations for the children of the public schools to congregate after school hours and amuse themselves without remaining on the streets. The matter is one that parents of the children are much interested in and it is expected that the association will take action on it in the near future.

Trust Co.'s New Building.

The Plainfield Trust Company expects to take possession of its handsome new quarters on Park avenue during May. The work on the structure is now progressing rapidly. George J. Tobin, who has the contract for the heating and ventilating, has practically completed his work, and the New York company which has the contract for the interior finishings, such as counter, desks, partitions and marble work, expects to start its force of employes on the job within a few days. The interior plastering is completed and everything is in readiness for the decorations. When this is finished the scaffolding will be removed and the work of furnishing started.

STOKES-COLBY IN UNION

For Delegation's Support of the Chief Executive the Lower End of the State Might Be Swung in Line for the Reform Senator.

Governor Stokes' alignment with the Colby forces in Essex county on the Assembly district plan and his turndown of the regular Republican organization, or rather his indictment that the lines approved by the "regulars" be ignored and the Colby plan accepted, and without caucus action, is regarded by those who keep in touch with the political situation as removing all doubt as to Governor Stokes' plan of campaign in the contest which will be decided at the next State election.

It also demonstrates, notwithstanding repeated denials on the part of those most concerned, that the State Republican organization is apparently as much divided as are the Republican factions in several counties, notably Essex and Hudson. The leaders who, as far as the State organization is concerned, are Governor Stokes and State Treasurer Briggs, are bending every nerve, each apparently endeavoring to obtain an advantage over the other.

The Governor will not deny, and in fact he seems pleased to learn, that he is regarded as the most formidable candidate for successor to John F. Dryden as United States Senator, an issue which will be decided by the Legislature chosen next November. The State treasurer is equally desirous of being known as the logical Republican candidate for Governor one year hence, and both realize that the candidacy of one is no benefit to the other. Early in the game Governor Stokes seemed to realize that the "reformers," or "insurgents," as they are variously termed, were a factor that would have to be reckoned with not only this year, but next year, and there is more than one paragraph in his annual message which seems to indicate that he had that fact in mind when the document was written.

While a Senator he, in caucus, opposed a return to the Assembly district plan as urged in 1897, when, as now, the Republican majority in the Legislature was unwieldly. Now he not only urged it in his message but insisted in having a voice in the manner in which it should be framed in the Legislature and in that direction he has gained a decided advantage over Mr. Briggs.

The latter, as chairman of the State committee, had invited the several county committees to be represented by population to arrange a schedule of district lines, and all with the exception of Essex were approved. Two weeks before the latter lines were even approved by the county committee the Governor had the Colby lines under consideration and he approved them.

It was explained to him by members of the Essex delegation, Supreme Court Clerk William Riker, former State Committeeman Henry A. Cook and others, that the Colby plan was eminently fair, and that the county committee plan, which had not yet been submitted, would make it difficult, if not impossible, for ten of the present Essex Assemblymen to secure a renomination.

Even the Colby plan, it was said, would retire three, and one other might be dropped on account of his vote on "local option," but it would be possible to name equally as consistent Republicans in place of all who might be returned.

Here is where the Governor again showed his political foresight. If at least seven Colbyites were returned with a chance of the remaining four, that would mean all or a large majority for the Essex delegation that would not support, or perhaps even name, Senator Dryden for re-election, if for no other reason because of the strenuous efforts made to defeat the Prudential investigation.

For similar reasons, principally the role of counsel which he assumed at the hearing on that investigation, John W. Griggs would be sure of the running so far as Essex was concerned, and right there was the opening for a new political alliance.

With Dryden and Griggs out of the race for Senator, the only active aspirant on the political horizon would be Stokes and for him it would be plain sailing with the support of Essex county. Inasmuch, however, as Dryden was the first Senator and Franklin Murphy the first Governor on the Republican side chosen from Essex in many years the Governor could not be expected to voluntarily surrender both offices. It was in fact recalled that had the "regulars" remained in control Mayor Doremus might have been urged as the logical successor to Governor Stokes, and it is quite probable that the latter believes now that Senator Colby might be an available candidate and have material South Jersey support should Essex support Stokes for Senator.

In Old Trinity's Choir.

Master Louis Slocum, whose voice was trained by Mrs. C. F. Odell, pupil of G. E. Stubbs and former organist and choirmaster of Holy Cross church, has been admitted to the choir of Old Trinity, New York, of which Victor Baier is the organist and choirmaster.

Mrs. John A. Brown, of Plainfield avenue, has returned home after a two weeks' visit with her sister, Mrs. Patterson, of Woonsocket, R. I.

GOV. STOKES SINGS PRAISE OF JERSEY

IN REPLY TO MR. COLBY HE TELLS OF THE ADVANCE THE STATE HAS MADE

Gov. Stokes, before the Minnetonka Club at Jersey City, made last Thursday a political speech in answer to one recently delivered by Senator Everett Colby in Hudson county. The Governor's remarks were heartily applauded. He said:

"We drove the gamblers from our borders and pledged our constitution to their perpetual banishment. We banished partisanship from our courts, from our schools, from our State institutions and from our State boards. We made public office a public trust. We inaugurated a system of publicity in appropriations so that every citizen may have the books open before him and know just what his State spends and for what purpose the expenditure is made.

"We have increased the revenues of the State from $1,962,319 to $4,598,075, until today, instead of being compelled to call upon the school fund to make our deficiences, we are able to appropriate out of the State treasury a million dollars a year for the benefit of your school system and to help educate every child in the State.

"We are going on, and when this Legislature shall have adjourned measures will have been enacted that will enable the State to provide still more liberal returns to the schools and the taxpayer. We have legislated for the purity of the ballot, both at the primaries and the polls, and enacted a primary law—the best in the country—which enables every citizen to exercise a free and untrammelled choice in the selection of his party candidates.

"We are all familiar with the recent disclosures of official corruption and how public office has been made the means of private gain. No such scandals have disgraced our State under Republican rule. We fought and won the battle for honest government before the present question which other sections are today just inaugurating. In the work of reform the State of New Jersey, under the leadership of the Republican party, is ten years ahead of her sister States.

"Nor has this reform been spasmodic or pyrotechnic. It has been continuous, consistent and sincere. It has been progressive as well as remedial. Every interest of our State has felt the helping hand of the lawmaker who drives to market over our good roads realizes that he is receiving some of the benefits of good and economical government. Every institution in the State that cares for the feeble-minded or the epileptic or the insane calls down the blessing of enlightened charity upon the humanity of our principles.

"Every tenement-house inmate who receives more sunshine, more air, who has better sanitary arrangements and greater comforts through the law of 1895, which I signed, knows he is living under good government. Every family in the State whose children attend the public schools, which are dedicated to education, and are free from partisan control, knows that the Republican party in giving the State the best school system at the least cost to the taxpayer. They are getting daily dividends from good government."

$2,501 FOR EIGHT STAMPS.

Postoffice the Buyer. It Is Said, of Rare 1861 Set.

A rare set of eight unused United States postage stamps, in the collection of A. H. Scholle, sold for $2,501 at auction last evening at 24 West Twenty-sixth street, New York. The face value of the stamps is $1.75. It is a complete set of the issue of Aug. 14, 1861.

When the Civil War began there was a quantity of the 1857-60 issue of stamps in the seceding States. To prevent their use by the Confederate postmasters, the United States authorities declared that these stamps were no longer to be accepted for postage, and the issue of Aug. 14, 1861, was hurriedly prepared. They did not give satisfaction, however, and in the following month, a new set was issued, with changes marked enough to make them easily distinguishable. These stamps are the earliest issue that can be used for mailing purposes. All previous issues have no value except to philatelists.

The set sold last night consists of one-cent indigo, three-cent brown lake, five-cent orange brown, ten-cent yellow green, twelve-cent gray black, twenty-four-cent deep violet, thirty-cent orange, and ninety-cent slate blue. The collection was found by William Knudson, of New York, some years ago in a small shop in a Danish or Swedish town.

J. M. Bartels & Co., of Boston, were the purchasers. It is supposed that the set was bought on order for the Postoffice Department, which is lacking a set. There was spirited bidding.

An unused, three-cent rosy buff New York carriers' stamp of 1842 brought $205, a ten-cent St. Louis Postmaster's stamp of 1846 $93, an unused pair of five-cent and ten-cent stamps, general issue of 1847, $30; an unused thirty-cent stamp of the 1851-56 issue $60.50, and a cancelled fifty-cent stamp of 1869, with inverted picture, $30.

ROAD TO JERICHO RUNS EVERYWHERE

DR. RICHARDS TALKS ON THE GOOD SAMARITAN OF TODAY.

Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Brick church, New York, came to his old charge, the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Friday to speak at the weekly meeting of the Young People's Society. The lecture room was filled.

Dr. Richards spoke on the parable of the Good Samaritan. The road to Jericho, he pointed out in his exposition, ran everywhere, and all mankind must travel on it. Christians see the prostrate victims all about them—and the thieves, and the priest and the Levite, and the innkeeper. Dr. Richards saw in the type of modern men whose services must be paid for; the men who do good with the ides of repayment more in their minds than the service itself.

The Samaritan, Dr. Richards said, was as numerous a quantity in the life of the road as the others. He was to be found everywhere; he represented the elements of kindness and helpfulness, without which human intercourse would be intolerable. There was so much kindness done to individuals in even the worst political machines that the average man was puzzled, when he learned of the inner workings of the organization, to decide whether to approve or condemn them.

BLOWING SOCIAL TESTS LUNGS OF PARTICIPANTS.

Somewhat Novel Entertainment at Vincent Chapel Last Night.

Appropriate to the windy month of March, the Epworth League of the First M. E. church held what was called a "blowing social" in Vincent chapel Friday night. The programme, a very informal one, comprised all sorts of games which required a good test of the lungs. Some of the young people proved themselves exceptionally strong in this respect and had no trouble in scoring points.

One exciting feature was a football game between Yale and Cornell. The young people selected sides, placed an egg on each table, and instead of kicking the imaginary football about, resorted to blowing. The Yale eleven won the game. Another game was the placing of a string on the floor upon which was laid a feather. The trick was to blow the feather either side of the string, and it was a very difficult task, as was also the feat of pinning small boats, blindfolded, on a large canvas supposed to represent water. Another game was that of see saw, blowing the feather.

An amusing game was that of choosing some well known saying, such as "It's an ill wind that blows nobody some good," and "Birds of a feather flock together." A person would whisper from the ear of P.; the Ladies' Christian Work Society, the Consistory, the Home Department, the Sunday school and Class No. 12 of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school, of which Mr. Van Emburgh is the teacher; the employes of Woodhull & Martin's store, Mrs. S. A. Krom, an intimate friend of the family, and many others from friends and relatives.

The remains were taken on the 9:30 o'clock train to Newark this morning, where the interment was made in the family plot in Fairmount cemetery.

MR. SPARKLET'S FAKE FACTORY IN FULL BLAST.

Courier-News Springs One of Its Famous Conceptions of the Imagination.

The Asbury sparklet attached to the Courier-News staff lingered too long over a game of pins in a local bowling alley Friday and in order to make up lost time turned in a bald fake about the "Carnegie" system of spelling being introduced in the city High School. From an artistic standpoint it read splendidly, but there was about as much truth in it as anything that has ever been charged up to Ananias.

In the first place, because of pain in his arm from swinging the big wooden balls down the pine lane, the illiterate fact distorter forgot that there is no such thing as "the Carnegie Method" of spelling. The Ironmaster has given $40,000 to help the thing along, but he had nothing to do with its origin. Again, both Superintendent Maxson and Principal Travell are authority for the statement that the system has not been introduced in the High School, the sparklet's report to the contrary notwithstanding. For many, many months past the pupils have been privileged to omit unnecessary letters and dipthongs and they had been doing so before the library dispenser had made his gift public.

That's all there is to the so-called story, but what's the fellow going to do when he gets pressed for copy? However, the sparklet's report of the man from the shore front will not let it happen again, as the city editor has prohibited bowling alley visits.

HER LIFE WELL ROUNDED

Touching Remarks By Ministers at Funeral of Mrs. G. L. Van Emburgh.

BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTES

Rev. Dr. Schenck and Rev. Wm. De-Hart and Rev. Isaac Brokaw Speak On Nobility of Dead Woman's Character.

The funeral services of Mrs. George L. Van Emburgh, held Friday afternoon from the late home on East Second street, were attended by a large number of relatives, friends and neighbors, giving tender and loving expression of the high esteem in which the departed woman was held. Among the mourners were many who had been associated with Mrs. Van Emburgh in church work who had learned to love her for her true Christian qualities, while others had known her as a sincere and helpful friend.

The services were in charge of Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mrs. Van Emburgh was an active member and worker. He read appropriate Scripture selections, after which he made a few remarks. His chief thoughts were those of thankfulness for the beautiful finished life of the departed, the completion of the years of usefulness as a wife, a mother and as a worker in the church. His reference to the well rounded out life of Mrs. Van Emburgh was full of tenderness and sympathy which found a responsive feeling in the heart of every one. He also spoke tenderwords of help and sympathy to the bereaved husband, brother and children.

At the conclusion of Dr. Schenck's remarks City Judge William N. Runyon sang "Rock of Ages."

Rev. William De Hart, a former pastor of Mr. and Mrs. Van Emburgh, spoke briefly. He referred to his many visits to their home, where he always found comfort and strength in the light and sunny disposition of Mrs. Van Emburgh, which seemed to dispel discouragements and help one along in the Christian life. These visits he counted among his happiest experiences. His remarks were followed with another selection by Judge Runyon. Rev. Isaac P. Brokaw, of Freehold, the first pastor of Mr. and Mrs. Van Emburgh, where they worked so hard to organize Trinity church in Newark, concluded the service with a beautiful prayer that brought consolation and strength to the bereaved ones.

Not for some time has such a large and beautiful display of floral tributes been seen in Plainfield. The casket was completely covered with flowers which were banked about the bier. There were tributes from Trinity Sabbath School, the C. E. P.; the Ladies' Christian Work Society, the Consistory, the Home Department, the Sunday school and Class No. 12 of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school, of which Mr. Van Emburgh is the teacher; the employes of Woodhull & Martin's store, Mrs. S. A. Krom, an intimate friend of the family, and many others from friends and relatives.

The remains were taken on the 9:30 o'clock train to Newark this morning, where the interment was made in the family plot in Fairmount cemetery.

HIS SIXTY-FIRST BIRTHDAY.

John Naylor's Family Remembers He Is Past Three Score.

In honor of the sixty-first birthday anniversary of John H. Naylor, of 235 East Third street, his family gave him a party, Friday night. The house was decorated with American flags, palms and ferns. There were about forty-five guests and the evening was passed in playing games, instrumental and vocal selections by Misses Helen Johnson, Hazel Van Sickle and Andrew Mulford.

Mr. Naylor received several gifts, including a handsome gold seal ring from his children. The presentation was made at 11 o'clock, just as the guests were about to sit down to supper. Music was furnished through the evening by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Naylor and Edward Townley.

Chester See, formerly of this city, but now of Jersey City, has been spending the past few days as the guest of Harold Chandor, of East Ninth street.

VILLAGERS AROUSED OVER ROWDIES' ACTIONS

Reward Offered for the Arrest of Gang That Robbed and Destroyed at Scotch Plains.

FOLLOWED CHARIVARI

Attempted to Fire a Store and Shattered Postoffice Windows With Shotgun — Township Authorities Investigating.

Scotch Plains citizens are greatly agitated over a robbery and apparent attempt at arson and general destruction to property that occurred last Wednesday night after a gang of young villagers had been treated by a newly-made bridegroom. The roysterers roamed the streets at midnight and though sounds of the revelry were apparent several times, it was not until the next morning that the extent of their lawlessness became known. The principal sufferers are Frank Anson, who keeps a general candy and fruit store, and the Baptist church trustees, owners of the building occupied by the post office. Anson has offered a reward of $25 for the arrest of the offenders, and an additional twenty-five will be given by Edward Hand, the hotel proprietor.

A well known Scotch Plains man, Thomas Farrell, was married early in the week and on Wednesday night the crowd gathered about his home and started the noisy serenade that usually follows a rural wedding. The racket was kept up until the bridegroom decided to stop it by giving the leaders money enough to "plow" the gang, and they adjourned to a nearby hotel. When the coin had been spent, there were individual treats and all were in a more or less state of intoxication when they were put out at 11:30.

Shouting and yelling, they began pulling off gates and pickets, and finally several went to the rear of Anson's store and by breaking a window managed to gain entrance. They helped themselves to candy, cigars and fruit and then set fire to an empty orange box filled with papers. It was evidently intended to burn the building, but the only damage done was the scorching of the wall against which the box was leaning.

While one gang was in the store another went up Park avenue and deliberately discharged a shotgun at the front of the postoffice building. Eight large panes of glass were demolished and the frame was shattered. Fear that the noise would result in citizens starting an investigation put a stop to the depredations and the crowd disappeared.

In the event of Anson's place getting in flames the village would have suffered a serious fire, as it directly adjoins several frame buildings and the wind was in their direction. Hand's Hotel is next door, and the danger to which it was exposed was what induced the proprietor to add $25 to the reward.

The township authorities have been acquainted with the facts and a determined effort will be made to arrest every member of the gang. It is said that the names of one or two have already been obtained.

At the close of the business session, the president, Mrs. Honeyman, was presented with a handsome souvenir quilt. KNOCKED SENSELESS WITH A BEER BOTTLE

BLOODY OUUCOME OF QUARREL OVER POOL GAME.

Frank Sullivan, a laborer, and Gus Sutterlein, whom the police describe as a "small-bore sport," got in a quarrel Friday night over a game of pool in which Sullivan and a friend of his beat Sutterlein and one of his associates. The quarrel quieted down and Sullivan accompanied Sutterlein and his friends to a dance in Saengerbund Hall. Nothing more was said about the pool game, but as Sullivan started to leave Sutterlein and his friends at Somerset and Front streets, after the dance, Sutterlein pulled a beer bottle from his pocket and swung it against the side of Sullivan's head.

Sullivan went down and out, with his left ear split. Roundsman Flynn saw the blow from the other side of the street, and went for Sutterlein on the jump. Somebody yelled "Cheese it!" and Sutterlein started for the borough line, but Flynn pulled him up in short order. He dropped the bottle when the cry sounded.

Sullivan rallied in a minute or two and Flynn took him along with Sutterlein to the station house, with the bottle in the case for evidence. The police did not know Sullivan, so he was kept all night to make sure he would be on hand in the court this morning. Dr. Lafburrow, the city physician, patched his ear.

Sutterlein tried to convince Judge Runyon, when arraigned, that somebody unknown threw the bottle and that he hadn't even hit him with his fist. He was up against the positive testimony of Flynn and Sullivan, who looked and spoke like a decent young chap, and the magistrate fined him $15 or ninety days. Sentence was suspended on Sullivan.

BENEFIT FOR MISSIONS AT TRINITY REFORMED.

Junior Endeavorers Hold a Successful Entertainment.

For the benefit of home and foreign missions, the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held a successful entertainment in the lecture room Friday night. Mrs. George Reighton, as superintendent of the society, had charge of the affair. There was a large attendance and about $10 was realized as profit.

The programme comprised a patriotic drill by Rosamond Rogers, Margaret Van Deventer, Ida Van Arsdale, Elsie Tier, Beatrice Tier, Mildred Creamer, Adelaide Cole and Helen Sanford, of Second place, and a medley of liberty. The drill was exceptionally well given and won hearty applause.

Another feature was the representation of a school scene, which amused all. Cora Gano was "Miss Alice," the school teacher, and the pupils were Emilie Tier, Beatrice Tier, Helen Roberts, Adelaide Cole, Mildred Creamer, Elizabeth Chickering and Ella Van Arsdale.

Other parts of the programme included two piano solos by Edna Cole, recitations by Madeline Strader and Helen Woodruff, a duet by Lawrence and Elmer French and a piano solo by Harold Storr, which closed the evening's entertainment. The children all did well in their various parts and were highly complimented by their friends.

SOME PSYCHOLOGY FOR HIGH SCHOOL MOTHERS.

Second Meeting Addressed by Miss Chadbourne Yesterday.

Miss Elizabeth Chadbourne, of this city ,addressed the newly organized Mothers' Association at the new High School, Arlington avenue and Ninth street, Friday afternoon, on "Psychology." She dwelt on the development of child nature.

Meetings of the association will be held every month and the association's object is the advancement of child training. It is non-sectarian and every mother, whether she has a child in the High School or not, is eligible to membership. Mrs. William Sanford, of Second place, is president. Mrs. J. W. Travell is secretary of the association.

Much interest is being manifested in the organization among mothers of High School pupils. Forty matrons were present at the meeting yesterday.

BLACKLIST IN FORCE.

Coal Dealers Find "Dead Beat" Scheme Works Well.

The local coal dealers who recently formed a protective association to escape alleged "dead beats" have received a copy of the "blacklist" and are supposed to follow the rules of the association. If a person owes one or more dealers the other members of the association are pledged not to sell him coal unless he first settles his old bills.

The scheme has been in operation a few weeks and is said to work well. It is reported that a number of delinquents, finding it impossible to get coal, have settled their old scores and been restored to the list of those who are considered "good credit."

Veteran Court Constable's Funeral Attended by a Concourse of Friends.

A MINISTER'S TRIBUTE

Rev. Mr. Finn Speaks on Simplicity and Integrity of Aged Man's Character—Two Services Held.

Through slushy streets Friday afternoon pass all that was left of Amos Moffett, a veteran constable, to the last resting place. Beside his wife in the Plainfield Avenue cemetery the old man was laid away.

The funeral, like the life of the dead man, was simple. But no amount of simplicity could take away anything of its impressiveness, for it marked the end of a man who in a way of his own had made himself a factor, and a figure, not only in his own community, but in the county.

The funeral marked the close of a fine life, and the friends who gathered to mourn Mr. Moffett's passing felt the significance of it deeply.

Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park avenue Baptist church, conducted the services. The first, or short one, was held at the house on West Sixth street, where Mr. Moffett had lived for fifty years, at 2:30 o'clock. Close friends and relatives attended it. At 3 o'clock the service at the church began. The casket was covered with handsome floral pieces, prominent among them being a large wreath from the dead man's comrades among the court attaches at Elizabeth. There was a pillow bearing the word "Father."

Mr. Finn spoke at length on the great and abiding love of God for man, and instanced Mr. Moffett's acceptance of Christianity on his deathbed in connection with his theme. Mr. Moffett had never accepted Jesus Christ as his personal savior in any formal way up to his illness, and his family called in Mr. Finn to still the doubts they had of the old man's preparedness for death. Mr. Finn described how Mr. Moffett, on the edge of the grave, had entered the fold of the church and faced death with the armor of faith around him.

"What a grand religion, what a great love, it is," said Mr. Finn, "that enables an old man like that to set himself wholly right with his God as he lies dying. His friends need have no fear for Mr. Moffett now; he is right with God spiritually as he was right morally in the sight of men."

Mr. Finn added the usual words of comfort and hope to the family. The body was viewed by those in the church after the service.

Two old comrades of the dead man in court work were among the bearers—Peter V. Weaver and Robert Walpole. The other bearers were V. W. Nash, Sr., L. J. Spicer, Thodure I. Runyon and Charles Stimpson. Former Sheriff Coriell and Fire Chief Doane were among those at the funeral.

Wholesale Vaccination.

The Board of Health of Paterson now is taking steps to fight off the spread of smallpox in that city. It has decided to have all the school children vaccinated to prevent the disease becoming epidemic. Four additional physicians will be engaged to help out in this work. The teachers will have to examine the children before they recently have been vaccinated, and if not report the matter to the principal, and the pupil will be treated. If any child refuses to be vaccinated expulsion will follow.

Kane Gets Durlach Buildings.

The Durlach buildings on Watchung avenue, recently condemned by the Board of Health, have been sold to Contractor Aleck Kane. The notified the tenants he would give them one week in which to secure other quarters as the shacks will be demolished at the end of that time. Kane has also made a bid for the old court house at Somerville, which is to be torn down to make room for the new one.

EPITAPH UPSETS SUPPOSED HISTORY

BELIEVED MRS. CALDWELL WAS SHOT BY BRITISH SOLDIER JUNE 7.

Elizabeth, March 15. — While searching among the tombstones of the old First Presbyterian church graveyard here, last week, an epitaph hunter made a discovery that might upset one of the most sacred pieces of local Revolutionary history.

No grave in the city is pointed at with more partiotic pride than that which is supposed to contain the dust of the Rev. James Caldwell and his wife, Hannah Caldwell. It is always pointed out as one of the sights of Elizabeth, for with it is connected a sad story of Revolutionary days.

Local historians tell how the British forces, 6,000 strong ,under the Hessian General Knyphausen, on the night of June 6, 1780, crossed the sound from Staten Island and on the following day, June 7, started from Elizabethport and drove the Americans, under General Maxwell, whom they outnumbered three to one, through this town and on through Connecticut Farms in the direction of Springfield up to beyond the Rahway River, burning everything as they went. During the night of June 7 the British retreated to this place, where, the next day, the battle of Elizabethtown was fought. It was the 125th anniversary of this battle that was given such an imposing celebration on June 8 last.

Two incidents are related in connection with this march, both of which, it is claimed, happed on June 7. It is said the Continental forces made a stand at the Connecticut Farms Presbyterian church and that, having partly run out of ammunition, their chapiain, the Rev. James Caldwell, who was pastor of the church and of the First Presbyterian church of this town, ran into the church and, coming out with his arms full of hymn books, said to the men, "Here, boys, give them Watts," and the soldiers rammed the books down into the barrels of their guns.

The church was burned and a hundred yards back of it stood the parsonage, where Mrs. Caldwell was with her little children, but this house was left unmolested, although nearly every other house was destroyed. The story is that the British followed the fleeing Continentals and that one straggling soldier came up to the parsonage and asked Mrs. Caldwell for a meal that she gave it to him and he left the house, but remained in the vicinity. Toward evening he returned, according to the present-day story, and seeing the woman putting her little ones to bed, shot her through the window, killing her instantly.

On the 7th of last June the State of New Jersey erected a monument on the supposed site of the reputed shooting. No one had ever questioned the story, but the epitaph hunter in going through the old First Church graveyard this week deciphered the following on the stone that marks the final resting place of the Caldwells:

Hannah
wife of the Rev. James Caldwell and daughter of
John Ogden of Newark
Was killed at Connecticut
Farms by a shot from a
British soldier
June 25, 1780
Cruelly sacrificed
By the Enemies of Her Husband and Her Country.

The epitaph indicates that the woman was shot June 25, which is more than two weeks after the date that had been heretofore set. Local historians are very much exercised over the discovery, as it tends to question the entire event. According to the same stone, Parson Caldwell was shot and killed by a sentinel at Elizabethport on November 24, 1781. He was a grand-uncle of John Caldwell Calhoun, the statesman.

RUNS NINE MILES WITH WILDCAT CLAWING BREAST

Hunter Hugs Beast So Tight Its Attack Is Frustrated—Rescuers Shoot Animal.

Colorado Springs, Col.—Bareheaded, with hair disheveled, blood flowing from a wound in his head and a live wildcat held to his chest in close embrace, John Seigel, a ranchman, ran nine miles over a mountain trail before finding help.

Seigel was hunting grouse when his dog pointed game. Seigel, expecting birds to flush, when a huge wildcat sprang at his throat. As the forepaws of the animal struck his chest, Seigel dropped his gun and hugged the beast with all his strength close to his chest. Seigel's stout hunting jacket and the tightness of his grip prevented the beast from biting or scratching him. After running and walking down the trail for nine miles in this predicament, he met two men, one of whom drew a revolver and shot the cat through the head, killing it instantly.

"I didn't dare to let go," Seigel said, "and I was afraid the wildcat wouldn't, so we held fast. The cat glared up fiercely at me with its yellow eyes, while its hot breath came into my face at every leap. Whenever the vicious beast made the slightest struggle, I hugged the tighter, fearing I might stumble and its deadly teeth be fixed in my throat."

EARTH GULPS DOWN A BOY

Ground Gives Way Beneath Him—One of His Rescuers Also Has Narrow Escape.

Pottsville, Pa.—Returning home with a pail of water in his hand, ten-year-old Robert Mahoney, of Broad Mountain, was swallowed up by the earth, and four hours lay at the bottom of a 68-foot mine breach waiting for help to arrive.

His rescue was as dramatic as his disappearance, as he again had a most remarkable escape from instant death, as did Richard Appleby, a neighbor, who was one of the number who brought him back to the surface.

The boy was terribly battered about the face and body. It is believed that he will recover, but if so, it will be a wonder. The Mahoney family secure their water from a tank near the railroad, and the boy was sent to draw a bucketful. He was returning over a frequently used path when the ground suddenly gave way beneath him, and was re before the surface had been apparently solid a deep hole opened.

How he escaped instant death cannot be explained, but he was rendered unconscious for probably an hour. Then, recovering his senses, he began to call for help, and his cries were heard by several neighbors who had gone out to search for him.

A rope was secured and lowered into the breach, and this he tied about his waist. Giving a signal, he was hoisted to the top of the breach. As willing hands reached out to pull him to safety the rope parted.

Clutching at some shrubbery, he stayed his downward flight for a fraction of a second, which gave Richard Appleby time to reach out and grasp him by the coat.

The weight of the body slowly pulled Appleby to the brink of the chasm, and just as the horror-stricken spectators expected both to go down to their death, he finally grasped a bush, all the time retaining his hold on the boy. Both were caught and dragged from danger.

Odd Cause for Divorce.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—William Pettit would not change his underwear, according to the testimony of his wife, Bertha Ione Pettit, in a divorce court. Not only did he wear one suit from spring to fall without changing and without having the suit washed, but he went for a time without taking a bath. She declared that William added insult to injury by throwing his underclothing under the bed after he had worn the suit all summer. For these reasons Mrs. Pettit was granted a divorce.

College Girls Play Poker.

Cleveland, O.—Clad in little more than the garb provided by nature, and surrounding three large tables in a room in the dormitory, 14 students of a woman's college near here were discovered late one night recently playing the great American game of poker. A lecture and a threat should the offense be repeated sent the girls to their rooms. Matches were used for chips, each representing an investment of five cents.

QUICK CHICKEN RAISING

Onalake Solves the Problem of Producing Milk Fed Broilers in Six Weeks.

MR. ARENS' SECRET

Plant Contains One House of 6,000 Chicks; 1,000 Laying Hens; Ten Incubators — Well Worth a Visit.

Few persons, if any, even in the city of Plainfield know of a growing industry which has here had its birth and that the future of which is destined to interest many, namely, the art of raising chickens, in large numbers, and in such manner that in six weeks they are ready for the market.

"Onalake Poultry Farm" on Rahway road, owned by Siegfried Arens, is where the extensive plant has been devised and put into practical demonstration.

One house, one hundred and twenty-four feet in length, is divided into several rooms, heated by a peculiar and individual system of hot water pipes; in three of these rooms are built brooders of singular design, five tiers in height and seven compartments on each tier; each compartment holding from fifty to seventy chicks; making a total capacity of more than six thousand when filled. These baby chicks are attended with the greatest care and so fed that at the end of the sixth week they are ready to be sent to market as "milk fed broilers," weighing from one, to one and a half pounds each.

Mr. Arens has a system of feeding which he will impart to no one, but whatever it is, he has succeeded in producing a morsel of luscious tenderness in the chicken line that only those who have eaten thereof can have any idea. Smaller "squab broilers," weighing from three-quarters of a pound to one pound, are raised in less than five weeks' time.

By this novel method of raising incubator chicks Mr. Arens overcomes the diseases and mortality so prevalent and discouraging with the old time methods. Besides this brooder plant Mr. Arens keeps a thousand or more laying hens, enabling him to supply his tea Cyphers incubators, of three hundred and sixty eggs each, as well as his private trade for strictly fresh, selected white eggs. A visit to the farm is an interesting and instructive pleasure and its genial owner is ever willing and ready to show visitors around.

GOLD MEDAL AWARD FOR SCHOOLS ARRIVES

ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION PRIZE PLACED IN HIGH SCHOOL LIBRARY.

The gold medal awarded by the commissioners of the St. Louis Purchase Exposition to the Plainfield schools for its fine exhibit of work at the fair, arrived Friday and was exhibited to the pupils in the High School by Principal Ira Travell. It was subsequently put on exhibition in the school library.

The medal is about three inches in diameter and suitably inscribed on both sides. Accompanying the medal was a circular explaining in detail the figures and lettering thereon. The pupils from the Plainfield public schools had a large exhibit of their work at the St. Louis Exposition and it was conceded to be the best in general point of excellence shown.

CRIES OF "SHAME" IN M. E. CONFERENCE.

Minister Called Bishops' Bill a Catholic Kike.

New Brunswick, March 17.—Rev. J. F. Thompson, of Trenton, in the New Jersey Methodist Episcopal Conference Friday, opposed the resolution by the New Jersey Conference endorsing the "Bishops' bill," to regulate the liquor traffic, now before the Legislature. He said such action would be to make the conference a tail to a Roman Catholic kite.

"The Catholics came forward with the bill when we had a prohibition bill all ready," he declared. "I will speak eternally against it. If a local option bill were enacted in Trenton, the big cathedrals would go into bankruptcy."

He was greeted with cries of "Shame."

Rev. J. F. Fox declared it would be "sweet news" to the liquor men to hear that the conference was divided on the bill. These remarks were greeted with "Amen."

The resolution was passed with only four hands raised in dissent. Dr. Thompson insisted that his name be recorded as protesting.

Mortimer Slater, of Jackson avenue, who has been spending some time at Atlantic City, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Maury Corbin, who have been spending several weeks in Cuba, have returned to Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Stanley, of East Front street, are entertaining relatives from Rondout, N. Y.

TALK ON "APPERCEPTION"

Dean of N. Y. U. School of Pedagogy Addresses Plainfield Teachers.

PEOPLE'S OBSERVATION

Developed Mind Has Much Greater Power of Seeing and Hearing, He Declares.

The second of the course of six lectures on educational subjects to begiven to the teachers of Plainfield and North Plainfield was delivered Wednesday afternoon in the Plainfield High School by Dr. Thomas M. Balliet, formerly superintendent of the schools of Springfield, Mass., now dean of New York University School of Pedagogy. His subject was "Apperception in Education and in Life."

Apperception was defined as the gaining of new ideas through those that already exist in the mind. We form new mental images only through the old. A person preparing to take a trip to Europe usually spends his spare moments reading all he can about the places to be visited; and when he arrives there he sees much more than without such preparatory reading, because his mind has been properly prepared for the reception of the new impressions.

It is a proven fact that certain parts of the brain preside over certain functions of the body. Thus the brain area that controls vision is situated in the rear lobes of the cerebrum, that which controls hearing, above and to the front of the ears, and that which controls muscular movements, in the top of the cerebrum. These various areas are not developed except through the proper exercise of the senses over which they have control. The brain of Laura Bridgman, who was deaf and blind, showed that the areas that produce vision and hearing were totally undeveloped. Hence manual training is of very great value in that it develops the upper portion of the cerebrum; and all muscular activity is to a certain extent brain activity.

The eye does not see. It is simply a medium through which certain vibrations of ether are transmitted to the visual brain area. Not until these vibrations reach this area do we see things.

The developed mind has much greater power of seeing and hearing than has the undeveloped, even though the latter may have superior sense organs. The dog has a better eye than a man, yet he does not see as much as a man does, because he has stored up no mental images. Darwin, half blind, would see a hundred times as much in a garden as another person with an acute sense of sight, because of the large number of mental images existing in his mind.

Everybody sees the things to which his stored up mental images predispose him. Hence each person lives in a private world of his own, namely his world of images. Therefore, it is of the first importance that teachers fill the minds of their pupils with elevating and proper images; for this will determine whether the pupils' lives will be high or low—it will determine their character and destiny. He whose mind is filled with lofty images is enjoying heaven or earth.

The next lecture of the course will also be given by Dr. Balliet on April 11. His subject will be, "Habit."

"DON'T BE ANGLER FISH," BISHOP SAYS.

Tells Conference Probationers to Fear No Attacks on Christianity.

Bishop Goodsell, in charging Friday the probationers for the ministry at the Methodist Conference at New Brunswick, urged them to be punctual in their church meetings and other duties so that "young people can set their clocks by your arriving." In making pastoral visits he did not want them to go in the spirit of the man who said he did not want to be invited to eat a big pulpiter, or to go with the idea of saving the expense of a meal, but to go with the Christian spirit.

"Feel no alarm for the attacks made on Christianity," the bishop said. "The fathers have considered all these, using those that were worthy and those that were not they spat out. There is nothing new in the beliefs of today.

"I'm in the youth of old age. I'm sixty-five years old, and I have lived long enough to see several things that were going to tear things to pieces fall themselves. They have become historical curiosities in the progress of the church.

"Don't be disturbed by the criticisms of the word of God. There is not a flower that comes up but that it has a little dirt upon its leaves, but this is soon blown off by the breeze of God. Don't be like the angler fish, the principal thing of which is its mouth. It is shaped like a bowl with a dangling line attached, and anything that comes along and touches that knob the fish gets. All sorts of faiths and beliefs you can receive if you always have your mouth open."

Guy Smith, of this city, who has been quite ill, has returned to his home at Clinton, where he is improving.

DEACON CONWAY OUSTED

Calvary Church Congregation Votes Him Into the Ranks.

CONFIRMS BAILEY CALL

Special Meeting Results In Rejection of Morris, Rebuke for Trustees and Whack at Conway.

The Baileyites carried a meeting of the Calvary Baptist church congregation all their own way Monday night. Resolutions confirming Rev. G. W. Bailey's call to the pastorate, ousting Deacon-Trustee Spencer Conway from office and rebuking his trustee allies were passed with a rush, and the Morrisites—or what might have remained of them—were left with no vestige of standing.

Rev. J. W. Mitchell, who has favored Mr. Bailey all along, was chairman of the meeting. Deacon Scipio Whinfield was secretary.

Deacon Lewis Booker opened the meeting by explaining that the call to Rev. Mr. Bailey was the matter to be considered. Trustee Samuel Redd, who has been with the Baileyites from the beginning of the trouble, moved a resolution confirming the Bailey call. There was nothing in the way of its passage.

Immediately after that resolution went through, Trustee Redd presented charges against Deacon Conway in another motion of resolution. He was accused of trying to force Rev. P. T. Morris on the church, falsely and illegally, knowing his contentions to be false. Conway was promptly voted out of the deaconate and the board of trustees. The meeting stopped just short of voting him out of the church. Deacon Booker was made his successor on the board of trustees.

Another resolution rebuked Conway, John Crite, Ernest Crite and Charles Hardway for "attempting to usurp the rights and powers of the church." They were expressly forbidden to continue usurpation, and warned to remember their place and not attempt "to decide who shall or shall not fill the pulpit."

So far as the church is concerned last night's meeting leaves Rev. G. W. Bailey as the pastor. The Court of Chancery is to say something on the subject on March 26, however. The rule to show cause why the Morrisites should not be restrained from interfering with the Baileyites is to be passed upon on that date. A week ago the vice chancellor advised the factions to get together, and reserved decision till the twenty-sixth in order to give them a chance to smooth over the difficulties.

ATTENDED BIG RALLY OF HOLY NAME SOCIETIES.

St. Mary's Church Delegation Travel to Bound Brook in Special Car.

A large delegation from the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's R. C. church went to St. Joseph's church, Bound Brook, Sunday night, to attend a rally of the order. A number of the Holy Name members from St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, accompanied the St. Mary's men. Their own society did not go in a body on account of an illustrated lecture at St. Joseph's.

The journey was made in a special car. Monsignor O'Grady, of New Brunswick, was to have made an address, but a cold compelled him to disappoint the big audience. His assistant, Father Keating, spoke in his stead.

The next rally of the societies will be held either in this city or the borough. It will probably go to St. Mary's parish hall. St. Mary's is a new recruit to the group of societies.

Won Gloucester Cities.

Robert Love, the evangelist, has returned home after five weeks' service in a revival at the Baptist church, Gloucester City. His work was very successful, something like fifty new members having been brought into the church through the services. The pastor of the church, Rev. George W. Hall, is former member of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

Cop Stopped Runaway.

Officer William Messler attained the honor rail of a police department Saturday night by stopping a runaway on North Avenue. The horse, attached to one of S. Scheuer & Co.'s wagons, started from a house near Park avenue and ran toward Watchung. Messler was at the latter corner. He saw it going at a breakneck clip that promised a lively smashup somewhere along the trolley tracks on Watchung avenue when the cop saw it. He ran alongside the animal and gripped the bridle. The horse fought to break loose, but Messler clung hard, and brought it to a standstill. He was shaken up a bit and splashed with muck, but unhurt.

BLOCKS PATERSON BILL

Senator Ackerman Asks Referendum Clause For Municipal Water Works Scheme.

PLAINFIELDER'S STAND

Demands that People Have Right to Express Their Wishes Before Any Burden is Assumed —McKee's Bill.

Senator Ackerman is paid the compliment of blocking schemes in the Legislature, where important burdens are designed to be assumed by a municipality without the consent of the people, in life most recent instance of the kind, the Plainfielder's efforts were directed against a proposition to allow Paterson to obtain the right to erect municipal water works without any referendum.

The Paterson Guardian gives this account:

"The Republican machine has evidently decided to attempt to kill the bill called for by Paterson for the acquiring of a municipal water plant.

"Jersey City has just learned what attention machine Republican legislators pay to the demands of a big city, its bill for the issuing of bonds to acquire a water plant being smothered in committee at a corporation's behest.

"Now Paterson's bill for the acquiring of a water plant is blocked by a committee. Senator Ackerman, of Plainfield, seems to be the man picked but to pull some one's chestnuts out of the fire

"Senator Ackerman is a member of the committee on municipal corporation of the Senate, and this bill, after being introduced by Senator McKee, went to this committee.

"City Counsel Stalter appeared before the committee and explained that the bill was drawn specifically for the city of Paterson. No other city need enter such project unless it elected so to do. Therefore there was no reason for other cities attempting to block the bill.

"Senator Ackerman's excuse for heading up the bill was that 'he wanted to be careful' and that he 'wanted to go slow.' He believed that a referendum, leaving the question to a vote of the people, should be placed in the bill. He also believed that the amount should be limited, which might be expended in acquiring a municipal plant.

"The fact that the people of Paterson and fits officials were satisfied with the bill and that Plainfield had little or no reason to feel such a great interest in Paterson's affairs just at this time, did not strike the objecting senator as being peculiar.

"As taxpayers of Plainfield have declared in open meeting that municipal control of water and electric lighting were wise it is difficult to explain Senator Ackerman's stands in the way of Paterson's bill, unless he has been asked to do so.

"If the municipal water plant bill is not passed it will be due to the delay caused by the present obstructive methods. No information has come from Trenton that any corporation has opposed the bill. But some one is undoubtedly influencing the committee to hold it up.

"City Counsel Stalter can give no information as to the cause of a plan to smother the bill in committee. He simply states that Senator Ackerman took the position that the bill should be scrutinized carefully and amended.

"In order to become a law the water bill must pass the Senate and then pass the House. As it is now held in committee, subject to the expressed dilatory tactics of Senator Ackerman and his friends, by the time it passes the Senate present young men of Paterson will be wearing whiskers of 'em long.

"Both Jersey City and Paterson now stand as victims of the Republican machine rule at Trenton and bill-smothering tactics of the machine leaders. However, if the bill asked for by the city of Paterson does not pass it stands as a clear indictment against the Republican majority. Any explanations or excuses after the bill has died in committee when the Legislature adjourns won't go.

"The people of Paterson may now keep the eyes upon electric lighting and water plant bill in gathering statistics for future use on whether the Republican majority is representing the people of Paterson or the corporations."

Mt. Zion Was First.

Rev. H. C. Ashley, pastor of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, says it is an error to state that his congregation got their inspiration for the big revival from the Mt. Olive Baptist church. He states that his special services began on New Year's watch night and were finished before the Mt. Olive services began.

Ruth Buxton Celebrates.

In honor of their daughter's fourth birthday anniversary, Councilman and Mrs. Herbert Buxton, of West Front street, arranged a party for Saturday afternoon. "Miss Ruth" received several gifts as pleasant reminders of the occasion. The home was decorated appropriate to the day —St. Patrick's.

COUNTY FEES ABOLISHED

Register Smith, Sheriff Lawrence, Surrogate Parrot and Clerk Calvert to get $5,500.

ON A SALARY BASIS

Jackson Bill Passed by Legislature and Is Now Up to the Governor—Its Provisions.

When Governor Stokes appends his signature to Senator Jackson's antifee bill passed by the Assembly last Monday, County Register Frank H. Smith will have to content himself with a salary of $5,500 per year. Sheriff William B. Lawrence, County Clerk James C. Calvert and Surrogate George Parrott will likewise be compelled to accept a similar measly sum from the county instead of being permitted to rake in the fat fees.

This, it is said, will fall particularly hard on "Foxy Grandpa" Parrott, who has had a nice thing of it as surrogate of Union county for a number of years. Sheriff Lawrence, too, will feel the effects of the new law.

Fees in county offices, the system under which sheriffs, county clerks and surrogates in many counties have piled up salaries ranging from $10,000 to $50,000, went overboard from the ship of State when the Assembly passed the amended Jackson bill abolishing fees and placing all county offices on a straight salary basis. The bill passed the Senate some time ago and is now ready for the approval of Governor Stokes.

The new law fixes the schedule of salaries as follows: In counties with a population between 125,000 and 200,000, $6,500; in counties with a population between 100,000 and 125,000, $5,500; in counties with a population between 75,000 and 100,000, $4,500; in counties with a population between 50,000 and 75,000, $3,500; in counties having less than 50,000 inhabitants, $2,000. As amended in the Senate, the schedule of salaries was changed considerably. For example, the original bill gave salaries of $6,000 to the officials in counties having a population between 100,000 and 150,000, so that Mercer would have been in that class.

As passed the bill has this provision: "Said surrogates, county clerks, registers of deeds and mortgages and sheriffs shall select and empoly the necessary deputies and assistants for said offices respectively, who shall receive such compensation, to be paid monthly by the proper disbursing officers of said counties, as shall be approved by the judge of the court of Common Pleas of their respective counties on warrants approved by said judge."

The bill does not affect first class counties, Essex and Hudson, a law having been passed last year putting them in that class, by the way.

Mr. Tucker, of Union, requested that the bill might lie over until this morning, as Union county desired to look into the matter further. Mr. Tucker said some of the Union county freeholders claimed that the provisions for the appointment of deputies would cost the county $4,000 more than the fee system at present. The freeholders also wanted a referendum clause put in the bill.

DEPUTY TO REORGANIZE LOCAL CAMP OF WOODMEN.

New Members Secured and Plans Prepared to Start It Off Anew.

Organizing Deputy H. A. Williams of Elizabeth, has been in the city the past few days making an effort to reorganize the local camp of Woodmen of the World. It has been established five years and began with quite a large membership, but from one cause or another interest waned and it has been at a standstill.

Deputy Williams has been meeting with much success and the prospects for rejuvenation are very good. Quite a number of candidates have been secured and they will be given the degree tonight. The present officers of the camp are well known residents and they have signified their willingness to be re-elected and assist in the ne worder of things.

The late Thomas B. Cardner was a member of the camp and a few days ago Deputy Williams paid his widow the death benefit of $2,000. The officials will also erect a monument over his grave, this being a mark of respect paid to each departed member.

ASKS HER $25,000 BACK

Aunt Says She Gave Cash to G. G. Clynes Who Makes No Accounting.

SUIT IS INSTITUTED

North Plainfielder Expresses Surprise When Told by Daily Press Reporter That Legal Proceedings Have Been Started.

Thomas G. Clynes, who, with his young wife, has just moved from Locust Valley, L. I., to the house in Park place, North Plainfield, which they purchased recently from O. L. Teale, has been sued by Mrs. Clynes' maiden aunt, Miss Mary Jane Ludlam, for $25,000. Joseph I. Corn, of Hays & Hershfield, Miss Ludlam's lawyers, obtained an attachment in New York yesterday for the amount named, and the sheriff served it upon a firm of Wall street brokers and upon the Orient Bank, where Clynes' balance was found to be $1,073.

Mr. Corn said last night that his client had told him that Clynes had "jollied" her into parting with the $25,000, and had "jollied" her afterward until her patience gave out.

Miss Ludlam lives with her brother-in-law, Dr. Richard F. B. Seaman, at Locust Valley. She is sixty years old. It was at his home that Clynes and Dr. Seaman's daughter were married last July, and they lived with the bride's father and Miss Ludlam until a week ago, with the exception of brief intervals, when they traveled to some extent. Mr. Clynes purchased the Teale property and then notified his wife's relatives that he intended moving to North Plainfield.

According to the papers in her suit, Miss Ludlam talked about the vast amount of this

TILLMAN OR PERKINS OUT

One or the Other Must Go if the Assembly District Bill Passes and is Upheld.

BOTH IN ONE DISTRICT

Under Old Law, Custom Would Have Given Each a Renomination —Law Will Prevent It.

Either Randolph Perkins or Peter Tillman will be ineligible for a renomination as Assemblyman if the bill providing for the election of Assemblymen by districts instead of by counties as a whole goes through the Legislature with the boundaries of the districts for Union county as at present defined, and the constitutionality of the measure is upheld by the Court of Errors and Appeals, as expected by the sponsors of the proposed law.

An Assemblyman must live in the district he represents, and, as things now stand, the new district lines place both Tillman and Perkins in the Third district, which includes Westfield and Rahway. This district gave a Republican majority of considerably more than 2,000 at the last election, so that a nomination there is equivalent to an election.

Tillman is serving his first term in the Legislature. So is Perkins, if the unexpired term of former Assemblyman George H. Embree, which he was elected to fill, is not taken into account. There were not many days of the session of 1905 left when Perkins went to the Legislature the first time.

Next year each district will have a convention of its own, and the fight for a nomination will have to be carried on within the districts. It is said that Tillman and Perkins are both ambitious to serve another term in the House. It has been customary for an Assemblyman to be nominated for at least a second term when he desires it.

The status of Assemblyman Tucker, who lives in the Second district, which takes in the upper wards of Elizabeth, is not changed by the proposed redistricting bill.

It is said that the trouble in Middlesex county over the new lines has been adjousted, and that Theodore Strong and his supporters in New Brunswick have had to make some concessions to the Perth Amboy people. According to the lines submitted by the county committee, New Brunswick was made a district by itself, while Perth Amboy was placed in a district with a nearby township.

There is intense rivalry between Perth Amboy and New Brunswick. By the last census Perth Amboy had over 2,000 more inhabitants than New Brunswick. Naturally, therefore, when Perth Amboy found that New Brunswick was a district by itself, while Perth Amboy was in a district which had at least 2,000 more inhabitants than New Brunswick, Perth Amboy objected. The New Brunswick people admitted that the Perth Amboy district had many more inhabitants, but submitted figures to show that there were less than 800 more votes in the district, and they claimed that the truer basis of representation was voters, not inhabitants.

The reasoning, however, did not satisfy the committee, and the lines were changed somewhat to make the number of inhabitants in the district more equal.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY ELECTS.

Mrs. M. Winter President of First M. E. Organization.

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the First M. E. church was held in Vincent chapel, yesterday afternoon, election of officers and the reports for the year comprising the principal business. These reports showed that the past year had been an excellent one, there being an increase in membership and contributions to the work. The receipts were all expended for foreign missions.

The members decided to support for another year a Bible reader in India, encouraging reports being received concerning her work in foreign lands.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. M. Winter; first vice president, Mrs. Daniel R. Davis; second vice president, Mrs. Erastus Clark, Jr.; third vice president, Mrs. Nelson Y. Hull; recording secretary, Miss Minnie Sharp; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Maurice McGrath; treasurer, Miss Susie Jackson. Mrs. Winter will appoint committees and announce them at the next meeting of the society.

Improvements at First Presbyterian.

The improvements now underway at the First Presbyterian church will be completed within two weeks. There is being made a change in the lights about the pulpit platform and organ loft so that they will not shine directly in the eyes of persons sitting in the middle of the church.

PROTEGE WON HIS WIFE

W. C. Chamberlain Names the Man He Helped as Co-Respondent.

HE GETS HIS DECREE

For Illicit Intimacy With Joseph Stevens, Mrs. Chamberlain Is Absolutely Divorced—Couple Married Twenty-three Years.

Absolute divorce has been granted William C. Chamberlain, of this city, from his wife, Mary D. Chamberlain. The Court of Chancery granted the decree on statutory grounds, Joseph Stevens, of this city, being named as corespondent.

The Chamberlains were married twenty-three years ago in Bound Brook, where Mrs. Chamberlain, then Mary D. Martin, a girl in her teens, lived. They lived happily together until last year, when Chamberlain first discovered his wife's unfaithfulness.

Stevens, the corespondent, is a very old friend of the couple. It is said that he was taken into their household when very young, and practically raised. Chamberlain taught him his trade and gave him all the advantages he might have given his own son.

His intimacy with Mrs. Chamberlain was discovered by the husband early last year, at Chamberlain's own home. In his petition Chamberlain names Sea Breeze, Ward's Point, Princess Bay, S. I., and North Plainfield as the scenes of other offenses.

The Chamberlains began their married life in Raritan. They lived there fourteen years, after which they came to this city. Chamberlain left his wife on February 9, 1905. The couple have a daughter, who is married.

The decree was secured through Counselor W. S. Angleman.

BUMPY TIME FOR A JOURNALISTIC ROLLER.

The "Scribes" Walloped By Chief Kiely's Bowling Team of "Cops."

One earnest young student of journalism and four steady readers of his paper, calling themselves "The Scribes," played at bowling last night with a team that called itself The Police. The Police consisted of one real cop and four men who admire his uniform. The Police, captained by Chief Kiely, rolled The Scribes—lovely name—in the first three lines in succession. Then The Scribes quit. It was the end of the match, anyway, so they are not to be blamed for seeking a rest. Robert Verdant Hoffman, a senior at the Asbury Park School of Journalism, captained the Scribes.

The Police won by the following scores: 897-881; 855-847; 845-835. The teams lined up as follows: Police—Kiely, Pat Connolly, John Wirth, George Voehl and Carl Meyer, Jr. ("How could they hope to beat that combination of Dutch and Irish?" asks the Chief); Scribes—Hoffman, Patsy Reville, Ben Eddy, V. Willie Nash, and Frank Blatz. ("If I had come from Donegal instead of Whitehouse things might have been different," says Capt. Hoffman; "the rest of the team is all right.")

Looking Toward Memorial Day.

OPPOSE SCHANZ LICENSE

Councilmanic Committee to Present Adverse Report on Application For Saloon.

OPINION OF MEMBERS

Some of the Councilmen Inclined to Wait Until They Hear Reasons Before Committing Themselves.

It is practically certain that the license committee will present an unfavorable report on Charles Schanz's application for a liquor license at the April meeting of the Common Council on Monday night. This committee is composed of Councilmen F. L. Montgomery, Daniel T. Ginna and William S. Tyler.

When Mr. Tyler was questioned as to his position in this matter, he said: "I think that the committee will report adversely on Mr. Schanz's application. Of course, I cannot speak for Mr. Montgomery, chairman of the committee, but there has been no question as to how Mr. Ginna and I stand on the question.

"The only reason given as to why Mr. Schanz should have a license is the hard luck one and the Common Council cannot give a man a license simply on such a plea. If it was a question to be considered by private citizens it would be vastly different, but the hard luck story is not a good argument in favor of granting the application. If it didn't make any difference to the public, such as the question of putting up a flag pole, it would be different, but this is a matter of public importance solely. I am heartily sorry for Mr. Schanz, but the city or the Common Council is not responsible for the position he is in today and should not be held responsible for it."

Councilman Buxton when asked as to his position on this matter, replied: "I prefer to wait and see what report the license committee makes before giving an opinion."

Councilman W. L. Gloak says that he wants to hear what the members of the license committee has to say about the application.

GOLD MEDAL MINSTRELS TO PLAY NEARBY TOWNS

TROUPE HAS BEEN RE-ORGANIZED AND ENLARGED FOR EXTENDED TOUR.

The Gold Medal minstrel troupe, which played several local engagements last spring, has been reorganized by B. C. Firstbrook, and will soon be sent out over the "kerosene" circuit. Scotch Plains is to be the first stop, where the production will be given in Excelsior Hall under the auspices of the fire department and New Market and South Plainfield are to be visited soon afterward. There is a possibility that the amusement lovers of Stirling and Gallia will have an opportunity to applaud the troupe before the season closes.

The company numbers twenty artists, the pick of several recent local amateur shows. It is being backed by a well known Plainfielder who has spared no expense in providing costumes and effects and in some ways will bear the scar marks of a professional undertaking.

In the event of the present plans meeting with success, the show will be enlarged next fall and will be booked in many of the larger cities of the State.

Among those who will take part in the performances are Jack Todd, the popular tenor; Ira Bowers, the citys' champion clog dancer; B. C. Firstbrook, Harry Blimm, William Doud, Harry Raymond, Jean Hafes, J. Coss, Harry Johnson, Hugh Ricketts, Harry De Mera, George Pope, E. C. Searing and Neil Lamont, the last named, a former cornet soloist with Guy Brothers' show.

FILING OF CERTIFICATE REVEALS SECRET WEDDING

EVERETT SHERWIN AND MISS EDNA KENNEDY MARRIED 5 MONTHS AGO.

Through the filing of the usual certificate with the Board of Health authorities it was learned today that Miss Edna Kennedy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Kennedy, of the Jackson building, and Everett Sherwin, son of Horace M. Sherwin, of Washington street, have been married exactly five months. They were wedded on September 28 last by Rev. J. R. Wright, pastor of the Methodist church at Westfield. The young people kept the fact a secret because of their ages, the groom having just turned twenty-one and the bride eighteen.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Sherwin have a host of acquaintances in the city and borough who will be greatly surprised at the announcement, though their engagement had been understood. The former is a draughtsman in the employ of a New York concern, while his bride has been assistant bookkeeper with J. A. Smith & Bro. She is a member of the First M. E. church and has been prominent in its church and religious work.

There was no opposition to the marriage on the part of parents and the information that it had taken place was met by them with hearty congratulations. The young couple will go to housekeeping within a short time.

FITZSIMMONS LIKELY TO FORFEIT OPTION

HITCH OVER PURCHASE OF MALTBY PROPERTY BY ACTOR-PUGILIST.

The much heralded entrance of "Bob" Fitzsimmons to Dunellen may prove a fizzle after all. Because the owners of the Maltby property can not close up a road that goes through the grounds the lanky pugilist has refused to carry out the purchase bargain and there is a well grounded report in the air that he elsewhere to establish his "down and out" club, about which the metropolitan newspapers have had so much to say.

The Maltby place is situated on the New Market-Bound Brook road and many years ago a side avenue was built through the lot. It has not been used in a long time, but as Fitzsimmons wanted his establishment to have strict privacy he did not like the idea of a loop hole by which the rank and file of the neighborhood could get the vermont sports disporting in the Middlesex county Fountain of Youth. Agents have tried to get the road closed, but it can be did, and Bob says "Nay, nay," when approached to take over the place.

At the present time the one-time champion and his wife are doing a turn in vaudeville and are evidently making more money than they could by a rejuvenating establishment.

Her Twelfth Birthday.

In honor of her twelfth birthday a party was given by Isabelle Gloak, daughter of Councilman and Mrs. W. L. Gloak, of East Second street. Those present were Mary Smick, Alexander Campbell, Arthur Campbell, Ella Adams, Edith Adams, Ethel Neal, Albert Neal, Walter Fisher, Elizabeth Kenney, Burdock Hetfield, Harold Beekman, Raymond Meaney, Margaret Wiley, Elizabeth Hendry, Mabel Loizeaux, Margaret Loizeaux, May McAisse, Hazel Fries, Dora Callahan, Gertrude Montross, Harry Thorn, Harriet Wilson, Dorothy Hetfield, and her teacher, Miss Cora Barber.

ARTHUR W. TYLER DEAD

Organizer of Plainfield Public Library Succumbs in Muhlenberg Hospital.

A NOTED LIBRARIAN

Graduate of Amherst and Former Editor of New York Mail—Cousin of Col. Tyler and Brother of Mrs. R. P. Lincoln.

Arthur Wellington Tyler, organizer of the Plainfield Public Library, died in Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday, following an operation performed in that institution some time ago. He was a cousin of Col. Mason W. Tyler and a brother of Mrs. R. P. Lincoln. The funeral will be private and interment will be made in Pittsfield, Mass.

Mr. Tyler was born in Pittsfield, Mass., March 14, 1842. He was the son of Wellington Hart and Caroline Cazpenline Tyler, founders of the Maplewood Institute, of that city, in its time one of the most successful schools in the country for the education of young women.

He was graduated from Amherst College in 1867, was for a time an editor of the New York Mail, and after that was engaged in similar positions on Moore's Rural New Yorker. Later he became assistant to the librarian of the Astor Library, New York, and from 1876 to 1879 was librarian of Johns Hopkins University library at Baltimore, Md.

From 1879 to 1883 Mr. Tyler was the librarian of the Indianapolis, Ind., Public Library, and during the following two years held a similar position at the Quincy, Ill., Public Library. Subsequently he organized the Plainfield Public Library and also the Public Library at Bristol, Conn., which was endowed by Mr. Blackstone, of Chicago, at $500,000. Finally he became assistant to the librarian of the Carnegie Library, Washington, D. C.

In January last he went to Muhlenberg Hospital to have an operation performed.

NO ACTION TILL FALL ON WATER QUESTION

SO SAYS CHAIRMAN OF THE PUBLIC AFFAIRS COMMITTEE.

Now that the Senate bill introduced by Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, which amends the act for municipal control of water supply by defining what constitutes a legal majority at elections for such purposes, is a law, the question has arisen as to whether the taxpayers will be asked to vote again on the question of acquiring a municipal system of water works.

A reporter for The Daily Press in conversation with Councilman Herbert Buxton, chairman of the committee on public affairs, learned that the proposition will probably not be presented to the voters before next fall. Mr. Buxton says that as yet he has not had sufficient time to thoroughly look into the matter and in fact he has not become acquainted with details of the amended bill. He will call a meeting of his committee within a short time to discuss the matter and a report will be presented later after a confesence with Corporation Counsel Marsh.

Mr. Buxton says that in so important a matter, that of the city purchasing and owning its water works, due deliberation should be given, and he thinks that the several months intervening between now and September or October, should be devoted to a thorough explanation of the question so that everyone will know just what he is voting for when the election is held. In this way Mr. Buxton thinks that a fair expression of opinion may be obtained.

Another question arises, and that is as to whether it will be necessary to hold a special election on the water works' proposition. President Tolles, of the Common Council, says that he is of the opinion that the vote cannot be taken at the regular election and this opinion seems to be shared by a number of persons who are interested.

It would be unfair to hold such an election during the summer, it is said, when many voters are out of town and the result would be far from satisfactory. Under these conditions an election is improbable before September or October.

HE TOOK SLEUTH IN TOW

Husky Prisoner Compels Detective McCarthy to Go With Him.

WANTED HIM TO DRINK

Cop Has a Tough Time With a Good-Natured Drunken Giant—Two Bluecoats Needed to Arrest Him.

Detective McCarthy saw Robert McDonald, a P. S. C. lineman, making an unashamed display of a jag on Park avenue, near Second street, last night.

"You come along with me," said McCarthy, laying his hand on McDonald's arm.

McDonald, who is a big man, turned around and surveyed the detective, who is airy in construction. He smiled softly and took a firm grip of the sleuth's arm.

"You come along with me," he said, and McCarthy went.

McDonald didn't use the fly cop roughly. He didn't have to. He merely kept in his way, and his grip on McCarthy's arm kept the sleuth traveling in the same direction. And the Park avenue crowd laughed heartlessly.

"Have a drink? you're with me," said McDonald affably, as he reached the Kensington Hotel entrance. McCarthy, finding himself headed for a place abhorred by all good cops, decided to call for help. He had his billy with him and knows how to use it, but McDonald was acting in such perfect good humor that McCarthy didn't have the heart to welt him. So he signalled for reinforcements. Roundsman Flynn, who is as tough as nails, responded, and McDonald's picnic ended.

In the city court this morning McDonald's good nature showed engagingly above the rumpled effects of a night in the coop. Judge Runyon beamed with sympathetic geniality and suspended sentence.

STRIKE TALK ENDS IN TOBACCO SMOKE.

That Is, Aluminum Press Co.'s Order Forbidding It Started False Rumors.

Rumors of a strike at the Aluminum Plate and Press Co. plant, Dewey Park, came into town this morning. A Daily Press reporter called up Manager Joseph White and asked him about it.

"Strike! shucks!" said Mr. White. "We haven't any strike. We hung up a 'No Smoking' sign on the floor yesterday, and the men who smoke kicked on it. They have been in the habit of smoking on the floor, and they don't like to give up the privilege. That's all. None of them approached the management about it, and none has quit.

"Smoking about a plant of this kind is bad," continued Mr. White. "There is a lot of oily waste scattered about and a cigarette end or a pipe spark might cause a serious and expensive fire. Smoking about plants like this is not usually allowed and we are not treating the men with undue severity in forbidding it. They may smoke in the washroom, as it is."

About That Fight Story.

It was reported in town Monday and yesterday that local sports had arranged and conducted a prize fight in a hotel at Scotch Plains, Saturday night. An investigation shows that the story is the result of someone's vivid imagination. The only fight at the Plains Saturday night was one in which an intoxicated individual got fresh and was dumped on the sidewalk.

A.O.U.W. LODGE PROTEST

Appeal Taken From New Jersey Grand Lodge's Order of Special Assessment.

CHANGES THE RATES

Master Workman Theodore Mason and Recorder Harvey R. Thorn, of Central Lodge, No. 48, Ancient Order United Workmen, acting in accordance with the instructions of the lodge, have filed an appeal with Grand Master Workman Fred P. Fowle, of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey, from the action of the Grand Lodge at the fifteenth annual session at Atlantic City, in adopting a resolution, whereby an assessment of twenty-five cents per $1,000 was to be levied each month on all members under fifty years of age and fifty cents on each member above fifty years, for a general fund assessment, but to be collected under the laws governing the collection of the beneficiary fund to be known as an "emergency fund." The petition sets forth several reasons why this action should not be permitted to stand.

In the first place is cited in the appeal that no authority is conferred by the Supreme Lodge upon the Grand Lodge for the creation of an emergency fund; that the action was a change in the assessment rates for the beneficiary fund and can only be consummated under the constitution of the Grand Lodge by sending copies of the proposed change to the grand recorded sixty days prior to the Grand Lodge meeting and printed copies thereof sent by him to the subordinate lodges in sufficient numbers to supply the membership and requiring a two-thirds vote of the members present and voting for its adoption.

It is further set forth in the appeal that said change was adopted by a vote of fifty-two to forty-eight, which it is claimed was not a two-thirds vote; that under the action of the Grand Lodge such change goes into effect at once, in violation of article twenty-five of the constitution of the Grand Lodge, requiring the changes in order to become operative to be approved by the Supreme Lodge.

It is also cited that if the power is invested in the Grand Lodge to raise such a fund by assessment for the general fund, such action is an injustice upon the members by discriminating between those under the age of fifty years and those over fifty years, and that the said legislation is illegal, unconstitutional and unjust.

The petitioners request that in compliance with the laws of the order that the Grand Recorder be requested to prepare the transcript of the proceedings of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey at its late session appertaining to the said legislation and that the papers be transmitted to the Supreme Recorder for the action of the Supreme Lodge.

Master Workman Theodore Mason, Recorder Harvey R. Thorn and William Newcorn comprise the committee from Central Lodge that is taking this matter up in the interest of the opponents to the plan adopted at the late session of the New Jersey Grand Lodge.

VOTE ON SEWER QUESTION

North Plainfield Officials Arranging For Special Election to Decide the Matter.

ENGINEER IS ENGAGED

George H. Pierson Retained to Prepare Plans and Estimates of Cost for Sewage Disposal System.

The second sewer conference between the North Plainfield Common Council and the Board of Trade, last week, resulted in more definite action than has been accomplished in months and indicates that the present agitation is sure to bring about the installation of an up-to-date system. Engineer George H. Pierson, who was in attendance, was engaged to continue investigations as to the best method to adopt, the probable cost and the place of disposal, and he will make his first formal report at the Council's next regular meeting. In addition, a resolution offered by Councilman McGee to bring the matter before the people, was passed, and on the whole the meeting was highly satisfactory. This resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, That the corporation counsel be directed to draw the necessary ordinance for the holding of an election for the purpose of voting on the question of bond issue and all other papers and ordinances required to submit the question of a sewage disposal for our borough to an early completion; and we urge that the said counsel report at the next regular meeting in April."

The officials who attended the conference were Mayor Smalley, Messrs. McGee, Smith and Krewson representing the Council, Messrs. Osgood, Doud and Kenney for the Board of *Health, and Engineer Pierson. Be*fore continuing the discussion from the point where it was left off two weeks ago, Mayor Smalley announced that he has written a letter to Mayor Buckle, of the city, in regard to having the borough's proposed system empty in the Plainfield beds and that as yet he had received no reply. The letter read as follows:

"At a recent joint meeting of the Mayor and Council and Board of Health of the borough of North Plainfield, I was instructed to ascertain if possible:

"First, whether Plainfield's sewage disposal plant is capable of taking care, in addition to the sewage of *Plainfield, of such quantity of sew*age as would reasonably result from the installation of a general system of sewers in the borough.

"Second, whether, if the first question be answered in the affirmative, *Plainfield would be willing to under*take, for a proper consideration, the disposal at its plants of the sewage of North Plainfield, which sewage it is proposed would be delivered by the borough to the city in its disposal plant.

"Third, upon what terms and conditions, generally speaking, would Plainfield undertake (if at all) to receive, convert, and dispose of, at the city plant, the sewage delivered there by the borough.

"Of course, I do not expect in answer to the last question more than a general statement at this time, but would like to obtain some general idea both as to the probable expense to the borough of such an arrangement, if it could be made, and the term of years for which such contract, if made, might continue.

"Anything which you may do to facilitate an authoritative answer to the foregoing, will be greatly appreciated.

Very truly yours,

"NEWTON B. SMALLEY,

"Mayor of North Plainfield'."

The mayor explained that he expected to have his questions answered as soon as the City Council or some official in a position to know could give them consideration. In the meantime, he said, he saw no reason why the borough should not go ahead with the idea of installing an independent plant and so, at least, get some sort of a visible start. Engineer Pierson has been engaged by North Plainfield three years ago to look into the question of a sewer system and being familiar to some extent with the ground was in a position to speak. He then called upon the engineer and the latter presented his views, based upon his original surveys of the territory and prospecting trips taken within the past week.

In the course of his remarks he declared that three years ago it was thought that the only way for North Plainfield to do was to unite with the city but his investigations had shown that it was just as easy to build independent disposal beds or empty into the Raritan river. The cheaper method of the two could only be decided upon after a more careful comparison of figures than had been done. This calls for detailed work, he explained, and it would be necessary to secure complete and concise data before the matter could be presented to the taxpayers. He entered into a detailed explanation of the condition of the lower end of the borough where disposal beds could be located and also explained clearly many points that would have to be considered before any definite course could be taken. Up to this time, Mr. Pierson had not been engaged permanently and in order to carry out his suggestions, the resolution was introduced that makes him the directing engineer for the present, at least.

When this point was determined, he was instructed to compile within the next two weeks, if possible, the cost of laying pipes in the streets where sanitary conditions demand relief as soon as possible, the cost of a trunk line to tide-water, the cost of building a septic tank and the cost of erecting a pumping station to force sewage into the Plainfield beds. He replied that the snow might hamper him somewhat but that in all probability he would be ready to present the figures to the Council in the time specified. If not they will be made known at a special session called for this purpose.

Before adjournment, Mayor Smalley congratulated the Board of Health members on the activity they have displayed in bringing the sewer question to a head. In seven years past, he said, he had tried in vain to have this organization help in agitating it but there had never been any response until the present board was organized. He, at least, appreciated it, he said, and he was sure the residents of the borough would feel grateful toward them for what they have already done.

The engineer engaged is a man of recognized ability and has had wide experience in installing sewer and water plants. He had charge of the work at Somerville when water was put in and because of other contracts in Union and Somerset counties possesses a knowledge of local soil and drainage conditions that will be of great value to him in his investigations for the borough. In explaining his conclusions, the facts are presented in such terms familiar with engineering problems in such a way that they can readily grasp his intent and follow him with a clear understanding.

SINGLE TAXERS NAME PLEYDELL VICE-PRES'T

HE AND MOODY MADE OFFICERS OF NEW JERSEY ASSOCIATION.

Arthur C. Pleydell, of North Plainfield, has been chosen as a vice president of the New Jersey State Single Tax League. A similar honor was accorded John Moody, of Cranford, the newly-elected president of radical Democrats' association. They represent Somerset and Union county respectively.

Both Mr. Pleydell and Mr. Moody made characteristic speeches at the annual meeting in Newark. In the course of his remarks, the North Plainfield single taxer said that he considered it the present system of taxation idiotic.

"As practised in Camden today," he added, "the tax on personal property puts a premium on lying, and makes the honest man a sufferer, as they are endeavoring to tax the value of a man's personal property by going around asking how many watches and how much jewelry, etc., he owns. This system is the easiest of all methods of taxation to attack. What we need to do is to get the people talking of taxation, and the people are ready to listen to any talk on taxation at the present time. This is because the railroads and public service corporations have so battered and banged them that they have awakened to the fact that they are getting their dues from these corporations in the matter of taxes, so that now the people are ready and willing to discuss a problem that ten years ago would have been considered too radical for serious thought."

WARREN CHAPEL MEN HOLD AN ANNIVERSARY.

Brotherhood Entertains Friends in Celebration of Its Third Birthday.

In celebration of its third anniversary as an organization, the Young Men's Brotherhood of Warren chapel entertained its friends at a social last Thursday. The programme presented comprised piano selections by Miss Florence Moorehouse, vocal selections by Miss Agnes Bailey and Miss Norah Schenck, feats of magic by H. Warren Rankin, a musical melange by Musical Stewart and duets by the Misses Bailey and Schenck. The contributions by H. Warren Rankin were not only amusing but mystifying and his work as a magician closely approaches the strictly professional. Refreshments and a social hour concluded the evening.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the affair consisted of H. Warren Rankin, chairman; Fred Winn, William Welch, Earl Smith and Alexander Galloway. The Brotherhood started three years ago with ten members and now has forty. It is a strong organization in every way and adds a great deal to the social and religious life of the chapel.

BIG MASONIC FUNCTION

CONFER HIGH DEGREE

Orient Chapter Companions In Ancient Robes Work Rite at Jerusalem Chapter—Prominent Masons Present.

Orient Chapter, No. 138, Royal Arch Masons, of Brooklyn, assisted by the officers and several companions of Jerusalem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons, of this city, conferred the first and second sections of the Most Excellent Master's Degree on twelve candidates at a stated convocation of Jerusalem Chapter last Thursday in the tabernacle of the Masonic Hall.

The occasion was noteworthy because of the visitation of Orient Chapter, which has the reputation for its work, and the large number of prominent candidates upon whom was conferred the first degree in the chapter. Orient Chapter made the trip to Plainfield in a special car, reaching here about 8 o'clock. The companions of Jerusalem Chapter met at 7 o'clock and conferred the first section of the degree, so as not to prolong the ceremonies later in the evening.

It was about 8:20 o'clock when the officers and companions of Orient Chapter took charge and conferred the second section of the degree on these candidates: Milton H. Phillips, Atlas Lodge, No. 425, N. Y.; Joseph Abel Charles McCrea, Richmond Lodge, No. 66, N. Y.; Jeremiah Fields TenEyck, Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26; Sidney S. Schuyler, St. Nicholas Lodge, No. 321, N. Y.; Ephraim S. Pease, Bedford Lodge, No. 574, N. Y.; Charles Joel Fisk, Anchor Lodge, No. 149; Samuel Burnett Howe, Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26; Rollin Pierson Grant, Atlas Lodge, No. 125, N. J.; Frederic W. Butler, J. Stephen Higham, Stephen D. Joseph and Peter A. Emmons, Anchor Lodge, No. 149.

This is the first time that Orient Chapter has conferred the degree here and its proficiency in the work won high praise from the members of the Masonic fraternity present. The officers and companions appeared in ful regalia and an impressive feature was the special organ and quartette selections, the famous Metropolitan Quartette singing the entire choral service. At the conclusion of the degree work an adjournment was taken to the banquet hall.

The committee on reception and banquet consisted of Grand Commander Jacob Kirkner, Past High Priests Clarence Goss and Charles G. Attle, Orient Chapter, and Chapter Robert Rushmore, James F. Buckle, William A. Pinto, James S. Pray and Henry L. Hall.

There were about 200 Masonic members present and among the prominent ones were Grand High Priest Palmer, of the State of New York, and Grand High Priest Peter McGill, of this State. There were also many visitors from New York, Newark and other nearby places.

MISS SCHAFFER'S DEBUT PRAISED BY THE CRITICS.

May Be Seen in This Country Next Season in "Saronna."

Miss Josephine Schaffer, the former Plainfield young woman who has been winning laurels on the operatic stage, made a successful debut as a prima donna in Le Grand Howland's "Saronna" at Florence, Italy, March 1. Newspaper advices received from there state that singer and production were so favorably received that both were booked in other Italian cities before the season is over and that next year the opera will be staged in this country. If mounted here, Miss Schaffer will be seen in the part she created abroad.

Speaking of Miss Schaffer's success, the musical critic of the Newark Evening News in last night's issue gave the following: "When Manager Conried, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, established his school of opera in connection with that organization, Miss Schaffer was one of the few accepted from the many applicants for admission. With several other gifted pupils in the school and with Mme. Jaegar, its directress, as chaperon, she was sent abroad by Manager Conried at the close of the first season to continue her studies in Munich and other places. Last July she again went to Germany, and in Munich pursued her studies of both vocal and dramatic art to such good purpose that those who were acquainted with the progress she had made did not hesitate to predict success for her should she decide to make her debut as a prima donna abroad. That she were not mistaken in their belief in her ability is evident from the favorable reports received from Florence."

Baptism of Converts.

Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will baptise a numbe rof converts at the evening service tomorrow.

E. W. Ewart and family, of Fairview avenue, will return tomorrow from Marion, Ohio, from the funeral of Mr. Ewart's mother.

INSURANCE MEN ANGRY

Deny That is Politics in the Local Fire Department.

NO RAISE IN THE RATES

Stories Published in The Spectator and The Chronicle Called to Attention of National Board of Underwriters.

Reputable New York insurance men residing in this city and the vicinity are incensed over articles reflecting on the Common Council and the fire department which have appeared in two insurance papers recently. So much are they wrought up over an attempt to hurt the city that they have called the attention of the rate committee of the National Board of Underwriters to the matter and it is hinted that drastic action is likely to be taken against the man alleged to have furnished the periodicals with unjust matters upon which the articles were based.

During the last few weeks both The Spectator and The Chronicle, papers devoted to insurance affairs, have given publication to stories which bear the earmarks of having emanated from the same source if not written by the same person. These stories allege that the underwriters give their attention to the alleged introduction of politics in the Plain*field fire department over the matter* of the chief's authority. One hint that there is a possibility that the board will raise the rates here as a result of the contest.

As is well known, Mayor Buckle sent the name of John Cone, a call man, to the Common Council for confirmation of his appointment as second assistant chief. The Mayor's appointment was turned down through the efforts of the anti-administration councilmen, who preferred to have the office abolished altogether rather than promotion refused to Senior Captain William Townley, of the regular service. The independent councilmen took the stand on the ground that the appointment of Cone was the alleged payment of a political debt.

The New York manager of an insurance company residing here told a representative of The Daily Press last night that he had turned over copies of the articles published in the papers named to members of the rate commission of the National Board and explained the situation fully.

This manager said: "The rate committee understands full well the local conditions of Plainfield and can state positively that there will be no raise in insurance rates in Plainfield. They know where those articles came from and there is apt to be something doing. As a matter of fact, the rate commission men fully approve of the doing away with the office of second assitant chief here, for they know that the department has not been impaired. You can also say that the board approves of the Common Council action in the matter. I live in Plainfield I will see to it that the rate committee is kept informed and there will be no increase in rates for any future attempt to turn the fire department over to politicians will be blocked."

Three other New York insurance men expressed themselves in like fashion.

Following is the story published in the New York Chronicle:

"So far in the history of Plainfield, one of the most attractive and progressive of the New Jersey suburban towns, its fire department has been singularly free from political interference, which fact accounts in large part for the efficiency of the service. A change in present conditions—so satisfactory to property owners and underwriters—is now threatened, however, and insurance men, and particularly members of the Fire Department Committee of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, will do well to keep close watch of the motion just passed to its second reading by the Plainfield Common Council, to abolish the office of second assistant chief of the fire department, rather than appoint to the post, now vacant, one of the call men concerning whose ability as a fireman there is no question. The only objection, so far as we can learn, to making the present incumbent, is upon political grounds, which, from a practical standpoint is not a reason for action, but merely an excuse, and a cheap one, too. Fire underwriters have no interest in party squabbles in towns or municipalities, but they, in common with property owners, have a very vital concern in the fire protection service, for upon its degree of efficiency or the reverse are their rates predicated, and if the fire department of Plainfield, a rapidly growing town, is to become merely a plaything for politicians, a change in existing tariffs may be necessary."

IRISHMEN REASSURED AS TO "M'FADDEN'S FLATS"

CONVINCED BY MGR. CONAIHAN THAT IT DOES NOT BELITTLE THE RACE.

Because of rumors that the production of "McFadden's Flats," billed to appear at the New Plainfield theatre on April 5, for Treasurer Cunningham's benefit, is a glaring caricature of the Irish race, a delegation from Division No. 4, A. O. H., called on Manager Counihan last night to discuss the matter with a view to having him cancel the booking. The committee was composed of Patrick Harrington, John Hurley and Bryan Hanrahan, a fourth member, Dr. Brennan, not being able to attend. The men were cordially received by Manager Counihan and after a friendly chat of an hour, the minds of the Hibernians were set at rest as to whether there was anything in the show to offend the most loyal son of the Emerald isle. They departed fully satisfied that the rumors were idle stories and that any Irishman could view it without any personal feeling.

"McFadden's Flats" has been on the road for several years and about two years ago some hoodlums in the Harlem theatre, New York, threw vegetables at the actors. Their act led to some wild newspaper stories about outraged Celts in the audience having done it because of the manner in which the Irishman was burlesqued and the show suffered in consequence for a long time afterward. Manager Counihan, himself a product of the "cold sod," knows every line in the play, having been employed in the theatre when it, and he would not have thought of booking it if there was anything in it to belittle his own race.

He was very much surprised when informed by the Hibernians that the members of Division No. 4 had protested against it and he undertook to prove what he had to say about it. He showed them all the lithographs used in billing, none of which are offensive, and also gave them his word as a Plainfield citizen that he would not permit any production to appear at the New Plainfield that would subject him to criticism. In conclusion he offered to pay the expenses of the committee to Trenton, where they could view the play before the show and if then they thought it was not the thing for Plainfield, he would cancel it.

His sincerity convinced the delegation and they assured him that the matter would be dropped. Before they left Mr. Counihan called Dr. Brennan on the telephone and the latter expressed himself as fully satisfied that everything would be all right.

FIREMEN'S MEDALS FOR LIFE MEMBERS.

State Association Distributing Bronze Badges.

The new badges for life members of the New Jersey State Firemen's Association, which were ordered last September at the annual convention of that body in Atlantic City, have been received by the State association. They are now being distributed to the firemen who are life members of the association by virtue of having been elected a vice president of the organization or attending the conventions as a delegate for five consecutive years.

The badges are of bronze, about the size of a half-dollar. In the centre is embossed the seal of the State. Above this is the inscription, "N. J. State Firemen's Association." Under the seal are the words, "Life Member."

The badges were issued because of the trouble experieced each year in procuring a proper insignia for the life members, who have to wear it at conventions. It was decided to adopt a badge which would be presented by the association to the life members and which would at all times admit the member and do away with the issuance of special badges each year.

The association is composed of firemen from all parts of the State. The object is relief of injured firemen and assistance to widows and orphans of firemen. The source of revenue is derived from a fund received from the State for a five per cent. tax levied upon foreign insurance companies. This applies to all insurance companies organized outside the State. The amount is divided among the associations which comprise the State association, and is distributed by the State banking commissioner. Each local association also receives two per cent. from the agents of foreign insurance companies who do business in the municipality. This fund is paid out under the direction of the board of trustees.

Three delegates from each association and the chief of the department are sent to the convention each year. In order to become a delegate a member of the department must first be elected a member of the board of representatives of the relief association and then elected a delegate by the representatives. Vice presidents are also elected from each of the congressional districts in the State.

Miss Rafferty, of Sycamore avenue, is visiting friends in Rome, N. Y.

Mrs J. Beckman, of Fairview avenue, is today able to sit up for a little while, after a two weeks' illness.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH PROGRESSING

INCREASE IN BENEVOLENT GIVING REPORTED AT ANNUAL MEETING.

Reports of good work in every department and society were received at the annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Park avenue and Ninth street, March 21. Increases in all forms of contributions were reported.

Two deacons, church clerk and the treasurer of the Benevolent Fund were elected. Deacons Theodore L. Runyon and David M. Runyon were re-elected, and Clerk Harry C. Runyon and R. Trout Vail, the treasurer of the Fund, were continued in office. All elections were by one ballot.

The Sunday-school has a total membership of 200, an increase of fifteen, with an average attendance of 99. There are eight officers and 19 teachers. The school took in $464 and disbursed $435. Eight scholars joined the church. Features peculiar to the school include blackboard illustrations by Sunday-school lessons and an orchestra.

The deacons' report showed advancement everywhere. An unusually large percentage of faith and giving, it said, had been shown throughout the church membership during the year. The membership reported is 297, accessions and dismissions balancing at 17. There were ten taken in by baptism, four by letter and three by experience. Deacon Runyon reported $70 in the Fellowship Fund.

Benevolent collections were as follows: Foreign missions, $288; home missions, $41; New Jersey Baptist State convention, $25; Newark Baptist Home for Aged, $22; Baptist Ministers' Home, $11; Education Society, $11; Sunday-school, $44.

The Ladies' Aid Society held eight meetings, with an average attendance of twelve. It did a lot of work during the year. The task that loomed most prominent in the mind of the writer of the report was a general cleaning out of the church parlors. The useless things were put in the cellar, and the report slyly suggested that the men of the church might take a whack at the cellar some time.

The Women's Foreign Mission Society held eight regular meetings and one special. The average attendance was fifteen. The receipts were $113 and there is a balance of $5.79 on hand.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society held nine meetings, with an average attendance of seventeen, an increase of five. Receipts were $133 and disbursements $132.

The Y. P. S. C. E. had a year of marked progress. It has a membership of sixty, an increase of five, with six active committees. Receipts amounted to $76 and disbursements $69. Through the missionary committee the society helped the Sunday-school give food and delicacies, at Thanksgiving, and toys, at Christmas, to the poor. Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters, has seven new members. It is planning a sociable for next month.

At the close of the meeting Rev. A. E. Finn read a *comparative state*ment of the benevolent expenditures for the two years, to show how the donations had increased in every society and department. "It is a most encouraging one," he said. "The benevolences of a church show the virility of its spirit and its activity. These increases are the most gratifying sign of our advancement."

Four candidates for membership were received. Prof. L. Goodwin was assigned to experience, and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Tinsman, and Miss Marion C. Mortimer were posted for baptism on Sunday night.

VAN ALSTYNE-FITCH.

Westfield Girl Becomes Wife of Chatham, N. Y., Man.

Miss Bessie Allen Fitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Fitch, of Elm street, Westfield, and Hugh Van Alstyne, of Old Chatham, N. Y., were married at 8:15 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Dr. J. W. Wright, pastor of the M. E. church, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Mr. Anderson, of Jersey City, and Rev. Mr. Starks, of Montclair.

The bride was attended by Miss Marjorie Fitch, of Dunellen, a niece, as maid-of-honor, and Ralph Fitch was the best man. The flower girls were Virginia Pearsall, Eleanor Pearsall and Dorothy Pearsall, cousins of the bride.

The house was profusely decorated with flowers, palms and ferns, the arrangements being very effective in the parlor and dining room. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends, and the bride was generously remembered with handsome gifts.

The couple left during the evening on a honeymoon trip and upon their return will reside at Old Chatham, N. Y., where the groom is engaged in business.

PROUD OF BOTH LANDS

Thomas Hanna Returns From Erin Where He Saw American Machinery in General Use.

IRELAND PROSPEROUS

Plainfielder Visited Scenes of His Youth and Incidently Witnessed An Election Typically American.

Thomas Hanna, a well known Plainfielder, returned to the city yesterday after spending three months abroad, principally at his old home in the north of Ireland. He reached New York Tuesday on the steamship Columbia after a pleasant voyage, enjoying the best of health.

Mr. Hanna sailed last December in order to be with relatives on the Emerald Isle on Christmas Day, and reached there almost to the hour he had anticipated. The trip over was made on the maiden voyage of the Carmania, the Cunard line's new turbine steamer, and he is enthusiastic over its behavior. A dozen or more experts were on board to watch every action of the vessel and they were unanimous in their declaration that this type in the passenger craft is a complete success. As a result of their report two other Cunard boats now ped with turbine engines and quadruple propellers that will develop a speed of twenty-five knots and cut the trans-Atlantic run-time down to four days. The Carmania, built at the same time as the Carmania, is driven by the familiar expansion engines, and the comparison between the two shows that the turbines will soon be used exclusively.

The Plainfielder's principal stopping place was at Bangor, near Belfast, the home of the Royal Ulster Yacht Club, of which Sir Thomas Lipton is a member. When he arrived there on Christmas the verdure was as green as it is here in May and cattle were grazing in the fields. This seems remarkable in contrast to this section of the country, when it is considered that Ireland is fifteen degrees further north than New York and he says it is no wonder that it is called the Emerald Isle. He found the country in a very prosperous condition and was gratified to see the farmers using American reapers, binders and plows. The Irish manufacturers also depend on America as no small extent for their machinery. One of Mr. Hanna's fellow voyagers on the way over was a Yankee bound for an inland city to set up machines in a factory that contained American made hosiery machinery. This fact was also noted by him during a tour through Scotland and England, taken in connection with his visit.

Being more or less familiar with the American political "game," Mr. Hanna was particularly interested in an election that took place while he was at Bangor. The contest was for members of Parliament, with Home Rule and Unionism, Free Trade and Protection as the principal issues. The candidates toured the districts in automobiles and adopted practically the same method of campaign this side of the pond to secure votes. The contest varied little from those agitating Union county once a year, but there was a decided difference in getting the returns. The election was held on a Tuesday, though it was a "big" one, the voters were content to wait until late Monday morning to learn the results.

When engaging passage for his return trip, Mr. Hanna was struck to note the large exodus of Irish folk to secure in Canada. Though the Island is now in a better condition industrially than it has been in many years, the emigrating continues without cessation and it is becoming a matter for serious contemplation on the part of the government.

BROKEN ENGLISH.

It is all very well to poke fun at the intelligent foreigner who makes a hash of our beautiful, expressive language, but really he has many difficulties to contend with.

"I begin to understand your language better," said a French gentleman recently. "But your verbs, they trouble me still. For instance, I saw Mrs. Brown the schoolmistress just now, and she told me that she intends to break down her school——"

"Break up her school, she said, surely!"

"Ah, yes, I remember break up—it was that she said."

"And why is she doing it?"

"Because her health it is broken into."

"Broken down, you mean."

"Certainly! Broken down is correct. And, indeed, since the influenza has broken up into her school."

"Broken out. Is she going to leave the house to look after itself, then?"

"No; she is afraid it will be broken—broken. How do I say that, please?"

"Broken into."

"Ah, good!"

"What about that son of hers—is he married yet?"

"No; that engagement is broken out."

"Broken off, excuse me. Ah, I hadn't heard!"

"Indeed! Mrs. Brown is very worried about it. Her son only broke the news down to her last week. Is that correct?"

"No, merely broke."

It is really to be wondered at that foreigners mostly speak broken English?—Exchange.

TELEPHONE INDEPENDENTS.

Run Against a Snag in North Tarrytown.

For some time past the Great Eastern Telephone Company has been endeavoring to obtain a franchise for operating a service in New York city. It has, as a matter of fact, claimed such a franchise by virtue of an old grant to the New York Electric Lines Company. It planned to secure long distance connections through the State Line Telephone Company. Application for the franchise was made by the latter company to the Board of Trustees of North Tarrytown. This application has been denied unanimously. The State Line Company, in its application, promised to establish and maintain a system of telephones in North Tarrytown, and to connect it with the villages of Dobbs Ferry, Irvington, Arsdley, Abbottsford, East Irvington, Irving, Hastings and Tarrytown. Investigations by William G. Given, counsel to the village of North Tarrytown, showed that the petitioner had obtained no franchise in any of the places named, and in some of them had been denied the necessary permit, and that the State Line Company could not fulfill its promises. Mr. Given also reported that the alleged franchise claimed by the Great Eastern Company had been repudiated by New York city. The action of the North Tarrytown authorities is important, as it makes an important gap in the long distance service which the Great Eastern promoters are attempting to put through.

Wilhemina When a Child.

An amusing story is told of Queen Wilheimina when she was quite a little child. Her majesty was not allowed to share dinner with the elder members of the royal household, but was permitted to make her appearance at dessert and place herself beside some particular favorite. On day she sat by a courtly old general, and after eating some fruit the little girl turned and gazed at him. Presently she exclaimed:

"I wonder you're not afraid to sit next to me?"

Everybody in the room turned at the sound of her childish treble.

"On the contrary, I am but too pleased and honored to sit next to my little queen," replied the old general. "But why should I be afraid?"

Assuming a woebegone expression, the little one replied:

"Because all my dolls have the measles; they're all of them down with it!"

USES FOR KEROSENE.

A teaspoonful of kerosene to a quart of boiled starch keeps it from sticking.

To prevent scorching rub the iron on a cloth saturated with kerosene.

Pour iron rust spots on kerosene and let the article remain covered for some time. The oil will loosen the rust so that it will come off.

Clean the bath tub, the sink or marble, wash bowl with a cloth wet with kerosene.

To clean sewing machines cover all the bearings with kerosene, work the machine quickly for a few minutes, then rub all the oil off with a soft rag and apply the machine oil when needed.

The Sultan's Hobby.

His majesty of Turkey is probably at this moment the most worried sovereign in Europe or out of it. He likes ease and peace, but the times will let him have none of either. The sultan, like most of his brother sovereigns, has his hobbies. Among other things, he is an indefatigable collector of carriages. When he dies or takes to motoring there will be five or six hundred interesting vehicles in the palace—enough to make the fortune of a week-end auctioneer on commission. If the sultan is a collector of carriages, the emperor of Japan may be classed as a collector of horses. He keeps two or three thousand of his own, and were the contents of his stables to be added to those of the sultan's coach houses the resultant sale would beggar half the curio-hunting millionaires of the age.—London Bystander.

LITERARY.

In Munich and Vienna, the churches on Good Friday are the scene of a very striking picture of the burial of Christ. A figure of the Saviour is carried in state around the church to the altar, where is a sepulcher, to which access, through an opening formed by artificial rocks, awaits it. The windows are darkened and, through the gloom, the eyes of thousands of awed worshipers are drawn to the tomb, where a solitary light illumines the white-palled figure of the crucified Christ. One of the most peculiar of these continental celebrations of Easter is that which for centuries has been practised by the monks of Ronceveaux. As day breaks on the morning of Good Friday, a long procession of the monks files out through the gateway of the abbey each bearing on his back an enormous and heavy cross, by way of annual penance and inimitation of what they consider to have been one of the severest forms of Christ's physical suffering. Through hamlets and villages, this pathetic procession makes its way, in spite of the trembling knees and aching muscles, while the villagers, with bare and bowed heads, do homage to the cross. That their penance may lack nothing of severity, these monks strike into the roughest, choosing the steepest and roughest paths.—The April Metropolitan Magazine.

David Graham Phillips has written an appreciation for the April number of Appleton's Booklover's Magazine entitled "Tom Johnson: A Type of the Commonsense American." It is an extraordinary description written in an entirely new vein, virile, interesting, and convincing. The writer thinks the East is becoming effete, and that we must look to the West for the best type of American. He says: "Now that England and aristocratic Europe have spread over almost the whole of the prosperous, educated, leading classes in the East the slather of superficiousness, we have to look to the West for our typical American—simple, self-respecting, no cringer, no faker, with a sense of humor, not solemn, not a despiser or a looker-down—the American gentleman. Tom Johnson stands as a very fair, all-round specimen of this species. And there are millions like him. And that fact should give us firm faith that the reign of money bags, interrupted but hardly disturbed by occasional reigns of wind bags, will not be permanent."

Most people do no know that the most powerful trust in the world is the Coal Trust, dominated at present by that remarkable personality, George Franklin Baer. The whole story of this alarming monopoly, its birth, growth and power, is told for the first time in two notable articles by Hartley Davis on "The Coal Trust, the Labor Trust, and the People who Pay." Read the first of these articles in the April Everybody's and see what you can about the probable future of this omnipotent commercial monster. Contrast, too, with this story of greed and violence Charles Edward Russell's peaceful picture of Switzerland, the Trust-less country, in the current instalment of "Stories of the Common People." The happiest, most honest, best-governed people in the world are, according to Mr. Russell, the Swiss. In this miniature republic, the civic, national, commercial problems that are so sorely afflicting us have reached a more perfect solution. Switzerland in our best object lesson. Her citizens know nothing of corruption or monopolies; and they are contended with their lot: a people worth reading about.

The April Century offers as its leading feature publication entire of Lady Lancey's recollections of narratives of scenes during and after the battle of Waterloo—her record of her experiences at the bedside of her wounded husband, Colonel Sir William Howe DeLancey, of Wellington's staff, which is told in a letter of her brother, Captain Bassil Hall, R.N. Additional interest attaches to this unusual and tragic record from the fact that Colonel DeLancey was born in New York about 1781, of the well-known family of that name, a son of Stephen and a grandson of Oliver DeLancey, the latter a royalist and a brigadier-general in his Majesty's service during the RevolutionaryWar. Considerable light is thrown upon the principal actions of Wellington's surgical service. The manuscript was submitted privately by Captain Hall to Sir Walter Scott and to Charles Dickens, both of whom were much affected by its reading. Sir Walter Scott wrote of the Captain Hall, that he considered it "one of the most valuable and important documents which could be published as illustrative of the throes of war;" and Dickens in along letter, also to Captain Hall, wrote: "To say that the reading of that most astonishing and tremendous account has constituted an epoch in my life—that I shall never forget the slightest word of it—that I cannot throw the impression aside, and never saw anything like it—is nothing and so actually present before my eyes, is nothing. What I have always looked upon as masterpieces of powerful and affecting description seem as nothing in my eyes." The narrative is given added vividness by reproductions of a number of letters and portraits, one, the frontispiece of the number, Sir Thomas Lawrence's portrait of Wellington.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning April 1.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Lives that endure.—Matt. vii. 24, 25; I Cor. iii, 10-15; Eph. ii, 19-22; I Cor. vi, 19-20; II Tim. ii, 14-19. (Consecration meeting.)

The desire to lead a life that will endure or to do something that will be a memorial to us after we have passed away from life is a very strong and a very natural one. Few men want to be forgotten when they die. The vast majority want to be remembered. That he might be remembered Absalom built a pillar in the king's dale, and all the Absaloms are not dead yet. But, more than this, men want to be honorably remembered. No man wants the evil that he does to live after him and the good to be interred with his bones. We want the best that is in us to be remembered. We would if we could blot out the weaknesses and failures of our lives and leave only that which is worthy of remembrance. Ancient kings only inscribed their names on the monuments they erected. They wished their defeats to be forgotten. But, alas, we cannot do so on the memorials of our lives. All things endure. We are remembered for all that we have been and all that we have done; hence if we want to leave an honorable name among men we must live honorably—we must "cease to do evil and learn to do well," "eschew evil and do good."

But the temporary endurance of our lives is not all that we are to consider. Few of our memories long endure in this life. Only a few names endure beyond a generation or two. Those who know us soon pass away also, and, as in ancient Egypt a new king arose who knew not Joseph, new generations arise who know not us. Life, then, really to endure must make an impression upon the future, upon eternity. And to do this life must be spent on eternal things. No purely temporal achievements will insure endurance for the future. All temporal things will pass away. The most substantial earthly monument will sooner or later crumble to dust. Today nothing but remnants remain of the vast works of the ancients, and when centuries shall have passed these remnants shall entirely pass with them. The fortunes of the financially successful are soon spent; the laws of the greatest statesmen will become obsolete and forgotten; the wisdom of the greatest philosophers will not be the day-dawn to look upon as folly; the work of the greatest artists will be dimmed by that of their successors, until the day dawns when "there shall be a new heaven and a new earth, for former things [all former things] shall pass away."

The life, therefore, that endures must touch eternity. And consequently if we want our lives to endure we must not spend them upon the things which are seen, for they are temporal, but upon the things which are not seen, which are eternal. Character endures forever; reputation laid up in heaven by a self sacrificing Christian life here endure; moth and rust do not destroy them. Christian work endures, especially if it be the work of saving human souls. A servant who is forever saved and is an eternal monument to the one who in the providence of God has been instrumental in its salvation. We want our lives to endure. Therefore let us consecrate them more fully to the service of God. Let us give our lives to God in Jesus Christ, and they will endure forever, and let us make our life work redound to the honor and glory of God, and it will endure forever.

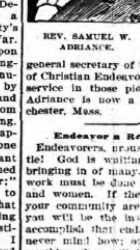
The First General Secretary.

The quarter century anniversary of Christian Endeavor has naturally enough turned the attention of all to the very early days of the movement.



REV. SAMUEL W. ADRIANCE.

Any organization that grows in twenty-five years from one society of forty members to over 67,000 societies with nearly 4,000,000 members deserves to be studied. Early days suggest early men, and chief among these is Rev. Samuel Winchester Adriance, the first general secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, a lovely woman service in those pioneer hours. Mr. Adriance is now a minister in Winchester, Mass.

Endeavor a Revival Force.

Endeavorers, arouse you to the battle! Christ's militant host, bless the bringing in of many, but the practical work must be done by Christian men and women. If the young people of your community are reached for God you will be the instruments used to accomplish that end. As to methods, never mind now; only do something, anything that will bring you face to face with the problem of reaching the unsaved for Christ. Pray and work and so come to fill your soul to its rim with the spirit of [illegible] for souls.—Rev. F. H. [illegible]

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

April 1: "Serving With Christ"—John xv, 1-8; Acts xv, 36; I Cor. iii, 4-9; II Cor. ix, 8; Phil. ii, 12, 13.

By REV. WALTER J. YARD, D. D.

"Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; and so shall ye be my disciples."

How full of meaning was the declaration of Jesus to the Jews on one occasion when He said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." We cannot conceive the infinite activity of God in the upholding continuously of all things in the universe. It is beyond the power of our feeble thought to grasp such vastness of power. But the nature of all exertion we do know, because we are conscious of the exercise of will power by ourselves and also of the putting forth of that will power in bodily action.

However agreeable rest and ease may be sometimes, there is no joy in life to be compared to that which comes from active use of our powers and faculties in the doing of some worthy work. On the other hand, it has been well said, "No ill can fret the soul with discontent like consciousness of powers unused."

The Divine One is ever active. The words are the result of His ceaseless exertion of power. He is not only supremely blessed in being, but supremely blessed also in doing. His activity is the continual manifestation of interest in and love for all that He has created.

And we are made like Him. Our happiness and contentment can be found only in working with and for Him.

One of our race has found the clew to the divine life, and He reveals it to all who will follow Him. The joyousness of loving service may be ours. We may know the truth and feel the life and use the power. In very deed we may do the works of God.

It is of much account that we use these bodies and make them accomplish our purposes. We can train them to marvelous skill and efficiency. More wonderful is the discipline we can give the powers of mind and the conquests we can make in the realms of thought. What worlds open before us, in which we share God's thoughts and use His forces in our work! But these only lead us to the higher spheres where spirit rules, where the truths of righteousness and love, of holiness and moral worth, are the ruling forces.

When these possess us we serve our God as true disciples of the blessed Christ, and fruit is borne as spontaneously as grapes on a prolific vine.

We may not assist God largely in making physical worlds. He has little need of us in such work. Nor does He need us in directing and founding the great worlds of intellectual truth. But He has a very definite need in this present world and age for devoted and fearless ones to help Him establish the kingdom of righteousness and truth.

This is our call to serve with Christ.

Promises of the Almighty.

God's promises are all lamps to light up dark places, and I know of no brighter one than this: "As thy days, so shall thy strength be."

Many a young man is ready in the long dark passageway, or possibly the valley through which your steps are leading is a very dark and shadowed one. Then gladly I bid you look up and catch some of the light which God sheds down from this blessed assurance.

When the sun withdraws its light,
Lo, the stars of God are there!
Present host, unseen till night—
Marshaled for the work of fair.

If we never had nights we could never see the stars, and so if you and I never had any trouble we could never enjoy such a promise as this of which we have written. We do not love nights, but we do love the stars; we do not love sorrow and trouble, but we do bless God for sustaining grace; we do not love weakness, but we rejoice in such promises of God as will uphold us when weakness comes.—C. B. F. Hallock in Christian Work and Evangelist.

Value of a Sunny Soul.

Sweetness of temper is a precious heritage. It gives beauty to everything. It keeps its windows open toward the spice country and fills the home with perpetual delight. The fortunate possessor of a sunny soul is God's evangel in a dark world. He is a living gospel which no one will ever repudiate and the blessedness of which all men will appreciate. The body will grow old and the smooth brow will be furrowed, but a happy disposition has an aureole to the gray crown of age. Blessed is he whose life looks out upon the land of Beulah and whose soul is responsive to the outlying vision.

Increasing Spiritual Stature.

Men who are saved in the true sense and who find their joy in helping to carry the Christ life into the veins of society find all unconsciously that duties are added to their spiritual stature. —American Friend.

No man is useless while he has a friend.—R. L. Stevenson.

To be willing to take trouble is the great condition of being useful to others.—Bishop Thorold.

Let every action tend to some point and be perfect in its kind.—Marcus Aurelius.

The capacity to pray is not always in our power, but in the eye of God the desire to pray is prayer.—Leasing.

It is easier to go six miles to hear a sermon than to spend one-quarter of an hour in meditating on it when I come home.—Philip Henry.

In this world one thing supremely worth having is the opportunity to do worthily a piece of work the doing of which is of vital consequence to the welfare of mankind.—Roosevelt.

WESTFIELD WILL HAVE SAME TEAM IN ACTION

AND CHARLEY CODDING IS READY TO MANAGE IT.

Baseball prospects are getting brighter every day in Westfield. It is almost a certainty that the old standard will be flaunted from Mt. Ararat, bidding defiance to the whole round world, and Plainfield in particular.

Charles N. Codding is shaping up to take the helm. Deaman has absolutely declined to assume the managerial office, although he declares himself ready to help the team through the season in the capacity of sub-lieutenant. That and the question of whether the will actually be a team is to be definitely settled at a meeting this week.

Mr. Codding, with Mayor-Assemblyman Perkins, is the god in the baseball machine. Mr. Codding is convinced that the town will support a team as the best years in entirely satisfactory style, and that prospects were never brighter for a lively and paying season.

"It's foolishness to think of giving up the game," said Mr. Codding yesterday. "There are better reasons for organizing this year than there were last year. The prospect of Somerville getting into the struggle makes the outlook so much better. Somerville hunting for Plainfield's scalp will naturally be interested in getting at Westfield, and the three teams will find the season a series of games that will land them better than even on the balance sheet.

"The question of management isn't causing as any worriment. If Deaman won't take the job, I'll manage the team myself. It won't be the first time I've managed a nine."

The combination in view is practically the same as last year's. Fandom should know positively by the end of the week whether or not it is to dispute honors with Plainfield again. Codding is an old-time manager and knows the ropes. He handled Westfield in the palmy days when Jack Warner was a comer. Jack was one of his friends.

NEW MAIL FOR NEWARK IS ON THE SCHEDULE.

Pouch's Roundabout Trip to New York Straightened by Postmaster Reed.

Postmaster Bird has secured a change in the railway postal service through here that will land a mail in Newark three hours earlier. Until the change was made the first morning mail for Newark from here was delivered at the post office about noon. It went out at 7 o'clock, but traveled to Newark by way of New York.

Mr. Bird received complaints of that sort of delivery from business men, and he took up the matter to have the service bettered. He called the railway department's attention to the matter, and arrangements were promptly effected to receive a Newark pouch on the 7:28 train, for direct shipment to Newark. It will reach Newark about 8:15, get to the postoffice by 8:30, and go into the second morning delivery at 9 o'clock.

The Sultan's "Devil Wagon."

The Sultan, who alone of all European sovereigns has until now remained impervious to the attractions of motoring, has through the good offices of the Khedive of Egypt been induced to accept a present of a superb automobile from a well known Parisian firm of manufacturers. His Majesty, however, declined to get into the car, or "devil wagon" as he terms it, until every bit of machinery had been taken apart and explained to him; with the result that he profitably Abdul Hamid is no lover of novelties; wireless telegraphy he characterized as an "invention of the evil one," and ordered out of his presence the experts who came to demonstrate its power, with orders never to bring the apparatus before him again. He will oppose its introduction into the Turkish capital.—London Tid-Bits.

General Booth's Daily Menu.

It is interesting to know what a man of Gen. Booth's age and vitality lives on. Here is his day's menu. For breakfast he takes a moderate quantity of buttered toast, with strong tea and an equal portion of milk. Between breakfast and lunch he eats a few raisins. For lunch he has a bowl of vegetable soup with dry toast soaked in it, vegetables, especially potatoes cooked in their jackets, and whatever green stuff is in season. Then he sups from 8 o'clock to half an hour. Tea is similar to breakfast, with the occasional addition of a few mushrooms. For supper he takes invariably a plate of rice and milk.

Dry Apples for Winter Use.

Peel, core and cut the apples into quarters, thread them on string, but do not let them touch each other. Hang them up in a dry room that is thoroughly ventilated, and examine them from time to time to remove any that show the least sign of turning bad; when quite dry they may be packed away in the boxes. They will retain their flavor from one and a half to two years. When required for use soak in water all night, then make into pies, apple sauce, or stew them, as desired. A few cloves and a small piece of lemon peel should be added, as well as sugar, when they are cooked.

THURSDAY, MARCH 29, 1906.

New Jersey's State Republican machine should be grateful to Newark's "other paper."

If the trolley freight bill becomes a law, will we have flagmen on all corners along Front street?

The Paterson Press refers to Everett Colby and Mark Fagan as "fearless reformers." In Trenton they are called "the fearless performers."—Trenton State Gazette.

But still there is hope for Trenton.

According to reliable reports, plenty of ice has been stored by the wholesale dealers. But just wait until next summer and you will be persuaded that the harvest has been as much of a failure as the proverbial peach crop.

Englewood lays claim to being one ahead of the "Bishops' hill," because it has already raised the retail liquor license fee from $150 to $500. Just make a note of it that Plainfield is the original high license community in all Jersey. For more than a year it has had a $1,000 rate. How many places in the whole country, outside of the biggest cities, can beat that?

All impediments having been removed by the enactment of a law providing for the manner of holding elections for the municipal ownership of water works, the question now is when will the matter be put to a vote? Ever since this paper told that the election held last fall for that purpose was void and that had it been valid the proposition was defeated, there has been little if any agitation. From all that can be learned it is hardly likely that any steps will be taken in the immediate future, though possibly by fall the taxpayers will have an opportunity to say whether they desire to have a municipal plant established.

FATHER WESTMAN WARNS DELINQUENT PARISHIONERS.

Tells Them the Church is Not Being Properly Supported.

The Rev. Father John A. Westman, formerly rector of St. Mary's church, but now in charge of St. Michael's Roman Catholic church at Cranford, spoke in no mild terms to delinquent parishioners at the services held in the church Sunday morning.

Father Westman stated that the time had come when a line should be drawn between those who contributed to the support of the parish and those who did not. He stated that mildness seemed to be of no avail, and that energetic measures must be used.

In order to reach those who dodged their pew rent a ticket system was adopted last July. This has not worked successfully, and it is likely that the old system of pew rents will be established, with some new features.

The Rev. Father Westman hinted that there was a clique in the church that was endeavoring to do all in its power to reduce the revenue of the church, and that he intended to compel these persons to pay their share or else they would not enjoy equal privileges.

Modern Photography.

P. Frank Stone has installed in his photographic studio, a newly patented device for making photo enlargements. It is claimed that the machine makes much more perfect reproductions than have been obtained by use of similar contrivances and that the cost of the work is greatly reduced. He has placed in his gallery a violet electric "sun," which enables him to take pictures and print them as well by night as by day.

Audubon Society Lecture.

Under the auspices of the Plainfield Audubon Society an illustrated lecture will be given at the new Plainfield High School building on Thursday night, April 3, by Frank R. Chapman, of New York. His subject will be "A Naturalist's England."

Mt. Pleasant Surprise.

A large surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester B. Harris at Mt. Pleasant, Thursday night. Cards, round games and dancing were enjoyed. A bounteous supper was served late in the evening.

Hurt in a Coasting Accident.

While coasting down the Lincoln street hill in Glen Ridge Saturday evening, Mrs. Ernest E. Slocum, a well-known resident of the borough, was thrown from a bob-sled and painfully cut and bruised. Her ankle was badly sprained.

Lectures Discontinued.

On account of illness, Dr. John B. Edgar has discontinued his lectures on the English Church at Holy Cross church.

Mr. and Mrs. William Chapman, of Brooklyn, has been visiting Miss Sorrell, of Plainfield avenue.

AMUSEMENTS.

Raymond Hitchcock continues to be one of the favorite attractions in the metropolis, and his humorous characterization of Copeland Schuyler, a make-believe war correspondent in Richard Harding Davis' merry farce, "The Galloper," at the Garden theatre, is demonstrated nightly before large audiences. Nothing that this genial and popular comedian has lately done is more suited to his talents than the above mentioned part. His affable and insistent comedy methods, the satirical and brilliant epigrammatic lines and the situations of the comedy all combine to make it an entertainment par excellence.

Hitchcock recently met an old friend, a Parisian, who was touring this country for the first time. Calling upon Mr. Hitchcock at the Garden theatre, he was discussing the charms of American women. Asked Hitchcock:

"Do you like a lady with blue, gray, brown or black eyes?"

"Mon cher," replied his French friend, "I care not what ze color of ze eye of mademoiselle is as long as she has ze green back."

"Mexicana," which has had a successful run of many weeks at the Lyric, has many song successes to its credit. On the night of the premiere in New York, "Supposing," a catchy number, destined to send an audience away whistling and humming it, was repeatedly demanded. Miss Christie MacDonald and Edmund Stanley "suppose" many things about each other, which are equally droll in the way of the refrain "I Was Just Supposing." The play is gorgeously mounted. With its adobe church, its blood red flowers, the deep blue of the Indian maidens' gowns, it quickly wins the eye. Thos. Q. Seabrooke has many opportunities to use his comedy methods, which bring him much applause, and dainty Christie MacDonald, as Tita, an Indian pottery vender, in her brown gown and many-coloured beads, lifts the little maiden into a prominence not usual. Edmund Stanley has one solo, "United We Stand." A large chorus, most beautifully costumed with brilliant scrapes, conical shaped hats, velvets and silks richly embroidered in gold and silver, bright beads and gorgeously colored draperies, is one of the features of the play. As usual, the Messrs. Shubert have outdone themselves in the way of beautiful and appropriate settings. The book was written by Leon E. Princoll, who was born in Texas and knows her "Mananaland" perfectly. Raymond Hubbell's music is so universally of the popular type that it has caught the fancy of the public and is now to be heard everywhere.

Extravagance of phrase is not only allowable, but necessary, in so far as is possible, the glory, grandeur, beauty and magnificence of "A Society Circus" at the New York Hippodrome. That is the universal opinion, who are who agreed that the programme excels anything hitherto offered in theatricals in merit, variety and immensity, combining as it does the best in drama, opera and circus. The scenic effects are marvelous in their magnificence, and form a most proper background for the great en*sembles and grand choruses. No bet*ter music has been heard in any production than that arranged by Mr. Klein, the musical director, and it is admirably interpreted by the ranged chorus, the largest in the world. The costumes used are almost dazzling, a very riot of color, and yet each in contrast with the others produces in the whole an effect perfect in harmony. In "A Society Circus" Thompson and Dundy have justified their reputation of being the giants of the amusement world. The new circus includes acts that have never before been seen on this continent, and the hour they consume is one of the most entertaining of the whole show. The flower ballet and "The Court of the Golden Fountains" cannot be described. They must be seen to be appreciated. To say that the witnessing the production the stranger does not wonder at the first question of the New Yorker, "Have you seen the Hippodrome?" Matinees are given daily.

"Charley's Aunt," revived at the Manhattan theatre, New York, with Etienne Giaradet in his original role as the bogus aunt, has caught the fancy of the public pronouncedly, and promises to run indefinitely to large audiences. It is thirteen years since this very amusing comedy was first produced in this country at this same theatre, and it practically duplicated here the vogue it achieved in England, where it was performed from season to season almost uninterruptedly for years. That "Charley's Aunt" has lost nothing of its original appeal is assured. The average play, revived after a long interval even in the best circumstances, seems a bit old-fashioned, but this clever work by Brandon Thomas seems to have lost nothing whatever of its original charm, and it convulses audiences as legitimately now at the Manhattan as it did years ago. It has been fitted with new scenery, and has all the distinction, as far as these go, of an original production. "Charley's Aunt," in fact, promises to be the comedy success of the spring season in New York, and no one that has before enjoyed it or that has never seen it should fail to visit the Manhattan during its run. The only matinee is on Saturday, and this performance will serve for those subscribers who may not be able to see the play at an evening performance.

Shafter Howard's new musical piece, "His Majesty," in which Blanche Ring is featured, supported by a strong company including Anna Laughlin, May Vokes, Margaret Malcom, Harry Kelly, Knute Erickson and Van Rensselaer Wheeler and a chorus of prize Broadway beauties who can sing, is drawing big houses at the Majestic theatre. The company numbers about one hundred and the scenic and costume effects are elaborate, expensive and appropriate. The story of "His Majesty" is novel in the extreme. The first scene shows the infernal regions and shows an entire comic opera company which has been condemned to spend an endless time there. His Majesty is worried because Napoleon and a few other old time inhabitants of his domain are in revolt. Napoleon is supposed to have discovered a scientific means of quenching the fires of the regions. The ingredients of a new explosive that will blow the place to smithereens. His Majesty falls in love and proposes to the prima donna of the comic opera company and is repulsed. He gives a dinner to the company and during its progress Napoleon sets off his explosive and the entire dinner party is blown up through the crust of the earth and land on a South Sea Island. The change of scene naturally permits of a very pretty change of atmosphere. His Majesty disappears still in love with the prima donna and returns on a yacht disguised as a millionaire clubman and renews his suit, and is finally accepted by the prima donna and everything ends happily in a satisfactory manner to all concerned, except Napoleon who was lost in the shuffle of the big explosion. With its novel atmosphere there are developed many strikingly funny situations and there is afforded opportunities for the introduction of new ideas in songs and dances as well as screamingly funny "business" for the comedians. Everything that has so far been done in the production of comic operas has been discounted in the preparation of "His Majesty" and those who enjoy clean fun to the accompaniment of good music with a background of beauty should surely see "His Majesty."

The acme of excellence has been reached in the presentation by F. F. Proctor of attractions never before seen in vaudeville, but with him there is no such word as fail, and there is no cause for retrieve. Therefore, the bill for the week of March 26 at Proctor's 23d Street theatre is one which every lover of vaudeville should see. Henri DeVries, Europe's greatest character actor, will present his protean play, "A Case of Arson," playing himself seven different characters. Next comes Kitty Traney, with her European circus, which appeals largely to the children, but to the grown people as well. The acrobatic end of the bill is upheld by the wonderful Dollar Troupe of acrobats. There is a touch of Broadway comedy in S. Miller Kent's little playlet, entitled "Just Dorothy," and a sample of comic opera, as presented by Allie Gilbert and her Summer Girls. Dancing finds its exponents in Emma Francis and her whirlwind dancers. Clarence Vance will sing coon songs in her own inimitable way, while the rest of the bill in*cludes Alfred Arneson, Gilday and*

LITERARY.

The Chinaman, unlike the European, regards America as only temporarily in the country, preserves his national customs and peculiarities, and finally returns, carrying his savings with him. He is not attracted by our institutions and brings with him no love of American ideals. To him the United States is a field to be exploited, but nothing more. The European casts in his lot with us, mingles with the population, and, in a few generations, his identity is lost in our composite race. He has neither peculiarities of thought nor of dress to distinguish him from those among whom he labors, and his children are soon an undistinguishable part of the community. Not so with the Chinese. They are not only distinguished by their dress, language, and habits, but they remain entirely separate and to the wide dissimilarity in history, tradition, and habit, but also to the absence of any permanent or patriotic interest in the land in which they sojourn. It would require generations to bring our people down to a plane upon which they could compete with the Chinese, and this would involve a large impairment of the efficiency of their work. It is not just to the laboring people of the United States that they should be compelled to labor upon the basis of Chinese coolie labor or stand idle and allow their places to be filled by an alien race with no thought of permanent identification with our country. The American laborer not only produces the wealth of our nation in time of peace, but he is also its sure defender in time of war—who will say that his welfare and the welfare of his family shall be subordinated to the interests of those who abide with us for but a time, who, while with us, are exempt from draft or military burden, and who, on their return, drain our country of its currency? A foreign landlord system is almost universally recognized as a curse to a nation, because the rent money is sent out of the country. Chinese immigration on a large scale would give us the evil effects of foreign landlordism in addition to its other objectionable features.—William Jennings Bryan in "Success Magazine."

BALL STOCK FUND $1,230

New Association Plans to Raise $770 More and Issue Bonds.

DAAB TO GET $400

President Runyon Says Club Will Take Half Interest in Franchise—Appoints Several Committees.

Considerable progress was made at the meeting of the Plainfield Baseball Association at the Field Iroquois, Saturday night. Encouraging reports were received, President Runyon appointed a committee to handle the bond issue, also committees on grounds, privilege and score cards, while Manager Daab outlined as nearly as possible his plans regarding the team and schedule of games. There was a good attendance of members and the meeting was an enthusiastic one. It was stated that subscriptions to stock amounting to $1,230 were reported and this was considered excellent for two weeks' work. There are yet members of the committee and others to be heard from.

At the outset it was stated by President Runyon that the plan as adopted by the association is to pay Manager Daab $400 for half interest in his franchise, thus making him part owner. The rest of the money subscribed will be put in the treasury to be used as "spring" expenses. The receipts from the games will also be put in the treasury. The partnership papers will be arranged at once so that the deal between the association and Mr. Daab can be consummated. It is understood that 400 bonds will be prepared for selling.

President Runyon appointed Charles W. Runyon, George Voehl and Walter C. Dobbins as a committee to handle the bond issue, that is secure the bonds and see that they reach the subscribers and the money is collected. It was announced that the work of collecting subscriptions would begin April 1, thus giving timely notice to the subscribers. These bonds will be non-assessable.

President Runyon also made a statement regarding the privileges extended to the Jersey City Eastern League Club for the use of Crescent Oval for a couple of weeks beginning April 2. It was decided by the association and Mr. Daab to allow the league club free use of the grounds. It being understood that it would put the grounds in fair condition and stand any expense that might be necessary. It was the opinion that the presence of the leaguers here would be a good advertisement to the city and a benefit to the club.

The question of a committee on grounds arose at this time and President Runyon appointed as such Newton B. Smalley, James R. Blair and William Addis, Sr. This committee will have charge of the grounds and is empowered to delegate such assistants as may be necessary.

V. W. Nash, Jr., and F. J. Huff were appointed a committee to look after the uniforms for the coming season and will report back to the association the result of its findings as to certain details and as to whether it will be advisable to make any charge for the cards. It was the opinion that a fair amount number of advertisement can be secured it might be well to distribute the cards free. The profits from the cards will go to the association.

Roy Phillips and George Conyne were appointed a committee on privileges at the oval, and it will be up to this committee to lease the rights for the sale of soft drinks, peanuts, candy and cigars.

As to the team for the coming season, Manager Daab announced that Secord will be one of several changes. "Dave" Driscoll, "Happy" Kiernan, "Dan" Connolly, "Wally" Cosgrave and "Pete" Cregan will not be with the team. They think that they can get more money elsewhere and will seek new pastures. Driscoll will play with the Ridgewoods for $15 per game and Connolly will probably play with the same team. Kiernan goes with the Manhattans, while Cosgrave is training the Princeton Varsity team. Cregan has not yet found a berth.

FORMER EAST ORANGE LAWYER'S ROMANCE

DIVORCED FROM FIRST WIFE BECAUSE OF SPLIT OVER DAUGHTER'S MARRIAGE

East Orange folk are interested in the story of a romantic marriage recently contracted by Henry White, a former member of the Board of Education in that place, who was divorced from his wife some time ago after an unpleasantness brought about by a little romance in which his own daughter figured.

Mr. White, who is senior member of the law firm of White & Blackford, at 141 Broadway, New York, was interested in the settlement of the estate of the late John Paisley, who left a substantial shoe manufacturing business at Sixth avenue and Twenty-fourth street, New York, some valuable real estate, three sons and an attractive widow. His business with the affairs of the estate and a sequel to the many conferences on property matters and other things resulted in the marriage of Mrs. Paisley and Mr. White on March 17.

There was some opposition to the planned wedding of the daughter and his client, but the couple ignored consideration of any complaints, and are now enjoying a honeymoon. Mr. White no longer makes his home in East Orange. His wife, from whom he was divorced, does not live in the city, either.

The daughter, whose marriage to a young man in a local department store, brought about the dissolution of the family ties, lives with her husband in Centre street, this city, and the son of Mr. White is said to be with his father.

The divorce proceedings were quietly conducted after the family split over the daughter's marriage, which the father declared beneath her station and the mother sided with her daughter, the son taking the same view as the father, according to report. The house at 22 Arlington avenue, north, East Orange, where the White family lived, had a sign "to let," but that has been taken down and another family occupies the home.

Mr. White was said to have an aversion to the school system conducted in East Orange when he was a member of the Board of Education, and did not send his children to public schools, but had them educated in private institutions. He was wealthy and prominent and the house where they lived is one of the prettiest in the street.

William J. Browning Slated.

Rumor at Washington has it that William J. Browning, of Camden, father of Dr. W. K. Browning, of this city, is slated to succeed Jesse Overstreet as chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee. Mr. Browning is now chief clerk of the House of Representatives and is exceptionally well qualified for the *other position. He has had long po*litical experience and is a man of exceptional executive ability and tact. His friends feel that his selection would be a wise one, and they say he would make an excellent secretary.

It is thought the strike of the machinists employed at the Electro Dynamic Company's plant in Bayonne is about over. About thirty of the strikers have been given their jobs back after applying for them individually. The principal demand of the men was for an increase in wages of twenty-five cents a day.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER DIED IN WESTERN WRECK

CHARLES BLATZ AND SON KILLED IN RIO GRANDE.

J. A. Blatz, of Somerset street, received word Monday a. m. that his brother, Charles Blatz, of Denver, Col., a former Plainfielder, had been killed in the wreck on the Rio Grande Railroad in Colorado on March 16. His nineteen-year-old son, Charles, Jr., was killed with him. Father and son were on their way to visit a brother of Mr. Blatz's in San Francisco.

Charles Blatz was fifty-four years old and is survived by a widow and a grown daughter. He visited Joseph Blatz, with the daughter, last summer. It was the first meeting of the brothers in a quarter of a century. Charles left here for the West when in his twenties, and established himself in a prosperous business.

News of the death came to Joseph Blatz in a letter from the family in Denver. The dead man and his son were burned in the wreckage.

THIRD RECITAL.

Large Congregation Heard Fine Programme Arranged by Organist Lee.

The third Lenten organ recital at the Holy Cross church Saturday afternoon attracted a large congregation of worshippers who thoroughly *enjoyed the fine programme prepar*ed by Mr. Lee, organist. Not only were the organ selections appreciated, but the soprano solos by Miss Ethel Gregg and the violin selections by Maurice Audsley were features.

Miss Gregg sang "O Lord Be Merciful," Bartlett, and "Repentence," by Gounod, while Mr. Audsley rendered "La Sonnoche," by Bach. Mr. Lee rendered "Processional March," Guirand; "Andante Religioso," Lemaigre; "Serenade," Gounod; "Two Chorales," with variations, Rink; "Prelude and Fuge," Bach, and his concluding number was the "March of the Priests," from Athalia, Mendelssohn, which was considered one of the strongest and best on the programme.
